It was easy for Mr. Roosevelt to say, but it would be difficult to prove, that objections are due to ignorance, gullibility, or politics. And the remark about well-intentioned people—Mr. Roosevelt said he was being frightfully polite when he called them that—staking out an exclusive claim to a so-called Lobby to Save Lives was an unworthy slur on a group of men who certainly are not politicians, not gullible, and not ignorant on the subject of safety in the air.

Of course the President also is interested in saving lives. But the progress during recent years, which he cited as evidence of his interest, was made under the system which he now proposes to upset. The story was very different when civil aviation was under the Department of Commerce, where Mr. Roosevelt wants to put it again.

The present Air Safety Board, which his reorganization plan would abolish, is "helpless to take positive steps toward preventing the recurrence of accidents," the President said. But somehow the recurrence of accidents has been prevented. In nearly 14 months no passenger or employee has been killed or seriously injured on any commercial air line.

The Lobby to Save Lives represents 1,500 air-line pilots. Their spokesman, Capt. David L. Behncke, president of the National Air-line Pilots Association, says this:

"The pilots are not in Washington to enter into controversy with the President or anyone else. They are not schooled in politics. They are schooled in flying and know what is necessary to make air transportation safe. They learned about this the hard way.

"One hundred and forty-six of their number met death in air crashes while the Department of Commerce had control of civil flying. There were 130 fatal accidents, and 146 pilots, 279 passengers, and 48 stewardesses and other nonrevenue passengers—a total of 473 persons—were killed during this period. The pilots, the industry and, I am sure, the air-traveling public, do not want aviation put back under control of the Government department that made this kind of record."

One could get the impression that the pilots are being, under the circumstances, frightfully polite to the President.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the body of the RECORD immediately following the editorial just printed a very able article appearing in the Washington Post of today, entitled "C. A. A. Transfer Rejection Seen in Congress."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post of May 2, 1940]

C. A. A. TRANSFER REJECTION SEEN IN CONGRESS—COX EXPECTS HOUSE TO TURN DOWN PLAN; GREEN OPPOSES MOVE

Administration forces in the House fear that opposition to the President's proposal to shift the Civil Aeronautics Authority into the Commerce Department will be overwhelming, it was reported last night.

Representative E. E. Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, said that while he himself thought the transfer is justified, the chances are that the House will turn down the plan.

Cox was one of five members of the select committee on Government organization who conferred yesterday with the President on the fourth reorganization order, which calls for the C. A. A. transfer, and abolition of the Air Safety Board.

Two other members, JOHN J. COCHRAN (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman, and LINDSAY C. WARREN (Democrat), of Utah, said they favored the President's plan but declined to predict its chances on the floor.

On the other side, taking the floor of the Senate for an attack on the proposal, Senator MCCARRAN (Democrat), of Nevada, produced a letter from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, protesting vigorously against the proposed change.

Green's letter declared he was "utterly amazed" by the President's proposal, contrasted with the "no fatality" air lines record of the last 13 months under the C. A. A. to a death record of 473 while aviation was regulated by the Commerce Department, and appealed to Congress to reject Mr. Roosevelt's plan.

Freshly returned from a visit to his home State, MCCARRAN assailed the President's plan to drop the Air Safety Board and place the C. A. A. under Secretary of Commerce Hopkins.

"Despite widespread opposition," the Nevadan said, "the President attempts to brush aside the criticism by charges that the opposition is being led by persons 'ignorant, gullible, or playing politics.'"

At New York, Attorney Henry Breckenridge, close friend and personal adviser of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, issued a statement accusing President Roosevelt of moving "to lay the hand of politics on the clean, bright wings of American aviation."

"The courageous Democratic Senator PAT MCCARRAN, after prodigious toil accomplished the existing legislation which has proved a satisfactory solution of the relations between the Government and the flying industry," he said. "Now comes the President with a scheme to emasculate the independent status of the C. A. A. and restore political control thereof. This after the phenomenal record of the air lines, which have just passed a year without a single fatality.

Here, air-line pilots who had gathered to approve the transfer, replied to the President's cricitism of their "lobby to save lives." Their statement, made by Capt. David L. Behncke, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, said, in part:

"The pilots are not in Washington to enter into controversy with the President or anyone else. They are here in the interest of saving lives. They are not schooled in politics. They are schooled in flying and know what is necessary to make air transportation safe. They learned about this the hard way. One hundred and forty-six of their number met death in air crashes while the Department of Commerce had control of civil flying and air transportation. There were 130 fatal air-line crashes and 146 pilots, 279 passengers, and 48 stewardesses and other nonrevenue passengers—a total of 473 persons—were killed during this period. The pilots, the industry, and, I am sure, the air-traveling public do not want aviation put back under control of the Government Department that made this kind of a record."

It voiced the opinion that the Safety Board was the "greatest single factor in bringing about the present safety in flying."

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I also ask leave to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the Santa Monica Junior Chamber of Commerce embracing a resolution against the change.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SANTA MONICA JUNIOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
Santa Monica, Calif., April 30, 1940.

Hon. PAT MCCARRAN,
Senator from Nevada, Washington, D. C.

Regarding the President's Reorganization Plan No. IV.

HONORABLE SIR: After a thorough investigation and report by our aviation committee, the board of directors of the Santa Monica Junior Chamber of Commerce voted to express their opposition to the President's Reorganization Plan No. IV because:

(1) The independent Civil Aeronautics Authority should be able to plan ahead with the assurance that a possible change of administration would not disrupt their program.

(2) The Civil Aeronautics Authority and the Air Safety Board are at least partly responsible for the fine safety record of the air lines (87,000,000 miles without a fatality), and of the Civil Aeronautics Authority training program (one fatality—29,000,000 miles).

(3) We oppose a change when the present structure is reported by all operators to be functioning the most efficiently in history.

Our air lines and schools have set the world's highest standards, why change now?

Most respectfully submitted.

SANTA MONICA JUNIOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
By FRANK WIRE, Secretary.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I also ask to have inserted in the body of the RECORD, following my remarks, an article appearing in the Washington Star of May 1, entitled "Roosevelt Consults House Members on C. A. A. Transfer."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Evening Star of May 1, 1940]

ROOSEVELT CONSULTS HOUSE MEMBERS ON C. A. A. TRANSFER—SOLID REPUBLICAN VOTE AGAINST REORGANIZATION PLAN EXPECTED

(By John C. Henry)

Anticipating a virtually solid front of Republican resistance in both House and Senate to the two pending Government reorganization plans, President Roosevelt today summoned to the White House the Democratic members of the House Committee on Reorganization for a discussion of prospects for acceptance of the plans.

Most furious controversy yet aroused over any of the four plans was precipitated by the President's proposal in plan IV to transfer the Civil Aeronautics Authority from its present independent status to the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce.

Centering mostly on this provision resolutions calling for rejection of the pending reorganization plans have been introduced in both House and Senate.

ROOSEVELT DEFENDS TRANSFER

Yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt spoke in defense of the C. A. A. shift, asserting that opposition is based either on ignorance, gullibility, or politics. Furthermore, he added sharply, friction within the Air Safety Board, which would be abolished as such by the pending plan, makes it imperative that the change be made if progress in civil aviation is to continue.

Those who saw the President today were Representatives COCHRAN of Missouri, WARREN of North Carolina, ROBINSON of Utah, BEAM of Illinois, and Cox of Georgia.

WILL COME UP MONDAY

As the group left the White House, Chairman COCHRAN told reporters the matter would be brought to the House floor Monday.

Declining any prediction as to the outcome on the grounds that he had not polled the House, Mr. COCHRAN said the whole fight is centering over the fourth reorganization order which vests jurisdiction of the C. A. A. in the Department of Commerce. The President emphasized to the committee, he said, that the transfer will not impair the independent operation of the Authority but simply will bring it under broad jurisdiction of a Cabinet officer.

Mr. COCHRAN said he had heard no objection to the third order which makes certain changes in the functioning of the C. A. A. Administrator.

White House anticipation of a solid Republican vote against the plans was disclosed this morning by Stephen T. Early, secretary to the President.

One of the purposes of his reorganization plan, President Roosevelt told reporters, was to have the Civil Aeronautics Authority report through the Secretary of Commerce, rather than directly to the President. Mr. Roosevelt explained that he already receives annual reports from about 45 independent Federal agencies and a reduction of this burden was one of the motivating reasons behind the C. A. A. transfer.

PROVISION QUOTED

As a matter of fact, however, the Civil Aeronautics Authority does not and never has submitted its reports to the President.

Section 206 of the Aeronautics Act of 1938, creating the Authority, provides that:

"The Authority shall make an annual report to the Congress, copies of which shall be distributed as are other reports transmitted to the Congress. Such reports shall contain, in addition to a report of the work performed under this act, such information and data collected by the Authority, the Administrator, and the Air Safety Board as may be considered of value in the determination of questions connected with the development and regulation of civil aeronautics, together with such recommendations as to additional legislation relating thereto as the Authority may deem necessary. The Authority may also transmit recommendations as to such legislation more frequently."

Pending in the Senate is a resolution sponsored by Senator MCCARRAN, Democrat, of Nevada, rejecting the transfer. Chairman BYRNES, of the Senate Committee on Reorganization, indicated last night that he would expedite consideration of the McCarran measure.

CLARK DEFENDS C. A. A.

With many Members of Congress already on record as to their reaction to the plan, the Associated Press today quoted Senator CLARK, Democrat, of Idaho, as terming Mr. Roosevelt's defense of yesterday "rather a weak justification for dismemberment of an agency which has established such an incontestibly fine record."

Senator TRUMAN, Democrat, of Missouri urged colleagues not to "permit a proved success to become a proved failure."

On the other hand, Senator ADAMS, Democrat, of Colorado, said he had obtained the impression that "a little reorganization wouldn't hurt" the C. A. A. He explained, however, that he was not sure the President's proposal was the best solution.

From Capt. David L. Behncke, president of the Air Line Pilots' Association, came an immediate rebuttal to Mr. Roosevelt's ironic reference to a "group of well-intentioned people staking out an exclusive claim to a so-called lobby to save lives."

Heading a bloc of veteran pilots now in Washington to oppose the reorganization, Capt. Behncke said:

"The pilots are not in Washington to enter into controversy with the President or anyone else. They are here in the interest of saving lives. They are not schooled in politics. They are schooled in flying and know what is necessary to make air transportation safe. They learned about this the hard way. One hundred and forty-six of their number met death in air crashes while the Department of Commerce had control of civil flying and air transportation. There were 130 fatal air-line crashes, and 146 pilots, 279 passengers, and 48 stewardesses and other nonrevenue passengers—a total of 473 persons—were killed during this period. The pilots, the industry, and, I am sure, the air-traveling public do not want aviation put back under control of the Government Department that made this kind of record."

DISAGREEMENT SCOUTED

Since last November, when Col. Sumpter Smith resigned to devote his full time to chairmanship of the engineering commission in charge of building the Washington National Airport, the Air Safety Board has had only two members. The charge that these two, Thomas O. Hardin and C. B. Allen, have been in any continuing disagreement was scouted today by persons who have observed the work of the Board and point to the fact that there has been no evidence of a deadlock.

It was recalled that when the Bureau of Air Commerce was in the Commerce Department the same organization which made and enforced regulations governing air transportation and which installed, maintained, and operated aids to air navigation along the airways also investigated accidents. Since many of the accidents involved regulations or aids, the Bureau was an interested party to the investigations, it was pointed out. Some of the harshest criticism of the former set-up was directed to the fact that the Bureau failed to decide against itself in accident cases in which testimony tended to show air navigation aids were at fault. Critics contended there was too much disposition to blame accidents on pilots who had died at their controls and to overlook defects in airways or Federal regulations and their enforcement.

This criticism was one of the chief reasons for creation of the independent Air Safety Board.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending bill be temporarily laid aside, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 8745, the Interior Department appropriation bill. I further ask that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be read for amendment, and that the amendments of the committee be first considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the first request of the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, does the Senator think there will be a long debate on the appropriation bill?

Mr. HAYDEN. I know of nothing to indicate that such will be the case. I am quite sure the Senate will very promptly dispose of the bill, probably this afternoon.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I am wondering if we cannot fix a time when we shall vote on the silver bill at some future date.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I could not at this time suggest an agreement of that kind, or enter into one, because several other speeches are to be made on the bill, and it is impossible to tell how much time will be consumed in the further argument. I think we had better not attempt to reach any agreement today about fixing a time to vote.

Mr. TOWNSEND. May I ask a further question of the distinguished leader? Does he expect the Senate to continue in session tomorrow?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; I do not. I think we shall take a recess until Monday at the conclusion of the consideration of the appropriation bill.

Mr. TOWNSEND. We shall go over until Monday, and then the silver bill will come up again?

Mr. BARKLEY. The bill will then again come up for consideration.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the first request of the Senator from Arizona is agreed to.

Without objection, the second request is agreed to.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8745) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Office of the Secretary—Office of Solicitor", on page 3, line 14, after "Division)", to strike out "$310,000" and insert "$314,340", so as to read:

For personal services in the District of Columbia and in the field (except Consumers' Counsel Division), $314,340.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, line 6, after the word "periodicals", to strike out "$139,583" and insert "$151,830", so as to read:

Consumers' Counsel Division, salaries and expenses: For all necessary expenditures of the Consumers' Counsel Division, in performing the duties devolving upon said Consumers' Counsel Division by the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937, approved April 26, 1937 (50 Stat. 72), including witness fees and mileage for witnesses appearing in behalf of the Division before the Bituminous Coal Division and including witnesses before the Interstate Commerce Commission, personal services and rent in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, traveling expenses, including not to exceed $3,000 for expenses of attendance at meetings at which matters of importance to the work of the Consumers' Counsel Division are to be discussed, printing and binding, contract stenographic reporting services, stationery and office supplies and equipment, and not to exceed $1,000 for newspapers, books, and periodicals, $151,830.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Division of Territories and island possessions", on page 4, line 9, to strike out "$118,780" and insert "$121,100"; so as to read:

For personal services in the District of Columbia, $121,100.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Division of Investigations", on page 4, line 19, after the word "exceeding", to strike out "$40,000" and insert "$43,500", so as to read:

For investigating official matters under the control of the Department of the Interior; for protecting timber on the public lands, and for the more efficient execution of the law and rules relating to the cutting thereof; for protecting public lands from illegal and fraudulent entry or appropriation; for adjusting claims for swamplands and indemnity for swamplands; and for traveling and other expenses of persons employed hereunder, $470,000, including not exceeding $43,500 for personal services in the District of Columbia; not exceeding $52,500 for the purchase, exchange, operation, and maintenance of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles and motorboats for the use of agents and others employed in the field service. The Secretary of the Interior shall include in his annual report a full statement of all expenditures made under authority of this paragraph.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bituminous Coal Division," on page 8, line 12, after the word "periodicals", to strike out "$1,187,800" and insert "$2,387,800"; so as to read:

Salaries and expenses: For all necessary expenditures of the Bituminous Coal Division in carrying out the purposes of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937, approved April 26, 1937 (50 Stat. 72), including personal services and rent in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; traveling expenses, including expenses of attendance at meetings which, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, are necessary for the efficient discharge of the responsibilities of the Division; contract stenographic reporting services; stationery and office supplies; purchase, rental, exchange, operation, maintenance, and repair of reproducing, photographing, and other such equipment, typewriters, calculating machines, mechanical tabulating equipment, and other office appliances and labor-saving devices; printing and binding; witness fees and fees and mileage in accordance with section 8 of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937; not to exceed $4,500 for hire, maintenance, operation, and repair of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles including one for use in the District of Columbia; garage rentals; miscellaneous items, including those for public instruction and information deemed necessary; and not to exceed $1,800 for purchase and exchange of newspapers, lawbooks, reference books, and periodicals, $2,387,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, after line 3, to insert:

WAR MINERALS RELIEF COMMISSION

Administrative expenses: For administrative expenses made necessary by section 5 of the act entitled "An act to provide relief in cases of contracts connected with the prosecution of the war, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1919 (40 Stat. 1272), including personal services, without regard to the civil-service laws and regulations; traveling and subsistence expenses; supplies and all other expenses incident to the proper prosecution of this work, both in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, $11,200: Provided, That any claim that has not been prosecuted and disposed of prior to July 1, 1941, shall not thereafter be considered by the Secretary of the Interior and shall be barred.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Bonneville power administration", on page 13, line 3, before the word "of", to strike out "$5,650,000" and insert "$6,650,000", so as to read:

For all expenses necessary to enable the Bonneville Power Administrator to exercise and perform the powers and duties imposed upon him by the act "To authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of the Bonneville project, for navigation and for other purposes," approved August 20, 1937 (50 Stat. 731), including personal services, travel expenses, purchase and exchange of equipment, printing and binding, and purchase and exchange (including one at not to exceed $1,200), maintenance, and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles, $6,650,000, of which amount $8,200 shall be available for personal services in the District of Columbia and $641,800 shall be available for expenses of marketing and transmission facilities, and administrative costs in connection therewith.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands", on page 14, line 4, after the word "expenses", to strike out "$141,000" and insert "$159,000", so as to read:

For the maintenance of the office of the United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands as authorized by subsection 4 of section 7 of the act approved March 24, 1934 (48 Stat. 456), including salaries and wages; rental, furnishings, equipment, maintenance, renovation, and repair of office quarters and living quarters for the High Commissioner; supplies and equipment; purchase and exchange of lawbooks and books of reference, periodicals, and newspapers; traveling expenses, including for persons appointed hereunder within the United States and their families, actual expenses of travel and transportation of household effects from their homes in the United States to the Philippine Islands, and return, utilizing Government vessels whenever practicable; operation, maintenance, and repair of motor vehicles, and all other necessary expenses, $159,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Bureau of Indian Affairs—Salaries", on page 19, line 23, after the name "District of Columbia", to strike out "$548,580" and insert "$556,740", so as to read:

For the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and other personal services in the District of Columbia, $556,740.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Indian lands", on page 25, in line 5, after the name "Colorado", to insert "Nevada", so as to read:

For the acquisition of lands, interest in lands, water rights and surface rights to lands, and for expenses incident to such acquisition (except salaries and expenses of employees), in accordance with the provisions of the act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 985), $325,000, together with the unexpended balance of the appropriation for this purpose for the fiscal year 1940: Provided, That no part of the sum herein appropriated shall be used for the acquisition of land within the States of Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, and Wyoming outside of the boundaries of existing Indian reservations.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Industrial assistance and advancement", on page 31, line 23, after the word "available", to strike out "$12,000" and insert "$22,000", and in line 24, after the word "follows" and the colon, to insert "Blackfeet, Montana, $10,000", so as to read:

Industrial assistance (tribal funds): For advances to individual members of the tribes for the construction of homes and for the purchase of seed, animals, machinery, tools, implements, building material, and other equipment and supplies; and for advances to old, disabled, or indigent Indians for their support and burial, and Indians having irrigable allotments to assist them in the development and cultivation thereof, to be immediately available, $22,000, payable from tribal funds as follows: Blackfeet, Montana, $10,000; Hoopa Valley, Calif., $2,000; Red Lake, Minn., $10,000 (from funds held in trust by the United States for said Indians pursuant to the act of June 15, 1938 (52 Stat. 697), and to be used only for educational loans to Indian youths of the Red Lake Band possessing one-fourth degree or more of Indian blood); and the unexpended balances of funds available under this head in the Interior Department Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1940, and the Third Deficiency Act, fiscal year 1939, are hereby continued available during the fiscal year 1941 for the purposes for which they were appropriated:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 34, line 12, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$15,000" and insert "$18,000", so as to read:

For the development, under the direction of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, of Indian arts and crafts, as authorized by the Act of August 27, 1935 (49 Stat. 891), including personal services, purchase and transportation of equipment and supplies, purchase of periodicals, directories, and books of reference, purchase and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles, telegraph and telephone services, cost of packing, crating, drayage, and transportation of personal effects of employees upon permanent change of station, expenses of exhibits and of attendance at meetings concerned with the development of Indian arts and crafts, traveling expenses, including payment of actual transportation expenses, not to exceed $2,500 for printing and binding, and other necessary expenses, $48,400, of which not to exceed $18,000 shall be available for personal services in the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Irrigation and drainage," on page 37, after line 16, to strike out:

For operation and maintenance of the San Carlos project for the irrigation of lands in the Gila River Indian Reservation, Ariz., $140,000 (operation and maintenance collections) and $180,000 (power revenues), of which latter sum not to exceed $24,000 shall be available for major repairs in case of unforeseen emergencies caused by fire, flood, or storm, from which amount, of $140,000 and $180,000, respectively, expenditures shall not exceed the aggregate receipts covered into the Treasury in accordance with section 4 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934; in all, $320,000.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

For operation and maintenance of the San Carlos project for the irrigation of lands in the Gila River Indian Reservation, Ariz., $65,000, reimbursable, together with $140,000 (operation and maintenance, collections), and $220,000 (power revenues), of which latter sum not to exceed $24,000 shall be available for major repairs in case of unforeseen emergencies caused by fire, flood, or storm, from which amounts, of $140,000 and $220,000, respectively, expenditures shall not exceed the aggregate receipts covered into the Treasury in accordance with section 4 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934; in all, $425,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Arizona, having the bill in charge, whether the appropriations for the Indian Office are in excess of those last year.

Mr. HAYDEN. They are less.

Mr. KING. What agencies have sustained the reductions?

Mr. HAYDEN. There has been a general reduction in the appropriations for the operations of the Interior Department. That has been accomplished, the Senator will notice from the report, in that the amount appropriated by the pending bill is $15,045,000 less than was carried in the Interior Department appropriation bill last year.

Mr. KING. Let me inquire whether the point which the Senator from New Mexico raised against the bill at the last session of the Congress has been taken into consideration in drafting the pending measure.

Mr. HAYDEN. I am not quite aware of what the objections of the Senator from New Mexico were.

Mr. KING. They related to the Navajo Indians, and to the superimposition upon them, in the form of local autonomy, of a government of which they did not approve, also compelling them to pursue a certain policy in connection with grazing which they regarded as detrimental.

Mr. HAYDEN. So far as I know, at the present time the Navajo Indians have not accepted the Wheeler-Howard Act, to which the Senator from New Mexico objected.

Mr. KING. The Senator has received no objection from the Senator from New Mexico or any statement from him?

Mr. HAYDEN. No. I am sure the Senator from New Mexico is satisfied with the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 44, line 23, after "(49 Stat. 1039, 1040)", to insert a comma and "including the development or purchase of electrical energy and the distribution and sale thereof"; in line 25, before the name "Navajo", to strike out "$650,000" and insert "$1,150,000"; and on page 45, line 1, after the figures "$50,000", to insert "San Carlos, $90,000; Salt River, $50,000;", so as to read:

Arizona: Colorado River, as authorized by and in accordance with section 2 of the River and Harbor Act, approved August 30, 1935 (49 Stat. 1039, 1040), including the development or purchase of electrical energy and the distribution and sale thereof, $1,150,000; Navajo, Arizona, and New Mexico, $50,000; San Carlos, $90,000; Salt River, $50,000; San Xavier, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 45, at the end of line 4, to strike out "$50,000" and insert "$10,000", so as to read:

California: Mission, $15,000; Sacramento, $10,000; Owens Valley (Carson Agency, Nev.), $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 45, after line 4, to insert:

Colorado: Southern Ute, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 45, line 6, after the name "Crow", to strike out "$500,000" and insert "$400,000", so as to read:

Montana: Crow, $400,000; Flathead, $250,000; Fort Belknap, $12,000; Blackfeet, $50,000; Fort Peck, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 45, line 12, after the name "Wapato", to strike out "$75,000" and insert "including surveys of the Klickitat unit, $100,000", so as to read:

Washington: Wapato, including surveys of the Klickitat unit, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 45, at the end of line 14, to strike out "$46,000" and insert "$41,000", so as to read:

Wyoming: Wind River, $41,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 45, at the end of line 15, to strike out "$50,000" and insert "$45,000", so as to read:

Miscellaneous garden tracts, $45,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 45, line 20, after the words "In all", to strike out "$2,047,300" and insert "$2,572,300", so as to read:

In all, $2,572,300, to be reimbursable in accordance with law, and to be immediately available, which amount, together with the unexpended balances of funds made available under this head in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1940, shall remain available until June 30, 1941.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Education," on page 46, line 13, after the word "schools," to strike out "$6,000,000" and insert "$6,015,000", so as to read:

For the support of Indian schools not otherwise provided for, and for other Indian educational purposes, including apprentice teachers for reservation and nonreservation schools, educational facilities authorized by treaty provisions, care of Indian children of school age attending public and private schools, and tuition and other assistance for Indian pupils attending public schools, $6,015,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "General support and administration", on page 58, line 18, after the word "provisions", to strike out "$2,846,700" and insert "$2,897,520", so as to read:

For general support of Indians and administration of Indian property, including pay of employees authorized by continuing or permanent treaty provisions, $2,897,520.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 60, after line 11, to insert:

Oklahoma, Seminole: The unexpended balance of the appropriation of $7,787 from tribal funds of the Seminole Indians, Oklahoma, contained in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1940, for reconstruction of a community house is hereby continued available for the same purposes until June 30, 1941.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 60, line 18, after the name "Klamath", to strike out "$123,760" and insert "$125,760", so as to read:

Oregon: Klamath, $125,760, of which not to exceed $4,500 shall be available for fees and expenses of an attorney or firm of attorneys selected by the tribe and employed under a contract approved by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with existing law, and not to exceed $30,000 shall be available for the construction and equipment of a nurses' home and a nurses' dwelling.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 61, line 20, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$521,126" and insert "$523,126", so as to read:

In all, not to exceed $523,126.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 62, after line 14, to insert:

Expenses of attorneys, Chippewa Tribe, Minnesota (tribal funds): For compensation and expenses of an attorney or attorneys employed by the Chippewa Tribe, under a contract approved by the Secretary of the Interior, $6,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, payable from the principal sum on deposit to the credit of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota, arising under section 7 of the act entitled "An act for the relief and civilization of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota," approved January 14, 1889 (25 Stat. 645), and the amount herein appropriated shall be available for compensation earned and expenses incurred during the period covered by said contract.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Construction and repair", on page 67, after line 6, to insert:

Alaska: Day-school facilities and quarters, $20,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 67, after line 22, to strike out:

Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma (Jones Academy): Improvements to water system, $4,500.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma: Improvements to water system, Jones Academy, $31,500; improvements to water system, Talihina Sanatorium, $27,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, line 5, after the figures "$15,000", to insert "quarters, $7,500", so as to read:

Fork Belknap, Mont.: General repairs and improvements, $15,000; quarters, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, line 6, after the word "Quarters", to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$7,500", so as to read:

Fort Berthold, N. Dak.: Quarters, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, line 8, after the word "Quarters", to strike out "$7,500" and insert "$8,500; shop building and garage, $10,000", so as to read:

Fort Totten, N. Dak.: Quarters, $8,500; shop building and garage, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, after line 10, to insert:

Hopi, Ariz.: School facilities, $125,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, line 13, after the figures "$7,500" and the semicolon, to insert "dairy barn, $15,000; shop building, $20,000", so as to read:

Kiowa, Okla.: Nurse aides' dormitory facilities, $40,000; Fort Sill, quarters, $7,500; dairy barn, $15,000; shop building $20,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, after line 17, to insert:

Pipestone, Minn.: Improvements to utility system, $22,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 69, line 5, after the word "Quarters", to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$7,500", so as to read:

Standing Rock, N. Dak.: Quarters, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 69, line 17, after the word "Quarters", to strike out "$30,000" and insert "$37,500", so as to read:

Western Shoshone, Nev.: Quarters, $37,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 70, line 2, after the word "herein", to strike out "$85,000" and insert "$110,000"; in line 3, after the words "in all", to strike out "$916,000" and insert "$1,229,000"; in the same line, after the word "available", to insert "and to remain available until completion of the projects when the unobligated balances shall revert to the general fund of the Treasury"; in line 6 after the word "Provided", to strike out "that not to exceed 10 percent of the amount of any specific authorization may be transferred, in the discretion of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, to the amount of any other specific authorization, but no limitation shall be increased more than 10 percent by any such transfer: Provided further", and in line 19, after the name "Treasury", to strike out the colon and "Provided further, That the appropriation contained in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1939, for the construction of a central heating plant, and rehabilitation of distribution lines at Chilocco, Okla., shall be available also for the construction of a print shop."

So as to read:

For administrative expenses, including personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; not to exceed $2,500 for printing and binding; purchase of periodicals, directories, and books of reference; purchase and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles; traveling expenses of employees; rent of office and storage space; telegraph and telephone tolls; and all other necessary expenses not specifically authorized herein, $110,000; in all, $1,229,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until completion of the projects when the unobligated balances shall revert to the general fund of the Treasury: Provided, That the unexpended balances of appropriations made available under this head in the Interior Department Appropriation Acts, fiscal years 1939 and 1940, the Urgent Deficiency and Supplemental Appropriation Act, fiscal years 1939 and 1940, and the Third Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1939, shall continue available until completion of the projects when the unobligated balances shall revert to the general fund of the Treasury.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Bureau of Reclamation", on page 81, line 17, after the name "Colorado", to strike out "$75,000" and insert "$100,000", so as to read:

Uncompahgre project, Colorado, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 81, line 18, after the word "division", to strike out "$700,000" and insert "$900,000", so as to read:

Boise project, Idaho, Payette division, $900,000; the sum heretofore appropriated for construction of the Twin Springs Dam and Snake River pumping plant shall remain available for construction of either or both of the same or such other project works on the Boise River or its tributaries as may be found by the Secretary of the Interior, following current investigations, to be more feasible.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 82, to insert:

Humboldt project, Nevada, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 82, line 2, after the name "New Mexico", to strike out "$50,000" and insert "$100,000", so as to read:

Carlsbad project, New Mexico, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 82, after line 5, to insert:

Klamath project, Oregon-California, $200,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 82, line 8, after the name "Wyoming", to strike out "$500,000" and insert "$900,000", so as to read:

Kendrick project, Wyoming, $900,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 83, line 3, after the word "fund", to strike out "$7,197,000" and insert "$8,172,000", so as to read:

Total, construction, from reclamation fund, $8,172,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 83, line 17, after the word "fund", to strike out "$8,099,600" and insert "$9,174,600", so as to read:

Total, from reclamation fund, $9,074,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 86, line 10, before the word "which", to strike out "$1,500,000" and insert "$850,000", so as to read:

Boulder Canyon project (All-American Canal): For continuation of construction of a diversion dam, and main canal (and appurtenant structures including distribution and drainage systems) located entirely within the United States connecting the diversion dam with the Imperial and Coachella Valleys in California; to acquire by proceedings in eminent domain, or otherwise, all lands, rights-of-way, and other property necessary for such purposes; and for incidental operations, as authorized by the Boulder Canyon Project Act, approved December 21, 1928 (43 U. S. C., ch. 12A); to be immediately available and to remain available until advanced to the Colorado River Dam fund, $850,000, which amount shall be available for personal services in the District of Columbia (not to exceed $5,000) and in the field and for all other objects of expenditure that are specified for projects hereinbefore included in this act under the caption "Bureau of Reclamation, Administrative provisions and limitations," without regard to the amounts of the limitations therein set forth.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "General fund, construction," on page 87, line 6, after the name "Arizona-California", to strike out "$3,000,000" and insert "$3,500,000, together with the unexpended balance of the appropriation of $4,000,000 for this project contained in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1939;", so as to read:

Parker Dam Power project, Arizona-California, $3,500,000, together with the unexpended balance of the appropriation of $4,000,000 for this project contained in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1939.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 87, line 10, after the name "California", to strike out "$16,000,000" and insert "$23,600,000", so as to read:

Central Valley project, California, $23,600,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 87, after line 12, to insert:

San Luis Valley project, Colorado: For further investigations, exploratory and preparatory work, and commencement of construction in accordance with House Document No. 693, Seventy-sixth Congress, third session: Provided, That commencement of construction of the Closed Basin Drain feature shall be contingent on (a) a conclusive finding of justification for the drain on the basis of cost and the quantity and quality of water to be secured, and (b) adequate arrangements for maintenance of the drain, $150,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 88, line 13, after the word "construction", to strike out "$35,100,000" and insert "$43,350,000", so as to read:

Total, general fund construction, $43,350,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Water conservation and utility projects", on page 88, after line 15, to insert:

For the construction of water conservation and utilization projects and small reservoirs including not to exceed $140,000 for surveys, investigations, and administrative expenses in connection therewith (of which not to exceed $20,000 shall be available for personal services in the District of Columbia), all as authorized by the act of August 11, 1939 (53 Stat. 1418), to remain available until expended, $2,600,000.

NEED OF SMALL RESERVOIR PROGRAM

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, this amendment deals, I believe, with one of the most important subjects included in the bill. Members of the Senate may feel that they have heard enough of the problem of the migratory farm family. Testimony has been presented to various committees of the Senate with respect to the gravity of the situation in which the farm families which have been driven out by the drought find themselves. We all know the conditions which exist in California, because these former farm families have now become migrants upon the face of the earth and I am confident that this body will want to leave nothing undone that may prove helpful.

The pending amendment, approved by the committee, is an attempt to prevent further dispersion of the farm population by providing for the conservation of water resources so as to keep on the lands families which have not yet been driven out. But it does not go far enough. The Bureau of Reclamation in the Department of the Interior was given

$5,000,000 for this purpose last year and asked a similar appropriation this year. No provision, however, was made in the first Budget report and this appropriation bill as it passed the House of Representatives carried no item for this work.

A week ago, however, I am happy to say, the Budget Bureau sent up a supplemental estimate for $2,600,000. I sought to persuade the committee to grant the full $5,000,000 believing that there are many items in this bill of much larger amounts and many items in other bills which are not nearly so important. The committee, however, saw fit not to increase the Budget estimate and I gave notice of my intention to ask the Senate for the larger amount, confident that this body would desire to do everything in its power to keep as many farm families as possible on the land.

I have here a report from the Farm Security Administration which indicates not only that at least 350,000 American farm families have lost their foothold on the land and have become migrant laborers wandering from State to State in search of occasional seasonal work, but that many other thousands of families are still attempting to maintain themselves on the land though faced with the danger of being driven away by lack of water. It is stated, for example, that in each of the Dakotas there are fully 20,000 families still trying to hold on; that in Montana, Colorado, Wyoming, and Nebraska there are other thousands of farm families in the same condition.

Most of the families which have migrated to California came from Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, and Missouri. They were driven out of what was called the Dust Bowl by the great drought of 1934 and 1936. I know of nothing more touching than the effort of people who have grown up upon the land, in agricultural communities, to struggle against the elements which seem to conspire to drive them off. I know of numerous areas in my own State which can be preserved and developed as economic farm units provided only we build small reservoirs and conserve the water resources. How much better it is to help such families to remain on the land than to try to provide relief for them after they have been driven out.

The increase which I am asking will not be sufficient to do all that should be done, but it will make a splendid start. It will enable the Bureau of Reclamation to take full advantage of laws which have already been enacted, allowing it to use the facilities of the Civilian Conservation Corps and the W. P. A. as well as the Farm Security Administration to provide for the permanent rehabilitation of thousands of families which represent the best citizenship in America.

One of the most satisfactory and encouraging facts about the Farm Security program has been the high degree of responsibility exhibited by the beneficiaries of the Farm Security loans as evidenced by the remarkable record of repayment which has been made by rehabilitated families.

DEPARTMENTS COOPERATING

The Interior Department and the Department of Agriculture are both anxious to cooperate, and when one considers the large proportion of young people who are affected, I am sure there will be little hesitation on the part of this Senate in granting what I ask.

Dr. Will L. Alexander, Administrator of the Farm Security Administration, recently reported to me of a study of 6,655 typical migrant families in California. Almost half of them had lived for 20 years or more in States from which they had come so that, obviously, the conditions which I am here trying to overcome are conditions which tear at the very roots of our society. But more appalling than that, to me at least, was the fact disclosed by this study that the average age of the heads of families was only 33 years and that only one-fifth of all the children of these families were 15 years of age, or older.

In some of the very States in which this problem exists millions of dollars are being taken out of the land in the development of natural resources. Even the oil lands on the public domain are frequently developed by large corporations which take the profits beyond the boundaries of the States. I am seeking to help the families who live in the States, the families who build up the communities, the families who produce the citizens of these States, and I know of no better way to do it than providing, as this amendment provides, for the conservation and development of water resources.

The amount of money carried in the committee recommendation is not sufficient to deal with the problem. The senior Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] appeared before the committee and urged larger appropriations. I do not suppose there is a Senator from the whole region west of the Mississippi, sometimes called the Great Plains area, sometimes referred to as the arid States, sometimes referred to as the Dust Bowl, who does not realize the importance of dealing adequately with this situation.

Mr. President, without taking more time of the Senate at this moment, I move to amend the committee amendment by increasing the amount from $2,600,000 to $5,000,000. The Farm Security Administration and the Bureau of Reclamation have testified to us that there are ample opportunities to spend this amount of money in an adequate and beneficial way, so as to keep the farmers on the land. I think there is no more important thing for Congress to do than to make it possible for farm families to remain where they are instead of joining the migratory movement, which is creating so much trouble throughout the West.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, this is important merely as a means of anchoring people upon their farms, in homes which they have built in some of the arid districts.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I do not wish to take up the time of the Senate, because I feel that every Senator present realizes how serious this question is. But as one of the Senators who has represented the Senate on a committee which for the last 3 or 4 years has been listening to a discussion of various problems, the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, I desire to state that that committee has gone into this subject. The testimony we have heard from the best authorities of the country confirms completely what the Senator from Wyoming has stated.

Furthermore, Mr. President, there are some sections of the country whose economic welfare depends entirely upon water conservation. My State happens to be a State of that type. There is the added consideration that the conservation of water is of tremendous importance to the welfare and conservation of human life.

Mr. President, I trust the Senate will agree to the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next committee amendment.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Geological Survey", on page 90, line 5, after the name "District of Columbia", to strike out "$150,000" and insert "$175,000", so as to read:

Salaries: For the Director of the Geological Survey and other personal services in the District of Columbia, $175,100;

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 95, line 6, after the word "photographs", in insert "or for the furnishing of topographic maps made from such photographs", so as to read:

During the fiscal year 1941, upon the request of the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to furnish aerial photographs required for mapping projects, insofar as the furnishing of such photographs will be economical to the Federal Government and does not conflict with military or naval operations or the other parts of the regular training program of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps flying services, and the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to reimburse the War or Navy Department for the cost of making the photographs, such cost to be confined to the actual cost of gasoline, oil, film, paper, chemicals, and the labor performed in developing the photographic negatives and the printing of copies of photographs, and the per diem expenses of the personnel authorized by law, together with such incidental expenses as care and minor repairs to plane and transportation of personnel to and from projects, and the War Department or the Navy Department, on request of the Department of the Interior, is authorized to furnish copies to any State, county, or municipal agency cooperating with the Federal Government in the mapping project for which the photographs were taken. In the event that the Director of the Geological Survey deems it advantageous to the Government, the Geological Survey is authorized to contract with civilian aerial photographic concerns for the furnishing of such photographs or for the furnishing of topographic maps made from such photographs;

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 95, line 14, after the word "Survey", to strike out "$3,586,910" and insert "$3,612,010", so as to read:

In all, salaries and expenses, United States Geological Survey, $3,612,010.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Bureau of Mines—Salaries and general expenses", on page 97, line 5, after the words "District of", to strike out "Columbia, $656,000" and insert: "Columbia; and including not to exceed $20,000 for the necessary employees and other expenses connected with the establishment and maintenance of a mine-rescue station to serve the New York and New England area, as authorized by the act of March 3, 1915 (30 U. S. C., sec. 8), $676,000:", so as to read:

Operating mine-rescue cars and stations and investigation of mine accidents: For the investigation and improvement of mine-rescue and first-aid methods and appliances and the teaching of mine safety, rescue, and first-aid methods; investigations as to the causes of mine explosions, causes of falls of roof and coal, methods of mining, especially in relation to the safety of miners, the appliances best adapted to prevent accidents, the possible improvement of conditions under which mining operations are carried on, the use of explosives and electricity, the prevention of accidents, statistical studies and reports relating to mine accidents, and other inquiries and technologic investigations pertinent to the mining industry; the exchange in part payment for operation, maintenance, and repair of mine-rescue trucks; the construction of temporary structures and the repair, maintenance, and operation of mine-rescue cars and the Government-owned mine-rescue stations and appurtenances thereto; personal services, traveling expenses and subsistence, equipment, and supplies; travel and subsistence, and other incidental expenses of employees in attendance at meetings and conferences held for the purpose of promoting safety and health in the mining and allied industries; purchase not exceeding $6,000, exchange as part payment for, operation, maintenance, and repair of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles for official use in field work; purchase and exchange in part payment therefor of cooks' uniforms, goggles, gloves, rubber boots, aprons, and such other articles or equipment as may be necessary in connection with the purposes of this paragraph; including not to exceed $67,110 for personal services in the District of Columbia; and including not to exceed $20,000 for the necessary employees and other expenses connected with the establishment and maintenance of a mine-rescue station to serve the New York and New England area, as authorized by the act of March 3, 1915 (30 U. S. C., sec. 8), $676,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 97, line 24, after the name "District of Columbia", to strike out "$223,900" and insert "$263,900", so as to read:

Testing fuel: To conduct inquiries and scientific and technologic investigations concerning the mining, preparation, treatment, and use of mineral fuels, and for investigation of mineral fuels belonging to or for the use of the United States, with a view to their most efficient utilization; to recommend to various departments such changes in selection and use of fuel as may result in greater economy, and, upon request of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, to investigate the fuel-burning equipment in use by or proposed for any of the departments, establishments, or institutions of the United States in the District of Columbia, $263,900, of which amount not to exceed $29,400 may be expended for personal services in the District of Columbia.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I understand that the amendment at the bottom of page 97 provides for certain amounts mentioned in the report; that is, $30,000 for the continuation of investigation of subbituminous coal and lignite utilization, Golden, Colo., and $10,000 for experimental work in Pittsburgh, Pa.

I notice in the hearings before the Senate subcommittee, that on page 347, Mr. Fieldner, of the Bureau of Mines, makes the statement that one part of the investigation at Golden, Colo., he thinks, will be finished by the 1st of July of this year. Recently I talked with a representative of the Interior Department who was sent out there especially to investigate the tests and to help with them. He has just returned and said that he was doubtful whether this particular investigation would be completed by the 1st of July. What I am interested to know is whether or not it is the understanding of the members of the committee that if this particular experiment is not completed, the $30,000 will be continued for the investigation at Golden, Colo., as well as the amount provided for the plant at Pittsburgh?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, on page 346 of the hearings the Senator will find the inquiry which I made of Mr. Fieldner. Director Henderson was also present. I inquired:

You have been conducting at Golden some experiments in reference to the development of the use of the subbituminous coal. Is that continuation included in the appropriations here?

The reply was:

Mr. FIELDNER. No, sir. There is no money appropriated for continuing that work next year. It will stop on June 30, unless an appropriation is made.

Then continuing:

Senator ADAMS. Have they completed their studies?
Mr. FIELDNER. No, sir; they are still in progress.
Senator ADAMS. Do you feel that they ought to be continued?
Mr. FIELDNER. I feel that a large part of the work should be continued, especially that which relates to the seeking of better methods for utilizing the subbituminous coals and lignites in domestic furnaces and small industrial plants, and also that a study should be made of the storing of these coals so that they will not fire spontaneously, and so that they will not slack and break down in size to a useless powder during transportation and storage. There are a number of problems which research might solve in making these coals more useful to the local people and extending the radius to which they could be shipped. This radius is relatively short at the present time.
Senator ADAMS. How much would it take to continue that part of the work?
Mr. FIELDNER. We would like to get about $30,000. * * *

The Senator from North Dakota is interested in the continuation of this general study of sub-bituminous coal and we in Colorado are also deeply interested in it because of the existence of tremendous bodies of sub-bituminous coals. If such coal can be made more useful, it will increase tremendously the value of those coal deposits. The committee added this $30,000 with the understanding that the investigation now being conducted would be continued for this general purpose.

Mr. FRAZIER. I thank the Senator from Colorado for that statement. I am very much interested in seeing the investigation carried through to completion, because North Dakota has a great deal of lignite coal, as do several other Western States, and if the test which is being conducted in Colorado should prove successful, it would benefit our State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 97, line 24.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 99, line 21, before the words "of which", to strike out "$552,000" and insert "$567,000", so as to read:

Mining experiment stations: For the employment of personal services, purchase of laboratory gloves, goggles, rubber boots, and aprons, the purchase not to exceed $3,000, exchange as part payment for, maintenance and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles for official use in field work, and all other expenses in connection with the establishment, maintenance, and operation of mining experiment stations, as provided in the act authorizing additional mining experiment stations, approved March 3, 1915 (30 U. S. C. 8), $567,000, of which appropriation not to exceed $17,100 may be expended for personal services in the District of Columbia;

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 101, line 1, before the words "of which", to strike out "$331,500" and insert "$336,920", so as to read:

Economics of mineral industries: For inquiries and investigations, and the dissemination of information concerning the economic problems of the mining, quarrying, metallurgical, and other mineral industries, with a view to assuring ample supplies and efficient distribution of the mineral products of the mines and quarries, including studies and reports relating to uses, reserves, production, distribution, stocks, consumption, prices, and marketing of mineral commodities and primary products thereof; preparation of the reports of the mineral resources of the United States, including special statistical inquiries; and including personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; purchase of furniture and equipment; stationery and supplies; typewriting, adding and computing machines, accessories and repairs; newspapers; traveling expenses; purchase, not exceeding $1,200, exchange as part payment for, operation, maintenance, and repair of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles for official use in field work; and for all other necessary expenses not included in the foregoing, $336,920, of which amount not to exceed $234,000 may be expended for personal services in the District of Columbia;

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 104, at the end of line 23, to increase the total appropriation for the Bureau of Mines, from $2,815,460 to $2,895,880.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "National Park Service", on page 109, after line 19, to insert:

Kings Canyon National Park, Calif.: For administration, protection, maintenance, and improvement, including not exceeding $1,050 for the purchase, maintenance, operation, and repair of motor-driven passenger-carrying vehicles, $11,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 114, after line 4, to insert:

Dinosaur National Monument, Utah: For reliefing the dinosaur skeletons on the quarry wall, for protection of such skeletons from the elements, for personal services, general expenses, supplies, traveling expenses, and mechanical equipment in connection with such project, including not exceeding $1,400 for the purchase, maintenance, operation, and repair of a heavy-duty truck, $20,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 114, line 18, after the word "thereto", to strike out "$227,825" and insert "$234,325", so as to read:

National historical parks and monuments: For administration, protection, maintenance, and improvement, including not exceeding $5,925 for the purchase, maintenance, operation, and repair of motor-driven passenger-carrying vehicles, and not exceeding $50,000 for the purchase of lands and interests in lands, including expenses incidental thereto, $234,325.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, before action is taken on the committee amendment appearing on page 114, line 18, I move to amend the committee amendment by striking out "$234,325" and inserting in lieu thereof "$251,325."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New York to the committee amendment.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, the question involved in the amendment is an appropriation for the maintenance of the W. K. Vanderbilt estate in Dutchess County, N. Y., an estate worth about $2,000,000, which has been made a gift to the Government. The committee had testimony from officials of the National Park Service to the effect that there was no question about the income being greater than the expenditure; but in order to be sure about that, I should like to ask the Senator if he would accept an amendment to this effect:

Provided, That the total sum expended in any fiscal year for maintenance of the Vanderbilt Historical Monument in Dutchess County, N. Y., shall not exceed the total sum of the admission fees collected at such monument during the previous fiscal year.

Mr. MEAD. I shall be glad to accept the amendment. That language will not in any way jeopardize the purpose of my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New York, as modified, to the committee amendment.

The amendment as modified to the committee amendment was agreed to.

The committee amendment as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 114, after line 18, to insert:

Patrick Henry National Monument: For the acquisition of the estate of Patrick Henry in Charlotte County, Va., known as Red Hill, and including all expenses incidental to such acquisition, to be known as the Patrick Henry National Monument, in accordance with the provisions of the acts of August 15, 1935 (49 Stat. 652), and January 29, 1940 (Public, No. 408, 76th Cong.), $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 115, after line 2, to insert:

Andrew Johnson National Monument: For acquisition of the Andrew Johnson homestead and site located in Greeneville, Tenn., including certain furniture, furnishings, and equipment located therein, and expenses incidental to such acquisition, in accordance with the provisions of the act of August 29, 1935 (49 Stat. 958), $44,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 119, line 5, after the word "boundary", to strike out "$2,125,000" and insert "$2,000,000", so as to read:

Roads and trails, National Park Service: For the construction, reconstruction, and improvement of roads and trails, inclusive of necessary bridges, in the national parks, monuments, and other areas administered by the National Park Service, including the Boulder Dam National Recreational Area, and other areas authorized to be established as national parks and monuments, and national park and monument approach roads authorized by the act of January 31, 1931 (16 U. S. C. 8a and 8b), as amended, including the roads from Glacier Park Station through the Blackfeet Indian Reservation to various points in the boundary line of the Glacier National Park and the international boundary, $2,000,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 121, line 25, after the word "employees", to strike out "$289,900" and insert "$329,900"; and on page 122, line 1, after the word "Monument", to insert "and $40,000 shall be available for the construction and equipment of a structure, at or near the Water Gate, West Potomac Park, to be used as a first-aid station, park police lodge, maintenance station, and comfort station", so as to read:

Salaries and expenses, National Capital parks: For administration, protection, maintenance, and improvement of the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, Arlington Memorial Bridge, George Washington Memorial Parkway, monuments and memorials, Federal parks in the District of Columbia, and other Federal lands authorized by the act of May 29, 1930 (46 Stat. 482), including the pay and allowances in accordance with the provisions of the act of May 27, 1924, as amended, of the police force for the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway and the George Washington Memorial Parkway, and the operation, maintenance, repair, exchange, and storage of three automobiles, revolvers, ammunition, purchase, cleaning, and repair of uniforms for police, guards, and elevator conductors, and equipment, per diem employees at rates of pay approved by the Director not exceeding current rates for similar services in the District of Columbia, the hire of draft animals with or without drivers at local rates approved by the Director, stenographic reporting service, traveling expenses and carfare, and leather and rubber articles for the protection of public property and employees, $329,900, of which $15,000 shall be available for repairs in the Washington Monument and $40,000 shall be available for the construction and equipment of a structure, at or near the Water Gate, West Potomac Park, to be used as a first-aid station, park police lodge, maintenance station, and comfort station.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 122, line 16, before the words "to remain", to strike out "$283,740" and insert "$375,000"; so as to read:

Development of grounds, Thomas Jefferson Memorial, Washington, D. C.: For all necessary expenses in connection with the development and rearrangement of grounds surrounding the Thomas Jefferson Memorial in West Potomac Park, Washington, D. C., including relocation of sea wall, rearrangement of park roads, landscaping and planting; personal services in the District of Columbia; traveling expenses; per diem employees at rates of pay approved by the Secretary of the Interior; and maintenance and operation of one passenger-carrying vehicle; $375,000, to remain available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Bureau of Biological Survey—Salaries and Expenses", on page 123, line

24, after the word "including", to strike out "$30,738" and insert "$45,738", and on page 124, line 4, after the word "structures", to strike out "$183,300" and insert "$198,300", so as to read:

Biological investigations: For biological investigations, including the relations, habits, geographic distribution, and migration of animals and plants, and the preparation of maps of the life zones, and including $45,738 for investigations of the relations of wild animal life to forests, under section 5 of the act approved May 22, 1928 (16 U. S. C. 581d), and for investigations of the wildlife resources of the Territory of Alaska, including the erection of necessary buildings and other structures, $198,300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 127, after line 5, to insert:

Restoration of Lower Klamath Migratory Waterfowl Refuge: For the restoration and development of Klamath Lake Reservation (commonly known as the Lower Klamath Migratory Waterfowl Refuge) as a feeding, nesting, and breeding ground for migratory birds, including the construction of water-control works thereon and for necessary expenses incident thereto, $70,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 127, line 13, after the word "expenses", to increase the appropriation for salaries and expenses under the Bureau of Biological Survey, from $2,381,093 to $2,466,093.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 128, line 17, after the word "Survey", to strike out "$4,881,093" and insert "$4,966,093", so as to read:

Total, Bureau of Biological Survey, $4,966,093 and in addition thereto funds made available under the Migratory Bird Conservation Fund of which amounts not to exceed $709,940 may be expended for personal services in the District of Columbia, and not to exceed $76,600 shall be available for the purchase of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles necessary in the conduct of field work outside the District of Columbia:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Bureau of Fisheries", on page 130, line 25, before the word "temporary", to strike out "$464,690" and insert "$473,090"; in the same line, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$10,000" and insert "$30,000"; and on page 131, line 5, after the word "aquarium", to strike out "$922,940, including not to exceed $75,000 to commence the establishment of stations in Arkansas and Mississippi on sites heretofore donated to the United States for such purpose, for the purchase of a fish cultural station in Oklahoma, and for the further development of the station at Lamar, Pa." and insert "$987,940, including not to exceed $120,000 to commence the establishment of a station in Arkansas, on a site heretofore donated to the United States for such purpose, the establishment of a station in Mississippi on a site heretofore or hereafter donated to the United States for such purpose, for the purchase of a fish-cultural station in Oklahoma, and for the further development of the stations at Lamar, Pa., and on Williams Creek, on the Fort Apache Indian Reservation in Arizona", so as to read:

Propagation of food fishes: For maintenance, repair, alteration, improvement, equipment, acquisition, and operation of fish-cultural stations, general propagation of food fishes and their distribution, including movements, maintenance, and repairs of cars and not to exceed $15,000 for purchase of trucks for fish distribution; maintenance, repair, and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles for official use in the field; purchase of equipment (including rubber boots, oilskins, and first-aid outfits) and apparatus; contingent expenses; pay of permanent employees not to exceed $473,090; temporary labor; not to exceed $30,000 for propagation and distribution of fresh-water mussels and the necessary expenses connected therewith; purchase, collection, and transportation of specimens, and other expenses incidental to the maintenance and operation of aquarium, $987,940, including not to exceed $120,000 to commence the establishment of a station in Arkansas, on a site heretofore donated to the United States for such purpose, the establishment of a station in Mississippi on a site heretofore or hereafter donated to the United States for such purpose, for the purchase of a fish-cultural station in Oklahoma, and for the further development of the stations at Lamar, Pa., and on Williams Creek, on the Fort Apache Indian Reservation in Arizona, including the construction of buildings, ponds, water supply, improvements to grounds, purchase of equipment, and all other necessary expenses.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 131, after line 21, to insert:

Diversion dam, Sandy River, Oreg.: For the construction, improvement, maintenance, and operation of a diversion dam and for bank protection and related works on the Sandy River, Oreg., for the conservation of fish in the Columbia River Basin, as authorized by the act of May 11, 1938, $30,000, including personal services not to exceed $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 132, line 10, after the numerals "1941", to insert a comma and "and the unobligated balance of the appropriation remaining under the limitation of $155,000 to establish or commence the establishment of stations authorized by the act approved May 21, 1930 (46 Stat. 371), contained in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1939, under the head 'Propagation of food fishes', which was continued available during the fiscal year 1940, is continued available during the fiscal year 1941", so as to read:

The unobligated balance of the appropriation remaining under the limitation of $155,000 to establish or commence the establishment of stations authorized by the act approved May 21, 1930 (46 Stat. 371), contained in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1940, under the head "Propagation of food fishes", is continued available during the fiscal year 1941, and the unobligated balance of the appropriation remaining under the limitation of $155,000 to establish or commence the establishment of stations authorized by the act approved May 21, 1930 (46 Stat. 371), contained in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1939, under the head "Propagation of food fishes", which was continued available during the fiscal year 1940, is continued available during the fiscal year 1941.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 134, line 8, after the word "purposes", to strike out "$368,835" and insert "$371,835", and in line 9, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$278,400" and insert "$280,400", so as to read:

Inquiry respecting food fishes: For inquiry into the cause of the decrease of food fishes in the waters of the United States, and for investigation and experiments in respect to the aquatic animals, plants, and waters, in the interests of fish culture and the fishery industries, maintenance, repair, improvement, equipment, and operation of biological stations, maintenance, repair, and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles for official use in the field, preparation of reports, and not to exceed $500 for rent of suitable quarters in the District of Columbia for laboratory and storage purposes, $371,835, of which sum not to exceed $280,400 may be expended for personal services.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Government in the Territories—Puerto Rican hurricane relief", on page 143, line 3, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$15,000" and insert "30,000", so as to read:

To enable the Division of Territories and Island Possessions to continue collection and administration of moneys due the United States on account of loans made under the joint resolutions approved December 21, 1928 (45 Stat. 1067), and January 22, 1930 (46 Stat. 57), and to make compositions and adjustments in any loan heretofore made, as authorized by Public Resolutions Nos. 59 (49 Stat. 926) and 60 (49 Stat. 928), Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 27, 1935, not to exceed $30,000 of any unobligated balances of appropriations made by authority of those joint resolutions, including repayment of principal and payments of interest on such loans, is hereby made available for administrative expenses during the fiscal year 1941.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Equatorial and South Sea Islands", on page 143, after line 20, to insert:

Division of Territories and Island Possessions: For expenses of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions in the investigation and survey of natural resources of the land and sea areas of the Antarctic regions, including personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere without regard to the civil-service laws or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, or by contract, if deemed necessary, without regard to the provisions of section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, rent, traveling expenses, purchase of necessary books, documents, newspapers and periodicals, stationery, hire of automobiles, purchase of equipment, supplies, and provisions, and all other necessary expenses, $250,000: Provided, That fuel, repairs, and emergency supplies to be paid for out of this appropriation may be contracted for in foreign ports.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "St. Elizabeths Hospital", on page 145, line 8, after the word "grounds", to strike out "$1,240,285" and insert "$1,275,285", so as to read:

For support, clothing, and treatment in St. Elizabeths Hospital for the Insane of insane persons from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, insane inmates of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, persons charged with or convicted of crimes against the United States who are insane, all persons who have become insane since their entry into the military and naval services of the United States, insane civilians in the quartermaster service of the Army, insane persons transferred from the Canal Zone who have been admitted to the hospital and who are indigent, American citizens legally adjudged insane in the Dominion of Canada whose legal residence in one of the States, Territories, or the District of Columbia it has been impossible to establish, insane beneficiaries of the United States Employees' Compensation Commission, insane beneficiaries of the United States Veterans' Administration, and insane Indian beneficiaries of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, including not exceeding $27,000 for the purchase, exchange, maintenance, repair, and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles for the use of the superintendent, purchasing agent, and general hospital business, and including not to exceed $185,000 for repairs and improvements to buildings and grounds, $1,275,285, including cooperation with organizations or individuals in scientific research into the nature, causes, prevention, and treatment of mental illness, and including maintenance and operation of necessary facilities for feeding employees and others (at not less than cost), and the proceeds therefrom shall reimburse the appropriation for the institution; and not exceeding $1,500 of this sum may be expended in the removal of patients to their friends; not exceeding $1,000 for expenses of attendance at meetings or conventions concerned with the work of psychiatry, medicine, and other scientific subjects of interest to St. Elizabeths Hospital, when specifically authorized by the Secretary of the Interior; not exceeding $1,500 in the purchase of such books, periodicals, and newspapers as may be required for the purposes of the hospital and for the medical library, and not exceeding $1,500 for the actual and necessary expenses incurred in the apprehension and return to the hospital of escaped patients.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, in view of the amendment which was adopted by vote of the Senate, on page 88, beginning in line 16, the limitation in line 18 should be changed. The amount should be changed to $280,000. I ask unanimous consent that that be done.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, that amount should be in proper proportion.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I ask that the vote by which the committee amendment, on page 88, lines 16 to 23, inclusive, was agreed to be considered, and that the amount, in line 18, be changed to $280,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wyoming? The Chair hears none, and the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to is reconsidered.

The question now is on the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Freedmen's Hospital", on page 148, line 1, before the word "for", to strike out "$353,840" and insert "$363,620"; in line 15, after the word "expenses", to strike out "$203,305" and insert "$208,305"; in line 16, after the name "Freedmen's Hospital", to strike out "$557,145" and insert "$571,925"; and in line 19, before the words "one-half shall", to strike out "$557,145" and insert "$571,925", so as to read:

For officers and employees and compensation for all other professional and other services that may be required and expressly approved by the Secretary of the Interior, $363,620; for subsistence, fuel and light, not exceeding $1,000 for expenses of attendance upon meetings of a technical nature, pertaining to hospital administration and medical advancement, when authorized by the Secretary of the Interior, clothing, to include white duck suits and white canvas shoes for the use of internes, and cotton or duck uniforms or aprons for cooks, maids, and attendants, and rubber surgical gloves, bedding, forage, medicine, medical and surgical supplies, surgical instruments, electric lights, repairs, replacement of X-ray apparatus, furniture; purchase, maintenance, and operation of passenger-carrying vehicles, including not exceeding $1,500 for the purchase of books, periodicals, and newspapers; and not to exceed $2,000 for the special instruction of pupil nurses, and other absolutely necessary expenses, $208,305; in all, for Freedmen's Hospital, $571,925, including reimbursement to the appropriation for Howard University of actual cost of heat and light furnished, of which amount of $571,925 one-half shall be chargeable to the District of Columbia and paid in like manner as other appropriations of the District of Columbia are paid.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 149, line 4, before the word "without", to insert "and as station wagons", and in the same line, after the word "such", to strike out "trucks" and insert "vehicles", so as to read:

SEC. 3. Appropriations herein made shall be available for the purchase, maintenance, operation, and repair of vehicles generally known as quarter-ton or half-ton pick-up trucks and as station wagons without such vehicles being considered as passenger-carrying vehicles and without the cost of purchase, maintenance, operation, and repair being included in the limitation in the various appropriation items for the purchase, maintenance, operation, and repair of motor-driven passenger-carrying vehicles.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the committee amendments.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, there are a few amendments which, by direction of the committee, I should like to offer. The first amendment is on page 14, line 5, and is a matter stricken out on point of order in the House of Representatives, with reference to the Philippine High Commission.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 14, line 5, after the amount "$159,000.", it is proposed to strike out the period and to insert a comma and the following:

of which amount not exceeding $10,000 shall be available for expenditure, in the discretion of the High Commissioner, for maintenance of his household and such other purposes as he may deem proper: Provided, That the salary of the legal adviser and the financial expert shall not exceed the annual rate of $10,000 and $9,000 each, respectively: Provided further, That section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U. S. C. 5) shall not apply to any purchase or service rendered under this appropriation when the aggregate amount involved does not exceed the sum of $100.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, the next amendment I offer on behalf of the committee is on page 25, line 3, and relates to an authorization for the Indian Office to purchase additional lands.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 25, line 3, after the word "Provided", it is proposed to insert the following:

That in addition to the amount herein appropriated, the Secretary of the Interior may also incur obligations and enter into contracts for the acquisition of the additional land, not exceeding a total of $325,000, and his action in so doing shall be deemed a contractual obligation of the Federal Government for the payment of the cost thereof, and appropriations hereafter made for the acquisition of land pursuant to the authorization contained in the act of June 18, 1934, shall be available for the purpose of discharging the obligation or obligations so created: Provided further.

On page 25, line 4, after the word "appropriated", it is proposed to insert "or of this contract authorization."

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. FRAZIER. Does the $325,000 include money for the purchase of land in the Turtle Mountain Indian Reservation?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, the Senator brought to our attention the fact that the Senate had passed such a bill, and the House had passed a bill in a little different form, but that the two bodies were practically agreed on the necessity for providing money for the purchase of additional land for the Turtle Mountain Indians. We thought the best way to bring about that action was to include this sum of money in the bill. The amount of the contractual authorization will make the total sum the same as last year, and very much less than it was the year before and in previous years. The money is designed to help take care of the situation which the Senator has in mind.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. KING. Are there any tribal funds out of which the proposed payment could come?

Mr. FRAZIER. There are no tribal funds.

Mr. KING. This is a gratuity, then, on the part of the Government?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. On behalf of the committee, I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 69, line 8, after "$400,000", it is proposed to insert the following:

and in addition thereto the Secretary of the Interior may incur obligations and enter into a contract or contracts not exceeding the total amount of $895,000, and his action in so doing shall be deemed a contractual obligation of the Federal Government for the payment of the cost thereof, and appropriations hereafter made for continuing construction of the project shall be available for the purpose of discharging the obligation or obligations so created.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to complete the construction of a hospital for tubercular Indian patients at Tacoma, Wash. With this contractual authority the obligation will be satisfied. It is not a recurring item.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I should like to speak very briefly with reference to this amendment. It so happens that in 1922 I became very familiar with the hazards involved in this particular hospital. Immediately after the war this hospital, which was known as Cushman Hospital, was used by the Veterans' Bureau for the purpose of taking care of general surgical and medical cases of veterans in our State. At that time I was very much interested and very active in veterans' affairs; and it happened that as one interested in veterans' affairs, I had a little authority and some opportunity to accomplish results. I succeeded in having the veterans taken out of that hospital on the ground that it was unsafe and was a fire hazard. Since it was not safe for veterans under the administration back in 1922 and 1923, it might be possible in this administration for me to raise my voice in an effort to see that the Indians are removed from the same fire hazard to which the veterans were subjected at that time. No improvements have been made in the hospital since 1923.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, as a matter of fact there was a Budget estimate of $500,000. On inquiry we found that the amount appropriated by the House was $400,000, with a contractual obligation which went out on a point of order. We made inquiry, and found that if we allowed $895,000 that amount would be sufficient to remodel the hospital, erect a new building, and do everything necessary to finish the job. On advice to that effect we are offering this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. On behalf of the committee I send to the desk another amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 82, line 5, after "$200,000", it is proposed to insert the following:

Provided, That expenditures from this appropriation and from any other appropriation for the construction of the Modoc Unit shall be reimbursed from net revenues hereafter received from the lease of grazing and farming lands within the Tule Lake Division, notwithstanding the provisions of subsection I of section 4 of the act of December 5, 1924 (43 Stat. 703; 43 U. S. C. 373a).

Mr. HAYDEN. This is the legislative portion of the Budget estimate submitted, and should be adopted.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. On behalf of the committee I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated. This amendment is in connection with the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY]. It is a declaration of policy with respect to the opening of newly irrigated lands.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona, on behalf of the committee, will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 89, after line 6, it is proposed to insert a new paragraph reading as follows:

It is hereby declared to be the policy of the Congress that, in the opening to entry of newly irrigated public lands, preference shall be given to families who have no other means of earning a livelihood, or who have been compelled to abandon, through no fault of their own, other farms in the United States, and with respect to whom it appears after careful study, in the case of each such family, that there is a probability that such family will be able to earn a livelihood on such irrigated lands.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. On behalf of the committee I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona, on behalf of the committee, will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 104, after line 12, it is proposed to insert a new paragraph reading as follows:

Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, Royd R. Sayers, a commissioned officer on the active list, United States Public Health Service, is authorized to hold the office of Director of the Bureau of Mines in the Department of the Interior without loss of or prejudice to his status as a commissioned officer on the active list of the United States Public Health Service and, if appointed to such civil office, he shall receive in lieu of his pay and allowances as such commissioned officer the salary prescribed by law for such civil office.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to do for Mr. Sayers what has been done in a number of instances with respect to Army officers. For example, in the case of Colonel Fleming, as head of the Wage and Hour Board, without authority of this kind his rating and rank in the Army would be disturbed; so we enacted a similar provision for Colonel Fleming.

Mr. Sayers is a commissioned officer of the Public Health Service. He has been associated with the Bureau of Mines for 16 years, by detail from the Public Health Service. He is now the Acting Commissioner. It is proposed to make it possible for him to be appointed head of the Bureau of Mines without losing his status in the Public Health Service.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. On behalf of the committee I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 119, line 9, after "1941", it is proposed to insert a colon and the following:

Provided further, That in addition to the amount herein appropriated the Secretary of the Interior may also approve projects, incur obligations, and enter into contracts for additional work not exceeding a total of $3,000,000 and his action in so doing shall be deemed a contractual obligation of the Federal Government for the payment of the cost thereof and appropriations hereafter made for the construction, reconstruction, and improvement of roads and trails shall be considered available for the purpose of discharging the obligation so created.

And on page 119, line 10, after the word "appropriation", it is proposed to insert "or contract authorization".

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation by the Senator of this amendment.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, this amendment is similar to the one which I shall presently offer with respect to the Blue Ridge and Natchez Trace Parkways.

Congress has authorized by law the expenditure of $5,000,000 during the next fiscal year for roads within the national parks, and the expenditure of $8,000,000 during the next fiscal year on the Blue Ridge and Natchez Trace Highway. The amount of money carried in the bill must be supplemented by contractual authority. In the case of the Blue Ridge and Natchez Trace Highway, the House committee proposed to give the contractual authorization. It was so reported to the House, and went out on a point of order. It therefore must be restored in this manner. We propose to appropriate in each instance the amount now authorized by law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. On behalf of the committee, I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 120, line 3, after the word "purpose", it is proposed to insert the following:

Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior shall make a detailed statement of expenditures from this appropriation to the Senate and House Committees on Appropriations at the beginning of the next regular session of Congress: Provided further, That in addition to the amount herein appropriated the Secretary of the Interior may also approve projects, incur obligations, and enter into contracts for additional work not exceeding a total of $6,000,000, of which $2,100,000 shall be for the Natchez Trace Parkway and shall be allotted and expended ratably between the States of Mississippi, Alabama, and Tennessee according to mileage of said Parkway in each respective State, and his action in so doing shall be deemed a contractual obligation of the Federal Government for the payment of the cost thereof and appropriations hereafter made for the construction and maintenance of the Blue Ridge and Natchez Trace Parkways shall be considered available for the purpose of discharging the obligation so created.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. That concludes the amendments offered on behalf of the committee.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 72, after line 5, it is proposed to insert the following:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw immediately from the Treasury of the United States $105,000 of any funds on deposit to the credit of the Menominee Indians in Wisconsin, and to expend said sum, or as much thereof as may be necessary, for a per capita payment of $50 to each enrolled member of the Menominee Tribe: Provided, That such payment shall be in lieu of the payments authorized by the act of June 15, 1934 (48 Stat. 964), for the fair market stumpage value of timber cut on the Menominee Reservation during the fiscal years 1940 and 1941: Provided further, That the amounts expended for making such per capita payment shall be reimbursed to the tribal funds utilized therefor from sums that would otherwise be paid said Indians pursuant to the act of June 15, 1934, supra.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. KING. I assume that this amendment is offered in accordance with the desire of the members of the tribe.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Yes, Mr. President. I was about to make a brief statement on the subject. On several occasions in the past, but not with any degree of regularity, per capita payments have been made to the Menominee Indians out of their own tribal funds. Heretofore the moneys have been paid out of funds obtained from the timber resources and the operation of mills on the reservation. This year, because of the low price of timber, the income from the timber resources has not been sufficient to make the per capita payments.

The tribe has what is commonly called a 5-percent fund, which heretofore I have been reluctant ever to encroach upon, and I may say frankly to the Senator from Utah that I am reluctant to see it encroached upon at this time; but, after consultation with the duly authorized delegates of the tribe, their attorneys, and Mr. Zimmerman, in the Indian Office, we worked out this plan to appropriate the money from the 5-percent fund, and then to reimburse the 5-percent fund from future stumpage payments. It is anticipated that in 1941 the 5-percent fund will then be reimbursed and will then remain intact.

I presented this matter to the committee and they gave it very sympathetic consideration. Therefore I feel that the amendment is in order. There can be no question, I may say to the Senator from Utah and other Senators interested, as to the distressful conditions on the reservation at this time. About half the Indians are unemployed; they are not eligible for relief from any local subdivision or from the State; and this is the only way by which provision can be made for them.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I assume from the Senator's statement that the Government will not ultimately be called upon to pay the amount?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Government will not be called upon to make any payment from the Treasury other than the regularly authorized payments for stumpage which are provided for by law.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, this matter was brought to the attention of the committee, and I am authorized by the committee to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I offer another amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 61, line 12, it is proposed to strike out "$72,100" and insert "$78,100", and on page 61, line 19, after the word "law", to insert the following:

Provided, That for the fiscal year 1939 and thereafter not to exceed $6,000 shall be available annually from the funds of the Menominee Indians for the payment of salaries and expenses of the chairman, secretary, and interpreters of the Menominee General Council and members of the Menominee Advisory Council and tribal delegates when engaged on business of the tribe at rates to be determined by the Menominee General Council and approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the pending bill carries a general provision for "Expenses of tribal councils or committees thereof (tribal funds): For traveling and other expenses of members of tribal councils, business committees, or other tribal organizations when engaged on business of the tribes, including supplies and equipment, not to exceed $5 per diem in lieu of subsistence" for services rendered to various tribes.

The Menominee Tribe have found from their experience in connection with their very substantial business operations on the reservation incident to tribal affairs that they have not been able to obtain under this limitation men of the highest qualifications.

There are precedents for a provision of this nature in the case of other Indian tribes. The adoption of the amendment will not cause any expense to the Treasury itself, but the money will come out of tribal funds. The proposal is endorsed by the tribe and their council.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, from representations made to the committee by the Office of Indian Affairs, I am authorized to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, under date of April 26 I noted my intention to move to suspend paragraph 4 of Rule XVI in order that I might be permitted to offer an amendment which I have submitted to the Senator from Arizona in charge of the bill, which amendment I now send to the desk. I ask that it may be stated in connection with my motion, and I move that paragraph 4 of Rule XVI be suspended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 122, after line 16, it is proposed to insert the following:

NAVY AND MARINE MEMORIAL

For labor and materials, including the preparation of revised plans and specifications as may be necessary, not to exceed $5,000 for architectural fees and full satisfaction of all obligations in connection with the original contract between the Navy and Marine Memorial Association and the architect, and not to exceed $44,384 for the design, professional services, disbursements, materials, and in full satisfaction of all obligations in connection with the original contract between the Navy and Marine Memorial Association and the sculptor, and the remainder, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended during the fiscal year 1941, for the completion of the Navy and Marine Memorial, authorized by act approved April 26, 1939, $100,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER] to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI in order that the amendment may be offered.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I may say that I am willing to take this amendment to conference, but I wish to state very frankly to the Senator from Connecticut that I doubt if we will be able to get all the money he seeks to obtain.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, may we first have the motion put? Then I should like to explain the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER] to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI in order that he may offer the amendment. [Putting the question.] Two-thirds having voted in the affirmative, paragraph 4, rule XVI, is suspended. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, let me explain that in 1923 and 1924 the design of the memorial in question was widely approved, including approval by the National Commission of Fine Arts, and Congress allotted to the proposed memorial the site which it now occupies. It stands on the banks of the Potomac River near the Washington Airport just off the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway.

The inscription on the memorial reads: "To the brave souls and ready valor of those men of the United States who, in the Navy, the merchant marine, and other paths of activity upon the waters of the world, have given life or still offer it in the performance of heroic deeds."

I send to the desk and ask to have included in the RECORD as a part of my remarks an item from the New York Tribune of Sunday, November 6, 1938, descriptive of the situation as it then existed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The article referred to is as follows:

[From the New York Herald Tribune of November 6, 1938]

STATUE STANDS AT THE POTOMAC 8 YEARS UNDONE—PARK SERVICE UNABLE TO GET $200,000 TO FINISH NAVAL MONUMENT GIVEN TO UNITED STATES BY A PRIVATE ASSOCIATION

WASHINGTON, November 5.—On the banks of the Potomac River, near the Washington Airport, just off the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, stands the Naval Marine Monument today, as it has stood for the last 8 years—uncompleted, unveiled, and, to most passersby, unknown.

The monument is a memorial to "the brave souls and ready valor of those men of the United States who, in the Navy, the merchant marine, and other paths of activity upon the waters of the world, have given life or still offer it in the performance of heroic deeds." These words are written on a bronze tablet on the memorial, which is an all-aluminum, brownish ocean wave, just breaking. Over it are seven gracefully soaring sea gulls. It is the only aluminum monument in the Capital, and the sight of the gulls in suspended flight is very realistic; made so, it was said, because aluminum was used.

LACKS BASE AND LANDSCAPING

Inquiry as to the reason for the memorial's remaining unveiled and uncompleted for 8 years brought from the National Parks Service the terse response: "Lack of funds."

The memorial is complete except for the base and landscaping. According to the National Park Service, almost $200,000 more will be required to supply a green New Hampshire granite base resembling the sea and to complete the approach. Officials said that Congress would be asked again to appropriate money at the next session.

Already the monument has cost $334,000. This money was contributed by patriotic citizens from all parts of the country to a private association formed 20 years ago. The purpose of the association was to finance the cost of the memorial and present it to the Government. It has cost the Government $13,000 already. This was the cost of shipping the monument from Ohio.

ONLY UNVEILED MONUMENT

The monument is the only one in the capital that has not been unveiled. Several months ago a statue of Artemus Ward, Revolutionary War general and writer, was erected on Massachusetts Avenue near the American University. Last Thursday it was unveiled by Harry Woodring, Secretary of War. Critics point out that here was a memorial to one man that met with no delay in being unveiled, whereas the Naval Marine monument, in memory of all those who have perished at sea, stands neglected.

Many complaints about the memorial have reached the ears of Park Service officials, who frankly say it has been a severe headache, so much so that they have laid down a rule that hereafter organizations planning to erect memorials in Washington will have to show the Government that they have all the necessary money in hand before construction is permitted or even the site is chosen.

To motorists on the Mount Vernon Highway the monument appears complete; parking is not permitted near it, the nearest parking area being at the airport, several hundred yards away. There is no sidewalk, and, since the speed limit on the highway is 55 miles an hour, walking to the monument is hazardous in itself.

Shrubbery and trees and even some weeds hide the base of the memorial so that a car must be driven almost up to it before it is in full view. This site near the highway bridge was selected by the National Commission of Fine Arts.

A close examination reveals the rough concrete which constitutes the base. Some object because the base does not face the river or the city directly across the channel, but is pointed toward the bank of the river and Georgetown.

The landscaping is another point of attack by critics. Some say deliberate attempts have been made to screen and hide the monument. Nor does the monument itself escape criticism. As long ago as 1924, when the project was in the formative stage, Augustus Lukeman, of New York, then a member of the National Sculpture Society, condemned the design of sea gulls hovering over a wave as "premature, nonrepresentative, and dead wrong." Others, including prominent architects, called it "original and effective."

The monument is 35 feet tall. The pedestal from which the wave rises is 32 feet wide and 36 feet deep. The sculptor was Ernesto Begni Del Piatta, the architects were Corbett, Harrison & MacMurray, 130 West Forty-second Street, New York.

Among the Members of Congress interested in the memorial are Senator DAVID I. WALSH, Democrat, of Massachusetts, who introduced a resolution in the Senate last May asking for funds to complete it, and Representative SOL BLOOM, Democrat, of New York, who almost had it unveiled during the George Washington bicentennial celebration in 1932.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, in a period of more than 10 years weeds have grown up around the incompleted memorial. It is one of the most beautiful things in the National Capital, but is today the only memorial undedicated and unveiled. Up to the present time more than $340,000 of subscriptions have been poured into the construction of this beautiful memorial. The subscriptions have come from hundreds upon hundreds of people, in every walk and rank of life throughout the country, including school children. From my own State there were several hundred contributors. The Governor of my State called to my attention the situation with reference to the memorial. In order that the RECORD may show how highly it is esteemed by people eminent in American life, I send to the desk a memorandum of abstracts of comments from Daniel Chester French, Gutzon Borglum, many of the leading newspapers of the country, and others, and ask that it be included in the RECORD as a part of my remarks at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

THE NAVY AND MARINE MEMORIAL—THREE HUNDRED YEARS OF NATIONAL LIFE HAVE SEEN A WONDROUS PERFORMANCE OF DUTY AND ENDLESS SACRIFICES GO UNACKNOWLEDGED AND UNTHANKED

It is an entirely original idea as far as I know, and a most happy one, smacking of the sea, and bringing home to one the dangers and the sacrifices of the service. It is to me very impressive, and I know that it has impressed many other people equally.—Daniel Chester French, Chairman, National Commission of Fine Arts; Honorary President, National Sculpture Society; Trustee, Metropolitan Museum of Art; etc.

The flight of the gulls is a splendid and direct note, suggesting the immensity of the sea and its tragic unrest. It is a beautiful symbol and will stir the imagination of the youth of America.—John Gregory, President of the National Sculpture Society.

After seeing the Navy and Marine Memorial I feel I must tell what an impression of spiritual gladness it has left with me. It has none of the funereal suggestions characterizing most memorials, none of the allegorical riddles in which partially draped men and women must be interpreted as this or that moral abstraction. Here for once is an inspiration that manifests through matter, emerges out of it with the triumphant freedom of the spirit.—P. Troubetzkoy.

It is one of the few beautiful, unique conceptions in sculpture in all America and it tells the story of the waves. The metal in which it is cast is especially fortunate, and the work itself is most excellent and studied to a point and with a perfection most sculpture work in Washington lacks.—Gutzon Borglum.

Newspapers all over the country have spoken in approbation of the plan thus to memorialize all and every citizen of the United States who has lost his life at sea in any naval or marine activity.—Literary Digest.

It cannot fail to make a powerful appeal to the imagination of the American people.—New York Times.

Its uniqueness will consist in the absence of any human figure, of any type of ship or of any sea implement. It will visualize the breaking wave, the hovering seagulls and the blue immensity. That is all. The conception is bold. * * * It will set forth unforgettably a single unforgettable idea.—New York Herald Tribune.

Not only this country but the entire seafaring world should take an interest in this memorial.—San Antonio Express.

As a symbol of the mystery of the sea its force and beauty may not be disputed.—Boston Herald.

It will stir the pulse of the American people to a fitting sense of gratitude, and stimulate seamen to further deeds of valor and self-sacrifice.—Toledo Times.

It is a great and noble tribute to great and noble Americans, who were nonetheless great or noble though they lived and perished anonymously.—New London Day.

I have seldom seen anything simpler and more impressive.—Amy Lowell.

I wish the movement every success not only in the material building of the monument, but especially in the realization of its romantic and spiritual expression.—Patrick Cardinal Hayes.

Beautiful, important, and most significant memorial.—Bishop Ernest M. Stires.

The importance of our national life on the sea cannot be overestimated and I feel that all Americans who realize this will want to join together in paying this tribute, not only to those men who have lost their lives at sea, but to those who are now serving and those who will serve our great maritime needs in the future.—Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy.

After 300 years of national life we are hardly pioneers in what concerns the development of a sea consciousness and conscience. This memorial is the first expression of America's awakening to a realization of the vitally important part the Navy and merchant marine always have played, and will continue to play, in the history of our national defense and welfare. * * * And it symbolizes the grandeur of the sea. It suggests to those who move "along the cool, sequester'd vale of life," and dwell in the safety and tranquillity of the commonplace, that there is another life, a life beautiful and wonderful and inspiring and inspiriting and dangerous.—Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, United States Navy (retired).

THE NAVY AND MARINE MEMORIAL

(By Vachel Lindsay)

Where is the ruddy adventurer
Who went where ships could go?
Where is the rainbow soul that sailed
Wherever Salt sprays
Blow?

Where is the fine marine we knew
Who loved
Every harbor
And sea?
Let us sing on the shore of our land.
He comes Through the night
To you
To me.

The sailor that drowns with the drowning stars
Lives with the stars of the sky.
The broken marine goes down,
Grows dim,
Yet his proud wings flame on high.

Star souls that break in the breaking waves
Are reborn in the bay that clears.
Then look to the sky.
They are there on high
Outsailing the storms
And years,
My dears,
Outsailing the storms
And years.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, this is by no means a matter which can be viewed, as the Senator from Arizona would imply, as one which is subject to being pared down in conference. I believe that it is the sort of thing that properly should have been included in the appropriation bill in the first place. It has had from the National Park Service consideration to an extent that approximately one-half of the necessary sum to complete it has been agreed upon, but there is also included the thought that there was a judgment obtained by Ernesto Begni Del Piatta, the sculptor, of some $88,000 in connection with his fees for services rendered in the preparation of the memorial. That sum has never been paid; the judgment is unrealized; but the sculptor has indicated a willingness to accept one-half that sum in full payment to him.

I send to the desk an article from the Washington Star of December 23, 1939, describing the situation that existed last year when, on April 23, 1939, the Congress authorized the completion of this memorial. But, Mr. President, Congress adjourned in August, and, because of the press of other business, the funds were never provided.

I ask that the article from the Washington Star be included in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The article is as follows:

[From the Washington Star of December 23, 1939]

DEATH ENDS SCULPTOR'S FIGHT FOR NAVY MEMORIAL FUNDS

Fifteen years ago a young Italian-born sculptor was commissioned to erect a Navy and Marine Memorial in Washington as a symbol of America's sea power and the sacrifice of life by her sailors of the Navy and merchant marine.

Today, the sculptor, Ernesto Begni del Piatti, lies dead in New York, his long fight for funds to complete the memorial ended.

He died grieving, friends said, because Congress has failed to appropriate the money needed to finish the only national memorial to those who have made the Nation great upon the high seas.

BASE NEVER COMPLETED

The monument stands on Columbia Island in the Potomac River today in an unsatisfying state of partial completion. It is composed of a cresting sea wave, surmounted by seven seagulls in flight, cast in aluminum.

This is intended to rise above a series of low-curved steps of sea-green granite, suggesting a swelling sea. But these steps, forming the base of the memorial, never have been constructed and for 5 years the aluminum casting has stood atop a formless mass of rough concrete, surrounded by wild grass and scrubby bushes.

Mr. del Piatti must have felt this, his dream, was near fulfillment during the last regular session of Congress. A bill authorizing an appropriation of $100,000 to complete the monument was passed by the House on April 17. Three days later, it passed the Senate and 6 days later the President signed it. But Congress adjourned without appropriating the funds.

REDUCED HIS FEE

Some months ago it was disclosed that completion of the memorial was blocked by a Virginia firm which wanted to furnish the green stone to complete the memorial foundation.

Although he didn't approve the Virginia green stone, the sculptor was so anxious to complete the monument that he said he would raise no objection to its use. Subsequently, he also agreed to accept only half of his fee, donating the other half as a contribution to the memorial.

A large part of the money used to build the memorial was contributed by school children, teachers, thousands of sailors, and other Americans in all walks of life.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, the sum necessary to complete the memorial is so small and the equities of the case are so large that the Government by no means wants to have the benefit of this or any other type of service rendered to the advantage of the whole Nation without adequately and fairly and decently compensating the sculptor who is responsible for developing the idea and the construction of the memorial in its present beautiful form.

I think the case for this particular memorial is so complete and the circumstances so completely justifiable that the full sum of $100,000 should be appropriated. As a matter of fact, the House committee in charge of this particular bill has recommended $189,000, but I believe it will be found that, by economy and careful preparation of plans for the completion of the memorial under the direction of the National Park Service, $100,000 will be ample.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER].

The amendment was agreed to.

(On request of Mr. DANAHER, and by unanimous consent, the following was transposed from page 8650, of the daily RECORD of May 6, and ordered to be printed at this point:)

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, on Thursday, May 2, I proposed an amendment making provision for the completion of the Navy and Marine Memorial, and I am happy that the Senate approved. The result has met with satisfaction in many circles, and typical is an editorial appearing in the Sunday Star, Washington, on May 5. I ask unanimous consent that the editorial be printed in the RECORD as part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DANAHER. And Mr. President, I further ask unanimous consent that when the permanent RECORD is compiled this editorial and these remarks be inserted at the end of my remarks appearing at page 5423 of the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The editorial ordered to be printed in the RECORD on request of Mr. DANAHER is as follows:

[From the Washington Star of May 5, 1940]

NAVY MEMORIAL

Favorable action by the Senate on a $100,000 appropriation for completion of the Navy and Marine Memorial on Columbia Island comes as welcome news to thousands of Americans who for years have deplored the fact that this unique and beautiful monument, the only national memorial in honor of American heroes of the sea, still stands in a state of unsightly incompletion. It is to be hoped, of course, that the House, by following the Senate lead, will make funds available speedily for the work of building around the rought concrete pedestal of the memorial the proposed base which is so necessary to carry out the concept of the designer.

It is regrettable that the artist, Begni del Piatta, could not have lived to see the completion of his greatest work. His death, in New York last December, probably was hastened by disappointment and anxiety over the memorial. He had worked long and hard during recent years to bring about its completion, even going to the extent of waiving claim to a substantial part of his promised fee so that the money might be applied to the project. The contributions of hundreds of thousands of Americans in all walks of life have gone toward the Navy and Marine Memorial. School children in most of the States contributed pennies, and sailors in the Navy, Coast Guard, and merchant marine gave donations in memory of comrades lost at sea.

The memorial base, now lacking, is to be in the form of curving steps of green stone, so arranged as to suggest a swelling sea wave, rising to the foaming crest and soaring sea gulls of the memorial proper. Completion of this tribute to our gallant sea dead of war and peace has been far too long delayed. Prompt congressional action is greatly to be desired.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, on page 124 of the bill there appears an item under the caption, "Control of Predatory Animals and Injurious Rodents, * * * $675,000." In line 18, I move to strike out "$675,000" and insert "$1,000,000" in lieu thereof.

Mr. President, by way of explanation, I may say that there is an authorizing act of Congress providing for a program of $1,000,000 a year for this work, for a period of 10 years. The Department of the Interior, through the proper authority, requested $1,000,000 for carrying on this work, which is an all-important work on the open public domain, especially.

It may be remembered by the Senate that some years ago there was enacted what is known as the Taylor Grazing Act, which put all public domain in the control of the Interior Department; and all the stock raisers on the open public domain are quite heavily assessed for the use of that domain. This amount of money is essential to prevent the raids of predatory animals on stock raised on the open public domain.

The Department requested the sum of $1,000,000 for this purpose. The authorization act was passed some years ago; and I respectfully suggest that the sum of $1,000,000 be inserted in lieu of $675,000.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Nevada, as I said to the Senator from Connecticut, that I cannot make the point of order against his amendment, because it is authorized by law. I can take the matter to conference. I cannot guarantee the Senator that the conferees will agree to more than the Budget estimate. If I remember correctly, $750,000 was appropriated last year. The amount now carried in the bill is about $75,000 less than the amount of last year. The appropriation was not a million dollars last year.

Mr. McCARRAN. I understand, however, that the chairman of the subcommittee, in view of the law authorizing the appropriation, does not object to the amendment.

Mr. HAYDEN. I cannot object, because I cannot make the point of order; but I did not want the Senator to understand that if the amendment went to conference we might hope to secure the entire amount. We will do the best we can.

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not know who may be on the conference committee. I hope the author of the amendment may be on it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada is agreed to.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, on page 82, line 23, in the item for general investigations under the Bureau of Reclamation, I move that the figures "$300,000" be stricken out, and that "$900,000" be inserted. That is the amount of the appropriation last year.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, again I cannot make the point of order, because the appropriation is authorized by law. The amendment may go to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The bill is still before the Senate and open to further amendment.

Mr. HAYDEN. I ask unanimous consent that the clerks may be authorized to correct the totals.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

If there be no further amendments to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

EXEMPTION OF CERTAIN INDIANS FROM PROVISIONS OF ACT OF JUNE 18, 1934—MOTION TO RECONSIDER

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, there is on the table a motion for the reconsideration of Senate bill 2103, introduced by the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER]. I made the motion on February 22, 1940. The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER], the junior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY], the junior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], and other Senators have indicated a desire to have the matter brought up. I shall be very glad to know when it will be agreeable to the Senator from Kentucky to have the matter taken up for disposition.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I realize that the motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed has been pending for some time, and I can appreciate the desire to dispose of it. It is rather difficult at the moment to fix a time.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Could it be taken up after the disposition of the bill of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND]?

Mr. BARKLEY. It is entirely possible, because, of course, the motion is not precisely in the category of a bill, and it should be disposed of. Two or three other bills are scheduled to follow the bill of the Senator from Delaware in the order in which they have been discussed; but I shall be glad to try to arrange with the Senator from Wyoming to take up the motion to reconsider early next week and dispose of it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Very well. I am sure it will not take much time.

CONTROL OF PNEUMONIA

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, last year 87,923 deaths occurred in the United States from various forms of pneumonia, and of these 1,231 occurred in the State of Florida.

It is fitting in times like these that we take steps to conserve all of our national resources to the maximum, and to make the Nation secure against its enemies. The enemy to which I should like to draw specific attention today is the disease pneumonia, appropriately referred to by the eminent physician Sir William Osler as "The captain of the men of death." More than a million of our people have been destroyed by the ravages of this disease during the last 10 years for which census figures are available. I am informed that influenza deaths may be considered pneumonia deaths in practically all instances. The total must be increased, therefore, to almost 1,400,000, which is approximately six times the size of our Regular Army today (237,000). In the year 1937 alone, 148,000 of our people died from pneumonia and influenza—almost four times as many as were killed in automobile accidents during that year (39,643).

The nightmare of the great pandemic of influenza in 1918 still lingers in the memories of all of us. During that year alone we suffered the loss of 479,000 persons who died of influenza and pneumonia; and this figure covers the deaths in only 78 percent of the population, then covered by the Census registration area. According to mortality statistics of the Census Bureau, the excess deaths in the toll of life taken by the pandemic of influenza of 1918–19 may be estimated as approximately 548,452.

Unfortunately, we have no assurance that we shall not be again visited by this great killer, especially of our young people. Medical authorities call attention to the fact that great, world-wide epidemics of influenza occur at periodic intervals. The concentration of millions of troops in countries at war and at peace may well again provide the necessary spark to set the world aflame with disease as well as with bombs. If this country should be visited in 1940 by an epidemic of influenza of the same severity as the one in 1918, we should stand to lose 780,000 of our people.

The authorities of the Research Division of the Public Health Service recently appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee and testified that with the sum of only $130,000, $80,000 of which was supplied by the Federal Government and $50,000 by the State government, in the last 2 years they put into effect and operation in the State of Pennsylvania, a pneumonia-control program, which resulted in a reduction of 20 percent in the mortality rate growing out of 6,000 cases during that period, resulting in the saving of 1,200 lives. They further said that if they had reasonably adequate funds to carry on the control program in the entire country, they could be assured of a saving of at least 50,000 lives a year. They further testified that scientific research on the subject of pneumonia control had now proceeded to the point where they were sure it would be effective in bringing about this saving of human life.

I therefore ask unanimous consent to send to the desk, for introduction and appropriate reference, a bill to impose additional duties upon the United States Public Health Service in connection with investigation and control of pneumonia, influenza, and the common cold.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the bill will be received and appropriately referred.

The bill (S. 3914) to impose additional duties upon the United States Public Health Service in connection with investigation and control of pneumonia, influenza, and the common cold was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEE in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting several nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

He also, from the same committee, reported adversely the nomination of Frank K. Barnhart, to be postmaster at Linwood, Pa., in place of J. P. Connolly, deceased.

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported favorably the nominations of several officers for promotion in the Marine Corps.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

THE JUDICIARY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Arthur D. Fairbanks to be United States marshal for the district of Colorado.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ROBERT J. HOLLY

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, on April 30 the Senate confirmed the nomination of Robert J. Holly to be postmaster at Sanford, Fla. One of the Senators from that State has not endorsed him. I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the nomination was confirmed be reconsidered, and that the nomination be recommitted to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

RECESS TO MONDAY

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 23 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until Monday, May 6, 1940, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate May 2 (legislative day of April 4), 1940

FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION

Clyde L. Seavey, of California, to be a member of the Federal Power Commission for the term expiring June 22, 1945. (Reappointment.)

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

W. A. Ayres, of Kansas, to be a Federal Trade Commissioner for a term of 7 years from September 26, 1940. (Reappointment.)

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION

John Monroe Johnson, of South Carolina, to be an Interstate Commerce Commissioner for a term expiring December 31, 1941, vice Marion M. Caskie.

COAST GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES

Machinist Richard E. Collier to be a chief machinist in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from May 1, 1940.

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO QUARTERMASTER CORPS

Capt. Samuel Waynne Smithers, Infantry, with rank from August 1, 1935.

TO ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT

Capt. Paul William Shumate, Cavalry, with rank from June 13, 1939, effective July 1, 1940.

First Lt. Edward Bodeau, Coast Artillery Corps, with rank from June 13, 1936, effective September 28, 1940.

First Lt. Floyd Allen Hansen, Field Artillery, with rank from August 1, 1935, effective September 24, 1940.

TO CHEMICAL WARFARE SERVICE

Capt. William Henry Shimonek, Infantry, with rank from June 13, 1939.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO BE MAJORS

Capt. Henry Winston Holt, Field Artillery, from April 18, 1940.

Capt. John Magruder Bethel, Cavalry, from April 23, 1940.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate May 2 (legislative day of April 24), 1940

UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Arthur D. Fairbanks to be United States marshal for the district of Colorado.

POSTMASTERS

CALIFORNIA

Alfred A. True, Barstow.
Alma B. Pometta, Benicia.
Frederick Kneale Smith, Crestline.
George L. Clare, Guerneville.
Alfred E. Harwood, La Verne.
Flora E. Dahl, Mokelumne Hill.
Rose C. Tarwater, Murrieta.
Mary A. Roels, Point Reyes Station.
Harold E. Rous, Yucaipa.

COLORADO

Adelbert E. Humeston, Collbran.
Harry K. Balvin, Elizabeth.
James Fenolia, Louisville.
James M. Brown, Mancos.
John Oral Clement Lutener, Rico.

INDIANA

Bessie L. Gage, Ashley.
Nathan P. Lewis, Campbellsburg.
Merlyn R. Elliott, Dale.
Matthew Halbig, Haubstadt.
Eugene W. Felkner, Milford.
Ruth B. Flinn, Roann.

IOWA

George P. Rounds, Clermont.
Noah T. Nixon, Lorimor.
Daniel C. Norris, Prairie City.
Edward B. Wittrig, Wayland.
Bernice Green, Winfield.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Paul A. Richard, Hudson.
William H. Pascoe, West Ossipee.

NEW MEXICO

Henry A. Harber, State College.

OHIO

Marvin L. Sollmann, Anna.
Orville T. Castor, Arlington.
Francis P. Frebault, Athens.
Walter J. Miller, Beach City.
Charles Wassman, Bellaire.
Robert Waugh, Brilliant.
Lee F. Beveridge, Butler.
Joseph W. Johnston, Coshocton.
Howard O. Ward, Cumberland.
Ora DeVere Blizzard, Frazeysburg.
Walter M. Dill, Fredericktown.
Thomas G. Smith, Glendale.
Mary J. Rosebraugh, Hebron.
George W. Blessing, Jeffersonville.
Blanche L. Geiger, Lakeview.
Earl R. Leach, Lima.
Herman C. Doellinger, Marysville.
Glen F. Carver, Mentor.
Roy C. Walker, Milan.
Ralph M. Connolly, Milford Center.
John W. Berentz, New Matamoras.
Fred C. Banister, New Richmond.
Clarence A. Goller, Ney.
May C. Eldridge, North Olmsted.
Luella Sommers, Ottawa.
Irvin H. Menter, Pemberville.
Milton C. Hickman, Perry.
David K. De Long, Perrysville.
Charles H. Mullen, Pomeroy.
Alfred W. Kalb, Port Clinton.
Lawrence J. Heiner, Rutland.
John Daniel O'Sullivan, Sharonville.
Clarence A. Flenniken, Smithfield.
Goldie N. Stroup, Spencer.
Robert A. Durbin, Stockport.
Glen C. Rine, Utica.
John H. Petitjean, Versailles.
Charles A. Conry, Wakeman.
George Geer, Wauseon.
Fred N. Ney, Weston.
Harry L. Hines, Williamsburg.
Jesse Ralph Short, Winchester.

OKLAHOMA

Vivienne C. Ford, Billings.
James R. Hankla, Geary.
Earl L. Smith, Locust Grove.
Robert H. Walton, Muldrow.
Blaine M. Skidmore, Vici.

OREGON

Blanche E. North, Bonneville.
Floyd B. Willert, Dayton.
Gaphart D. Ebner, Mount Angel.
Ruth N. Johnson, Sheridan.

VIRGINIA

Hattie C. Barrow, Dinwiddie.
Ross V. Martindale, Sweet Briar.

WYOMING

Ann D. Keenan, Pine Bluffs.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, MAY 2, 1940

The House met at 12 o'clock noon, and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore, Mr. RAYBURN.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Father of all mankind, Thou art the peace that dwelleth in the nighttime and the brightness that cometh with the dawn. Beneath life's busy activities help us ever to see the good which Thou art working out among men. In all labor give us courage to stand without compromise, grace to be superior to praise or blame, ready to protest against wrong and injustice. O Thou who dost reveal an ideal of ethical perfection, prompt us to speak with profound sincerity and to aspire to a higher, holier life. As the enlargement of the heart means an increase of light, love, and truth, touch our spirits anew, awakening them to a full appreciation of the things eternal. Merciful Father, turn Thy power of cleansing into the haunts of misery and into this world of strife and hate. Crown us with the inspirations of a robust faith, with the spirit of sacrifice, and with the subjection of self. Hold our people throughout our land in self-restraint, striving in countless ways to succor the sons and daughters of peace. In the name of the Prince of Peace. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. St. Claire, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H. J. Res. 431. Joint resolution to extend to the 1940 New York World's Fair and the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition the provisions according privileges under certain customs and other laws to the expositions of 1939.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 8913) entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes," disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. TYDINGS, Mr. BYRNES, Mr. ADAMS, Mr. OVERTON, Mr. TRUMAN, Mr. HALE, and Mr. BRIDGES to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a very interesting compilation of facts about the Ways and Means Committee personnel since the First Congress. This compilation was prepared by Mr. Bryce N. Harlow, assistant librarian of the House, and contains historical facts which I know will be of interest to the Members of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. BLOOM, Mr. PAGÁN, and Mr. JOHN L. MCMILLAN asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. LEA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to insert therein a memorial resolution adopted by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee on account of the death of Hon. Carl E. Mapes and a similar resolution on account of the death of Hon. John A. Martin.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the close of the legislative business today and any other special order that may have been entered I may address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Mr. Speaker, the Civil Aeronautics Authority regulates civil aeronautics. It should not be placed in the Department of Commerce. A study of independent agencies made for the President's Brownlow Committee on Reorganization came to this conclusion regarding the Department of Commerce:

> The Department of Commerce exists mainly to render service to American business. It may be doubted whether a regulatory or disciplinary function will be aggressively and impartially handled by such a service department.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

THE HATCH BILL AMENDMENTS

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday afternoon the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY] announced that the Committee on the Judiciary had failed to report the so-called Hatch bill and that tomorrow he would place on the Speaker's table a petition to discharge the committee.

It will be found that my record shows that I have never signed a petition for the discharge of a committee. I do not believe in that sort of procedure. This, however, is an exceptional case, and while my name will not be found on such a discharge petition, I am heartily in favor of the matter coming before the House, and if it comes before the House, I will give it my most hearty approval. The Hatch Act, as amended, will greatly improve the standing of Federal and State employees as a means of removing the solicitation of contributions for political purposes. I hope the measure will reach the floor for adoption.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the subject of the Verendrye plate and French claims in North America.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. VREELAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. VREELAND. Mr. Speaker, in defending his proposed reorganization of the Civil Aeronautics Authority the President states that for 5 months the Administrative Management Division of the Bureau of the Budget made a study of the Authority's operation. He indicates that his proposal is based on this study.

The Congress studied for over 5 years the problem of regulating civil aeronautics and of creating the administrative organization for that purpose. The matter of organization was one of the most carefully studied of all features of the act. And in the President's open letter to the National Aviation Forum of January 24, 1939, the President stated that the Civil Aeronautics Act set up "the effective machinery" for our aeronautical policy.

If in the face of this extensive study by the Congress and commendation by the President the Bureau of the Budget in 5 months has found that reorganization is desirable, Congress should know what its report to the President was. Section 18 of title 31 of the United States Code provides that the Bureau of the Budget, at the President's direction, may study the departments and establishments. This law also provides that the results of such study shall be embodied in a report to the President, "who may transmit to Congress such reports * * * with his recommendations on the matters covered thereby."

The President has transmitted to the Congress no report from the Bureau of the Budget in support of his reorganization plan.

A minor Government bureau after 5 months has determined that the Congress was wrong. The Congress spent 5 years in earnest study. Let the Congress see a copy of this Budget Bureau's report. [Applause.]

FEDERAL DEFICIT

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to insert therein a table showing the approximate increases and decreases in expenditures this year as compared with last.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, the total deficit for this fiscal year as we begin its eleventh month is $3,203,000,000. The increases in expenditures total $1,120,000,000; the decrease is $806,000,000, approximately.

It is apparent the way these increases are rolling up that we are going to be very close to a $4,000,000,000 deficit by the end of this fiscal year. This is a menace to the entire financial structure of the Government. We are increasing our expenditures for one type of operation after another much faster than we are decreasing them. We are increasing our expenditures for the Army, the Navy, agriculture, and relief faster than we are decreasing the expenditures for W. P. A. Unless we stop increasing appropriations we are going to destroy the credit of America.

[Here the gavel fell.]

CONFERENCE REPORT ON WHEELER-LEE BILL

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, according to the program sent out last week, on tomorrow the House will consider the conference report on the Wheeler-Lee bill. On behalf of the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], I ask unanimous consent that his proposed motion to recommit this conference report be printed at this point in the RECORD; and on behalf of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HARRINGTON], I ask unanimous consent that a letter written to him and to all Members of the House from all of the railway brotherhoods, four of which originally favored this measure, but all of which are now strongly in favor of its recommittal, also be inserted in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we have received these letters from the brotherhoods that are asking the membership to take care of 250,000 railroad employees; but what are you going to do about the 9,000,000 unemployed that we have in this country? They are the ones you want to take care of, and we will also take care of the 250,000. You should take care of those 9,000,000 people and not go around here and talk about 250,000. You on that side of the aisle have been working at this for 7 years, and you have not been able to accomplish anything. It seems to me that the Members on the majority side of the House ought to get busy now and try to put through some legislation that will take care of the 9,000,000 unemployed.

Mr. WARREN. Do I understand the gentleman is objecting to the request?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN]?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

MOTION TO RECOMMIT

Mr. WADSWORTH moves that the bill (S. 2009) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by extending its application to additional types of carriers and transportation and modifying certain provisions thereof, and for other purposes, together with the House amendment thereto, and the conference report thereon, be recommitted to the committee of conference, with the following instructions to the managers on the part of the House:

1. That the managers on the part of the House insist on the inclusion in the report of the committee of conference the provision adopted by the House, known as the Jones amendment, which reads as follows:

"It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress that shippers of wheat, cotton, and all other farm commodities for export should have substantially the same advantage of reduced rates, as compared to shippers of such commodities not for export, that are in effect in the case of shipment of industrial products for export as compared with shipment of industrial products not for export, and the Interstate Commerce Commission is hereby directed to institute such investigations, to conduct such hearings, and to issue orders making such revisions of rates as may be necessary for the purpose of carrying out such policy."

2. That the managers on the part of the House insist on the inclusion in the report of the committee of conference the provision adopted by the House, known as the Wadsworth amendment, which reads as follows:

"In order that the public at large may enjoy the benefit and economy afforded by each type of transportation, the Commission shall permit each type of carrier or carriers to reduce rates so long as such rates maintain a compensatory return to the carrier or carriers after taking into consideration overhead and all other elements entering into the cost to the carrier or carriers for the service rendered."

3. That the managers on the part of the House insist on the inclusion in the report of the committee of conference the provisions adopted by the House relating to combinations and consolidations of carriers (secs. 8 and 22 of the House amendment) but modified so that the sentence in section 8 which contains the provision known as the Harrington amendment, read as follows:

"(f) As a prerequisite to its approval of any consolidation, merger, purchase, lease, operating contract, or acquisition of control, or any contract, agreement, or combination mentioned in this section, in respect to carriers by railroad subject to the provisions of part 1, and as a prerequisite to its approval of the substitution and use of another means of transportation for rail transportation proposed to be abandoned, the Commission shall require a fair and equitable arrangement to protect the interests of the railroad employees affected. In its order, or certificate, granting approval or authorization of any transaction referred to in this paragraph, the Commission shall include terms and conditions providing that such transaction will not result in employees of said carrier or carriers being in a worse position with respect to their employment.

"Notwithstanding any other provision of this act, an agreement pertaining to the protection of the interests of said employees may hereafter be entered into by any carrier or carriers by railroad and the duly authorized representative or representatives of its or their employees."

[Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Switchmen's Union of North America]

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 1, 1940.

Hon. VINCENT HARRINGTON,
House of Representatives.

HONORED SIR: The undersigned chief executives of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Order of Railway Conductors, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and the Switchmen's Union of North America, which organizations represent all of the railroad workers actually engaged in operating railroad transportation facilities, are disappointed to learn that the conference committee which considered S. 2009 has stricken out of the bill the consolidation section as amended by the House. This section provided protection to railway employees against unemployment. It prohibited the legalizing of consolidations or mergers which would increase fixed charges on funded debt unless the Commission should find it to be positively in the public interest to do so. This was a most important protection to the public and, indirectly, very helpful to railroad employees. The section contained also other provisions very helpful to the public and railway employees. In brief, there have been taken out of the bill the only provisions which were of direct benefit to the men actually engaged in operating railroad transportation equipment and facilities. Railway workers are, therefore, much concerned.

The five transportation labor organizations very earnestly urge your support of a motion to recommit the conference report, which motion, among other things, will contain a provision instructing the conferees to reinsert the consolidation section of S. 2009, as reported by the House committee, with an amendment to protect railway labor against unemployment, copy of which amendment is hereto attached.

During the last few years the number of railroad employees has been reduced by one-half, and naturally, therefore, railway workers are greatly alarmed by the menace of a still greater increase in unemployment. There is no doubt of the overwhelming sentiment in Congress for adequate labor protection in this bill.

The following is quoted from the statement by the Honorable ROBERT CROSSER, of Ohio, member of the conference committee which considered S. 2009, Appendix of the RECORD, page 2511:

"I do, however, express disappointment at the elimination of section 8 relating to consolidations, and so forth, which I felt was helpful to the general public interest and to the welfare of employees."

Expressing the sincere hope that you will support the motion to recommit the conference report, we are,

Very respectfully yours,

A. JOHNSTON,
Grand Chief Engineer, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.
D. B. ROBERTSON,
President, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.
J. A. PHILLIPS,
President, Order of Railway Conductors of America.
A. F. WHITNEY,
President, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.
T. C. CASHEN,
President, Switchmen's Union of North America.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO CONSOLIDATION SECTION OF WHEELER-LEA TRANSPORTATION BILL S. 2009

(f) As a prerequisite to its approval of any consolidation, merger, purchase, lease, operating contract, or acquisition of control, or any contract, agreement, or combination, mentioned in this section, in respect to carriers by railroad subject to the provisions of part 1, and as a prerequisite to its approval of the substitution and use of another means of transportation for rail transportation proposed to be abandoned, the Commission shall require a fair and equitable arrangement to protect the interests of the railroad employees affected. In its order, or certificate, granting approval or authorization of any transaction referred to in this paragraph, the Commission shall include terms and conditions providing that such transaction will not result in employees of said carrier or carriers being in a worse position with respect to their employment.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this act, an agreement pertaining to the protection of the interests of said employees may hereafter be entered into by any carrier or carriers by railroad and the duly authorized representative or representatives of its or their employees.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SUTPHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point a telegram received from Robert W. Johnson, the head of an organization that employs some 35,000 people.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SUTPHIN]?

There was no objection.

The telegram referred to follows:

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., April 22, 1940.

The Honorable WILLIAM H. SUTPHIN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

Wage-hour amendments aimed toward weakening the law should be defeated. We should now strengthen the wage-hour law. The time has arrived to consider the 6-hour day, the 30-hour week with a minimum wage of 55 cents. There are millions of unemployed in America and more millions who are underpaid. It is only through Federal and State wage and hour laws that we will solve this problem. One or two competitors in any given industry can lower the wage level for entire industry.

ROBERT W. JOHNSON.

Mr. SPRINGER and Mr. BENDER asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

THE HATCH BILL

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH]?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Judiciary Committee buried a bill by secret vote because the members were afraid to come out in the open. You very seldom hear of secret votes in the House, but it is getting pretty nearly time that we have secret votes in the House. If we had a secret vote, a lot of legislation that has been passed in the last few years would not be passed. On the other hand, if we are going to have things open and above board, then why does not the Judiciary Committee come out in the open and say that they are opposed to the legislation instead of trying to bury it?

Mr. Speaker, it is about time that the people of this country realize that the President has put over a hundred thousand employees on the pay roll of the Government in the last year when he said previously he was going to be for economy. They are going to send these employees all over the country electioneering for the New Deal. It is time we stop all this, and I say to you on the minority side of the House when we get a Republican Congress in here next January we will not do what they are doing on the other side of the House at the present time. I believe in being open and above board. The New Deal do not want the Hatch bill. No; they want politics in all Government jobs. They want to put more people on the Government pay roll so that we will have more people to play politics with. Is it not time to stop such tactics? Will the taxpayers stand for such action? We will see next November when the ballots are cast.

[Here the gavel fell.]

PROPOSED REORGANIZATION OF THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

Mr. BRADLEY of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BRADLEY]?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRADLEY of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, under the proposed reorganization of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, all the Authority's powers under the Civilian Pilot Training Act are to be transferred to the Administrator of Civil Aeronautics, and the Administrator's powers are to be transferred to the Department of Commerce. He is made completely subject to the Department of Commerce.

Under the Civilian Pilot Training Act, all the powers of safety regulation under the Civil Aeronautics Act are conferred upon the Authority. But the reorganization transfers them first to the Administrator and then to the Department of Commerce.

Thus the training and safety of thousands of our boys and girls is to be taken completely and utterly from the hands of the competent and able Civil Aeronautics Authority and put into the hands of the Department of Commerce, which so badly bungled safety regulation when it had jurisdiction over civil aeronautics 2 years ago.

This should bring protests from every mother and father in the land. Our boys and girls should be given the best and most careful training and safeguards.

We know all too well how inadequate the Department of Commerce was. We know full well how successful and competent the Authority is. Do not turn our youth over to the mercies of the Department. Let well enough alone. Let our youth remain under the guard and protection of the one agency which has most successfully brought safety and security in the air—the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the subject of taxation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER]?

There was no objection.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include part of a bill to amend section 211 of the Criminal Code, and I also ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. THORKELSON]?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I did not understand the request. The gentleman speaks in such a low voice I could not hear his request.

Mr. THORKELSON. My first request is to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include a part of a bill to amend section 211 of the Criminal Code. My second request is to proceed for 1 minute.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I reluctantly reserve the right to object on these grounds: On the 30th of last month the gentleman from Montana rose to ask unanimous consent to extend his remarks. I questioned him as to what it was about, and he said it was on the state of the Union, or something similar. The following day by chance I glanced over the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and beheld there four different extensions of his remarks, covering nearly 10 pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and costing the taxpayers some $425. I believe the gentleman has abused and is abusing the privileges of the House. I do not object to his putting in all the trash that is sent to him, most of which is not founded on fact—and certainly those libelous charges are not based on fact—but I do object to his placing in the RECORD under one leave to extend four different extensions, covering nearly 10 pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, all on one day.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair calls for the regular order. Is there objection?

Mr. SABATH. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana to proceed for 1 minute?

There was no objection.

[Mr. THORKELSON addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix of the RECORD.]

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

Mr. SABATH. At this point I have no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The remarks will not be extended at this point in the RECORD. The Chair objects to that.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman to revise and extend his remarks?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by Hon. J. JOSEPH SMITH, a member of the House Committee on Military Affairs, at the New England council meeting last evening in Washington, on the subject of New England's place in national defense.

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I wish to say in connection with placing this speech or any other in the RECORD that no one can put in the RECORD more than two and a half pages without it being returned to him by the Public Printer, unless an estimate is obtained from the Public Printer. In regard to the extensions of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. THORKELSON], and to give this information to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], may I say that the gentleman from Montana could not exceed that limit. His extensions would not be placed in the RECORD, because the Public Printer will not print matter in excess of the limit unless the Member gets a special notice from the Public Printer, so the gentleman from Montana did not do anything that the rules do not provide for.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

[Mr. RANKIN addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix of the RECORD.]

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 92]

Coffee, Wash.	Green	Nelson	Taylor
Culkin	Jarman	Patrick	Thomas, N. J.
Cummings	Jarrett	Rogers, Okla.	Ward
Darrow	Kirwan	Routzohn	West
Ditter	McLaughlin	Schulte	Whelchel
Duncan	Merritt	Shafer, Mich.	White, Ohio
Gilchrist	Mitchell	Smith, Va.	Wolfenden, Pa.
Goodwin	Myers	Starnes, Ala.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Three hundred and ninety-nine Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

THE LATE BENJAMIN RYAN TILLMAN

Mr. HARE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Speaker, at Columbia, S. C., on yesterday a monument was unveiled to commemorate the life, character, and public services of the Honorable Benjamin Ryan Tillman, the most colorful political figure and the most outstanding statesman that South Carolina has produced since the War between the States.

The Honorable JAMES F. BYRNES, the junior Senator from the State, delivered the principal address. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein the address of Senator BYRNES.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

DEFINITION OF AMERICAN FISHERY

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 8475) to define "American fishery," which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That wherever, in the statutes of the United States or in the rulings, regulations, or interpretations of the various administrative bureaus and agencies of the United States there appears or may appear the term "American fishery" it is hereby and shall hereafter be construed to include only—

1. The taking, handling, or processing of fish, fishery products, fishery byproducts, shellfish, crustacea, seaweeds, and all other aquatic forms of animal and vegetable life and the products and byproducts thereof for commercial disposition—

(a) by or on vessels built in the United States and documented under the laws of the United States which are wholly manned by citizens of the United States or by residents of the United States, or by both; and

(b) by or on undocumented vessels of less than 5 net tons built in the United States wholly owned by citizens of the United States within the meaning of the laws respecting the documentation of vessels, or by residents or by both, which are wholly manned by citizens of the United States or by residents of the United States or by both.

2. The handling or processing of such fish, fishery products, fishery byproducts, shellfish, crustacea, seaweeds, and all other aquatic forms of animal and vegetable life and the products and byproducts thereof, so taken, handled, or processed by or in shore plants, shore stations, or factories located within the boundaries of the United States, its Territories, and its possessions, and wholly owned by citizens of the United States or by residents of the United States or by both, all of the officers and employees of such shore plants, shore stations, or factories being citizens of the United States or residents of the United States or both.

3. The transportation by water of such fish, fishery products, fishery byproducts, shellfish, crustacea, seaweeds, and all other aquatic forms of animal and vegetable life and the products and byproducts thereof, so taken, handled, or processed—

(a) on vessels documented under the laws of the United States which are wholly manned by citizens of the United States or by residents of the United States or by both; and

(b) on undocumented vessels of less than 5 net tons wholly owned by citizens of the United States within the meaning of the laws respecting the documentation of vessels, or by residents of the United States, or by both, which are wholly manned by citizens of the United States or by residents of the United States or by both.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That wherever, in the statutes of the United States or in the rulings, regulations, or interpretations of various administrative bureaus and agencies of the United States there appears or may appear the term "products of American fisheries" said term shall not include fresh or frozen fish fillets, fresh or frozen fish steaks, or fresh or frozen slices of fish substantially free of bone (including any of the foregoing divided into sections), produced in a foreign country or its territorial waters, in whole or in part with the use of the labor of persons who are not residents of the United States.

"SEC. 2. This act shall take effect on the day following the date of enactment hereof."

Amend the title.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I appreciate fully the importance of this legislation, and personally I am in favor of it; but I think the gentleman from Virginia should give the House an explanation of the measure.

Mr. BLAND. There has been considerable complaint and discussion recently of a decision of the Treasury Department whereby certain persons—General Sea Foods, I believe it was—entered into an arrangement whereby a shore station was to be located on what is known as the treaty coast of Newfoundland, and that the fish caught by foreigners, processed by foreigners, and shipped into this country should come in free and in competition with our fisheries. The bill, as we have amended it, does not interfere with any fishing operations anywhere else. We have so limited and defined the term "American fishery" that the proposed arrangement shall be held in abeyance or shall not be permitted to go ahead and the fish to come in free pending an inquiry that is going to be made by a subcommittee of the Committee on Fisheries on the subject of American fishery in an attempt to define "American fishery," which the Treasury Department states is very desirable.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Does the bill have the full support of your committee?

Mr. BLAND. It does.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. This does not disturb at all any part of the situation that existed prior to the Newfoundland situation arising?

Mr. BLAND. That is the purpose.

Mr. McCORMACK. It is confined solely to the Newfoundland situation?

Mr. BLAND. That is true.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will this amendment in any way, directly or indirectly, interfere with the Hull so-called reciprocal trade agreements?

Mr. BLAND. I do not think it has anything to do with that.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. And their free-trade policies?

Mr. BLAND. I do not believe it has anything to do with that; at least, it allows no products to come in under this treaty that are not the product of American labor—that is, caught by Americans and processed by Americans.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. That is good, sound, Republican, protective-tariff doctrine, and I propose to support the gentleman's amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended to read: "A bill to limit the interpretation of the term 'products of American fisheries.'"

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include an address delivered by Ray C. Kirkpatrick, of the Public Works Administration, on April 10, 1940.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include a letter from the Governor of Nebraska.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENTS TO THE FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT OF 1938

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5435) to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 5435, with Mr. PARSONS in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. With half the world in the agony of war, and many pressing questions of importance before the Congress, we have taken 5 days to decide whether or not the American worker is worth 30 cents an hour for his labor. We have listened to the sad story of farm cooperatives, men almost weeping over the fact that instead of 5 cents, they are obliged to pay 7 cents for a certain amount of work, I think it was picking beans. We have had a somersault overnight on excluding 200,000 workers from the benefits of the bill, not to speak of putting child labor into the act, and all this in the name of helping the farmers, defining the word "agriculture." I wonder if the members believe that the farmers are going to be so easily fooled. I notice that the real friends of the farmers are not besieging the Labor Committee to have amendments put into this bill. The farmers are not interested in this bill. They are satisfied with the existing provisions of the law, and I have yet to find one single letter from a dirt farmer in this country complaining of anything in connection with the law.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. NORTON. I am sorry, I have only 5 minutes and I cannot yield. The people who are trying to wreck this law are the big farm organizations of this country, not the farmers. Let me say to the people of New England who walked through the tellers yesterday and helped the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK] take 200,000 more workers from under the provisions of the law, that the next move that is going to be made is to take the textile workers from under the provisions of this law. I wonder how you will feel about that. Then it will continue until the entire law will be wrecked if it is not wrecked before this bill is finished. If the people of this country do not make themselves felt, as I think they will, they are due for a sad awakening.

Now, I say to you, Mr. Chairman, that my only interest in this legislation, from the beginning, has been the American worker, and I have taken no part in any conference and made no deal with anybody about anything, although there have been many deals made on the floor of this House and many votes swapped in the last few days. I am not doing anything of that sort. I am working to protect the workers of this country, to give them 30 cents an hour, a miserable 30 cents an hour for their labor. That is the only interest I have in this law; that is the only interest that the Members of Congress should have in it. I cannot, I do not want to believe that the Members of this Congress are going to say to the people of the United States, "The Government pays me $10,000 a year for my work in the Congress, but I think 30 cents an hour is too much for you." I do not believe that the Members of this Congress mean to go before the country in this campaign with a story of that kind; and may I say this to you, if this bill prevails, if this substitute is adopted with the Buck amendment in it, it is going to wreck the law, and it is not going any further toward its enactment this session. I also say to you, you may load it with amendments as you please today—that is your business—but if you do, I will vote against it and will make a motion to recommit it. I have heard that the motion to recommit is going to be voted down. All right. If that is true, we will meet that issue also when it comes; but the point I make is that I shall have nothing whatsoever to do with a bill that is going to be loaded down with amendments so as to deprive the workers of this country of a miserable 30 cents an hour for their labor. [Applause.]

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last four words.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there an amendment to be offered to section 3?

Mr. BARTON of New York. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment. I have the strong conviction that a large majority of the Members of the House want to protect and improve this act, and are sincerely anxious that we should make a start at this session of Congress toward removing those inequalities and hardships which were certainly not contemplated when the act was adopted.

I would like to take just a minute to comment on the amendment offered yesterday by the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK], and adopted by the committee. I venture to suggest a course we could follow today which would make it possible for us to keep all that is good in that amendment and not hurt the act, and so to come through with a committee amendment that the House could approve, another body accept, and the President sign.

May I read briefly the colloquy that took place yesterday between the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK] and myself. The gentleman's amendment, as you know, writes into the Fair Labor Standards Act the same definition of agricultural labor which the Congress had already written into the Social Security Act. The colloquy follows:

Mr. BARTON of New York. I agree with the gentleman that it would be very desirable if we could have the same definition of agriculture in all our legislation and not have to redefine it every time we pass another act, but would it be acceptable to the gentleman if his amendment could be applied to the committee amendment at a point where it could provide for exemption from the hours only and not from the wages?

Mr. BUCK. I am advised by the Parliamentarian that the proper place to offer my amendment is where I am offering it.

Mr. BARTON of New York. But would it be acceptable to the gentleman, if it were possible to do it, to have the definition apply only to the matter of hours and not of wages?

Mr. BUCK. Would the committee accept the amendment in that event?

Members may recall that at that point in the proceedings there was a great deal of confusion on the floor and the question asked by the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK] was not heard by the chairman of the Labor Committee, or at least was not answered.

I gathered the impression from the tone and manner in which the gentleman asked the question that if the committee had been willing at that time to say that it would accept his amendment as liberalizing the hours provision, but not applying at all to wages, it would have been acceptable to him and to many others who support his definition of agriculture, and that we might now be all in agreement.

Mr. Chairman, there are very many of us who, in our anxiety to preserve this act and to have it work, are willing to be not only reasonable, but generous in voting exemptions to the hours provision of the act, but we are not willing to start at this session or any other session to break down either the 30-cent floor under wages or to lower the bars set up against child labor. Either the floor of 30 cents is right and the prohibition against child labor is right, and if so they should be maintained and jealously guarded, or they are wrong, and in that case the whole law ought to be repealed; but we ought not attempt to break down that floor or those bars by successive amendments.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of New York. May I make just one more statement and then I will yield.

I rose at this time to give notice that when we reach pages 15 and 16 of the committee amendment, it is proposed by the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH], ranking minority member on the committee, to offer an amendment which will make it clear that the so-called Buck amendment exempts all agricultural workers as to hours, but as to wages exempts only those workers who are defined in the first three sections of the Buck amendment. When we reach page 16 I shall offer an amendment to reemphasize the purpose of Congress that the prohibition in respect to child labor is not in any way to be weakened by the adoption of this new definition of agriculture.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I thoroughly agree with what the gentleman says about minimum wages, but what troubles the people in our section is this: That where a man gets twice the minimum wage, under the reduced hours they must pay time and a half for overtime above 42 hours a week. What does the gentleman say about that?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I have tried to make it clear that the effect of the proposed Welch amendment to the so-called Buck amendment would be to exempt all classes of agricultural labor from the hours provision of the act.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I yield.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. By your suggested amendment you meet the difficulty that the gentleman raises on the floor where somebody pays the prevailing rate of wage. Under this suggestion of yours the wage schedule will not apply, but the hours schedule will apply?

Mr. BARTON of New York. That will be the purpose of the amendment submitted by the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH].

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I yield.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. I have an amendment to ask for the exemption for hours only, and I am going to offer that amendment to section 6, on page 16. I see no reason why the Buck amendment, if it sincerely wishes to maintain the wage minimum of 30 cents an hour, cannot accept an amendment as far as it pertains to hours alone.

Mr. BARTON of New York. May I make a suggestion to the gentleman in the interest of conserving time and making real progress today? Would he be willing to confer with the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH], inasmuch as they are both seeking the same objective, and decide which amendment is better and where it should be submitted?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, when the so-called Buck amendment was under consideration in the committee, I was called out on account of the fact that we had pending before the Committee on Agriculture a very controversial credit question. I, therefore, did not have an opportunity to hear the discussion on the amendment. I say this in explanation of the fact that on yesterday I did not feel qualified to give my viewpoint to my good friend, the chairman of the Committee on Labor. I have a very high regard for the chairman of this committee. She has had a very difficult time. I do not believe any chairman of a committee in this Congress has developed more rapidly than she in the art of handling of legislation on this floor.

This morning I very carefully went over this amendment in the light of the definition of agriculture in the existing Labor Act and also in the light of the definition of agriculture in the dictionary. I may say without discussing the merits generally or the purpose of the amendment that it is well drafted. There is no question about the time that has been put on the drafting of that amendment. It seems to me that it does not broaden the present definition except perhaps in one part of section 4. It makes specific the provisions in reference to agriculture. I feel sorry for the man who administers an act of this kind. He has a very difficult task and should have all the help he can. It seems to me that while if the Buck amendment remains in the bill it might need some slight change, at any rate it would relieve the Administrator of a good deal of the burden of conflicting opinions.

He is going to have a great deal of difficulty construing language and applying it. It is going to take a while to work this thing out; but the committee in the present act exempts agriculture in all its branches, as I understand it. I believe that definition is just about as broad as the Buck amendment. True, it is couched in general language. I believe that if that general definition is left they are going to have a good many lawsuits and disputes and finally wind up with practically the same exemptions that are in the Buck amendment, unless it be that part of section 4.

Webster's International Dictionary in defining agriculture states, after enumerating tillage, husbandry, and various things:

In a broader sense, the science and art of the production of plants and animals useful to man, including to a variable extent the preparation of these products for man's use and their disposal by marketing or otherwise.

Funk & Wagnalls' Practical Standard Dictionary, after dealing with cultivation of the soil, and so forth, states that agriculture is—

At once the science, the art, and the process of supplying human wants by raising the products of the soil and by the associated industries.

It seems to me—and I am just giving my personal opinion because I was put in the embarrassing attitude of being asked to answer a question on an amendment that I had not studied thoroughly—it seems to me that those very general definitions of agriculture and what agriculture includes, and the present exemption in the Fair Labor Standards Act, that a specific definition of what agriculture includes might be helpful to the Administrator. It seems to me that the only place that there is a possibility of the yardstick—and that is about all it is—changing the existing act is in the last part of section 4 having to do with fruits and vegetables. I am not very familiar with the method of the marketing of fruits and vegetables.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield.

Mrs. NORTON. May I say to the gentleman that we have had an expression from the Agriculture Department, and also from the Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor, to the effect that the Buck amendment would take 200,000 industrial workers from under the coverage of the act, and that is the ground on which I based my argument.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I dislike to disagree with the gentlewoman from New Jersey. That may be true in the way they would construe the language, but I feel there will be many contentions, disputes, and lawsuits as to how broad the general definition is, and that after they are cleared away the general exemption may finally be found to be broader than the Buck amendment. At any rate the Buck amendment would be very definite and clear and would thus avoid the irritations that come from disputes about what language means in a general definition. If, of course, all interested parties would accept the construction the gentlewoman mentions it might mean the exemption of 200,000 from the coverage of the act, but we cannot be too sure that that would not be the case anyway under the general exemption in view of the very wide definition the authorities give the word "agriculture." Some that I looked up said it covered the marketing and all associated industries.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield.

Mrs. NORTON. In view of all this conflict of opinion, does not the gentleman believe it would be very much better to introduce a bill having nothing to do with the act we are now discussing, a separate bill defining just what agriculture means, and let that bill be carefully studied by the gentleman's committee? I have the greatest respect for the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture. I feel that he knows more about agriculture than probably any other Member in this House. I would like to see that definition discussed and would like to hear debate on it, but I do not think it belongs in this bill. I think it should stand on its own feet.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I return in a mutual way the respect for the chairman of the Committee on Labor. The trouble is that agriculture is already defined in the existing act.

I supported the act, as the chairman knows.

Mrs. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. JONES of Texas. The principal difficulty I found in my country was that people did not know just what construction would be placed on the language, and they were honestly bothered about it. They are still going to be bothered about how much is exempted under the general definition in the original act which the chairman handled. It seems to me that in view of the fact it is in there and is going to be the ground of dispute, it is almost essential at the present time to have a construction either in terms of the act or by the Administrator.

Mrs. NORTON. May I say to the gentleman that so far as I have been able to learn the Administrator has had no difficulty about the meaning of the word "agriculture." The difficulty he has had is to know where farming ends and where processing begins. That is the real difficulty.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I can understand that. It is a question that has bothered me some, but I believe that the yardstick method would relieve the Administrator of a good deal of difficulty and trouble. At the same time those who are affected by the act would also know, and it is right that they should.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for an additional 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD]?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARTON of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BARTON of New York. I think the gentleman from Texas understands from the statement that I made that the committee has no objection to the Buck amendment, insofar as it relates to exemptions from hours. The amendment which the gentleman from California will propose provides for exemptions as to both hours and wages in respect to all those workers covered in the first three sections of the Buck amendment; but as to the fourth section of the Buck amendment which reads as follows:

> In handling, planting, drying, packing, packaging, processing, freezing, grading, storing, or delivering to storage or to market or to a carrier for transportation to market—

And so forth. The committee objects to allowing those operations to be carried on at less than the 30 cents an hour minimum wage. May I direct the gentleman's attention to one sentence taken from the report of the Ways and Means Committee on the Social Security Act amendments of 1938 because, as the gentleman knows, the language of the Buck amendment is taken from the Social Security Act. That report says:

> The expression, "as an incident to ordinary farming operation," is in general intended to cover that service of a character described in the paragraphs which are ordinarily performed by the employees of a farmer or by employees of a farmers' cooperative organization or group as a prerequisite to the marketing in its unmanufactured state of any agricultural or horticultural commodity.

And so forth. The point which the chairman of the Labor Committee makes, and this is reinforced by statisticians of the Labor Department, is that in cooperative plants of this sort there are employed a total of about 195,000 workers who are doing industrial work just as definitely as though they were manufacturing shoes, shovels, or any other form of industrial product. We do not propose to vote to lower the 30-cent floor in respect to those 195,000 workers any more than we want to cut down any other industrial worker.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Does the gentleman intend to limit his amendment to that particular phase of the Buck amendment, or does he mean to have his amendment cover all of the amendment? The reason I make that statement is this: I do not believe this broadens the general definition in the existing act. This makes it definite and might save a lot of difficulty in reference to construction.

Mr. BARTON of New York. I think we are all in favor of making it definite.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I am not familiar with the activity the gentleman refers to, therefore I would not feel qualified to pass on whether that is covered, but if it is covered in this act I wonder if it is not covered in the general definition of agriculture which is in the existing Labor Act?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I think the amendment of the gentleman from California will be a vast improvement in definiteness, if we may understand what part is covered.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I hope in trying to limit this particular phase the gentleman does not limit the whole definition of agriculture.

Mr. BARTON of New York. No; that is not the idea.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I wish that agriculture had income enough to pay the high wages that are enjoyed by a great many others, but wages must be paid out of receipts and these things cannot be changed overnight. In view of the fact that the average per capita income in the country is less than half what it is in the city, I hope the gentleman will go along with us in trying to get a better price for agricultural commodities, then maybe we can bring the wage scale up more rapidly.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. ROBERTSON. The gentleman will recall that in the original wage-hour bill the first processing of fresh fruits and vegetables in their raw or natural state was exempted within the area of production.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Yes.

Mr. ROBERTSON. That was defined as 10 miles. That was entirely too limited and gave us a lot of trouble. The committee brought out a bill last May that exempted that processing within normal limits, but the bill was not passed. Now they put in this bill exempting that again if immediately off the farm and the gentleman from Indiana said yesterday that meant they could get together and take it off the farm.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I think we are all familiar with the variations in the construction of this act by the administrator in connection with plants of the same type. The administrator of this act has a lot of difficulty. I think he has made some mistakes like all administrators have, but I am hoping that in the long run we will get the best interpretation of the law that is possible.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be permitted to proceed for 5 additional minutes. The gentleman is, I consider, an authority on agriculture.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Does the gentleman want a change made, now or prospective, while this war goes on, whereby the producers of fruits and vegetables will be in a better financial position to pay a wage from now on than they were in the past, when the committee said they ought not to be put under it?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I do not regard this as a war measure. This is a long-range measure, and it should be fashioned to fit normal long-range conditions.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. WOOD. The Buck amendment in subsection (3) exempts the operation or maintenance of ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways used exclusively for supplying and storing water for farming purposes. The gentleman knows there are many great systems of irrigation in many parts of the country. Some of these systems are operated by cooperatives, or the farmers may form a cooperative in order to get water from a corporation. The Buck amendment exempts all people working in the operation or maintenance of these ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways, and that includes mechanics of all types.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I hope the gentleman will not take up my time with a general discussion. Let me ask the gentleman this question. Is not most of this work done and paid for by the farmers in their district organizations?

Mr. WOOD. It does not necessarily mean that at all.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I think that is true.

Mr. WOOD. They are engaged in the maintenance and operation of these ditches.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I believe the gentleman will find that practically every exemption in the Buck amendment is embodied in the existing labor definition of agriculture, if you follow what the dictionary says is the meaning of that term. The point I was trying to make is that it seems to me that the Buck amendment, by being definite and having a definite yardstick, would be helpful to the Administrator in avoiding some complications and some disputes, and that if we exempt some that should not be exempted that situation can later be corrected. Laws have to be corrected from year to year to fit conditions. I know that if I were administering this act I would rather have a specific yardstick laid down wherever possible than have the burden of interpreting a very general and flexible term that might be the subject of dispute and irritation for a long period of time, and finally wind up with more exemptions, possibly, than would prevail with a yardstick.

Mr. WOOD. If the gentleman will yield a little further, I wish to call his attention to another definition in the Buck amendment:

> The term "farm" includes stock, dairy, poultry, fruit, fur-bearing animals, and truck farms, plantations, ranches, nurseries, ranges—

And a very interesting exemption is greenhouses.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I decline to yield further, Mr. Chairman.

There is a difference between agriculture and farming. This bill exempts agriculture, and that makes an entirely different story. The gentleman knows we have agricultural colleges, and we do not call them farming colleges. Agriculture, according to Webster, means a good deal more than the simple tillage of the soil.

Mr. WOOD. Greenhouses are not agriculture, and the gentleman knows it.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I am not interested in greenhouses.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I have an increasing respect for the gentleman now occupying the floor. He not only has a judicial mind but a great heart for the farmers of America. I know of no better friend of the American farmer than the chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture.

I agree with the gentleman that it is highly desirable to get more definite and uniform definitions, thus minimizing future litigation under this law. Let us try to make this language clearer and leave less to administrative discretion.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I should like to have the attention of the gentlewoman from New Jersey. She has scolded New England because some Members passed through the aisle yesterday in favor of the Buck amendment. I do not blame her for scolding. From her point of view I think we probably deserved it, although I shall vote that way again until the matter is made clearer to me.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentlewoman from New Jersey.

Mrs. NORTON. I am sorry the gentleman thought it was a scolding. I have a very high regard for the gentleman from Massachusetts. I was merely stating my position. Perhaps I stated it in very strong language, but I wanted the House to know how I feel about this whole performance, because it is a performance that I consider beneath the dignity of the House of Representatives, and has been going on for 5 days.

Mr. GIFFORD. I still think it ought to be called a scolding. I think she had a right to do it. She has done wonderful work for the Wage and Hour Act. Having gone through the aisle, of course I took her remarks as applicable to myself.

I am greatly puzzled, as nearly all of you are. One of the most affecting things I have ever seen with respect to farming was brought to my attention in her State of New Jersey, where they were harvesting tomatoes. A man and his wife were out in their field working hard and in great anxiety to harvest their already overripe tomatoes. Three young men were leaning over the fence watching them. I left my car and asked, "Why don't you help those people harvest those tomatoes?" "Well, they can't pay but a dollar a day. We won't work for a dollar a day."

I said, "Can't they pay more than that?" "No. The cannery can pay only a small price for the tomatoes, because they are so plentiful." I said, "You would not work for a dollar a day? Don't you have to work?" "Well, there is a W. P. A. job coming on here next week and we are to get a job."

That is the exact conversation that occurred. The question that occurs to me is, Shall the consumers of the Nation be deprived of tomatoes because they are so cheap? Can we blame the canners for not taking them if they are forced to pay wages that make it unprofitable? Such a situation is on my conscience just as much as the belief that a 30-cent-hour wage should be enforced. Shall a cannery, no matter how large the cannery, say, "Tomatoes are so cheap now, and we have to pay 30 cents an hour; therefore, we will not take the tomatoes"? The farmer is injured, the person who is willing to work is injured, and the consumer is injured. I do not know what to do about the situation.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. GIFFORD. Will the gentleman help me out?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I sought time, not to interrupt.

Mr. GIFFORD. I am free to say that I seem to be in like position with the gentleman from North Dakota in exposition of his plight on yesterday.

I do not want to jeopardize the textile Wage and Hour Act. Oh, no; and I do not want to jeopardize other industries. We thought we exempted the farmer, and I shall continue to insist on his exemption. I know the farmers' troubles. I want to help him, even though a few may escape the penalties of the act.

Mr. McKEOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield.

Mr. McKEOUGH. In the light of the gentleman's admission that he does not know "where he is at," and inasmuch as that seems to be pretty much the prevailing attitude with many others——

Mr. GIFFORD. Many others? Most others.

Mr. McKEOUGH. I agree with the gentleman. I wonder if the gentleman will join with me in voting to recommit the bill so we may get a better measure.

Mr. GIFFORD. It may be wise to let people await relief, hoping we can learn how to alleviate them gradually. They used to tell me that to cut off a dog's tail a little bit each day makes it easier for him. Put it off year after year and it may make it easier, as they learn to endure the pain.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If we have been shadow-boxing here for 5 days on this bill, is it not good, concrete evidence that there is something wrong out in the country with its administration, because people are suffering, as the gentleman has pointed out, and perhaps it would be just as well for the Congress to remove some of that suffering as it would be for the Congress to recommit the bill.

Mr. GIFFORD. I want to answer that by saying that we are learning every day that governments are not superior to natural economic laws. We are trying to overturn such laws, but with small success, except as to the squandering of other people's money.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield.

Mr. MAY. The whole trouble we are in is due to our own conduct in delegating the powers of the Congress to executives in the bureaus to make laws and to establish rules and regulations, and then put their own construction upon them.

Mr. GIFFORD. You are a good legislator. I generally agree with you. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RAMSPECK: Beginning on line 4, page 14, after the word "manufacturers", insert the following: "Strike out clauses 1 and 2 of subsection (b) of section 7 of the act and substitute in lieu thereof the following:

"'(1) In pursuance of an agreement guaranteeing continuous employment for 26 consecutive weeks, which agreement shall provide that no employee employed thereunder shall work more than 1,040 hours in said period: Provided, however, That such agreement shall operate uniformly as to commencement and end of such 26-week period for all employees employed thereunder: Provided further, That such agreement must be on file in the applicable regional office of the Wage and Hour Division and approved by the Administrator before it shall become operative.

"'(2) On an annual basis in pursuance of an agreement guaranteeing continuous employment for 52 consecutive weeks, which agreement provides that no employee employed thereunder shall work more than 2,080 hours in said period: Provided, however, That such agreement shall operate uniformly as to commencement and end of such 52-week period for all employees employed thereunder: Provided further, That such agreement must be on file in the applicable regional office of the Wage and Hour Division and approved by the Administrator before it shall become operative.'"

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, if those who have a copy of the present law before you will turn to section 7, you will find that the conferees in drafting the present law undertook to encourage annual employment by permitting a variant from the limitation of hours on a weekly basis where there was annual employment and an agreement by the employees with their employer so that the hours might vary from week to week, but should not exceed a total of 1,000 hours in 6 months, or 2,000 in a year.

On yesterday the committee adopted an amendment raising the hours to 1,040 and 2,080, which was the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW]. What I am now seeking to do by this amendment is to provide a change in this language so that these agreements shall be approved by the Administrator instead of having to be made by a union certified by the National Labor Relations Board.

My information is that so far, during the operation of this act, only about five agreements of this kind have been entered into. I find that most of the dissatisfaction with this law arises out of the inflexibility of the hour limitations, which is on a weekly basis. I believe we ought to do everything we can to encourage annual employment and stabilize employment, and to that end that we could well afford flexibility in the weekly hours, provided we make the total limitation such that it does not exceed an average of 40 hours per week. That is what my amendment does. If anybody has any questions to ask, I would be glad to answer them.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Take the section with the gentleman's amendment which refers to the 26 consecutive weeks. To what operations would that apply?

Mr. RAMSPECK. It would apply to any operation, industrial or commercial, where they had an agreement for continuous employment over a 26-week period. The only limitation is that it must not exceed a total of 1,040 hours during the 26 weeks, and that the agreement must be approved by the Administrator.

Mr. CRAWFORD. In other words, that is not put in specifically for agriculture?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Oh, no; it has nothing to do with agriculture at all.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes.

Mr. HOUSTON. That would not necessarily mean they would have to have a contract for 26 weeks, would it?

Mr. RAMSPECK. No; it would not necessarily mean a contract, but an agreement as to hours and working conditions made by the employee with the employer, subject to the approval of the Administrator before it becomes effective. There is nothing compulsory about it; it is voluntary on the part of the employer and the employee.

Mr. HOUSTON. That would be on a monthly wage basis?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes.

Mr. LUDLOW. The proposed amendment would not in any way impair the operation of the amendment which I introduced yesterday?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Not at all.

Mr. LUDLOW. Would not its effect be to broaden it, so as to put in all classes of labor, in addition to those approached through the avenue of collective bargaining?

Mr. RAMSPECK. That is correct. It takes in all classes of workers who may want voluntarily to make an agreement with the employer. It is safeguarded by the approval of the Administrator.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes.

Mr. HARE. The proposed amendment would not interfere in any way with the provisions relating to agriculture?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Not at all.

Mr. PEARSON. Does the amendment in any way affect subsection C of section 7? I believe that is the agricultural section?

Mr. RAMSPECK. It does not. It affects subsection B. It does not affect subsection C.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman's amendment intend to help industries that give steady employment for 26 weeks in the year?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes; that is the idea. It is to enable them to vary the weekly hours, and still require an average of not more than 40 hours a week.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be extended for 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman's amendment is a step in the right direction, but I have in mind an industry that before the wage and hour law was enacted worked its employees 48 hours a week. I am talking now about wholesale establishments that deal with retail grocers, hospitals, hotels, and those different engagements that are outside of the provisions of the act. They operated on a 6-percent margin. The average earnings of their employees, working 48 hours a week for 52 weeks in the year, amounted to $1,875 a year. They are not helped particularly by the gentleman's amendment, even though they go further than the people the gentleman is trying to help go. In other words, I do not see how the hours cannot be increased to 48 hours a week, provided they pay a certain minimum, and I don't care what that is, so long as it amounts to over $100 a month.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I think that ought to be taken care of in a separate amendment. All I am trying to do here is to give some flexibility to a purely voluntary arrangement between the employers and the employees, which is safeguarded by the approval of the Administrator.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. What I do not understand is this: If you set forth in the law what the requirements are, and the agreement must be on file, then why does the Administrator have to approve? We have had so much trouble here by having the Administrator put strained constructions on different matters. Just listening to the gentleman's amendment, it sounds to me as though, since there is no reason for the Administrator approving it, it should be construed as giving him the power to pass on other features of the agreement that have nothing to do with these exemptions.

Mr. RAMSPECK. The gentleman may be right about that, but my idea in putting it in was that I did not want anybody to feel, since I was taking this out from under the labor unions, that I was just throwing it open where the workers could be exploited. I wanted to leave a check on it in the hands of a responsible Government official. In other words, it would have to be approved under the present law by the National Labor Relations Board. I am providing that it shall be approved by the Administrator of the wage and hour law.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. What is to be approved about it?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Well, the terms of the agreement and whether or not he wants to permit it to operate.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Are there any other terms except that they must have this minimum that you provide; and if there are any other terms, what are they?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I think the Administrator might want to put in a particular agreement, for instance, a minimum number of hours per week, so that an employer could not have an agreement to work them for 60 hours a week for a few weeks and not any at all during the rest of the time.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I think the gentleman will find many of us are in sympathy with what he says shall be the agreement, but entirely out of sympathy with the idea of giving the Administrator discretion to write up his idea of what these agreements should be.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. The gentleman has been for a long period of time interested in wage and hour legislation.

Mr. RAMSPECK. That is true.

Mr. BATES of Massachusetts. I have also been interested in that respect in regard to putting a floor under wages. When we supported the wage and hour bill in committee and on the floor of this House we had primarily in mind the minimum wage standards throughout the country. We never had in mind anything in relation to those in the higher brackets of earning. Now, if this situation is going to jeopardize the enforcement of that feature of the law which we are more interested in than any other, the maintenance of that floor level for wages, then we ought to be willing to concede some of these suggestions made on the floor of the House during the last 5 days. Otherwise we will receive an insufficient appropriation.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I did not yield for the gentleman to make a speech. I am trying to give information on this amendment. This amendment does not affect wages at all. It deals only with the hours, and it is limited so that it cannot total more than an average of 40 hours per week.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CRAWFORD), there were ayes 75 and noes 12.

So the amendment was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order for 1 minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, after conferring with the minority leader, with the conferees on the so-called transportation bill, with the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN], and the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], it has been decided, not knowing what the deliberations of the day will bring with reference to this bill, after 6 days, that in all probability it will be more convenient for all Members of the House if the conference report on the transportation bill were not called up tomorrow. I think it is satisfactory to all of the gentlemen concerned that it be called up on Thursday next.

I make the announcement now that it will be called up on that date.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I have gone over the situation very carefully with the majority leader, and I appreciate what he is confronted with, with reference to the program, and the fact that so many, including several of the conferees, must be away from here on Friday; that the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] must be away from here on Monday and Tuesday. I think the statement of the majority leader is very fair and ought to be satisfactory to everyone who is interested, pro and con, in this legislation.

It is my understanding that, regardless of what we may be engaged upon next Thursday, this conference report will have precedence.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Is there any agreement as to the amount of debate that will be had at the time the transportation bill is considered?

Mr. RAYBURN. With reference to the statement just made by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN], if I am in the chair on next Thursday I will recognize the gentleman from California [Mr. LEA] to call up this conference report the first thing. If I am not in the chair, I will request the Speaker of the House to recognize him at that time. I may say that as far as the conferees on the part of the House are concerned, they are perfectly willing to extend the debate for 1 hour and have 2 hours of debate, one-half the time to be controlled by the gentleman from California [Mr. LEA] and one-half by the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH].

Mr. WARREN. That is just as fair as it could possibly be.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. HARE. Can the gentleman give us any idea as to when we may be able to complete the present bill? [Laughter.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

AMENDMENTS TO FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. LESINSKI], a member of the committee, is recognized to offer an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 11, after line 7, add the following:

"Amend section 7 of Public, 718, by adding the following subsection:

"'(e) No employer shall be deemed to have violated subsection (a) by employing any employee for a workweek in excess of that specified in such subsection without paying the compensation for overtime employment prescribed therein if such employee is so employed in the construction, reconstruction, maintenance, or repairs of any public roads, streets, bridges, or tunnels, and if such employee receives compensation for employment in excess of 56 hours in any workweek or 160 hours in any workmonth at a rate not less than one and one-half times the regular rate at which he is employed.'"

Mr. LESINSKI. Mr. Chairman, I have a telegram in my hand from the State highway commissioner of Michigan, Murray D. Van Wagoner. He is also president of the American Road Builders' Association, which has asked me to introduce this amendment.

The highway-construction industry employed directly, in the peak month of the 1938 fiscal year, approximately 176,000 persons. In the month having the most unfavorable working conditions, 55,000 persons were employed.

The highway contractors of the United States are in favor of wage and hour legislation; we seek no exemption; our wages and hours have been regulated since 1932, and we feel that such regulation has been beneficial.

The Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, as now written, places an undue burden upon us, however, because our industry is affected very greatly by weather conditions. When there is placed upon us a restriction to the effect that we cannot work more than 42 hours in 1 week, we are prohibited from making up any time lost in a previous week because of unfavorable working conditions. Our industry, more than any other, is affected by weather conditions, because even the building industry can work on rainy days, or the day after a rain, but we cannot work even when the ground is wet or frozen.

The American Road Builders' Association, representing, as it does, a cross section of the road-building industry of the Nation, does not believe that it is the intention of the Members of Congress to prohibit employees, who must depend largely on weather conditions, from making up time lost due to unfavorable conditions, when it has been the proven practice of agencies of the United States Government and all its political subdivisions to allow this procedure in their contracts.

Should the wage-hour law be continued in the future to apply in its rigid manner to employees whose working time is dependent on weather conditions, it has been estimated that the average wage of employees of this kind will be dependent on approximately 26 to 28 hours of employment per week, and will make employment in this industry very undesirable. It will further mean that the cost of this type of construction, financed in whole or in part by the Federal Government, will necessarily rise materially.

It is our urgent request that the Members of Congress approve amendatory legislation to the wage-hour law permitting employees working on the construction of streets, roads, bridges, tunnels, and sewers to earn a monthly wage comparable to the wages earned by employees working in an industry under a roof, and not affected by weather conditions. This practice has been endorsed and approved by the United States Public Roads Administration in the past.

The road builders claim they are not allowed to work more than 42 hours a week. If the law can be amended so that if they lost so many hours 1 week they could make up a certain amount of the lost time the next week, not to exceed 56 hours, or make it up in the following month not to exceed 160 hours, it would be very helpful. After that limit time and one-half would be paid.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HOFFMAN: Page 11, line 6, after "Sec. 3", insert "(a)", and on page 14, after line 4, insert the following:

"(b) Section 7 of such act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"'(e) No employer shall be deemed to have violated subsection (a) by employing, during any period of 26 consecutive weeks, any employee for a workweek in excess of that specified in such subsection without paying the compensation for overtime prescribed therein if—

"'(1) such employee has been employed by such employer during the whole of the month immediately preceding the beginning of such 26-week period on a guaranteed weekly, monthly, or yearly salary basis; and

"'(2) such employee is employed during the whole of such 26-week period on a guaranteed weekly, monthly, or yearly salary basis; and

"'(3) if such employee receives compensation for employment in excess of 1,040 hours during such 26 weeks at the rate of one and one-half times the regular rate at which he is employed.'"

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Is this amendment in order, in view of the amendment which I offered and which was adopted by the Committee a few moments ago?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that this amendment follows the amendment that was adopted.

Mr. RAMSPECK. It amends the same section of the original act, as I understand it, and I reserve a point of order against the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that this amendment appears to be in the nature of a new subsection as an amendment to what has been adopted.

Mr. RAMSPECK. As I understand the content of the amendment, it undertakes to amend section 7 (b) of the wage-hour law.

Mr. HOFFMAN. But it adds a new subsection.

Mr. RAMSPECK. And it deals with the same subject matter my amendment dealt with.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that this amendment adds a new subsection (e). The last subsection in the bill is (d).

The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is along the same line as the amendment which was just adopted, the one offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK].

My amendment does not affect either the wages or hours of those who receive pay on an hourly basis; it applies only to salaried employees. It is the same amendment proposed and adopted the other day when the Barden substitute was before the House.

The purpose of the amendment is to permit the averaging of hours over a 26-week period by those who are regular employees. If adopted, the amendment will enable the employee who loses time this week to make up that time next week. It will prevent the employer being forced, where his business is seasonal, discarding the salary plan and putting his employees on an hourly basis.

It does not permit the employer to hire a man for a week and then fire him and take advantage of him that way. It applies only to the regular employees. It enables the employer and the employee to enter into an agreement for 26 weeks so that the total number of hours worked over the whole period will not exceed 1,040 hours. If the total number of hours worked over the 26-week period exceeds 1,040 hours, the employee will be paid at the rate of time and a half for such overtime.

I do not know whether the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK] has any objection to this amendment or that the committee has any objection, because, as was said, it does not affect the hourly rate. It does not permit the overworking of the employee. It maintains the total amount of compensation and is for the benefit of both employee and employer and tends to promote harmony among those to whom it applies.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. RAMSPECK. As I understood the reading of the gentleman's amendment, it undertakes to do the same thing that my amendment does, with the possible exception that the gentleman has something in his amendment about the time beyond 1,040 hours or 2,080 hours.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes; I think this amendment is more liberal than the one of the gentleman from Georgia. I require the employer to pay time and a half if employees work more than the 1,040 hours in the 26 weeks' period.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Of course, they would be required under my amendment to pay that also. The gentleman has no safeguard in his amendment, as I understand it, requiring approval by anybody?

Mr. HOFFMAN. No. This applies principally to the so-called white-collar workers, and if the employees and employer enter into an agreement and get along I do not think they ought to have to come to Washington or go anywhere else, even to the State, or to have a State official or a Federal official approve it. If the two agree and they are getting along, that should settle it. After all, the wages have to be paid out of the money which the employer makes, and if the two can get along they ought to be left alone, without interference from some Federal administrator or from some Federal agency. I can see no reason why the Federal Government should continually insert itself into the relationship which exists between an employer and an employee. We have had altogether too much of that, not only in the administration of the N. L. R. B. but in the administration of the Wage and Hour Act itself. Official Washington is taking it upon itself to dictate business policies without assuming any of the responsibility or the losses when its policies go wrong.

Mr. RAMSPECK. What protection would an employee have, if the employees entered into an agreement with an employer for a 6-month period, and, say, during the first 3 months the employer worked him 60 hours a week, then let him go?

Mr. HOFFMAN. The employer cannot do that unless he pays time and a half for overtime. If it is over the 26-week period, they have to pay him. If for a shorter period, he would be paid for the extra hours at the rate fixed by law. The gentleman certainly would not ask that they have an agreement whereby the employee might work 1 week and lay off 25 weeks and still be paid for the full 26 weeks, would he? I cannot see how the amendment does any harm; and to enable an employee to make up for lost time and to enable the employer to give him the extra hours, so that the lost time can be made up over the 26-week period without penalizing the employer by time and a half for the excessive number of hours worked during 1 week, I ask that the amendment be adopted.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN].

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt the Committee divided; and there were—ayes 37, noes 39.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed Mrs. NORTON and Mr. HOFFMAN to act as tellers.

The Committee again divided, and the tellers reported there were—ayes 67, noes 69.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska: On page 12, line 11, strike out lines 11 and 12, and at page 14, after the period in line 4, and before the Ramspeck amendment, insert:

"In the case of an employer engaged in the grading, loading, slaughtering, or dressing of livestock, or preparing products therefrom at the packing plant, or in handling or transportation in connection with or incidental to such operations, the provisions of subsection (a) shall not apply to any employee, during a period or periods of not more than 14 workweeks in the aggregate in any calendar year selected from time to time as to each employee by the employer, in any establishment where the employer is engaged in any of said operations."

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, the amendment I have just offered is of vital interest to every livestock and farm organization in this country and to every farmer and livestock producer in this Nation.

My amendment seeks to accomplish two things. First, it will make specific the exemption which Congress provided in the original law but which has in effect been nullified by the erroneous interpretation by the Wage and Hour Administrator.

Section 7C of the Fair Labor Standards Act provides that the limitation of hours shall not apply—

In the case of an employer engaged in handling, slaughtering, or dressing livestock during a period or periods of not more than 14 weeks in the aggregate in any calendar year to his employees in any place of employment where he is so engaged.

The Wage and Hour Administrator has interpreted this to apply only to the employees on the killing floor in a packing plant. No employer could maintain friendly labor relations with his employees if he were to pay one group of employees in the packing plant time and a half and deny the time and a half to others working in the same establishment. This amendment would place all employees in the packing plant in the same category in reference to working 14 weeks during the year beyond the regular workweek without the payment of overtime penalties. Congress has recognized the necessity for these 14 tolerance weeks because of the highly perishable nature of meat products and because of the wide and irregular fluctuation of livestock receipts in the terminal markets.

The packing industry pays a wage scale ranging from 60 cents to $1.27 an hour. A skilled laborer in the higher brackets on time and a half could make as much money in 3 hours as a farmer is now receiving for a hundred-pound hog.

There is no question but what the farmer and livestock shipper will bear this extra burden through lower prices for their livestock unless these tolerance weeks are provided to take care of the heavy seasonal runs to the terminal markets.

The other purpose this amendment will accomplish is to protect the packing-house workers themselves from the provision in the Norton bill which provides for a 60-hour workweek before the employees can collect the time and a half, and 14 weeks' tolerance is granted in addition to the 60-hour workweek. No one connected with the livestock or meat industry is asking for a 60-hour workweek. All that has been asked is for 14 weeks' tolerance beyond the regular workweek for all the employees in the packing plant. The average workweek now is only 40½ hours per week.

There are a great many short weeks and approximately 14 long weeks in the year to take care of the seasonal runs of livestock. I represent a district that supplies the livestock to these terminal markets, as do a great many of the Members on this floor. There can be no logical objection to this amendment. It is necessary to protect the farmers and livestock shippers, as well as the employees engaged in the packing industry. We do not need to shed any tears about the packer because he can take care of himself. If he cannot pass that extra cost on to the consumer, he of necessity will take it off the producers through lower prices paid for the cattle, lambs, and hogs purchased. Any argument that might be made that this amendment is too broad is entirely erroneous because the exemptions are restricted entirely to those engaged in the operations at the packing plant.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HARRINGTON. I happen to represent one of the large packing centers of the country. I want to commend the gentleman for offering the amendment. As I see it, the amendment protects not only the packing-house worker but the livestock shipper.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. The gentleman is correct. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this is the first time I have talked on this bill. I am not one of those who believe the farmers are crying for immediate revision of the wage and hour bill. I think very few farmers have much contact with the wage-hour bill. I do want you to give this amendment your serious consideration. We all admit that we do not want to take anybody from under the protection of the 30-cent minimum wage that we can keep under its protection. Minimum wages are not involved in this amendment. This amendment simply allows a 14-week tolerance on the 40-hour week.

Let me paint a little picture of the marketing of livestock. The livestock centers have no control whatever over the number of cattle, sheep, or hogs that will arrive on any one day. The number varies from no cattle to 25,000 or 30,000 cattle in one market, with the same facilities to take care of the killing of those cattle. The packers' answer to the rigid enforcement of a 40-hour week, and time and a half for overtime to the employees that get from 60 cents to $1.25 an hour will be a 40-hour week, and to maintain that 40-hour week they will limit their purchases to what they can process with a 40-hour week. What happens to the excess cattle and hogs that come into that market under those circumstances? They are left in the pens until such time as the 40-hour week will allow the packer to purchase them. Who pays the cost of feeding these animals in the yards? If you have ever shipped any cattle or hogs or sheep to market you know that the man who owns that shipment of livestock pays the cost, and he pays that cost at a tremendous price. Hay worth 15 cents a bale in the country is worth 75 cents or a dollar a bale when you pay your stockyards cost. Corn that you feed at home for 30 or 40 or 50 cents a bushel becomes worth a dollar a bushel when you buy it in the stockyards.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. What about shrinkage?

Mr. FERGUSON. You cannot legislate the packers into paying time and a half for overtime, because they can simply purchase the amount of livestock they can process in that 40-hour-week period.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mention shrinkage in the cost.

Mr. FERGUSON. Of course, you cannot possibly hold the weight on any animal with feed in a stockyard. In addition to the cost of the feed, the shrink costs the producer more than the cost of the feed.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. As I understand, with the exception of this 14-workweek period the packer will pay time-and-a-half for overtime?

Mr. FERGUSON. The gentleman is correct. This 14 weeks is for this purpose. All the rest of the year the packers must pay time-and-one-half for overtime. We have times of drought. A man is out of feed. His grass is gone, his water is gone, and he has only one way to liquidate his livestock, and that is to send it into these central terminal markets. He cannot determine his marketing. The weather in many instances determines it.

Then there is this feature, and 14 weeks will take care of it. Feeding operations are seasonal and culminate in peaks. The grass season is over in July and August and September, a 3 month's peak, and maybe 2 or 3 weeks during the fall season and 2 or 3 weeks after the winter season is over, as it is now, you will have this seasonal influx of cattle. If we remove this restriction and allow them 14 weeks of tolerance, that is all—the time and a half for overtime if they exceed 40 hours any other time except 14 weeks a year will go into effect—it will give them 14 weeks to fit into the weeks that the farmers and the cattlemen and the hog raisers and sheep raisers have to market their products. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. COFFEE] has only two objections, as I see it; in other respects, it is more restrictive than the language of the committee bill. In the first place, it exempts not only the employees engaged in the slaughtering or handling of livestock, but also the office employees and all employees of the employer who may be engaged in that business, because it exempts the employer if he is engaged in the grading, loading, slaughtering, or dressing of livestock or preparing its products, and so forth.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. The language is "or preparing products therefrom at the packing plant." So the amendment is restricted to those employees at the packing plant.

Mr. RAMSPECK. But that relates to the employer and not the employee. If the employer is engaged in the business, then all of his employees are exempted. The gentleman may not have intended that, but that is the way it reads.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. The gentleman, I am sure, is incorrect on that, because this applies to the operations at the packing plant.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I have consulted with the legislative counsel, who is sitting right by my side, and he agrees with my interpretation of it. You are exempting the employer and all of his employees; and may I point out another thing to the gentleman: He is permitting the employer here to select a separate 14-week period as to each employee, which apparently is almost impossible of administration. I wish the gentleman would revise his amendment so as to take care of that situation.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. This amendment has been drawn up by counsel who is thoroughly familiar with the subject. It has the approval of all the livestock associations and the farm organizations and a great deal of work has gone into it, and I am sure that the gentleman will find it carries out the plain intent that has been indicated here and is restricted to the operations at the packing plants and the employees at the packing plants; and, further, it is necessary to have some flexibility as to the selection of employees. For instance, the employees on the hog-killing floor during a seasonal peak run of hogs might not be needed when the seasonal run for cattle is on. So, as a consequence, there must be 14 weeks as to each group of employees or the employees on each floor.

Mr. RAMSPECK. The gentleman may be right about that. Of course, I know the gentleman knows more about this situation than I do, but there cannot be any mistake about the fact that you are exempting all of the employees or permitting the exemption of them, because the gentleman's amendment states, "In the case of an employer engaged," and so forth.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. Can the gentleman suggest an amendment that will exempt all clerical employees from the provisions of the 14-week proposition?

Mr RAMSPECK. It could be written in there; yes.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. The gentleman is correct that it permits all of the employees at that plant to be exempt for 14 workweeks over and above the regular workweek.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Why should we exempt the office employees and the people not connected with the slaughtering, and so forth?

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. If the gentleman will permit, I will state that the situation is the same in the entire packing industry. As the cattle come in one door of the packing house, the whole industry is synchronized, and you cannot dam up one particular department and expect the others to function. All of them will probably be subject to overtime during the same period that others are working overtime in the plant. That is, those on the hog-killing floor at one time and those on the lamb-killing floor and those on the cattle-killing floor.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I am not talking about those employees. I am talking about your office force, and your watchmen, and your guards, and all the employees of that sort that have nothing to do with the seasonal operations to which the gentleman is addressing his amendment. Why exempt all of them from hours for a period of 14 weeks when they are not affected by the seasonal flow of hogs and cattle?

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. The gentleman is in error, because they are affected because some of this help must be required when they are working overtime in other departments, because the work is entirely synchronized, and no employee is going to be hurt because this applies to 14 weeks only during an entire year with respect to any employee.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I think the trouble the gentleman complains about could be very well taken care of under the amendment we adopted a while ago of permitting these agreements over a period of 26 weeks and 52 weeks.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. I will say to the gentleman that the one thing that makes this necessary is the interpretation that the Wage and Hour Administration has given to the exemption that was provided in the original act. Had the Administrator given the interpretation which Congress gave, I would not be asking for any amendment whatever. All we are asking is just exactly what Congress intended to grant in the original act.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I am in sympathy with the gentleman's idea of getting an exemption for the seasonal swing of these products for all the employees who are needed to meet that seasonal peak, and I would go along with him on that.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I do not see how you can separate the classifications of employees, because you have a seasonal increase of work in the case of the people who write the checks to pay the farmers for their livestock, and all along the line you have an increased demand.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I may say to the gentleman from South Dakota that here we are exempting the employer. Take, for instance, the Swift Packing Co. They have an office in New York not connected with the slaughtering plant, wherever that may be located. This amendment will exempt all of the employees in the New York office during this seasonal period.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I do not get that from the wording of the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Oh, the gentleman is in error, because this applies to the operatives of the packing plants.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last words. Two objections were raised by the acting chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK], in connection with the Coffee amendment. In the first place, he objected to the fact that it would apply to employees other than those actually engaged in the packing operations, in the killing and handling of animals. Obviously, if you have a seasonal run, occasioned by a drought or some other emergency, so that the livestock goes to market, the work has to be handled all along the line. The front office has its increase of work in proportion. The rancher who has come in with his stock should not be required to wait for his check until the office force can catch up after the heavy run is over. The 14 tolerance weeks should be applicable throughout the plant.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a correction?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Yes.

Mr. RAMSPECK. The legislative counsel advises me that he is mistaken and overlooked the last clause in the amendment, respecting—

Any establishment where the employer is engaged in any of said operations.

If that is the understanding, that it does not exempt people away from the packing plants, I have no objection, and I would like to have the gentleman from Nebraska, the author of the amendment, concur in that statement.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. That is correct.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I am very glad to have the gentlemen clear up that point. That was the second of the objections raised by the gentleman from Georgia which I had in mind to answer when I asked for the floor. It was for that purpose that I borrowed this copy of the amendment from its author, so as to read the language showing that it is restricted to the establishment where the employer is engaged in any of said operations.

In view of that fact and the statement of the gentleman from Georgia, if there is no further objection, that is all I have to say.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Now that we have that matter cleared up to the understanding of all, does the gentleman feel that the provisions of this exemption will be of greater benefit to the packing concern or to the livestock people who have products to sell to that packing concern, or will it be of equal benefit to both?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. It is of primary benefit to the livestock grower. You are not injuring labor nor affecting his employer, the packer, because he can refuse to buy the livestock when he reaches the number of animal units that he can handle within the limitation of hours that he has; and the kick-back of the law without this provision comes to the man who has his livestock in the yards waiting for them to be purchased or processed.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. It is because this will benefit livestock growers, without any real harm to labor, that I support the amendment.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Yes.

Mr. FERGUSON. The truth of the matter is that the whole process, from the time of putting these carcasses on the cars, taking them there, and having them killed and distributed is usually less than a week, so that the process involves the whole plant in this seasonal marketing of livestock.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman is correct. I yield back the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Dakota has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. COFFEE].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BOEHNE). The gentlewoman from New Jersey makes the point of order that a quorum is not present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and twenty-six Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN: On page 11, line 13, strike out paragraph 1 and insert in lieu thereof the following: "(1) Making cheese or butter or other dairy products."

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to clarify the language on page 11 in paragraph 1 of section 3. The paragraph reads:

Making of dairy products (except ice-cream mix, ice cream, malted milk, and processed cheese), including among other things the cooling, pasteurizing, printing, or packaging thereof.

My amendment proposes the adoption of the language of the present law, which reads, in paragraph 10, section 13, as follows:

Making cheese or butter or other dairy products,

And eliminating the controversial language as to ice cream and other dairy products.

This amendment is approved by all the dairy organizations, cooperatives, and farm organizations. I just want to give you an idea how some of our small creameries operate.

In Minnesota we have several hundred small farm creameries engaged in the processing of dairy products. Eighty-two percent of those small creameries manufacture ice cream. An employee engaged in the manufacture of ice cream may be working on making ice cream for 1 or 2 hours of the day and the rest of the time he may be engaged in the making of butter. He is exempt in the making of butter, under the provisions of the Norton amendment, but he is not exempt when he is engaged in making ice cream. There is no reason in the world why a penalty should be injected into his operation when he is engaged in the full and complete diversified operation of these small creameries.

A large percentage of the small creameries of the country engaged in the manufacture of butter, also manufacture ice cream for local distribution principally.

The exemptions provided under section 13 of the law exempt creameries engaged in the manufacture of cheese, butter, and other dairy products. All I am attempting to do by my amendment is to place the same language in section 3 of the bill with reference to hours. Under the bill these men will have the 14 workweeks' exemption. They will also come under the 60 hours' exemption, which provides for time and a half for overtime above the 60 hours, as provided in the Norton bill. But this clarifies the situation with the operation of small creameries.

There may be some who have objection because of the large operators in some of the metropolitan cities, but with reference to the large manufacturers of ice cream and other dairy products in large areas, they are heavily unionized. They operate under agreements with their union organization, through collective bargaining, and they receive salaries far in excess of what is paid in the small country creameries. So my amendment has nothing to do with the large outfits in the city, and I am dealing principally with the cooperatives and small organizations engaged in the diversified production of dairy products.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield.

Mr. FISH. What is the gentleman's definition of a small creamery? Where does the gentleman make a distinction between the small creamery and a large ice-cream plant, and what is the number if there is any limitation on the number of employees involved?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The Administrator has held that if a creamery employs seven or more people it loses its exemption under the present interpretation of area of production. That definition is wrong. I may say to the gentleman that in my district I have perhaps 100 small creameries operating in villages which employ 7 or more people.

Mr. FISH. If it is not seven or less, what is the number at which the distinction should be drawn?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. In the definition of a small creamery?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I cannot give the gentleman a definition offhand because my time is so limited, but I will give it to him later.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. If the amendment offered by the gentleman is adopted, could it be assumed that Congress intended this amendment to include products made out of buttermilk and intended for use as poultry or hog food?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. If it is a dairy product I believe that possibly the product of which the gentlewoman speaks would come within the amendment. But let me say in conclusion that all this amendment does is to clarify the intent of Congress, the intent we had when the original act was passed. This makes it clear and there can be no misunderstanding about it.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield.

Mr. HARE. Will not the Buck amendment include the gentleman's proposition?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I am afraid not. The Buck amendment may be a limitation upon the activities of agriculture. That is the trouble with trying to define things. We are dealing exclusively with the dairy industry. It may be found that some are commercial and some are not commercial. The Buck amendment eliminates the commercial agencies.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk which, of course, will be withdrawn if the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN] is adopted. I think the main purpose of the amendment—and certainly it is the objective of my amendment—is to protect the little fellow first, and, secondly, to protect the American farmer.

There is only one place that the penalty of wages and the penalty of hours can be applied insofar as the small creamery and cheese factories are concerned, and that is the American farmer. In my district and, in fact, all over my State most of the cheese factories operate on a basis of payment for so many hundred pounds of milk received in that particular factory. This, of course, takes into consideration a wage scale that the cheese maker or the butter maker can live on. It is also based upon the going price for milk—that is, the price for that day or that month—and any increase in the additional cost of processing cheese, butter, or any other dairy product necessarily must come out of the hide of the producer of the milk, the farmer.

The Wage and Hour Act, as applied throughout the country and without the exemption in this amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota, penalizes small business to the point where it is driven out of existence. It creates further monopoly in this country, driving the business to those who can afford to pay any kind of wage scale, can afford to set up the necessary books and machinery to take care of the elaborate system of bookkeeping that is necessary. If we continue the Wage and Hour Act as we have it on the books today, every one of these little crossroads creameries and cheese factories will be put out of business, and the entire industry will go to the larger cities and further enlarge monopolistic trend in business.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAWKS. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will not that be particularly so if we continue to apply the minimum wage and maximum hours to these little creameries, and continue the sell-out agreements which our New Deal brethren call trade agreements, under which they bring in dairy products from foreign countries where people work long hours for small pay? In these foreign countries there is no floor under wages or ceiling over hours, and the people work for far less than the minimum wage and for much longer hours than the maximum hours under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Mr. HAWKS. The gentleman is certainly right. No one who studies the situation can fail to realize that the reciprocal-trade agreements as they stand on the books today certainly have a very definite tie-up with this whole picture.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAWKS. I yield.

Mr. GROSS. I merely want to make the observation that this amendment will be of far more worth to the farmers in the sticks than the conservation checks they are not getting.

Mr. HAWKS. There is no question about that. The point I want to make in regard to this particular amendment is that the person who is eventually going to pay for all this is the producer of milk, the fellow on the farm, because he is absolutely the last source from which they can draw.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I believe the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN] made it clear, but some of the Members apparently did not understand that this amendment is in the precise words of the present wage and hour law. It will not exempt a single person that is not now exempt and it will not put in anyone who is now exempted. For some reason or other one section of the Norton bill takes away some of the exemptions in the dairy industry under the present law.

Mr. Chairman, may I make one more observation. The dairy industry needs to be exempted as to hours because a cow does not know anything about the wages-and-hours law. When the cow produces milk it is in the interest of the public health that it be taken care of in a hurry, and when the milk comes into the creamery in large quantities, it is imperative that it be taken care of in a hurry. All the people who work there understand that, and this is the reason why certain provisions were included in the law when it was passed and it is the reason why we should once more put into the wage-hour law the exemption that you now have for the making of dairy products in the words of the present law.

Mr. FISH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FISH. This amendment is also one of the most important amendments because it affects one of the greatest industries in America, the dairy industry, which employs a great many people who make a precarious living and they are entitled to this. It is also in the present law.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Yes. The dairy industry is No. 1 in volume so far as the agricultural products of this country are concerned.

Mr. KEEFE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. KEEFE. Does the gentleman mean to say this exemption is exactly the same as in the present law? I do not think the gentleman intended to say that, because if he will read the exemption contained in section 13, the gentleman will observe that it refers to those plants which are located within the area of production.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. If the gentleman will read the very last clause in section 10, he will find it is separated from the rest, as follows:

Or in making cheese or butter or other dairy products—

And those are precisely the words in the present law, separated by an "or" from all the rest. Those are also the words of the Andresen amendment.

Mr. KEEFE. I wanted to be sure about that.

Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota. I want to congratulate the gentleman, and also the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN], for offering this amendment. I think it is one of the best amendments that has been offered up to now. I know the creameries up in my State are very much interested. They do not want to pay overtime when a farmer comes in late in the evening with a can of milk and the employees have to stay a half-hour longer to take care of it. I hope the Committee will agree to the amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDRESEN].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 14, line 4, following paragraph 16, insert the following:
"17. Wholesale handling or selling of fresh fruits and vegetables in their raw or natural state."

Change the wording immediately following paragraph 16 in the bill as it now stands to read as follows: "and if such employee engaged in any of the operations specified in paragraphs (1) to (16), inclusive, receives compensation for employment in excess of 60 hours in any workweek at a rate of not less than one and one-half times the regular rate at which he is employed, and if such employee engaged in any of the operations specified in paragraph (17) receives compensation for employment in excess of 48 hours in any workweek at a rate not less than one and one-half the regular rate at which he is employed."

Mrs. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUDLOW. I yield to the gentlewoman from New Jersey.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman we have gone along for 5 days on this bill. It is now 3 o'clock. I would like to know if the House is willing to decide when it is going to finish amending this substitute and vote on the bill? I have had many inquiries from a lot of Members who tell me they want to do various things and they would like to know this. As I said before it is perfectly all right with me to stay here until 12 o'clock tonight if you want to stay, but it would seem a rather ridiculous performance. Can we agree on 5 o'clock? I put that in the form of a motion that debate on this amendment and all other amendments, and all amendments on the desk, be voted on by 5 o'clock.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. NORTON] moves that all debate on this amendment and all amendments to the substitute close at 5 o'clock.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLAND. The point of order is the same as the one I made yesterday.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND] makes the point of order that the motion is out of order because, as the Chair understands it, of the agreement that was made when the first reading of the substitute was dispensed with. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section close in 5 minutes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TABER. Would that close debate on all amendments to this section? My understanding is that it would not.

The CHAIRMAN. That will close debate on all amendments that are offered to the pending section, which is section 3.

Mr. TABER. Not as the motion was made.

Mrs. NORTON. May I say to the gentleman that was intended.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentlewoman from New Jersey move that all debate upon the pending section and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes?

Mrs. NORTON. I do, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KEEFE. Did I correctly understand the Chairman to say that the motion includes section 3 and all amendments thereto?

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct.

Mr. KEEFE. The proposal is to limit debate to 5 minutes, now?

The CHAIRMAN. That is the motion.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Did the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW], who has the floor, yield for the purpose of offering a motion? I did not hear him yield.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman to yield to the gentlewoman from New Jersey.

The question is on the motion of the gentlewoman from New Jersey.

The motion was rejected.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on section 3 and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I object, and call for the regular order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

The gentleman from Indiana is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is a very simple proposition. Those who are engaged in the wholesale handling of fresh fruits and fresh vegetables in their raw or natural state do not object to the wages prescribed in the Fair Labor Standards Act. They are entirely willing to pay the prescribed wages or higher wages than those prescribed, but they would like to have hours that would enable them to operate, in view of the peculiar conditions which obtain in their activity. This amendment would simply have the effect of giving them a 48-hour week, and that would make the Fair Labor Standards Act workable in respect of the handling of fresh fruits or vegetables in their raw or native state. It would strengthen the Wage and Hour Act by making it adaptable to the special conditions existing in the fresh-fruit and vegetable industry.

Marketing of fresh fruits and fresh vegetables in their natural state is of basic importance to the growers of these perishable food commodities. A very large volume—in some large markets more than 50 percent—is sold on consignment. That is to say, the grower retains the title to the goods and sells them through his own commission or broker agent. In these transactions the cost of marketing is immediately and directly paid by the producer.

Wholesale handling and selling of these perishables necessarily coincides with harvesting and the movement of the commodities to market. The commodities have to be handled as they arrive in the market. With motortrucks handling an ever-increasing volume of shipments, these hours of arrival on the market are uncertain. They come in at all hours and the shipments must be taken care of.

Wholesaling of these commodities always has been a rather long-hours activity. The operations do not lend themselves to arbitrary restrictions on hours. Wages paid have been based on the long hours and, generally speaking, they are well above the average.

It is common knowledge that wholesale distributors of these important commodities have been operating on very narrow margins since 1932, when the effects of the general depression caught up with the fruit and vegetable industry.

The amendment here proposed recognizes these facts, and, if approved by the House, would permit a 48-hour straight-time workweek for wholesale handling and selling of fresh fruits and fresh vegetables in their raw and natural state. This 48-hour limitation will require a substantial reduction of hours in many markets. The proposed amendment does not relieve the wholesale distributor from the necessity of paying the minimum wage.

Many of these wholesale markets are unionized and have collective bargaining, and this amendment would not disturb such situations.

It should be kept in mind that while the greatest volume of fruit and vegetables are moved into consumption in their fresh and natural state, the canned and processed commodities are in constant and keen competition with the fresh products. Canning and processing have been given a 60-hour straight-time workweek under the provisions of section 3 of the Norton bill, with no concessions whatever for the wholesale marketing of the fresh products, on which the producer depends for his major cash returns. The amendment here proposed would extend to the wholesale handling of the fresh commodities not a 60-hour workweek, but a 48-hour workweek. That, I submit, is a reasonable concession, and one fully justified by the character of the operations and by the direct effects of marketing costs on the producers' prices.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and eighteen Members are present, a quorum.

The gentleman from Indiana will proceed.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, I will say in conclusion that I believe this amendment is entirely reasonable and that it would add to the workability of the Wage and Hour Act. I hope the House will adopt the amendment. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. LUDLOW) there were—ayes 20, noes 43.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and nine Members are present, a quorum.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KEEFE: On page 12, line 2, after "vegetables", insert a period and strike out the remainder of the line and all of lines 3 and 4.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, both the chairman of the Labor Committee and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK] have repeatedly stated on the floor of the House that this committee substitute to the Norton bill proposes to give to the canning industry engaged in the first processing of agricultural products a 60-hour workweek and a 14-week exemption from both the wage and hour provisions of the law. Am I correct in that statement?

Mr. RAMSPECK. That is correct; yes.

Mr. KEEFE. I so understood both Members of the committee to state. I have previously directed the attention of the gentleman from Georgia to the fact that if you read subsection (5) of section 3 you will observe what appears to be an attempt on the part of the committee to carry out that purpose. However, I call the attention of the Committee to the fact that subsection (5) contains the words—

But not when those operations are performed at a terminal establishment.

If you turn to the definition of terminal establishment, you will see that a canning factory is very definitely a terminal establishment because of the method of operation in many instances. Let me point out what I have in mind. The definition of terminal establishment, I may say, is found at the bottom of page 13, beginning with line 20. If you will read subsection (2) in that definition you will see that it describes a terminal establishment as one which receives the major portion of its goods from other establishments at which such goods have been previously concentrated or prepared, and distributes its goods to wholesalers, retailers, consumers, or manufacturers.

Take a pea-canning factory, for instance, wherever it may be located. They maintain what are known as viner stations, which are located out in the country away from the canning plant. The farmer cuts his peas by a mowing machine, throws them onto a hay rack, and they are hauled to that viner station where they are run through the viner. Then the shelled peas are taken by truck to the canning factory where they are canned. After they are put in the can the factory puts them in the warehouse at the factory and sells them to the wholesalers. There is a situation where you intended to exempt that operation, but under the very clear wording of the law the operation involving the separation of the peas at the viner stations is very clearly a major operation, that is, previously preparing them before they get to the canning factory, and it would make of that canning factory a terminal establishment.

Now, all that my amendment seeks to do is to strike out the words "but not when those operations are performed at a terminal establishment," and thus enable the Congress to do what the committee has already stated it wants to do and has intended to do in the writing of this legislation.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEEFE. I yield.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. It is my understanding that the Labor Committee adopted a motion last year in the consideration of this bill to strike out all of the phraseology with reference to terminal establishments, and I would like to ask the gentleman from Georgia if that is not substantially correct.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes; the committee did at one time strike out the words "terminal establishment."

Mr. LANDIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEEFE. I yield.

Mr. LANDIS. Would there be any objection to crossing out the two words on page 12, line 2, "or dried." That would fit the amendment we were going to put in.

Mr. KEEFE. So far as I am concerned, I would have no objection to a further amendment striking out the words "or dried," if the situation would be taken care of as to the canning industry, because it relates wholly to fresh fruits and vegetables.

Mr. LANDIS. That is what we intended.

Mr. KEEFE. I may say that this is a very important amendment to every Member of Congress who has any sort of canning factory in his district which is canning fresh fruits and vegetables, because you may find that your factories under this law, if it is enacted, will be terminal establishments and will not be receiving any exemption.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and seventeen Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to amend the amendment which has been submitted, by striking out the words "or dried."

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and the two remaining amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. GROSS. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, in view of the action just taken on page 12 by eliminating the language "but not when those operations are performed at a terminal establishment," I ask unanimous consent that the same language in paragraph 6, in paragraph 9, in paragraph 10, and in paragraph 12 be eliminated from the amendment.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Is the gentleman referring to the subsection under section 3?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. That is right; section 3 and beginning on page 12 and particularly paragraphs 6, 9, 10, and 12.

Mr. McCORMACK. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman what the purpose of the amendment already adopted is or what is the effect of it.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The effect of it is to carry out the intention, as I understand it, and as stated by the gentleman from Georgia, to carry out the action of the Labor Committee in adopting a similar amendment last year which leaves the bill clear and understandable. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFE] was approved by a large majority and there was no objection from the members of the committee.

Mr. BARTON of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield.

Mr. BARTON of New York. This refers only to the hours and not at all to the wages.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. This refers only to the hours and gives the time and a half for overtime above the 60-hour workweek as provided in the Norton bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN]?

Mr. McCORMACK. I am compelled to object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ENGEL: On page 12, line 24, after the word "peas", insert the word "potatoes."

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, may I have the attention of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, we accept that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment on the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 12, line 4, after the semicolon, insert "nor when such products consist wholly or in chief volume of perishable or seasonal fruits or vegetables, including dried fruits, or in handling or transportation in connection with or incidental to such operation, the provisions of subsection A, during a period or periods of not more than 16 workweeks in the aggregate, or in any calendar year, shall not apply to his employees in any place of employment where he is engaged."

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I wish to play fair with those who have amendments to offer, and give them some time which I shall try not to use. It is not my purpose to go over the situation I covered here the other day. I remind the Members of the House that I wish to support this bill and would like to perfect it. We have a situation in our section of the country which is quite common throughout the country in the fruit-growing districts. We have a series of fruits that mature at different times. We have our small processing plants. They just cannot process all these varieties of fruit at one time, because they do not mature at one time. They extend from June until late in the fall. Many of the products which they process are composed of fruits, some that come along at a seasonal time, but they are carried on to a time where other fruits come in; then they are mixed and made into salads and other mixed products. We need more than 14 weeks in order to accomplish this. Two extra weeks are not very much to ask, and with that in the law we will furnish more employment to the people, and if we can have the major part of the volume composed of fresh seasonal fruit, there is no harm done. On the other hand, it will prevent closing down many of these processing plants that cannot operate, and enjoy the exemption unless the amendment is adopted. This does not affect the large plants in Pittsburgh or Chicago. It is to take care of small processing plants.

We cannot afford to bear down on these little processing concerns. They are the markets for the farmers' products. These small processing plants are the only outlet for the fruit growers' perishable products. We are facing serious competition from other countries right now, some very serious new competition which is coming in from Chile, one of the garden spots of the world. Foreign fruits are invading our market. In enacting legislation we must protect the markets of our farmers as well as protect our employees. Nothing prevents these other plants from operating throughout the year, but our small processing plants, if you restrict them to 14 weeks, will have to close down, to their injury; to the injury of the farmers; to the injury of the employees. This amendment was once adopted by the committee, and if it is adopted now it will greatly strengthen this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any other amendment to section 3?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN: Page 12, lines 7, 8, 14, 15, 16, 18, 19, and 24, and on page 13, lines 1 and 2, strike out the following language as appearing in paragraphs 6, 9, 10, and 12: "but not when those operations are performed at a terminal establishment", and insert a semicolon in each place instead of a comma.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer a perfecting amendment to section 3, on page 13, line 22.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN: Page 13, line 22, strike out "(1)" and the following language: "is located either in the urban area where the products are to be consumed or at transportation centers for the purpose of servicing consumer markets", and strike out "(2)" and insert "(1)."

Page 14, line 3, strike out "(3)" and insert "(2)."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any other amendment to section 3? The Chair hears none.

Is there any amendment to be offered to section 4? The Chair hears none.

Is there any amendment to be offered to section 5?

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WELCH: Page 15, in line 14, insert the following:

"(b) Section 13 (a) of such act is amended by striking out clause 6 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"'(b) Any employee employed in any of the operations described in paragraphs 1 to 3, inclusive, of the definition of agriculture or'; and strike out lines 13 to 24, inclusive, and lines 1 to 4, inclusive, on page 16 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"'(c) Section 13 (a) of such act is further amended by striking out section 10.'"

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROBERTSON. On yesterday the House adopted an amendment to the committee amendment, known as the Buck amendment, which related to both hours and wages for agricultural labor. As I caught the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH], he is striking out about half of the Buck amendment, which has already been adopted by the House.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The Clerk again reported the amendment offered by Mr. WELCH.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. PARSONS). The Chair is ready to rule. The so-called Buck amendment is not being amended by the amendment offered by the gentleman from California. The amendment offered by the gentleman from California begins in line 14 and proposes an amendment to the original act itself, and in no way interferes with the Buck amendment that was adopted on yesterday.

The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLAND. My point of order is that this amendment is to strike out, and that we have a right to perfect the amendment as it is before that amendment is considered.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment proposes to strike out and insert.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLAND. What opportunity is given to perfect the original amendment where there is an amendment to the part stricken out?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that if this amendment is adopted and the amendment as proposed conflicts with an amendment which the gentleman or any other Member has in mind, of course, they have a remedy by voting down the amendment. Then such perfecting amendment may be proposed as the gentleman sees fit to offer.

The gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Chairman, section 13 A–6 of the present law exempts from both wages and hours persons employed in agriculture. Generally speaking, these employees are the same as those covered by paragraphs 1 to 3, inclusive, of the Buck amendment. Unless some amendment is made to section 13 a——, this section, in conjunction with the Buck amendment, will exempt from both wages and hours not only the farmer and his employees but also persons employed in the multitude of processing operations described in paragraph 4 of the Buck amendment. The purpose of the amendment which I offer is to make persons employed in these processing operations, except the ginning of cotton, which is described in paragraph 3 of the Buck amendment, subject to the wage provisions of the act.

The second part of this amendment strikes from the provisions of the wage and hour law the wage and hour exemptions presently accorded agricultural processing operations carried on within the area of production. In section 3 of the committee amendment, all these operations are given extremely liberal treatment with respect to hours, but there is no reason why they should be exempt from wages.

This amendment maintains the wage provision in the Fair Labor Standards Act. It has been stated repeatedly by nearly every Member who has spoken on this bill that they are in favor of maintaining the meager 30-cents-an-hour, $12-a-week provision in the act. The amendment just offered simply assures the continuance of 30 cents an hour as provided for in the law.

The amendment offered by me also protects the child-labor provisions in the wage and hour law. The amendment also removes from the act what is known as the area of production.

Stripped of all legislative verbiage, the question for this body to determine, in considering amendments to the wage and hour law, is 30 cents an hour, $12 a week, too high for a woman who toils and sweats in a processing plant—is 30 cents an hour too much to pay a laborer who works only a few weeks a year in a fruit-packing shed? Those who voted for the Buck amendment yesterday gave their approval to this policy.

The supporters of the Buck amendment went still further. They struck a vital blow at child labor. In this, the prohibition against child labor does not extend to agricultural operation as those operations are defined in the Fair Labor Standards Act. When you broaden the definition of agriculture to include drying, packing, and other processing operations you thereby exempt from the child-labor provisions of the law children who would be engaged in such work.

My colleagues, you have had fair warning, the responsibility is yours.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WELCH. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. If I understand the gentleman's amendment, it would strike out subsection 6 of section 13 (a) and insert in lieu thereof sections 1, 2, and 3 of the Buck amendment.

Mr. WELCH. Yes.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Did I understand the gentleman to say that his amendment eliminated from the Buck amendment the ginning of cotton?

Mr. WELCH. No.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I happen to be familiar with the ginning of cotton. It is an operation in connection with farming; and with all deference and in all fairness, the gentleman from New York stated that the first three sections of the Buck amendment were included.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I ask for recognition on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, the only thing to do, if we want to consider the ginning of cotton, the canneries, and the other problems, is to vote down this amendment. I know my friend is always fair, but I fear that in this particular instance he is denying to men on the floor, who have a right to have their amendments heard, an opportunity to be heard.

It has been said that this is a waste of time. I have never seen a bill come before the House that involved more intricacies and more different operations than the pending bill. I consider that the time has been well spent and that the Members have been exercising their ancient rights to discuss a bill, to discuss amendments, and to propose amendments they think should go into the bill itself. This is parliamentary legislation, this is democracy as I have always been taught it. [Applause.]

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I wish to point out to my friend from Virginia that he is mistaken about ginning cotton. Paragraph 3 of the Buck amendments exempts the ginning of cotton. It will not be affected by the Welch amendment.

Mr. BLAND. But in striking out sections 15 to 24, on page 16 down to line 4, I am denied an opportunity to amend or to offer an amendment at this stage dealing with cannery operations. To that I object.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. In response to the inquiry of the gentleman from Georgia, is it not fair to say that the gentleman from California just admitted a few moments ago that he changed the Buck amendment and excluded the ginning of cotton which is embraced in the present law?

Mr. RAMSPECK. If the gentleman will yield, that comes within the purview of paragraph 3 of the Buck amendment. This amendment does not affect the specific exemption for the ginning of cotton.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I cannot yield further.

I asked the Chairman what was the parliamentary situation and I was advised that in order to have an opportunity to offer my amendment it would be necessary to vote down the Welch amendment. I say that is a denial of a right to a Member on the floor to be heard, or to this House to hear honest amendments that are being offered to this bill to perfect it so that it may be workable; and I speak as one who voted for the conference report when this bill was before the House, believing that we would be given an opportunity sooner or later to correct imperfections. Now, however, that imperfections arise and we know they exist we are denied an opportunity to have them considered.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that the amendment be rejected. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WHITTINGTON and Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON] for 5 minutes.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WHITTINGTON: In section 3, after the word "poultry" insert "or in connection with the ginning of cotton."

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. This is an amendment in the third degree, and is not in order at the present time.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman withhold his point of order so that I may make my statement?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I reserve my point of order.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, the pending amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH] strikes out that portion of the committee bill with respect to the elimination of area of production and undertakes to amend the original law with respect to the definition of "agriculture" which is paragraph (6) of 13 (a) as I recall it, by striking out the words "employed in agriculture," or substantially those words, and inserting in lieu thereof the first three sections of the so-called Buck amendment. The third of those sections I read:

(3) In connection with the production or harvesting of maple sirup or maple sugar or any commodity defined as an agricultural commodity in section 15 (g) of the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended, or in connection with the raising or harvesting of mushrooms, or in connection with the hatching of poultry, or in connection with the ginning of cotton—

And so forth. Now, he has left out the words "or in connection with the ginning of cotton."

Mr. BARTON of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BARTON of New York. I think the gentleman misunderstood the answer of the gentleman from California. Those words are not omitted from his amendment.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I asked him distinctly and he said they were. The purpose of my amendment is to restore the ginning of cotton to his amendment.

Mr. BARTON of New York. I think the gentleman misunderstood your question.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Then, I will be glad to have the gentleman answer the question. I asked him the question very distinctly, and I want to get it clear. I asked him if the words "ginning of cotton" were omitted from section 3 of the Buck amendment proposed by the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH].

Mr. WELCH. They are included in the Buck amendment.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Are they included in the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. WELCH. Yes.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I would like to correct the gentleman's impression. The gentleman from California is not offering the language of the Buck amendment. He has no such language in his amendment at all. He simply limits the exemption granted to agriculture in 13 (a) 6 to the first three sections of the Buck amendment.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. That is what I understood.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Which now provides for an exemption to the ginning of cotton.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I understand that such is his intention now, but when I asked him if his amendment embraced the first three sections of the Buck amendment he said it did except it eliminated the words "the ginning of cotton." The gentleman now says that the words "ginning of cotton" are in there. I would like to have the amendment reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman wish the Welch amendment reported?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Section 3 of the Welch amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the Welch amendment.

There was no objection.

The Clerk again read the Welch amendment.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I think we understand each other now.

Mr. WELCH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. WELCH. I regret very much that my amendment was misunderstood.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I am sorry, and now I understand what the gentleman had in mind.

Mr. WELCH. My amendment was evidently misunderstood.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I think I understand now what the gentleman had in mind. In the committee bill, in line 16, page 15, after it strikes out clause 10, which is the area-of-production clause, and it also inserts "employed in the ginning of cotton," and I agree it is entirely proper to strike that out here in view of the fact the Buck amendment has been brought forward, and if it is retained.

Mr. WELCH. May I say it excludes the ginning of cotton.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. That is entirely satisfactory.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WADSWORTH. My question is not a hostile one, but I would like to have the gentleman tell me why the ginning of cotton should be exempt and the packing of a few apples should not be exempt?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I am more familiar with the ginning of cotton than I am with the packing of apples. I may say that very often in the cotton fields the cotton is ginned and the labor that grows the cotton and harvests the cotton is also used to gin the cotton.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, in view of the statement of the gentleman from California withdrawing his former answer, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to say that if there has been one amendment offered here today which has merit it is this amendment. If this amendment does not prevail and is not adopted, what I told you this morning is certainly going to happen. We have loaded this bill down with many amendments. One or two of them perhaps have strengthened the bill, but the others have certainly not done so. I sincerely hope that if you want to retrieve some of the mistakes you have made in this House you will vote for the amendment offered by one of the finest and one of the best advocates and supporters of labor in this Congress, the gentleman from California, my very dear friend, DICK WELCH. [Applause.]

Mr. VOORHIS of California rose.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I simply want to ask a question to see if I can clarify the present situation with regard to this amendment.

If the amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH] is adopted, we will still have accomplished the purpose that many Members are interested in—to eliminate the area-of-production problem. Is that correct?

Mrs. NORTON. Yes; that is true.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. We will have granted an exemption from the hours provision to the entire list of establishments and operations related to agriculture which are included in the amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK].

Mrs. NORTON. The gentleman is right.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. And we will have included a very carefully drawn definition of agriculture. However, we will not have taken out of the wage-hour law the provision for a 30-cent minimum wage to workers in processing establishments.

Mrs. NORTON. No. The gentleman knows I would not support the amendment if we did that.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I just want to make it plain that if this amendment is adopted it will leave the 30-cent minimum wage in the act as far as workers in processing establishments are concerned.

Mrs. NORTON. The gentleman is entirely correct.

Mr. WELCH. I may say to the gentleman from California that if my amendment is adopted the child-labor law is saved; otherwise it is lost in the Buck amendment.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The child-labor provisions and the 30-cent minimum wage.

Mrs. NORTON. That is exactly right.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I subscribe to everything the distinguished gentlewoman from New Jersey has said about my good friend the gentleman from California, DICK WELCH. He is one of the finest men we have here, and I have served with him for a good many years. However, there should be no misunderstanding about his amendment, because the amendment definitely takes away from agriculture the exemptions in section 13 (a) (10). It takes them all away and entirely eliminates subsection (10), which deals with agricultural employees engaged in handling, packing, storing, ginning, compressing, pasteurizing, drying, preparing in their raw or natural state, or canning of agricultural or horticultural commodities for market, or in making cheese or butter or other dairy products. That exemption is lost under provisions 6 and 7 of the law if his amendment is adopted.

If you want to take away from agriculture some exemptions that they have under existing law, then you should vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

I am not so sure that we did a wise thing when we adopted the Buck amendment, because the Buck amendment seeks to describe all branches of agriculture. I am afraid that we have overlooked some of the definitions that we might have included in the various occupations in agriculture. We should go slowly on this matter because I believe the Members of the House do not want to take away from agriculture any of the rights they have been given under existing law.

It is true that in subsection (10) we have the area-of-production provisions as defined by the Administrator. We want to get rid of that. An amendment will be offered to get rid of it. I believe that due to the confusion in the Wage and Hour Division in carrying out the intention of Congress in making a definition of it we will get rid of it when the amendment is offered this afternoon, and we will retain for agriculture the exemptions given to them in the original law, according to the intent of Congress.

I feel that the amendment offered by the gentleman from California should be voted down in the best interests of legislation in an effort to draft a workable bill that will be satisfactory in part, at least, to the important branches of our complicated economic structure.

It is our business to legislate here today and to take our time in doing so, rather than to take snap judgment on something that may have far-reaching consequences on our whole economic structure in this country. I therefore hope that this amendment will be voted down until it is given further study, and then it can be brought in as a separate bill from the Committee on Labor for consideration here by the Congress. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, members of this Committee, be not deceived about this amendment. It wipes out every exemption in the law for agriculture in the way of an operation except cotton ginning, and I wonder if cotton ginning was not left in there for some votes. Why should cotton ginning be exempt, but not the shed where the man takes one load of cotton to get it ginned and another load of vegetables to get them sorted and packed in a crate? What is the difference? Let us not be absurd about this thing. Then we say we are wiping out the term "area of production."

Let me tell you something. Somebody is going to have to answer to the man who this very afternoon is out plowing with a mule and working. Yes; child labor is going on down there in those fields, little hands are handling the vegetables, little children are picking the strawberries. They, too, would like some relief. Their fathers and mothers love them just as much as the city folks love theirs. You cannot shut your eyes to this condition or turn a deaf ear to their case and be justified. In the name of God is there one man here who will vote to fix the price when the Extension Bureau of the Department of Agriculture and all the agricultural men have reported it would cost $6 to produce a crate of strawberries under the 30-cents-an-hour minimum? Is there anyone here who will go down there or rise on this floor and argue to raise the cost of food? Oh, no; it is mashed down, mashed down, mashed down.

Now, let me tell you something. Be not deceived. The words of some may rattle well in the galleries here, but not only has the individual Member, but the Democratic Party and the Republican Party have got to go and talk to those farmers, and the time is not far off.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. Yes; I will yield.

Mrs. NORTON. The gentleman knows that the cat is out of the bag on the Buck amendment. Is not that true?

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. I do not know where the cat came from, but there is one running around here [laughter], and I am not sure it is not a black one.

Now, it is all right and proper to legislate here, but let us not to try to play ping-pong with the agricultural rights of this country. Why, the idea of putting in a sweeping amendment like this. The gentleman said he was born on a farm. Maybe so, but I fear the gentleman has moved uptown. [Laughter.] I know he has a very kindly face [laughter], a very kindly face, and he looks just as wise as if he had been down in a potato field yesterday, but the gentleman does not stop to think that the farmer carries those potatoes to market and he gets what is left after they are graded and packed. Why, the gentleman has heard me talk agriculture and potatoes so much that he calls me "Potato," as a nickname, and that is a very respectable crop down in my section; yet the gentleman pays 20 cents for one baked up here that my folks down there sell for 50 cents a barrel, and little children pick those potatoes. Let us do something for these people.

Be not deceived, this amendment simply rips every single exemption that you have been talking about giving to agriculture, and now you have gone right up to his platform.

Somebody propose some legislation here to fix a price on agricultural products and I will go with you. Let somebody get up here and say to me that he is willing to pay what it costs the farmer to produce agricultural products plus 10 percent and I am just about desperate enough to go with him. [Applause.] My God, we cannot keep mashing them down. There are 32,000,000 of those good agricultural people and I come from the heart of them. I cannot talk the big city language and I have no prejudice. I go there every time I can to see the sights. I love the folks, but why should we talk about one group against the other and attempt to stir up feeling one against the other when, my God, if we are to have any prosperity or any happiness in this country it must come through the cooperation of these two groups and of all the people. We cannot divide up.

I am calling on you as earnestly as I know how to vote down the amendment. It goes right on up to the platform and the only thing it leaves in is the ginning of cotton and the boll weevil is going to take care of that, it looks like to me. [Laughter and applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment and ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, personally, I have the same high regard for my colleague from San Francisco [Mr. WELCH] that was expressed by the chairman of the Labor Committee, but the purpose of the Welch amendment is to emasculate the Buck amendment which was adopted yesterday. It has no other purpose whatsoever.

In the first place, I do not know how anyone from California could get up here and offer an amendment of this kind and eliminate subdivision 4 of the amendment, which specifically covers the producers of perishable agricultural products, fresh fruits, and vegetables. I realize that on Twin Peaks they do not raise many fruits and vegetables, but, nevertheless, there are great processing operations carried on in connection with the marketing and processing of these commodities in San Francisco. Anybody who wants to vote for this amendment is going to have to go back to his farm community, if his constituents raise any perishable products whatever, and tell them that he deliberately voted to destroy the exemptions that are already in this act for the benefit of the producers of perishable products.

Mrs. NORTON rose.

Mr. BUCK. I do not yield. The elimination of subdivision 10 of section 13 (a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act, as the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN] pointed out, does not merely eliminate the question of the area of production, but it eliminates all of the exemptions that are at present in the act, for the benefit of those processing, drying, canning, and so forth, plants which might have been located within the area of production.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I do not yield. Bad as the definition of the area of production was, bad as the rulings under it have been, it is not proper, wise, or courageous for Congress to try to sit here this afternoon and take away the existing exemptions.

I want to say something now about the child-labor proposition. On June 5, 1939, the chairman of the Committee on Labor came into the House of Representatives and moved to suspend the rules and pass a bill, not the bill reported here today, but one which had some additional committee amendments attached to it and among those committee amendments was the following, under which the gentlewoman from New Jersey exempted:

> Any employee employed in cleaning, packing, grading, or preparing, but not canning and processing, fresh fruits and vegetables in their raw and natural state, when such operations are performed in the generally recognized production area or section where such commodities are produced normally, or are usually prepared for market.

That was a revision of the definition of agriculture. It added to the exemption of child labor as well. I do not know how many people would be covered by that definition, whether there were 200,000 or 400,000 or 50,000 or 60,000. Nevertheless every one of those people engaged in that occupation could have been children, and child labor could have been employed at any time under that definition. Why, it is as flat as a soggy pancake for the chairman of this committee or anybody else to come in here and talk about extending the exemption of child labor under my amendment when she brought in a bill of that kind a year ago.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment I offered and which was adopted yesterday was one that was well thought out, well drawn, considered by the legislative counsel, considered by the counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, considered by others who have to administer this act, and I refresh your memory by calling your attention to what the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES], told you this morning and what yesterday I said myself in different words, that here we are about to set up some kind of a standard for which the Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division ought to thank us, by which he can be guided. If he has to go on and make his rulings indiscriminately guided by his own thoughts only, and by the simple phrase "agriculture," which is not definite, in the act at the present time, then not only the Wage and Hour Division but the United States Government will be confronted with lawsuit after lawsuit until this matter finally is threshed out through the courts. Why is it not better for us to settle this matter once and for all by setting up this chart?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Chairman, an unusual development has taken place in the discussion of this amendment. Not only does the Welch amendment try to rectify some of the injustices which have been done by the adoption of the Buck amendment, but it also tends to clarify greatly some of the incongruities existing in the present law, and which will be greatly enhanced if the Buck amendment is permanently written into the law. I particularly address myself to the remarks of the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK] who just concluded, when he stated that last year the chairman of the Committee on Labor came before the Rules Committee and asked for a rule to bring this legislation before the floor of the House.

The chairman of the Committee on Labor stated that on two different occasions she appeared before the Committee on Rules and asked for a rule to consider this legislation but at each particular time it was denied by the Rules Committee and she was compelled to resort to the only parliamentary procedure which the rules of the House afford, and that was to have a petition signed by 218 Members of the House, to bring this proposed legislation to the floor of the House for discussion. Not only once was this action required but it was also necessary to have a petition signed a second time in order to give the membership of the House an opportunity to vote on the proposed measure.

My friends, what is this powerful influence that has always opposed the wage and hour law, and which even now is attempting to so emasculate and impair its effectiveness as to decree to economic servitude a million and a half of the wage earners of the United States?

We are advised that if the Buck amendment becomes permanent law, an additional 200,000 workers in the preserving and canning plants throughout the Nation will be exempted from the protecting provisions of the law.

I ask you, is 30 cents an hour, or $12.60 a week, too high a wage for an American worker to receive for his or her services?

By your votes you are going to answer this question, in the affirmative or in the negative.

In a short time the great Republican Party is going to assemble at Philadelphia for their national convention, and I want to say here and now that I was greatly impressed the other day when the gentleman from Indiana, in upholding the wage scale, stated in his discourse that the Republican Party has always been a party of the full dinner pail, and has always fought for the rights of labor. In view of your action here today what a dilemma will confront you when the resolution committee of your party presents to our colleague the gentleman from Massachusetts, JOE MARTIN, the permanent chairman of the Republican convention, a resolution upholding the rights of the laboring man to a fair wage and a high standard of living when today, by your action, you say to the laboring masses of America that 30 cents an hour is too high a price to pay—that $12.60 is too large a weekly remuneration to the toilers of our Nation.

Let me tell my good friends of the Democratic Party who, under the protective cloak of agriculture, are trying to crucify labor today, that since 1933, $6,000,000,000 have been appropriated to further the agricultural interests of the Nation. Do you think these appropriations and enabling legislative acts could have been passed by this body without the aid and assistance of we Members fro mthe industrial areas of the country? We supported your A. A. A. program, your cotton legislation, your crop-insurance measures, your crop loans, your flood-control bills, the Tennessee Valley Authority, and other remedial measures, all in the name of agriculture. Do you propose now, by your votes, to repay that assistance by destroying the only protection from exploitation the laboring man has today?

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEAM. No; not now. Every operation of the farm is exempted under existing law. It is excluded. That is the organic and basic law. Members of the House, if the Buck amendment is not modified or changed, then the only honest and fair thing to do is to recommit this bill. Let me say to you gentlemen who represent Ohio, Wisconsin, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, and Illinois, do you want to subject your employers who maintain a high standard of wages to the unfair competition of States who will again engage in child labor and pay an unfair and unlivable wage to their employees?

The amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH] is to safeguard the protection of the child-labor law and to maintain a fair standard of American living.

I tell you, Members of the House, that unless we maintain the standard of at least 30 cents an hour, your relief bills will become greatly enlarged and increased, and you will again be confronted with greater problems, infinitely more difficult of solution.

I appeal to you in the cause of labor and decency to adopt the Welch amendment. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I think there is some confusion about what this proposed amendment does. If you will turn to page 15 of the bill, you will find that line 15 undertakes to amend section 13 (a) of the act by first striking out clause 10 and inserting in lieu thereof an exemption.

Mr. BEAM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mr. BEAM. The gentleman said he misunderstood my meaning. I said to vote for the Welch amendment.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Then there is an exemption for telephone and switchboard operators, and for employees engaged in the cleaning, packing, grading, or preparing fresh fruits and vegetables; for employees employed in handling, tying, drying, stripping, and grading tobacco. Those are exemptions from both wages and hours. The Welch amendment will strike out those exemptions.

The reason the ginning of cotton is not affected is because it is in the Buck amendment and will be taken care of there.

The Buck amendment has four parts. The effect of the Welch amendment is to eliminate from the exemptions from both wages and hours the language contained in subsection 4 of the Buck amendment, so as to apply the wage and hour law to those operations. It is true that many of those operations are given the 60-hour week under other language in this bill. So that the real effect of the Welch amendment, of course, is to put back under the wage section of the law the operations described in section 4 of the Buck amendment.

I think that is a fair statement of the issue.

Mr. BARTON of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mr. BARTON of New York. May I draw the gentleman's attention to the colloquy that took place yesterday between the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY]? Mr. MAY said:

I would like to inquire of the gentleman with respect particularly to the fruit industry, as to whether or not the wages that were paid prior to any of the labor legislation on the average was a good deal higher than the wages that will be paid under the wage and hour provision?

To which Mr. BUCK answered:

They not only were then, but they are now.

Now, if the wages are already higher than the wages which the wage and hour law fixes, then certainly we are inflicting no hardship on the fruit and vegetable industry if we ask that they pay wages lower than the wages they are already paying?

Mr. RAMSPECK. That is true.

Mr. BUCK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mr. BUCK. I call the attention of the Committee, particularly the gentleman from New York, to another part of the remarks I made yesterday when I stated that in the depression years of 1930, 1931, and 1932 the wages of pickers and probably packagers of fresh fruits and vegetables fell as low as 15 cents an hour. These are perishable commodities and you cannot afford to pay workers any more than you can relatively get when the goods go into the consumption centers. At that particular time there was a great outcry over this 15 cents an hour, and a committee from the American Federation of Labor was appointed to look into the situation. They came back and reported to the A. F. of L. that under existing circumstances and the prices at distribution centers it was not possible to pay workers more than 15 cents an hour without throwing everybody out of employment. For that reason it is impossible to fix a definite standard of 30 cents an hour at any one time. This is a long-range amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Georgia may have 3 additional minutes to cover the point I have asked him.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Does the gentleman from California agree that the issue has been fairly stated by the present speaker, that the issue is whether or not you are going to restore wages or the wage provisions of the act to the operations described in subsection (4) of the gentleman's amendment of yesterday?

Mr. BUCK. I wish the gentleman from Georgia would expatiate a little on the comparison made to the portion of the Welch amendment which deals with the repeal of subsection 10 in its entirety so that those processing plants which are now exempt, if they are within an area of production, are not to be exempt hereafter.

Mr. RAMSPECK. The bill, of course, contains that provision. The Welch amendment does not add anything to the bill, because we have intended all along to repeal clause 10 of section 13 (a) so as to get rid of the area of production; and I believe 90 percent of the Members want to do that.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mrs. NORTON. From the answer the gentleman from California gave to the gentleman from Georgia it is plainly evident that the only thing under consideration is whether we want to take the 30 cents an hour from these workers.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I think that fairly states the issue. It is a question whether or not you want to apply the 30-cents-an-hour provision to the operations described in subsection 4 of the Buck amendment; and if you will look in Monday's RECORD on page 5214 you will find a copy of the Buck amendment and can tell exactly what you are voting on.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. If the Welch amendment nullifies a part of the Buck amendment, as we have been told it does, then should it be adopted we would have two conflicting provisions in the bill. How is one to determine which will control? We are told on the one hand that the Buck amendment forces a person to do a thing and on the other that the Welch amendment forbids its being done.

Mr. RAMSPECK. There is no conflict at all, because the Welch amendment is to section 13 (a) 6 which exempts from both wages and hours everything contained in the definition of agriculture. This exemption is limited by the words of the amendment itself to clauses 1, 2, and 3 of the definition of agriculture placed in the bill by the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK]. There is no conflict. It is simply a limitation of the exemption which would have been granted under the Buck definition of agriculture.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Does the Buck amendment provide that you can do something, and the Welch amendment provide that you shall not do it?

Mr. RAMSPECK. No. The Buck amendment does not exempt anybody, without subsection 6 of section 13 (a) the Buck amendment is simply a definition. It does not exempt anybody from anything without clause 6 of section 13 (a). The gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH] is undertaking to limit the exemption contained in clause 6 of section 13 (a) to the first three paragraphs of the Buck definition.

Mr. LANDIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mr. LANDIS. Then the amendment does not affect the packing or handling and the crating and the picking on the farm?

Mr. RAMSPECK. It does not affect anything that is done by a farmer on a farm or in the incidental operations on the farm, the definite operations of farming.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mrs. NORTON) there were—ayes 45, noes 103.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I am wondering if it would not be possible to agree to some limitation of debate on this bill. It seems that we are going uphill and right down again on various amendments. I am wondering if most of us have not had about enough of this discussion and if we could not agree that after a certain time all debate on this matter should be closed.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the Norton amendment and all amendments thereto close at 5:30.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that all debate on the Norton amendment and all amendments thereto close at 5:30.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, we had an apple out of that bag 1 or 2 days ago. The time was fixed, and important amendments were placed before the House. The time was consumed, and when we reached those vital amendments which crucified the bill there was no time left to discuss the amendments. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, on that motion I ask for a division.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin and Mrs. NORTON), there were—ayes 52, noes 97.

So the motion was rejected.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I am not trying to delay things. I wonder if we cannot determine the number of amendments on the Clerk's desk and allow the usual 10 minutes, 5 for and against each amendment, then vote on them? I presume the amendments are all there.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I try to be fair. Does not the gentleman know that there have been as much as 2 hours consumed on a single amendment? Does the gentleman think that is fair? We have been on this bill for 5 days, a bill that is now, with the amendments adopted, a disgrace to America, and when it is voted on, if it is voted on, and adopted, it will be buried. So why waste all this time? It is loaded down now with amendments to such an extent that certainly the chairman of the Labor Committee would repudiate it, and I intend to repudiate it. With all the amendments that have been loaded on the bill today it will die of its own weight. I intend to repudiate this bill, if adopted as amended. I will vote against it in Committee, and if it is adopted, shall then attempt to have it recommitted in the House.

Mr. BLAND. With all due deference to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. NORTON], other Members have equal rights upon this floor. If the unanimous-consent request is made, and is satisfactory to the Members of the House, it is satisfactory with me.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I renew the request that I made a moment ago that all debate on the Norton amendment to the bill and all amendments thereto close at 5:30.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments to the substitute close at 5:30. Is there objection?

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLAND: On page 15, line 21, after the word "or", strike out all of clause 12 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"12. Any employee employed in the canning, packing, grading or preparing fresh fruits and fresh vegetables in their raw or natural state, or any employee employed in the canning, processing, freezing, or preserving of any products consisting wholly or in chief volume of perishable or seasonal fruits or vegetables, including dried fruits, or in handling or transportation in connection with or incidental to such operations, to the extent employee is so engaged."

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, this amendment changes the amendment that has been offered by the committee to this extent: It leaves in section 12 "any employee employed in the canning, packing, grading, or preparing fresh fruits and vegetables in their raw or natural state" but omits "when such operations are performed immediately off the farm."

There is no intelligible interpretation of what that language means. Then it adds "any employee employed in the canning, processing, freezing, or preserving of any product consisting wholly or in chief volume of perishable or seasonal fruits," and so forth. I shall not read the rest of it because it is identical with the amendment that I offered yesterday except as modified to conform with the context.

Mr. Chairman, we talk about paying less than 30 cents an hour. I am talking about the labor on the farm. I am speaking for the farmer and the cannery laborer so that they may live. I would much rather pay less than 30 cents an hour on some of the farms that cannot survive unless they pay less than that sum for cannery operations immediately connected with the farm, such as I have in my district. Deny to the laborer what may be paid and you deny to the farmer the right to grow that product. You have increased your unemployment, both as to the farmer and as to the laborer.

The gentleman from Georgia said he is deeply interested in the farmer and he cites cases in his district. There is a vast difference between a farm near a center like Atlanta and a farm in my district, far removed from the industrial centers, where there is cost of transportation, where there is waste, and all of those things. I desire to subscribe to the philosophy of the gentleman from Georgia, but I say to him, in the words of Portia:

If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches and poor men's cottages princes' palaces.

Mr. Chairman, we are dealing with a concrete situation. These farmers cannot exist unless they have these operations there. Move your area of production 10 miles and you know what that does in my district? About half of it in many cases would be in the Atlantic Ocean and the other in rivers that intersect my district. These problems ought to be dealt with in a practical way, and these people allowed to survive. If you make the expense too high, you destroy both the farmer and the laborer. Take your unit of production. You ought to base costs on the unit of production. We have unskilled labor. We have labor that part of the time is working in the canning factory, and even with the small cost that we pay, the unit of production—the can—is costing just as much or more than it does where they have skilled labor. We cannot bring in skilled labor where these canneries are operating—that is, way out in the country. They operate a very short time. They are seasonal. We use in the cannery the people who work on the farms. They work there a few days and they work on the farm a few days, and they are able thereby to make a living that they could not make otherwise. I ask justice to them. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me to submit a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. ELLIS. I yield.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, how many amendments to section 5 are still to be offered?

The CHAIRMAN. There seem to be about seven amendments.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 30 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Chairman, the country I represent is a mountain-plains territory. In my district are nearly 100 canning factories. Certainly I would never take this floor in behalf of an amendment that would prevent my people who work in those canning factories from getting more money for their labor, but the situation is not that. Today only 60 percent of those canneries are planning to operate during this coming summer. Only 60 percent of them have signed contracts with the farmers. I would not state to you that the 40 percent remaining are not working because of the wage and hour bill, for some of them no doubt are failing for other reasons to operate, but I do know that most of them are failing to operate for that reason. The reason is that when you can tomatoes for only a few weeks, and when you can beans for only a few weeks in the year, and that is about all they can do in that high land, you must operate with unskilled labor.

Mr. FRIES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ELLIS. Briefly, yes.

Mr. FRIES. Does the gentleman from Arkansas realize that the canning industry in his State pays 17 cents an hour today, while our canning industry in the State of Illinois pays 41 cents an hour?

Mr. ELLIS. I would not take issue with my friend on that except to say that I believe he is wrong.

Mr. FRIES. Those are facts established by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

Mr. ELLIS. The fact remains that the canning factories are not operating, and when they do not operate, my people cannot grow the crops they are accustomed to grow. Then those who have been working in the factories cannot get anything at all, they are cut clear out, and therefore it is a total loss to us.

This amendment would simply provide that if these canneries operating in that section, in order to be still exempt from the Wage and Hour Act, desire to can dry beans part of the time, say for a few weeks in between the bean season and the tomato season, they can do it, and they can qualify under the wage and hour law and pay the wages and operate under the hours as provided by the act for that short term without being required to come under the act the rest of the time. That is just about all the amendment provides for, and I believe it should be adopted. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Georgia desire recognition on the amendment?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I would just like to be recognized for about 2 minutes to ask the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND] if the language of this amendment is the language the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON] showed me a day or so ago?

Mr. BLAND. I do not believe so. I do not believe that I have ever shown this to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON]. This is the same amendment I offered yesterday, with only such changes as adapt it to the context.

Mr. RAMSPECK. What does it do other than eliminate this language, "immediately off the farm"?

Mr. BLAND. It eliminates that and also removes the wage and hour provisions as to those cannery operations.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Does the gentleman mean it takes them out from under the wage provisions also?

Mr. BLAND. It does.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Then, Mr. Chairman, of course, I must oppose the amendment, because it is contrary to the policy of the bill the committee has reported. I hope the Committee will vote it down, because it undertakes to eliminate the wage provisions in these operations.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. RAMSPECK) there were—ayes 52, noes 40.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WHITTINGTON: On page 15, beginning with clause (10), in line 17, strike out the remainder of the subsection down to and including line 4, on page 16, and insert the following:

"(10) to any individual employed and engaged in handling, packing, storing, ginning, compressing, pasteurizing, drying, preparing in their raw or natural state, or canning of agricultural or horticultural commodities for markets, or in making cheese or butter or other dairy products."

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is undertaking to strike out of the bill language which the gentleman from Virginia has just written into it.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I strike out additional language, too. I have not offered any amendment at all to the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. RAMSPECK. The gentleman from Virginia substituted new language for lines 21, 22, 23, and 24, and the first line on page 16.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I would say with respect to this that a motion to strike out is in order at any time, and perfecting amendments are considered before the amendment to strike out.

Mr. BLAND. My amendment was directed, and I think so specifies, to subparagraph (12).

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman makes the point of order that the proposed amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi seeks to strike out the amendment that was just adopted.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I answered that by saying that I propose to strike out the language of the bill, and that point of order is not well taken.

The CHAIRMAN. According to the amendment as written, the Chair thinks it proposes to strike out language that was adopted a few minutes ago.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, in connection with the statement just made, will the Chair permit the reading of the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND] for the information of the House?

The Clerk again read the Bland amendment.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, as I understand the gentleman's amendment, it is an amendment to the pending committee amendment, and one that perfects the committee amendment. My motion is to strike out the entire section and insert a new provision in lieu thereof.

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct, but that will strike out the amendment.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I am not arguing that, but this is perfecting the original amendment, and therefore I say the point of order is not well taken.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct, and the Chair overrules the point of order.

The gentleman from Mississippi is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, on yesterday when this bill was brought to the attention of the House and before we went into Committee of the Whole, the chairman of the committee made a statement of her purpose to offer an amendment to the section under consideration. During the colloquy that ensued I asked if it would not be generally satisfactory to leave the existing law as it is and to strike from the provisions of existing law the controversial language, "area of production."

The amendment that I now propose strikes from this bill the language that is intended by the committee amendment to be inserted in lieu of clause 10 of the exemptions in 13 (a) of the original act and to restore the language of the original act which would include the provisions of the gentleman from Virginia and other broader provisions, but at all events it leaves the law just as it is, with the words "area of production" stricken out.

Now let me remind you that the existing law, section 13 (a), clause 10, reads "to any individual employed within the area of production (as defined by the Administrator)."

That is the language stricken out if my amendment is adopted, and it does not amend the existing law with respect to "handling, packing, storing, ginning, compressing, pasteurizing, drying, preparing in their raw or natural state or canning of agricultural or horticultural commodities for market, or in making cheese or butter or other dairy products."

In other words, Mr. Chairman, in the interest of passing the bill as reported by the committee and eliminating controversial matter, it does strike me that there will be more nearly a meeting of all minds if we agree to leave exemptions under the law just as they are and remove from the law the thing that has been causing irritation and dissatisfaction, to wit, the removal of the language "within the area of production."

Let me call attention to the fact that that language has been removed from the bill as thus far adopted under section 3, by adopting the amendment of the committee and my amendment, if agreed to, will eliminate the controversy and will eliminate the necessity of continued amendment and leave the existing law, without either limiting or expanding the exemptions, and eliminate the controversial language and the thing that has caused the trouble, to wit "within the area of production," and I trust my amendment may be adopted.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Time has been fixed according to the number of amendments pending, and no time was reserved for the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. BLAND. Then, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Such a unanimous consent cannot be granted where a limitation of time has been made.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. WHITTINGTON) there were—ayes 19, noes 52.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 15 strike out subsection (12) of Section 5 (b) which reads as follows: "or (12) any employee employed in the cleaning, packing, grading, or preparing fresh fruits and fresh vegetables in their raw or natural state when such operations are performed immediately off the farm", and substitute therefor the following: "or (12) any employee employed in the handling, cleaning, preparing, grading, packing, packaging, or storing of fresh fruits or vegetables in their raw or natural state when such operations are performed prior to their delivery to a terminal market prepared for distribution for consumption."

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND] has already offered an amendment to take that language out of the bill.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I just wanted to have it appear that I offered the amendment anyway. I realize that the amendment is already covered, but not in the same way.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Georgia insist upon the point of order?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GROSS] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GROSS: Page 15, line 15, after the word "or", strike out the period and add the following: "manufacturing of cigars when the work is done by hand and wages are calculated on a piece-work basis."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GROSS] is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, it so happens that in my district the cigar business has been for many, many years one of the basic industries. Good or bad times in that district have depended upon the cigar business. It has paid more money in internal revenue taxes than any other one thing that we have. The work has always been on a piece-time basis, and the people work hours to satisfy themselves. They were paid for what they earned. The facts are that when a hundred young people went to learn the cigar business, about 90 percent of them were not fast enough to comply with the law. Ten percent of 80 percent, with a little effort can comply with the law. The balance cannot. Consequently a vast number of cigar makers are not able to make a living. It is true they cannot earn $2.50 a day. No young people are learning this trade. It is going out, due to competition and machine work. These people are getting old. They cannot do anything else and they only ask to be permitted to do the work they have always been doing.

They do not want to be on relief. If it is just a dollar and a half or two dollars a day that they can earn, it is either that or nothing. Hundreds of them have not anything to do. This exemption would grant that these people might continue to work as long as they can, and the thing will automatically go out. I cite an instance of eight men whose average age is 68 years. They had a little factory, and they earned less than a dollar a day, but when the law went into effect they had to quit, and went on relief. Well, those old men want to work on in that little shanty that they were working in, at their chosen profession. They want to be making their own living. It is a case of letting them work, or enforcing the law, and I do not believe that we can justify a law that will prevent a man from working to earn what he can. I earnestly hope that you will vote for this amendment. It means so much to the people who cannot do anything else.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. GROSS) there were—ayes 33, noes 51.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GWYNNE] has an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GWYNNE: Page 15, line 14, insert the following new paragraph:

"Section 13 (a) of such act is further amended by striking out clause (8) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"'(8) any employee employed in connection with the publication of any newspaper with a circulation of less than 5,000; or.'"

Mr. GWYNNE. Mr. Chairman, this is the same amendment that was adopted by the House last Tuesday. It has the endorsement of the National Editorial Association, which is an organization comprising some 16,000 weekly, semiweekly, and daily newspapers throughout the country.

Under the present law, as you will remember, the exemption extends to weeklies and semiweeklies having a circulation of less than 3,000. The purpose of this amendment is to include dailies which are published under substantially the same conditions as weeklies and semiweeklies, and to extend the exemption from 3,000 to 5,000.

The number of people that will be included under this amendment is small, of course. Most of the papers are now exempt. The purpose of the amendment is not to extend the exemption of the Wage and Hour Act. The purpose of it is to act justly by all people who are publishing newspapers under substantially the same conditions.

I trust this amendment will be adopted.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWYNNE. I yield.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Is it not a fact that under the present act in connection with these particular newspapers with circulation from 3,000 to 5,000, unemployment is created, rather than employment? To substantiate this statement may I read from a telegram received from the Marshall Daily Messenger supporting your proposed amendment?

MARSHALL, MINN., April 30, 1940.

Hon. H. CARL ANDERSEN,
Member of Congress,
House Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

Respectfully and sincerely urge that you support wage-hour amendment exempting all newspapers of 5,000 or less circulation. Forty-two-hour law is real hardship on papers in smaller communities. Creates unemployment instead of more employment due necessity cutting overhead and even jeopardizes existence as daily paper. With approximate hundred dollars monthly social-security payments and the hour law you can appreciate weight of burden in community this size. Thank you for your support.

MARSHALL DAILY MESSENGER.

Mr. GWYNNE. Yes, sir. There is no objection to the wage scale. These people are all receiving more than 30 cents an hour.

Mr. TALLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWYNNE. I yield.

Mr. TALLE. I want to reassert my support of the gentleman's amendment. There is no objection to the wage rate. But the hours provision of the law limits the operations of the small dailies and weeklies. Enactment of this amendment will increase employment.

Mr. GWYNNE. That is correct.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWYNNE. I yield.

Mr. JENSEN. This is a very good amendment, and I hope it will be adopted.

Mr. GWYNNE. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWYNNE. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. It is the penalty caused by the hours scale that brings trouble for these little newspapers?

Mr. GWYNNE. That is right.

Mr. DONDERO. And not the 30 cents an hour?

Mr. GWYNNE. That is true. They all receive more than 30 cents an hour.

Mr. DONDERO. But if they have to pay time and a half or double time they cannot meet it?

Mr. GWYNNE. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. DONDERO. And unemployment results from that condition?

Mr. GWYNNE. That is right.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GWYNNE].

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARLSON] is recognized.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. Chairman, in view of the adoption of the Gwynne amendment, I ask that my amendment be withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn.

There was no objection.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLAND: Page 16, line 4, after the word "tobacco", strike out the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following: "or (14) any employee employed in the cutting of timber for manufacture into lumber, or the manufacture, preparing for market, or marketing, or lumber (including handling or transportation in connection with or incidental to such operations) during any calendar year if his employer at no time during such calendar year employed in connection with or incidental to all such operations in the aggregate more than 15 employees."

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I shall take very little time on this amendment.

Here is the situation: We have small lumber mills which employ men who work on the farm and men who work in the canneries—part-time operators. When they cannot work on the farm they work in the mill and saw some of the lumber. Ninety percent of that lumber will be purely intrastate—sold in the county, but if 1 percent of the lumber cut is used to make staves and those staves are made into barrels and those barrels are used in interstate commerce, the regulation is that the entire operation is subject to the law. The result of it is that these small mills are closing down just by reason of that regulation, and yet they are doing from 90 to 99 percent an intrastate business.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. COX. A very large percentage of these small mills are operated by farmers themselves, in the sawing of trees on their own land?

Mr. BLAND. That is right. The same labor that works on the farm is used in these mills. What it does is increase labor and, believe me, what we need in this country is an increase of employment rather than a stoppage of employment.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Is this not substantially the same amendment that was approved by the House in the Barden bill?

Mr. BLAND. Yes; this is the same amendment that was approved in the Barden bill.

I ask for a vote on the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. RAMSPECK) there were ayes 45 and noes 53.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Virginia rise?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to amend the Bland amendment that was adopted by adding, after the word "preparing", where it first appears in that amendment, the words "or storing."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent that the Bland amendment be amended by adding, after the word "preparing", where it first appears, the words "or storing."

Mr. ROBERTSON. I suggest this amendment for the reason that 50 percent of the apples produced in this country, over 100,000,000 bushels average, are in storage on the 1st of December and stay in storage until they are gradually poured into the market, and they stay in storage at the expense of the farmer. Forty-two million bushels of potatoes for seed alone are in storage at the expense of the farmer until they come out in the spring and summer for seed.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, this was merely an inadvertent omission, was it not?

Mr. ROBERTSON. I understand so. It was in my amendment, but I could not get to it because of the Bland amendment.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Will the gentleman answer this question, Are those apples stored by the farmer? Do they still belong to the farmer?

Mr. ROBERTSON. For the most part. Sometimes they are stored by those who bought them from the farmer, but for the most part they are stored by the farmer, because he does not sell them except out of storage.

Mr. GEYER of California. I would like to ask the gentleman from Virginia if this takes more people out from under the Fair Labor Standards Act? If it does, I object.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I expect it takes some out.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia? (After a pause.) The Chair hears none and it is so ordered.

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KITCHENS: On page 16——

Mr. GEYER of California (interrupting the reading). Mr. Chairman, I objected to the unanimous consent request.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair put the inquiry at least twice and there was no objection raised.

Mr. GEYER of California. I very clearly objected.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman did not address the Chair properly if the gentleman did object.

The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KITCHENS: On page 16, line 4, strike out the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following:
"14. Or any employee while employed in connection with preventing, controlling, or suppressing forest, brush, or grass fires."

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Chairman, this is an amendment to section 13 (a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

There is a standard wage for fighting fires, and this wage is above the minimum wage under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

According to an opinion of the Wage and Hour Division, employment in the fighting of forest fires by an employer who is also engaged in commerce or the production of goods for commerce is subject to the limitations of the wage and hour law. It has been indicated recently that the Wage and Hour Division may reconsider and hold that such employment is too remote from commerce to be included in the coverage of the act. But even if the Wage and Hour Division regards such employment as not being under the act, there still remains a serious problem. According to interpretative bulletins and numerous opinions issued by the Division, the law does not permit a split workweek. If an employee is engaged in the production of goods for commerce in any part or hour of a workweek, all of his employment during that workweek is subject to the limitations of the act. So if an employee is called from his production employment to fight a forest fire and his total working hours on both occupations during the week is in excess of 42, he is entitled to overtime compensation according to the formula established by the Wage and Hour Division. Although a standard wage rate has been fixed for forest-fire fighting, which in some cases amounts only to one-half or even less of the regular rate of pay—but is still above the minimum wage requirement—according to this formula adopted by the Administrator, if an employee has already worked a full week at his regular employment and is called upon to work extra time at the end of the week in forest-fire fighting, he would be entitled to one and one-half times his regular production rate of pay. This frequently may amount to more than a dollar an hour. This premium wage for emergency forest-fire fighting should be eliminated. Experience has demonstrated that high wages for fighting forest fires encourages the deliberate setting of forest fires by some individuals who do not realize that a few days' pay may cost an entire community its source of livelihood.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from California withhold his motion for a moment?

Mr. WELCH. I withhold it, Mr. Chairman.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, for 5 days we have been considering this bill. It seems to me we are reaching a point with amendments, as far as the Committee on Labor is concerned, where it no longer makes any difference what further amendments are adopted.

I have just been called up by the Department of Labor to be told that, under the Bland amendment, over 1,000,000 more people would be exempted from the wage and hour provisions of the act. This, coupled with 200,000 exempted under the Buck amendment, leaves us practically no bill at all. Now, if any self-respecting Member of Congress can vote for such a bill, it is all right with me. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that if the Members have any further amendments to offer, that we remain here until they have been acted upon. The committee will not oppose any further amendments.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire how much time is left for debate on this section and all amendments thereto?

The CHAIRMAN. There are 7 minutes left on this section, and the Chair may say that there are seven or eight amendments to the other sections of the bill.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we cannot reach an agreement. It appears that we will go quite far into the evening if we try to complete this bill tonight. Would it be agreeable to the Members to agree to meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, when we go back into the House, and could we also agree that on the Norton substitute, the Norton bill, and all amendments thereto all debate close at 1 o'clock tomorrow?

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. TABER. I expect an amendment to be offered to the bill, which I feel is very important, and I wish to oppose it. I do not want to get into a situation where someone in favor of the amendment might have 5 minutes and the opposition be frozen out as a result of what might happen as we get to the consideration of that section. It would seem to me that a motion to close debate made fairly after the amendments are offered and a reasonable time given to discuss them would accomplish better results. I do not think we should proceed more than 10 minutes on an amendment. If we followed that rule, I believe it would be a little fairer, and we would get through just as quick.

Mr. RAYBURN. I find, after 6 days with this bill, that unless there are agreements it just goes on interminably so far as each section of the bill is concerned. This is the end of the sixth day of debate on this bill.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, suppose we had an agreement that there should be no more than 10 minutes' debate on any amendment offered to the Norton bill?

Mr. RAYBURN. Well, if 100 amendments were offered, that would run into some time. Of course, it is a long time between now and 11 o'clock tomorrow.

Mr. COX. Would the gentleman consider making the request that debate on all amendments close within 1 hour?

Mr. RAYBURN. I will do that; however, I made the request for 2 hours, and it seems to me that probably will not be agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I wonder if the gentleman could not guarantee the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] 5 minutes on the amendment to which he is opposed?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not know what the amendment is that will be offered and which he wishes to oppose.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. MILLER. There are Members, and I happen to be one of them, who have sat here through this 6 days of debate without taking a moment. I have an amendment pending on the desk. Would the gentleman give preference to amendments that are now pending on the desk and which have been lying there 3 days?

Mr. RAYBURN. That would be in the discretion of the chairman of the committee. I could not bind him on that.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. May I make the suggestion for the consideration of the House that with reference to the pending amendments it be agreed that there shall be 10 minutes on each amendment and that the total time shall expire at 1 o'clock tomorrow?

Mr. RAYBURN. That is agreeable to me.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HEALEY. How many amendments are pending on the desk right now?

The CHAIRMAN. There are 14 amendments pending to section 5 and the remaining sections of the bill.

Mr. HEALEY. That is the aggregate of all the amendments to the rest of the bill?

The CHAIRMAN. There are 15 now. One has come in since.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, 10 minutes to each amendment would only take 2 hours and 30 minutes.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, add an additional 10 minutes. I have another amendment to offer.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, if we proceeded for 15 minutes this evening, it would be possible to conclude in 2 hours and 15 minutes tomorrow.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Would it be agreeable to the gentleman from Texas and the gentleman from California who moved that the Committee rise to dispose of the pending section? We have agreed to limit debate on that section. There are 7 minutes remaining. You cannot get rid of amendments any quicker than that.

Mr. RAYBURN. That is agreeable with me.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I had an amendment pending on the desk. I wish to withdraw that amendment in favor of any gentleman who wants to take the time, as I have decided I shall take no further part in the debate on this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair may say that there are only two more amendments pending to this section and 7 minutes left so far as section 5 is concerned.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my request for the present.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Chairman, I renew my motion that the Committee do now rise.

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt the Committee divided; and there were—ayes, 81, noes 82.

So the motion was rejected.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MARTIN of Iowa: On page 15, after line 14, insert before the period and quotation mark a new clause, as follows:

"(2) Any individual employed by a corporation or association, the activities of such corporation being located outside of the corporate limits of any incorporated city or town, when not less than two-thirds of the capital investment of said corporation is in real and personal property used by it in its agricultural pursuits, when two-thirds of its employees are voting stockholders in said corporation, when no individual stockholder in such corporation may own or vote more than one share of voting stock owned by him at any stockholders' meeting, and when each holder of voting stock shares equally in the profits of the corporation after satisfaction of prior obligations; or."

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, this is the same amendment I offered last Tuesday and about which I entered explanatory remarks in the RECORD last Friday at page 5155, and on Tuesday at page 5265. There is no need of burdening the Committee at this time with a repetition of those arguments, except to say that the wage-hour law does not fit the standard of award or compensation of this particular group and those other groups like it which have been forced to comply with the wage-hour law by a ruling of the Wage and Hour Division.

The group in my district comprises about 1,500 farmers and processors who want to be exempted for the processing of their products. They operate their own processing plants and their own tract of land of some 26,000 acres. They take care of their own aged, their own sick, and their own needy. The measure or standard of compensation and hours set out in the wage-hour law just does not fairly fit their situation. I am submitting the amendment again in the hope that you will be fair with this particular group. I understand there are about 8 or 10 similar groups throughout the United States.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. STEFAN. Several Members would like to have a little further explanation as to just who these people are. Will the gentleman explain a little further?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I shall be pleased to explain in the limited time I have.

These people in my district form a society that was organized more than two centuries ago in Germany. They moved to New York State in 1842 and on to Iowa in 1854. They have been farming and processing their products on their own land. They take care of their own aged, their needy, their sick and disabled, and they are trying to get along on a basis that is hard to measure in terms of the wage and hour law. You will notice from a reading of the amendment that it is strictly limited so that it will not be easy for other groups to so organize for the purpose of circumventing the wage and hour law. I have purposely worded the amendment to avoid that.

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. KUNKEL. What was the vote on the amendment when it was previously considered?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. The amendment was adopted last Tuesday by a vote of 66 to 5, as I recall.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASE of South Dakota: On page 15, lines 13 and 14, before the words "at a guaranteed monthly salary of $200 or more;", insert at a guaranteed yearly salary of $1,500, or."

MINIMUM YEARLY WAGE EXEMPTION

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, it is not particularly necessary to take any time to explain this amendment other than to make a simple statement. The original Norton bill, as well as the Norton substitute, provide for the exemption under section 13 (a) of any employee employed—

At a guaranteed monthly salary of $200 or more.

My amendment does not disturb that, does not strike it out, but simply inserts ahead of it the words:

At a guaranteed yearly salary of $1,500 or—

And then the $200 monthly alternative follows.

The matter of increasing security by the establishment of an annual wage is a subject which everyone who has given any study at all to the labor problem understands. This amendment seeks to encourage employers in providing that security for a great many workers who get close to a yearly salary of $1,500 by granting an exemption from the act where that minimum yearly wage is guaranteed on the same basis as is proposed for the $200 monthly guaranteed salary in the Norton bills. Yearly job security is distinctly a step forward in social progress. I offer the amendment that the House may go on record on that particular point. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN: Page 15, lines 17 and 18, strike out "(10) any employee employed in the ginning of cotton" and insert "(10) to any individual employed in handling, packing, storing, ginning, compressing, pasteurizing, drying, preparing in their raw or natural state, or canning of agricultural or horticultural commodities for market, or in making cheese or butter or other dairy products."

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to leave the language of the existing law as it is, with the "area of production as defined by the Administrator" stricken out of the law. It is the same amendment as was offered by my colleague, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON], but his amendment unintentionally struck out the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND]. This amendment is absolutely necessary if we are going to clear up the confusion that exists in the Administrator's office over the definition of area of production. My amendment eliminates the area of production and definitely fixes the exemption provided in existing law according to the original intent of the House, and it should be adopted unanimously. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HARRINGTON: On page 15, lines 13 and 14, strike out "or any employee employed at a guaranteed monthly salary of $200 or more; or" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "or any employee employed at a guaranteed monthly salary in excess of that required by section 6 of this act who does not work more than 175 hours per month; or."

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I believe it is sufficient to say that this amendment is the same one that was adopted when we were considering the Barden bill the other day. The effect of this amendment is to substitute for an exemption based on a minimum guaranteed monthly salary an exemption based upon maximum monthly hours, which, as I understand, is what the members of the committee I talked with were in favor of. It is applicable only to employees who receive compensation in excess of the maximum hourly rate fixed in the act and who are paid monthly on a guaranteed salary basis. In effect it would permit the averaging of the working hours of such employees over a monthly period instead of only a weekly period as now permitted under the act. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HARRINGTON].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Is this amendment worded so that it would destroy the amendment previously adopted?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would say that that is a matter of construction, and there might be quite a difference of opinion about it.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, a further parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. For the purpose of getting a ruling from the Chair, may I ask whether a point of order would lie against the amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. Not at this time. The time has passed for a point of order to be made against the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HOBBS) there were—ayes 11, noes 29.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MOTT: Page 16, after the word "tobacco", in line 4, insert the following: "(14) or any employee while employed in connection with preventing, controlling, or suppressing forest fires."

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that a similar amendment has already been passed upon by the Committee.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, the amendment that was voted on a few moments ago in the Committee exempted from the operations of this bill those engaged in the prevention or controlling of forest fires or brush fires or grass fires. The amendment that I now offer confines the exemption to those employed in the prevention or the control of forest fires alone. The reason for this amendment is the same, of course, as it was for the other one, and that is that under the present act the owners of timber and the State and the Federal Governments are required to pay so much for forest-fire fighting that we cannot even afford to put out the fires in the States where these forests exist.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

The gentleman's amendment eliminates several of the features that were embodied in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas, and the Chair therefore overrules the point of order.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Has permission been granted for all Members to extend their remarks in the RECORD on this bill?

The CHAIRMAN. No such general permission has been granted.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. Chairman, I am wondering if it would not simplify the matter if I should ask, and I do now ask, unanimous consent that all Members be permitted to extend their remarks in the RECORD on this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Washington that such a request should be made in the House.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if it would not simplify matters at this point if I should state now that I shall make this request after the Committee rises.

The CHAIRMAN. That is a matter for the gentleman to consider when the Committee goes back into the House.

Are there any other amendments to section 5? [After a pause.] If not, we pass to section 6.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I think it is quite apparent now to the Committee that no one here knows just what this legislation contains at the present moment. When we go back into the House the parliamentary situation will be such that we will be unable to secure a separate vote upon the amendments to the Norton amendment. This means that we will have to vote yea or nay upon a piece of legislation that hardly a single Member of this body knows anything about. I confess that I do not, and I do not think there is anyone here who would be able to vote intelligently upon this bill if it were reported back to the House. There are many provisions of this bill which make it impossible for a great many of us to vote for it. We were anxious to cooperate and to vote for legislation that might offer certain corrective measures with regard to a more efficient administration of the Wage and Hour Act and probably adjust certain matters, but the bill we have now is something that those of us who have any regard for the humanitarian purposes of the original Wage and Hour Act cannot in conscience support, and I think it would be fitting for this bill to be taken again by the committee, reconsidered, and then have the committee offer legislation to the House with a rule that everyone would understand and everyone could accept some responsibility for, with regard to whether they would vote yea or nay. I hope the House will pass this motion at this time. [Applause.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I am one of the few who in the 6 days have said nothing at all until the present time. I do not expect to influence any votes or anything of that kind, but I do want to say a word. This is an unusual spectacle. We are in a bad way about this bill. It is a very serious thing. We came here to amend the wage-hour bill and make the law specific as to what it was intended to be. Labor standards since 1914 have been increased by 100 percent throughout the land, while the farm prices are not quite equal to the average of that 5-year period before the war. The unusual spectacle is that the whole committee is against the legislation.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. No; I cannot yield. The gentleman has talked a hundred times, and I have not talked at all before this. The committee was forced to bring this in by the Committee on Rules. The whole committee is against this legislation, and yet it was intended to correct what the Labor Administrator fastened on this country by interpretation. The men from San Francisco or the men from the heart of New York City and other places are running the Labor Committee and are running this bill, and it is a shame that the agricultural interests of the country have not what the law intended them to have and will not have unless we pass some kind of a bill like this.

This is the situation—and this is the first time I have ever seen this setting. The committee has encouraged the loading of the bill for 6 days. The committee has created the confusion. Members have honestly tried to arrive at something and give agriculture what the Administrator misinterpreted. I said when the act was passed the promoters intended to comprehend all labor regardless of State line or kind, while the first section of the act says labor engaged in interstate commerce. As the gentleman from Virginia says, if there is even one slat or lath in interstate commerce, according to the Administrator, that puts the whole lumber industry in—that is the bureaucrat interpretation. The farmers were to be exempted. We were given a very poor break. It is not becoming of organized labor that has doubled its own situation since the parity period of 5 years, when agriculture is not back there again, to say that they are going to extend this "humanitarian" thing, and we will make everybody raise their wages, jack them up. That is the difference between the New Deal and the progressiveness of Theodore Roosevelt. I spoke of that before. He was bent, and so were the old real progressives, in tearing down special privilege solely. The farmers did not ask for Government aid but they were against monopoly.

This thing creates monopoly. This will help snuff out the little fellows in industry in all the rural sections. That is the tendency of this committee, and its actions are to widen hours and wages. It has a tendency to crush out all little business in the interest of big business, that are above the act, in these big cities of San Francisco and New York. If there is any one thing that we could honestly do to help this country, it would be to dehydrate the labor standards of New York City. They are trying to thrust them on the rest of the country. We are not going to get anywhere I fear. But I do plead, let us take this thing, what is left of it, and hope that in the Senate or in conference we can get something, for nothing has come here from the committee except confusion. The Rules Committee had to force it out here, and then it went into the hands of wolves. They say it is loaded up. They loaded it up—they and their friends. Shame on you. That is what I have to say. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BRADLEY].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania) there were ayes 53 and noes 113.

So the motion was rejected.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on section 6 and all amendments thereto do now close.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on section 6 and all amendments thereto do now close. I understand there are no amendments pending to section 6.

The CHAIRMAN. There are no further pending amendments to section 5. There are several amendments pending to section 6.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the motion.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I understand that we have not acted on a single amendment to this section.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct. All debate on section 6 so far has been upon the motion by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BRADLEY].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. The motion is not in order until debate has been had on this section.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] is recognized to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DIRKSEN: On page 16, line 9, strike out the period and insert a comma and the following: "or (4) any employee employed during any calendar year in connection with or incidental to the wholesale distribution of goods by an employer, more than 50 percent of whose dollar sales volume during the preceding calendar year consisted of sales to retailers of agricultural food products."

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a motion?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. We have now completed section 5, and before we start on section 6 I move that the Committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield for that purpose?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield if it does not take me off the floor. May I be apprised of the status of the preferential motion just made?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois yielded to the gentleman from South Dakota to make a motion.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Contingent on the fact that it does not take me off the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. It does. If the motion carries, it certainly takes the gentleman off the floor. [Laughter.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Perhaps I should continue with this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, seldom does the House evince such generosity as has been manifested this afternoon. There have been adopted already 17 amendments: One each by Mr. BUCK, of California; by Mr. LUDLOW, of Indiana; by Mr. BARTON of New York; by Mr. KEEFE, of Wisconsin; by Mr. REED of New York; by Mr. ENGEL, of Michigan; by Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN, of Minnesota; by Mr. RAMSPECK, of Georgia; by Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska; by Mr. BLAND, of Virginia; by Mr. GWYNNE, of Iowa; by Mr. CARLSON, of Kansas; by Mr. MARTIN of Iowa; by Mr. CASE of South Dakota; by Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN, of Minnesota; and by Mr. MOTT, of Oregon.

Let me say here now that I do not pretend or presume to know what the implications of all these amendments are, but in this burst of generosity I see no reason why the House should not add amendment No. 18 to this bill. It was offered in the course of the deliberations on the Barden substitute and carried with virtually no opposition. It is designed to cover the small wholesale grocers. Everyone knows that retailers are now exempted under the provisions of this act, and, perforce, they can get no service except from the small wholesale grocers under the decentralized system of distribution that has grown up in the country.

This amendment is designed only to relieve such wholesale grocers from the provisions of section 7 of the basic act with respect to maximum hours. It in no wise affects the pay schedule.

So I submit that this amendment should be adopted to conform to the action taken on the Barden substitute, and also to make this measure more workable if and when it is ultimately adopted.

I repose it within your good graces. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all amendments on the Clerk's desk be considered as read and adopted and printed in the RECORD at this point.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. KITCHENS] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KITCHENS: On page 16, line 9, after the word "Act", insert a semicolon and the following: "or for foremen having the right to hire or fire, or recommend hiring and firing, the service, maintenance, and other workers not engaged strictly in the production of goods for commerce."

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is designed to provide a limited exemption from the maximum-hours provisions of the act, but not from the minimum-wage provisions. To give production employees opportunity to get a full week's work every week, which almost uniformly they want to have, it is necessary that certain other employees be available a few extra hours each week. Maintenance and service workers must keep the plant in operating condition.

In its present form, as interpreted by the Administrator, the wage and hour law is applied to many employees not engaged in the production of goods for commerce. It is generally neither necessary nor desirable to exempt such employees from the minimum-wage provisions. Most of such workers are already paid substantially more than the minimum wage. But the application of the maximum-hours provision has seriously curtailed the earning power, not only of these workers but of the production employees, who cannot work a full 42-hour week unless repair and maintenance workers and others of that general character are permitted to work a longer week.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The amendment was rejected.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. RAYBURN] having resumed the chair, Mr. PARSONS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 5435) to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, had come to no resolution thereon.

AMENDMENTS TO THE HATCH ACT

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Mexico?

There was no objection.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, the Members seem to be in doubt as to the hour of meeting tomorrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. No hour of meeting has been agreed to except as provided by the rules, 12 o'clock.

The gentleman from New Mexico is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, great confusion exists with reference to the vote of the Judiciary Committee on yesterday. The report in the newspapers states there were 14 votes to table the Hatch amendments, and 10 against tabling. Since that time the members of the committee have largely made it known how they voted, as I understand was their privilege. Some 14 have declared to the press, and to me, that they voted not to table. I know the members of the Judiciary Committee. They are men of great ability and integrity. Certainly, I would not question any of them, but I wonder if an honest mistake was probably not made by the tellers, and if it would not be in order to have a recapitulation of the vote? [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. MANSFIELD submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 6264), an act to authorize the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

HOUR OF MEETING TOMORROW

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we have sat here until 6 o'clock this evening. Had that request been made at 5 o'clock I would not have objected. The Rules Committee has an important meeting tomorrow. Under the circumstances, Mr. Speaker, I must object.

AMENDMENTS TO FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments that have not been acted upon, pending at the Clerk's desk, to the bill H. R. 5435, to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, be printed in the RECORD for the information of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The following amendments are pending to the bill H. R. 5435, to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938:

Amendment proposed by Mr. BARTON of New York to the Committee amendment: Page 16, line 5, after "Sec. 6." insert "(a)", and after line 9, insert the following:

"(b) Section 13 (c) of such act is amended by striking out 'employed in agriculture' and inserting in lieu thereof 'employed in any of the operations described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of the definition of agriculture.'"

Amendment offered by Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts: Page 16, line 9, after the word "Act" change the period to a semicolon and insert: "or (4) any employee who is employed by or in any bona fide wholesale establishment."

Amendment offered by Mr. MILLER: Page 16, line 9, after end of line 9, insert "employees of all banks and trust companies."

Amendment offered by Mr. REES of Kansas: Page 16, line 9, section 6, strike out the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following: "or (4) any employee employed in any incorporated bank or trust company whose capital stock does not exceed $100,000."

Amendment offered by Mr. BARTON of New York: Page 18, after line 23, insert a new section as follows:

"Section 15 of the act is amended by adding a new paragraph immediately after paragraph (b) to read and to be lettered as follows:

"'(c) No employer, agent, contractor, or subcontractor (as such terms are defined by the Administrator, or his authorized representative), directly or indirectly, shall cause any goods to be produced by home workers in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands subject to the provisions of section 6, unless he shall hold a certificate issued by the Administrator, or his authorized representative. The Administrator, or his authorized representative, shall have power to make such regulations or orders, including regulations or orders providing for the issuance and revocation of such certificates, and for standards restricting the number of such agents, contractors, or subcontractors, as are necessary or appropriate to safeguard to home workers in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands the minimum rates of pay provided by section 6. Such regulations or orders may require the posting of a compliance bond with the Administrator in an amount of not more than $2,500. This subsection shall take effect upon the expiration of 60 days from the date of its enactment.'"

An amendment offered by Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri: Page 20, after line 6, following the period, insert the following new section:

"In order to protect the standards prescribed by this act, 5 days, or 40 hours within any one 5-day week, shall constitute the workweek for all officers and employees of the Federal Government and the District of Columbia (including the officers and employees of every corporation created by authority of an act of Congress which is controlled or owned by the United States Government, whether or not such officers and employees are paid from funds appropriated by Congress), except the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States.

"Any officer or employee whose workweek is defined in the preceding paragraph shall be permitted to work in excess of 5 days or 40 hours in any one 5-day workweek upon certification in writing to the Bureau of the Budget by the head of the department, independent establishment, or other agency in which such officer or employee serves that the public interest, or an emergency, requires such additional service and that no suitable substitute is available. In any such case, the officer or employee shall, at the election of the head of such department, establishment, or agency either be paid for such additional service at the rate of one and one-half times the hourly rate of pay received by such officer or employee, whether paid on a per annum, per diem, hourly, piece-work, or any other basis, or be allowed compensatory leave of absence without loss of pay, equal to one and one-half times the period during which such additional service was performed: Provided, That in all cases in which such additional service is elected to be compensated by payment of funds, such compensation shall be made on or before the second regular date of salary payment following the performance of such additional service: Provided further, That in all cases in which such additional service is elected to be compensated by the allowance of compensatory leave of absence without loss of pay, such leave shall be added to the amount of annual leave to which the officer or employee is otherwise entitled and shall be subject to all of the rules and regulations now or hereafter pertaining to the grant of annual leave, except that employees in the Postal Service who have heretofore been entitled to compensatory leave of absence for service performed on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays, and who so elect, shall continue to receive such compensatory leave of absence, subject to the terms of this section, on 1 day within 5 working days next succeeding the day on which such excess service is performed or compensatory leave granted, when granted for work performed on the preceding Saturday, Sunday, or holiday: And provided further, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to overtime services performed by Federal employees at the expense of private interests according to law.

"Nothing in this section shall be construed to increase the number of hours of work in any day or week heretofore required of any officer or employee.

"All acts and parts of acts applicable to the personnel affected by this section which are in conflict with the provisions herein contained are hereby repealed."

Amendment offered by Mr. SUMNERS of Texas: On page 21, line 2, after the word "government", insert the following: "or to commodities manufactured in any State penal or correctional institution for use by any other State or political subdivision thereof; to parts for the repair of farm machinery; or to agricultural commodities."

Amendment offered by Mr. NORRELL: On page 21, line 2, after the period, insert the following: "Nothing herein shall apply to cotton and cottonseed grown or raised by convicts or prisoners."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks regarding the Townsend plan.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I have introduced a bill which if made a law would simplify the financing of pump irrigation on farms in the drought area. Due to prolonged drought, farmers over a wide territory are becoming more and more water-conservation minded. Much of the good land in the drought areas will never be within reach of irrigation districts. In many places pump irrigation is both feasible and efficient.

At the present time irrigation wells and pumps are financed by private sources and by the Farm Security Administration. This means by the note and mortgage method. It is cumbersome and expensive to administer. There are some losses. The present method does not extend the payments over a long enough period to enable the farmer to carry the burden together with his other obligations.

But perhaps the greatest criticism of the present method of financing pump irrigation is that such a small percentage of the farmers can qualify. If their land is already mortgaged they cannot give a real-estate mortgage. If they mortgage their personal property the notes fall due too quick, the interest is high, and their hands are tied, and it will probably shut off all avenues for available credit for their general farming operations.

The plan I propose would call for an amendment to the Federal Water Facilities Act, and would also call for an enabling act by the State legislatures in the States where this plan was undertaken. The owner of a farm desiring to secure a pump and well would make his application in the usual manner. If the Water Facilities Board and the proper State authorities approve his farm for such a plan of irrigation, money would be advanced by the Federal Government to pay for the well and pump. The cost would be repaid by the farmer in 20 annual installments without interest. The Bureau of Reclamation has financed irrigation projects over a period of 40 years, but a pump-irrigating system would not last that long, and I believe 20 years is about correct.

The Water Facilities Board would then certify the cost of the well and pump to the county clerk and the county treasurer, or any other taxing authorities in the county wherein the farm was located. The local taxing authorities, and in my State it would be the county clerk and the county treasurer, would then levy a tax or a special approvement assessment against the particular farm involved for the annual payments above referred to. There would be no note or mortgage to ever be foreclosed. The asset of the pump irrigating system would follow the land, and likewise the liability for the payment of the irrigation system would also follow the land. The Federal Government would be secured by the first tax lien for the repayment of the full amount. In no case should the loan for the pump irrigation system exceed the assessed value of the land before the irrigating system was installed. The security of the Federal Government would be guilt-edge, at the same time the farmer would be able to give a first lien regardless of other existing indebtedness.

I believe that this plan would be in accord with sound public policy. At the present time our law sanctions special improvement taxes for such items as sidewalks, paving, sewer systems, drainage, and irrigation. In the case of all of these special improvement taxes come ahead of any real-estate mortgage on the property involved. Many of these special improvements are not wealth producing, but pump irrigation is a means of increasing wealth. It would be up to the Water Facilities Board and the State department of irrigation to prevent the undertaking of unsound and unwise individual projects.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech by the gentleman from New York, the Honorable JAMES W. WADSWORTH, made over the Columbia Broadcasting System last night.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'BRIEN]?

There was no objection.

THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS]?

There was no objection.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, the President wants to put the Civil Aeronautics Authority back under the Department of Commerce.

Here is what the Senate Committee on Commerce, after investigation of the old Bureau of Air Commerce, concluded:

> * * * good men were dismissed from the Bureau for political reasons. * * *
>
> * * * personnel and financial control is outside the Bureau and in the hands of administrative assistants to the Secretary of Commerce, thereby embarrassing the Director (of the Bureau).
>
> The Bureau does not prepare its annual estimate efficiently for presentation before congressional committees.
>
> The charge is made * * * that the efficiency of the Bureau of Air Commerce had been seriously impaired by politics. This charge is confirmed. * * *

Are these the objects the President has in mind in his reorganization scheme: To dismiss good men from the C. A. A. for political reasons; to embarrass the C. A. A. by taking from it personnel and financial control; to take budgetary powers from the C. A. A.; to put politics back into the supervision of aviation?

AMENDMENTS TO THE FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT OF 1938

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I have been asked by several members of the committee, who are in great confusion about the amendments that have been adopted today, to have those amendments printed in the RECORD so that they may be able to understand what they are doing when they vote on the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All of the amendments that have been offered will appear in the RECORD tomorrow morning.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Would it be possible to have the Norton substitute printed in the RECORD with the amendments that have been adopted in their proper place, so that we may see the nature of the bill as it is now?

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, that is exactly what I intended. I hope this may be done, so that the Members will know what they are voting on, and I make that unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The committee amendment as amended in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union is as follows:

[Omit matter in brackets and insert matter printed in italics.]

Sec. 1. Section 3 (f) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended to read as follows:

"'Agriculture' includes farming in all its branches and includes all services performed—

"(1) On a farm, in the employ of any person, in connection with cultivating the soil, or in connection with raising or harvesting any agricultural or horticultural commodity, including the raising, shearing, feeding, caring for, training, and management of livestock, bees, poultry, and fur-bearing animals and wildlife.

"(2) In the employ of the owner or tenant or other operator of a farm, in connection with the operation, management, conservation, improvement, or maintenance of such farm and its tools and equipment, or in salvaging timber or clearing land of brush and other debris left by a hurricane, if the major part of such service is performed on a farm.

"(3) In connection with the production or harvesting of maple sirup or maple sugar or any commodity defined as an agricultural commodity in section 15 (g) of the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended, or in connection with the raising or harvesting of mushrooms, or in connection with the hatching of poultry, or in connection with the ginning of cotton, or in connection with the operation or maintenance of ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways used exclusively for supplying and storing water for farming purposes.

"(4) In handling, planting, drying, packing, packaging, processing, freezing, grading, storing, or delivering to storage or to market or to a carrier for transportation to market, any agricultural or horticultural commodity; but only if such service is performed as an incident to ordinary farming operations or, in the case of fruits and vegetables, as an incident to the preparation of such fruits or vegetables for market. The provisions of this paragraph shall not be deemed to be applicable with respect to service performed in connection with commercial canning or commercial freezing or in connection with any prepared agricultural or horticultural commodity after its delivery to a terminal market for distribution for consumption.

"As used in this subsection, the term 'farm' includes stock, dairy, poultry, fruit, fur-bearing animal, and truck farms, plantations, ranches, nurseries, ranges, greenhouses or other similar structures used primarily for the raising of agricultural or horticultural commodities, and orchards."

That section 5 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(e) No industry committee appointed under subsection (a) of this section shall have any power to recommend the minimum rate or rates of wages to be paid under section 6 to any employees in Puerto Rico or in the Virgin Islands. Notwithstanding any other provision of this act, the Administrator may appoint a special industry committee to recommend the minimum rate or rates of wages to be paid under section 6 to all employees in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, or in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, or the Administrator may appoint separate industry committees to recommend the minimum rate or rates of wages to be paid under section 6 to employees therein engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce in particular industries. An industry committee appointed under this subsection shall be composed of residents of such island or islands where the employees with respect to whom such committee was appointed are employed and residents of the United States outside of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. In determining the minimum rate or rates of wages to be paid, and in determining classifications, such industry committees and the Administrator shall be subject to the provisions of section 8 and no such committee shall recommend, nor shall the Administrator approve, a minimum wage rate which will give any industry in Puerto Rico or in the Virgin Islands a competitive advantage over any industry in the United States outside of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands."

(b) No wage orders issued by the Administrator prior to the enactment of this Act pursuant to section 8 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 shall after such enactment be applicable with respect to any employees engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands.

SEC. 2. (a) Section 6 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(c) The provisions of paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of subsection (a) of this section shall be superseded in the case of any employee in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce only for so long as and insofar as such employee is covered by a wage order issued by the Administrator pursuant to the recommendations of a special industry committee appointed pursuant to section 5 (e)."

(b) Section 6 (a) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(5) If such employee is a home worker in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, not less than the minimum piece rate prescribed by regulation or order; or, if no such minimum piece rate is in effect, any piece rate adopted by such employer which shall yield, to the proportion or class of employees prescribed by regulation or order, not less than the applicable minimum hourly wage rate. Such minimum piece rates or employer piece rates shall be commensurate with, and shall be paid in lieu of, the minimum hourly wage rate applicable under the provisions of this section. The Administrator, or his authorized representative, shall have power to make such regulations or orders as are necessary or appropriate to carry out any of the provisions of this paragraph, including the power without limiting the generality of the foregoing, to define any operation or occupation which is performed by such home-work employees in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands; to establish minimum piece rates for any operation or occupation so defined; to prescribe the method and procedure for ascertaining and promulgating minimum piece rates and to prescribe standards for employer piece rates, the proportion or class of employees who shall receive not less than the minimum hourly wage rate; and to define the term 'home worker'."

Sec. 3. Section 7 (b) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended in paragraph (2) by striking out the words "two thousand" and substituting the words "two thousand and eighty."

SEC. 3. Section 7 (c) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended to read as follows:

"(c) No employer shall be deemed to have violated subsection (a) by employing any employee for a workweek in excess of that specified in such subsection without paying the compensation for overtime employment prescribed therein if such employee is so employed in connection with the—

[(1) making of dairy products (except ice-cream mix, ice cream, malted milk, and processed cheese), including, among other things, the cooling, pasteurizing, printing, or packing thereof;] (1) making cheese or butter or other dairy products;

"(2) compressing or storing of cotton;

"(3) processing of sugar beets, sugar-beet molasses, sugarcane, or maple sap into sugar, molasses, or sirup, but not the refining of sugar;

"(4) extracting (but not fermenting or refining) oils, juices, or sirups from domestic fruits, vegetables, nuts, or seeds;

"(5) preparing, cleaning, grading, packing, drying, refrigerating, freezing, preserving, peeling, shelling, storing, or canning fresh [or dried] fruits and vegetables[, but not when those operations are performed at a terminal establishment;] nor when such products consist wholly or in chief volume of perishable or seasonal fruits or vegetables, including dried fruits, or in handling or transportation in connection with or incidental to such operations, the provisions of subsection (a), during a period or periods of not more than sixteen workweeks in the aggregate in any calendar year, shall not apply to his employees in any place of employment where he is engaged;

"(6) preparing, cleaning, grading, packing, roasting, crushing, shelling, or storing nuts, shelled or unshelled[, but not when those operations are performed at a terminal establishment];

"(7) preparing, curing, grading, or bagging raw grease wool, mohair, or rabbit fur;

[(8) handling, grading, loading, slaughtering, or dressing livestock;]

"(9) handling, storing, grading, slaughtering, refrigerating, picking, dressing, or packing poultry[, but not when those operations are performed at a terminal establishment];

"(10) handling, storing, grading, candling, freezing, drying, or packing of eggs[, but not when those operations are performed at a terminal establishment];

"(11) hatching, handling, or boxing chicks, poults, ducklings, goslings, or wild fowl;

"(12) handling, grading, cleaning, polishing, hand-picking, hulling, delinting, fumigating, drying, packing, or storing of whole seeds, beans, peas, potatoes, or grains [but not when those operations are performed at a terminal establishment]:

"(13) handling, drying, baling, grinding, decorticating, or packing hops, fiber crops, or forage crops;

"(14) preparing honey;

"(15) handling, grading, or packing nursery or horticultural stock; or

"(16) the felling of trees, logging, or operations incidental to the felling of trees or logging performed prior to, and including, delivery of the logs to a mill for sawing, making pulp, or other processing; and if such employee receives compensation for employment in excess of sixty hours in any workweek at a rate not less than one and one-half times the regular rate at which he is employed. In the case of an employer engaged in any of the operations specified in paragraphs (1) to (16), inclusive, of this subsection, the provisions of subsection (a), during a period or periods of not more than fourteen workweeks in the aggregate in any calendar year, shall not apply to his employees in any place of employment where he is so engaged. As used in this subsection, the term 'terminal establishment' means an establishment which [(1) is located either in the urban area where the products are to be consumed or at transportation centers for the purpose of servicing consumer markets, (2)] (1) receives the major portion of its goods from other establishments at which such goods have been previously concentrated or prepared, and [(3)] (2) distributes its goods to wholesalers, retailers, consumers, or manufacturers. In the case of an employer engaged in the grading, loading, slaughtering, or dressing of livestock, or preparing products therefrom at the packing plant, or in handling or transportation in connection with or incidental to such operations, the provisions of subsection (a) shall not apply to any employee, during a period or periods of not more than fourteen workweeks in the aggregate in any calendar year selected from time to time as to each employee by the employer, in any establishment where the employer is engaged in any of said operations."

Strike out clauses (1) and (2) of Subsection (b) of Section 7 of the Act and substitute in lieu thereof the following:

"(1) In pursuance of an agreement guaranteeing continuous employment for 26 consecutive weeks, which agreement shall provide that no employee employed thereunder shall work more than 1040 hours in said period: Provided, however, that such agreement shall operate uniformly as to commencement and end of such 26-week period for all employees employed thereunder: Provided further, that such agreement must be on file in the applicable regional office of the Wage and Hour Division and approved by the Administrator before it shall become operative.

"(2) On an annual basis in pursuance of an agreement guaranteeing continuous employment for 52 consecutive weeks which agreement provides that no employee employed thereunder shall work more than 2080 hours in said period: Provided, however, that such agreement shall operate uniformly as to commencement and end of such 52-week period for all employees employed thereunder; Provided further, that such agreement must be on file in the applicable regional office of the Wage and Hour Division and approved by the Administrator before it shall become operative."

SEC. 4. (a) The heading of section 11 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following: "; rules and regulations".

(b) Section 11 of such act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(d) The Administrator shall have power to make, issue, amend, and rescind such regulations and orders as are necessary or appropriate to carry out any of the provisions of this act. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, such regulations and orders may define terms used in this act, make special provision with respect to, including the restriction of, and the piece rates to be paid for, homework subject to this act to the extent necessary to safeguard the minimum standards provided in this act or in any regulation or order issued pursuant thereto, and make special provision for voluntary constant wage plans consistent with the purposes of section 7. The regulations and orders of the Administrator shall be published in the Federal Register and shall be effective upon publication or at such later date as the Administrator shall direct.

"(e) No provision of this act imposing any liability or disability shall apply to any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any regulation or order of the Administrator, notwithstanding that such regulation or order may, after such act or omission, be amended or rescinded or be determined by judicial authority to be invalid for any reason."

SEC. 5. (a) Section 13 (a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended by striking out all of clause (1) and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "(1) any employee employed in a bona fide executive, administrative, professional, or local retailing capacity, or in the capacity of outside salesman, or any employee employed at a guaranteed yearly salary of $1,500 or at a guaranteed monthly salary of $200 or more; or (2) any individual employed by a corporation or association, the activities of such corporation being located outside the corporate limits of any incorporated city or town, when not less than two-thirds of the capital investment of said corporation is in real and personal property used by it in its agricultural pursuits, when two-thirds of its employees are voting stockholders in said corporation, when no individual stockholder in such corporation may own or vote more than one share of voting stock owned by him at any stockholders' meeting and when each holder of voting stock shares equally in the profits of the corporation after satisfaction of prior obligation; or".

Section 13 (a) of such act is further amended by striking out clause (8) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

(8) any employee employed in connection with the publication of any newspaper with a circulation of less than 5,000; or

(b) Section 13 (a) of such Act is further amended by striking out clause (10) and inserting in lieu thereof the following: [("(10) any employee employed in the ginning of cotton] or (10) to any individual employed in handling, packing, storing, ginning, compressing, pasteurizing, drying, preparing in their raw or natural state, or canning of agricultural or horticultural commodities for market, or, in making cheese or butter or other dairy products; or (11) any switchboard operator, during any calendar year, employed in a public telephone exchange which at all times during the preceding calendar year had less than five hundred stations; or [(12) any employee employed in the cleaning, packing, grading, or preparing fresh fruits and fresh vegetables in their raw or natural state when such operations are performed immediately off the farm; or] (12) any employee employed in the cleaning, packing, grading or preparing or storing fresh fruits and fresh vegetables in their raw or natural state; or any employee employed in the canning, processing, freezing, or preserving of any product consisting wholly or in chief volume of perishable or seasonal fruits or vegetables, including dried fruits, or in handling or transportation in connection with or incidental to such operations to the extent any employee is so engaged (13) any employee employed in handling, tying, drying, stripping, grading, redrying, fermenting, stemming, or packing, when those operations are performed prior to storage, and storing leaf tobacco; or (14). Any employee while employed in connection with preventing, controlling, or suppressing forest fires."

SEC. 6. Section 13 (b) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: "; or (3) any employee of an employer subject to the provisions of part I of the Railway Labor Act ; or (4) any employee employed during any calendar year in connection with or incidental to the wholesale distribution of goods by an employer, more than 50 percent of whose dollar sales volume during the preceding calendar year consisted of sales to retailers of agricultural food products."

SEC. 7. (a) The heading of section 14 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following: "; Home work in rural areas."

(b) Section 14 of such act is amended (1) by inserting "(a)" after "SEC. 14."; (2) by striking out "learners, of apprentices, and of messengers employed exclusively in delivering letters and messages," and inserting in lieu thereof "learners and of apprentices,"; and (3) by adding at the end thereof a new sentence as follows: "The Administrator may by regulation or order provide for the employment of telegraph messengers engaged primarily in the delivery of letters and messages at such wages (but not less than 25 cents per hour) lower than the minimum wage applicable under section 6 as will prevent curtailment of opportunities for such employment with a public telegraph carrier."

(c) Section 14 of such Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(b) The Administrator shall promulgate regulations permitting the employment, in rural areas, of employees in the home at such wages lower than the minimum wage applicable under section 6, and containing such provisions governing the piece rate to be paid, the time of day during which such work shall be performed, and such other provisions, as the Administrator may prescribe. No such regulation shall be promulgated with respect to any employees (1) if in the opinion of the Administrator the application of section 6 to such employees does not have the effect of curtailing the opportunities of such employees for employment; (2) if the promulgation of such regulation would in the opinion of the Administrator have the effect of curtailing employment in the factories or industrial establishments, if any, in which similar work is performed; or (3) if the promulgation of such regulation would in the opinion of the Administrator give the employer or employers of such employees a substantial competitive advantage."

SEC. 8. Section 15 (a) (1) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended by striking out the first semicolon therein and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and the following: "or issued to carry out any provision of section 6 or section 7, except that no provision of this Act shall impose any liability upon any person for violating any of the provisions of this section if such person, in a proceeding brought to impose such liability, establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that at the time he acquired a property interest in the goods transported, offered for transportation, shipped, delivered, or sold, or sold with knowledge that shipment or delivery or sale thereof in commerce was intended, he had no knowledge or reason to believe that such goods were produced in violation of any of the provisions of section 6 or section 7, or in violation of any regulation or order of the Administrator issued under section 14, or issued to carry out any provision of section 6 or section 7; and".

SEC. 9. Section 15 (a) (2) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(2) to violate any of the provisions of section 6 or section 7, or any of the provisions of any regulation or order of the Administrator issued under section 14, or any of the provisions contained, pursuant to section 8 (f), in any order of the Administrator issued under section 8, or any of the provisions of any regulation or order of the Administrator issued to carry out any provision of section 6 or section 7;".

SEC. 10. The first sentence of section 16 (b) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended to read as follows: "Any employer who violates any provision of section 6 or section 7, or any provision prescribing minimum wages or minimum piece rates contained in any regulation or order of the Administrator issued under section 14, or any provision prescribing minimum piece rates contained in any regulation or order of the Administrator issued under section 11 (d), shall be liable to the employee or employees affected in the amount of their unpaid minimum compensation, or their unpaid minimum overtime compensation, as the case may be, and in an additional equal amount as liquidated damages."

SEC. 11. Section 17 (including the heading thereof) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS

"SEC. 17. The district courts of the United States, including the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, and the United States courts of the Territories and possessions, shall have jurisdiction, for cause shown, and subject to the provisions of section 17 (relating to notice to opposite party) of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 28, sec. 381), to restrain violations of section 15. Any such action may be brought in the district wherein the defendant is found or is an inhabitant or transacts business, and process in such cases may be served in any other district of which the defendant is an inhabitant or wherever the defendant may be found. No costs shall be assessed against the Administrator in any proceeding under this act."

SEC. 12. The Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"PROHIBITION AGAINST INTERSTATE TRANSPORTATION OF CONVICT-MADE GOODS

"SEC. 20. In order to protect the minimum wage and maximum hours standards prescribed in sections 6 and 7, it shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to transport or cause to be transported, in any manner or by any means whatsoever, or aid or assist in obtaining transportation for or in transporting any goods, wares, and merchandise manufactured, produced, or mined wholly or in part by convicts or prisoners (except convicts or prisoners on parole or probation), or in any penal or reformatory institution, from one State, Territory, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, or District of the United States, or place noncontiguous but subject to the jurisdiction thereof, or from any foreign country, into any State, Territory, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, or District of the United States, or place noncontiguous but subject to the jurisdiction thereof. Nothing herein shall apply to commodities manufactured in Federal penal and correctional institutions for use by the Federal Government. Any person who violates the provisions of this section shall be subject to the penalties provided by section 16 (a). The provisions of this section shall not be deemed to repeal or supersede any other act relating to the transportation or sale of goods made by convicts or prisoners."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter that I received this afternoon from the Secretary of Labor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. NORTON]?

There was no objection.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD concerning the motion-picture industry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an answer from the Nonsectarian League to the various defamatory statements that have been inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD by the gentleman from Montana [Mr. THORKELSON]. I have asked the Public Printer for an estimate and I am informed it will cost about $225 above the allowable amount.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH]?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, what league is this?

Mr. SABATH. The Nonsectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, Inc.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I am opposed to spending $200 of the taxpayers' money for the dissemination of the propaganda of this league, and I object.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an article by Governor Vanderbilt, of Rhode Island.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. SCHIFFLER]?

There was no objection.

Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an article from the Daily Times of Mamaroneck, N. Y.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. GAMBLE]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein certain letters which I have received.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH]?

There was no objection.

Mr. GRANT of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a radio address by Millard W. Rice, national legislative representative of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. GRANT]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial from the Birmingham News.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I further ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by a Member of this House over radio station KADA.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by including therein an editorial appearing in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin of May 1 regarding the broken promises and pledges of Pennsylvania's Governor, and in another extension to include an editorial appearing in the Evening Bulletin of Tuesday, April 23.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made in connection with the so-called Gwynne amendment adopted today and include therein a letter received from the Marshall News-Messenger.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, may I say to my friend the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SCHAFER] that although I do not know the nature of the material the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] desires to place in the RECORD, I can assure the gentleman from Wisconsin that I have personal knowledge of the league. It is a very substantial organization and is not one that is engaged in propaganda. The gentleman and I may not agree with everything that is inserted in the RECORD, but I can assure him that this organization, which I have addressed on several occasions, is not an organization for propaganda purposes.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Does the gentleman believe that this material should be placed in the RECORD in order to balance and keep the RECORD straight?

Mr. McCORMACK. I am not going to pass on that. I am particularly addressing myself to removing from the gentleman's mind—and I know that the gentleman is fair—any thought that this league is organized for propaganda purposes. It is a fine organization of Americans, and I can assure the gentleman that it is not engaged in propaganda.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Do I understand from the gentleman from Illinois that it is necessary to place this matter in the RECORD to answer something that has appeared in the RECORD in order to balance and keep the RECORD straight?

Mr. SABATH. The aim is to answer some of the many defamatory statements that have been placed in the RECORD by the gentleman from Montana [Mr. THORKELSON].

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. In view of that fact, and in view of the statement of the gentleman from Illinois and the statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts, I withdraw my objection, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. SABATH. I renew my request, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I did not at first contemplate asking unanimous consent that the statement of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, Inc., be printed. As will be noted, the statement of the league is dated April 22, 1940, and I received it a few days later and withheld asking unanimous consent for its insertion in the RECORD, feeling that the insertions of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. THORKELSON] should be ignored and not dignified by an answer. However, when my attention was called to his extensions in the RECORD on April 30, to which I alluded earlier today, I came to the conclusion that it was only fair that his continuous unwarranted and unjustified attacks on patriotic American citizens should not longer go unchallenged.

Personally, I am sorry for the gentleman from Montana for permitting himself to be made a tool on the part of designing men, some of whom have been on trial charged with subversive activities but who, by all that is right, should have been charged with outright treason. It goes against the grain to see well-meaning American citizens used by designing men who make a fat living preying on the credulity of old men and women, and who, notwithstanding that they have been indicted and convicted, still pursue their vicious propaganda. I repeat that I have particularly in mind such individuals as this man Pelley, leader of the Silver Shirts, and similar un-American propagandists, who for years, in conjunction with such men as Steele, Fritz Kuhn, and others of their ilk, and some directly or indirectly connected with the so-called Christian Front leadership now on trial in New York, have been trying to inflame the American people not only against the Jews, but also against the Catholics and the colored people of this country. I know that if any of these latter groups had been guilty of as much as 50 percent of their own activity and propaganda these very men would be demanding that they be tried for treason to the Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that, in the interest of justice and fair play, that all those who have read the Pelley, Mayne, and similar stuff will feel they owe it to themselves to read the statement of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, Inc., believing that if they do they will not contribute to or longer be deceived by these designing propagandists.

This organization which has been so viciously attacked in extension of remarks in the RECORD by the gentleman from Montana is composed of many of the most upright and outstanding Americans, as a list of its membership discloses beyond successful contradiction.

Mr. Speaker, the document that I desire to submit for the records of the House reads as follows:

NON-SECTARIAN ANTI-NAZI LEAGUE
TO CHAMPION HUMAN RIGHTS, INC.,
New York, April 22, 1940.

THE NON-SECTARIAN ANTI-NAZI LEAGUE TO CHAMPION HUMAN RIGHTS ANSWERS CONGRESSMAN J. THORKELSON OF MONTANA

This is in reply to the attack on the Non-Secretarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, which Mr. THORKELSON inserted in the Appendix of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, page 2013.

On March 4, 1940, Mr. THORKELSON addressed a meeting of the Christian Mobilizers at Ebling's Casino, One hundred and fifty-sixth Street and St. Ann's Avenue, Bronx, N. Y. At that meeting he expressed enthusiasm for and praised the Christian Mobilizers and their activities. He also promised to return and address their meetings again.

On March 26, 1940, at a meeting of the Christian Mobilizers, held at the Kiev Tavern, 316 East Fifty-fourth Street, New York City, "threats against the Non-Secretarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, and all those connected with it, were flying thick and fast. There was a bitter hatred against the league and physical violence was being threatened against the league and its investigators. M swore that he will not rest until he sees them under the sod."

On April 10, 1940, Mr. THORKELSON inserted his attack on the league in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, demanding that Congress do something about it. It may be a mere chronological coincidence that following the threats of the mobilizers, Mr. THORKELSON launched his attack on the league. We have no proof that "Joe McNazi," who arranged Mr. THORKELSON's coming to New York, induced him to make this attack, nor that "that sterling 200-percent American patriot" Pelley wrote the speech. We are willing to assume that it is a product of Mr. THORKELSON's own brain and that the arguments and misstatements are the products of his own ignorance of the facts. We will, therefore, attempt to correct the misstatements point by point.

The introductory remarks, which take up 2¾ columns of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, we will pass over lightly.

The statements that "the Government of a democracy is oligarchical, nonrepresentative, and ruled by force," and that "there are three democracies in Europe, namely Russia, Germany, and Italy, each under the leadership of a dictator," are literary and political gems that cannot be found in any political textbook. They must be his very own.

The real attack on the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights begins with a quotation from an editorial of the Washington Post (April 8, 1940). He quotes:

"Undercover political organizations have no place in a democracy * * * when any faction resorts to secret devices and intrigue it takes an unfair advantage of the system under which it is permitted to operate."

Then he states:

I agree with this statement, for no individual or group has any right to operate its own intelligence service, bureau of propaganda investigation, nor to engage in any other similar activities which are the duty of the State or the Federal Government. With this in mind, I shall ask the author of the editorial in the Post to express his opinion on the two letters which I shall quote in part:

"NON-SECTARIAN ANTI-NAZI LEAGUE TO CHAMPION HUMAN RIGHTS, INC.,
"New York City, September 1939.

"Now that war is being waged against Hitler, the fight against Nazi-ism must go on with even greater energy and determination.

"Recently Nazi-inspired incitements to racial hatred in our country have become so serious that our league is now leading the fight against the so-called Christian Front and others. We must be constantly on guard against the great danger that may soon confront the American people by a unified front of all those who directly oppose democratic government and rule their own people through barbaric dictatorships.

"In order to be fully efficient, our bureau of propaganda investigation has been increased fivefold to expose Nazi lies and ties. Hundreds of thousands of our leaflets, What is the Coughlin-inspired Christian Front? are distributed weekly at Coughlin-inspired and other street mass meetings. Our legal committee is constantly in action against their organized thuggery and violence. That our work is successful is best proved from the lips of the enemy, as, for example, when Fritz Kuhn testified before the Dies committee that 'the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League is persecuting me.'

"Prof. JAMES H. SHELTON,
"Chairman, Board of Directors.
"SIMON M. GOLDSMITH,
"Treasurer."

"Why all this venom against the Christian Front and against Father Coughlin? Surely Father Coughlin is a Christian and his only offense is to denounce those who are Communists or engaged in communistic activities."

It is straining our credulity to the breaking point to believe that he asks these questions seriously, but we will answer them.

Yes, Congressman, Father Coughlin is a Christian and thousands of patriotic Americans of his own faith oppose him even more vehemently than the league, and certainly not on account of his denunciation of Communists.

Since you are completely innocent of any knowledge concerning this matter, may we submit a list of names, all of them Catholics, members of the Catholic Committee for Human Rights, publisher of the Voice, none of them members of the league, all of them enemies of communism, and of Communists, and all of them bitter opponents of Father Coughlin.

COMMITTEE OF CATHOLICS FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

Most Rev. Robert E. Lucey, bishop of Amarillo, Tex.
George F. Addes, international secretary-treasurer, United Automobile Workers of America (C. I. O.).
Sister M. Aquin, O. P., Grand Rapids, Mich.
Mrs. Edward C. Bailey, New York.
Margaret Culkin Banning, author.
George Bartholomew, University of California.
Ade de Bethune, artist, Newport, R. I.
Rev. John P. Boland, chairman, New York State Labor Relations Board.
John Brophy, national director, C. I. O.
Rev. Vincent Brown, Long Beach, N. Y.
Malcolm Bryan, Atlanta, Ga.
Philip Burnham, editor, the Commonweal.
Rev. Bernard E. Burns, Chicago, Ill.
Dr. James J. Burns, Nazareth College, Kalamazoo, Mich.
John J. Burns, New York.
Barry Byrne, architect, New York.
Dr. Eugene H. Byrne, Columbia University.
Col. P. H. Callahan, Louisville, Ky.
William Callahan, managing editor, the Catholic Worker.
William M. Canning, instructor in history, College of the City of New York.
Eben James Carey, M. D., dean of the Medical School, Marquette University.
Graham Carey, artist, Newport, R. I.
Rev. Martin Carrabine, S. J., moderator, Chicago Inter-Student Catholic Action.
Gerard L. Carroll, attorney, New York.
John Carson, Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C.
Sister Cecilia, O. S. B., Chicago, Ill.
Jean Charlot, artist, New York.
Albert H. Coddington, editor, Liturgy and Sociology.
Dorothy T. Coddington, editor, Liturgy and Sociology.
John B. Collins, editor, the Pittsburgh Catholic.
Myles Connolly, author, Hollywood.
John W. Considine, Jr., producer, Hollywood.
Sister Consuela, O. Carm., New Orleans, La.
George Corey, author, San Francisco, Calif.
John C. Cort, associate editor, the Labor Leader.
Bing Crosby, Hollywood, Calif.
Dorothy Day, editor, the Catholic Worker.
Bryan Degnan, author, Pittsford, Vt.
Edmund Thomas Delaney, attorney, New York.
Baroness Catherine de Hueck, New York.
August Derleth, author, Sauk City, Wis.
Richard Deverall, editor, the Christian Front.
Dr. Charles J. Donahue, Fordham University.
Daniel W. Donahue, attorney, Boston.
George Donahue, editor, the Labor Leader.
Rev. Vincent C. Donovan, O. P., Catholic Thought Association, New York.
Hector Dowd, New York.
Gerald P. Doyle, editor, the Michaelman, Winooski Park, Vt.
Louis T. Achille, Howard University, Washington, D. C.
Katherine Burton, author, Bronxville, N. Y.
Irene Harand, former editor of Austrian journal Justice.
Mr. George Bingham, New York, N. Y.
Dr. John Burke, Buffalo, N. Y.
Mr. James M. Byrne, New York, N. Y.
Rev. Father Edward Conway, Regis College, Denver, Colo.
Mr. M. A. Cronin, South Boston, Mass.
Mrs. Edgar J. Driscoll, West Roxbury, Mass.
Stephen McK. Dubrul, Detroit, Mich.
Bernard Duck, Toledo, Ohio.
David C. Dunne, editor, the St. Louis Catholic.

Dr. Arthur G. Falls, president, Cook County Physicians' Association, Chicago, Ill.
Emilia B. Feibes, M. D., New York.
Rev. Gregory Feige, New Jersey.
Joseph F. Finnegan, attorney, New York.
Rev. George Ford, New York.
John Ford, producer, Hollywood, Calif.
Rev. Dr. Paul Hanley Furfey, Catholic University, Washington, D. C.
Donald A. Gallagher, associate editor, the St. Louis Catholic.
William Gauchat, Cleveland, Ohio.
Very Rev. L. E. Gosselin, S. S. E., president, St. Michael's College, Vermont.
William Hard, journalist, Washington, D. C.
Rev. John M. Hayes, Chicago, Ill.
Rev. Carl P. Hensler, Catholic Radical Alliance, Pittsburgh, Pa.
William H. Hines, instructor in English, Fordham University.
John Hinkel, journalist, New York.
Rev. Dr. Anselm Keefe, dean, St. Norbert College, Wisconsin.
Edward K. Kennedy, attorney, New York.
Reginald Kennedy, executive secretary, National Conference of Christians and Jews.
Julie Kernan, editor, New York.
Donald Langlois, Burlington, Vt.
Norman Langlois, Burlington, Vt.
Emmet Lavery, playwright, New York.
Hon. John M. Lewis, municipal court, New York.
William Lissner, journalist, New York.
Grace Lonergan, Boston, Mass.
John Longo, Jersey City, N. J.
Rev. Daniel Lord, S. J., editor, The Queen's Work.
T. Hubert MacCauley, Newark, N. J.
Miss Jean McLaren, artist, New York.
Frank McLaughlin, Philadelphia, Pa.
Sister Mary Madeleva, St. Mary's College, Indiana.
Rev. Joseph Malloy, C. S. P., New York.
Dr. William E. Manz, Grover Cleveland High School, New York.
Edward Marciniak, president, Chicago Inter-Student Catholic Action.
Harold G. King, Straubenmuller Textile High School, New York, N. Y.
Rev. T. Lawrason Riggs, New Haven, Conn.
Joseph O'Meara, Jr., Cincinnati, Ohio.
Donald Powell, Washington, D. C.
Hon. Anthony J. DiSilvestro, Philadelphia, Pa.
Dr. Francis E. Pronczak, M. D., health commissioner, Buffalo, N. Y.
Miss Mary L. Guyton, Boston, Mass.
Rev. Francis J. Halpin, Chicago, Ill.
Mr. Andrew J. Kelly, Chattanooga, Tenn.
Miss Angeline H. Lograsso, Ph. D., Bryn Mawr, Pa.
Hon. Harry S. McDevitt, Philadelphia, Pa.
Rev. R. A. McGowan, N. C. W. C., Washington, D. C.
Dr. Walter John Marx, Catholic University of America, editor, Social Problems.
Theodore Maynard, author, Maryland.
Julia T. Metcalf, St. Thomas More Library, Los Angeles, Calif.
Rev. Raymond Miller, C. SS. R., Immaculate Conception Seminary, Oconomowoc, Wis.
Rev. Dr. Charles C. Miltner, C. S. C., Notre Dame University, Indiana.
Edward J. Moloney, New York.
Rev. Joseph N. Moody, Cathedral College, New York.
And many others.
John D. Moore, attorney, New York.
Rev. M. Moran, Marymount College, Kans.
Noel Moulton, New York.
Edward O'H. Mullowney, attorney, Boston, Mass.
Philip Murray, steel workers organizing committee, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Mrs. A. S. Musante, San Francisco, Calif.
Francis J. O'Malley, University of Notre Dame, Indiana.
Sara B. O'Neill, Calvert Library, Chicago.
Rev. Henry J. Palmer, New York.
Rev. Wilfred Parsons, S. J., dean, Georgetown University.
Mrs. Charles B. Perkins, Boston, Mass.
Dr. Robert Pollock, Fordham University.
Martin Quigley, publisher, New York.
Rev. Thomas F. Reilly, C. S. S. R., New York.
Rev. H. A. Reinhold, chaplain, Apostolate of the Sea, Seattle, Wash.
Rev. Thomas J. Roshetko, Brunswick, Ga.
Right Rev. John A. Ryan, Catholic University, Washington, D. C.
Sylvester Ryan, chief assistant district attorney, Bronx, N. Y.
Angelo Sala, M. D., New York City Cancer Institute.
Paul Schweitzer, De Witt Clinton High School, New York.
Elias J. Seaman, Butte, Mont.
Edward T. Shedlock, president, Amalgamated Utility Workers.
Edward Skillin, Jr., editor, The Commonweal.
Daniel Sullivan, instructor in philosophy, Fordham University.
Harry Sylvester, author, New York.
Brother Theodore, Cathedral High School, Los Angeles, Calif.
Rev. J. J. Tompkins, Nova Scotia, Canada.
Gene Tunney, New York.
James N. Vaughan, attorney, professor of political science, Fordham.
Hon. Robert F. Wagner, Jr., New York.
Dr. Daniel Walsh, professor of philosophy, Manhattanville, College of the Sacred Heart, New York.
Paul Weber, journalist, Detroit, Mich.
Dr. William G. Welk, College of St. Thomas, Minnesota.
Helen C. White, University of Wisconsin.
Rev. J. E. McIntyre, C. M., St. Vincent's Sanatarium, Wellston Station, St. Louis, Mo.
Mr. John W. McShane, New Orleans, La.
Miss Mary F. O'Dwyer, Dorchester, Mass.
Miss Katherine Peek, Rosemont College, Rosemont, Pa.
Msgr. Robert J. Sherry, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Sister Mary Innocents, St. Mary Academy, Narvod, Ill.
Rev. James H. McConnell, Fredericksburg, Va.
James E. Murray, United States Senator from Montana.
Rev. Dr. Maurice Sheehy, Catholic University, Washington, D. C.
John H. Brady, C. L. U. (chartered life underwriter), New York City.
Dr. Emmanuel Chapman, Fordham University, New York.
Mary O'Shea, Philadelphia, Pa.
James B. Carey, C. I. O., New York City.
Rev. Vincent J. Flynn, College of St. Thomas, St. Paul, Minn.
Sister M. Gerlanda, Alvernia High School, Chicago, Ill.

Are you really, ignorant of the statements which high church dignitaries have issued against Father Coughlin? And don't you know that the Coughlin creature, the so-called Christian Front, has been denounced by leading Christians of all denominations, all of them opponents of communism? Haven't you heard of the Government case now in the process of trial in the courts of New York against the national leader of the Christian Front and some of his coleaders?

Really, Mr. Congressman, even you must have heard something about it and know the correct answer to your own question of why we oppose the so-called Christian Front and its creator.

He then quotes from a second league letter our purposes:

"To champion human rights.

"To foster the principles of justice and liberty.

"To foster the principles of American democracy for the United States.

"To combat religious and racial discrimination and oppression."

And adds:

"Whose rights are to be championed? I do not believe human rights are in jeopardy in the United States.

"Justice and liberty are guaranteed in the Constitution, to all people who subscribe to that document.

"Whose religion and what race is subject to discrimination and oppression? Why does not the League state to whom it refers?"

"Who but the Communists seek to foster the principles of democracy in the Republic of the United States?"

If these statements represent the sum total of his knowledge of what is happening in the United States, we will gladly enlighten him on some of the facts of life.

Ever since Hitler came to power in Germany the United States, as well as most other countries, has been flooded with Nazi agents and Nazi spies. The avowed purpose of these Nazi agents is to organize Nazi cells of spies and saboteurs in all important industries, especially in our navy yards, munition factories, and aviation fields. They are attempting to induce the Germans in the United States, by terror or threat of violence to their relatives in Germany, to join the Nazi-organized groups in the United States and serve the interests of Nazi Germany as against the interests of America; to win over by bribes or continued financial support native crackpots or traitors who would, for love or money, or both, betray their country; to influence public opinion in the United States in favor of Nazi Germany and against its opponents; and to spread the Nazi doctrines of antidemocracy and anti-Semitism in the United States.

These are facts and not theories, Mr. THORKELSON. You will find them in the reports of the spy trials in which our Government officially indicted the leaders of Nazi Germany as doing all that we mentioned above. You will find them in the confessions of former Nazi spies and agents in the United States. You will find them in the exposures of the escaped Nazi agents, the Spanknoebles, the Greibls, and their cohorts whom the Nazi Government snatched from under the noses of our Government agents; and what such a combination of Nazi spies and native traitors can accomplish was demonstrated in the cases of Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, and now in Norway.

Do you know all these facts, Mr. Congressman? Or are you so busy addressing the "native" Fascist groups that you have no time to catch up with your reading?

Perhaps you are not aware of the fact that our "native" Fascist groups, masquerading under patriotic or Christian names, are Nazi-inspired or Nazi-contrived. Permit us to bring to your attention excerpts from reports of their meetings:

Ebling's Casino, Bronx, N. Y., January 1939: McW.: "In 1940, by God, we are going to have a Christian running for President, or General Moseley and Father Coughlin will have something to say about it."

American Patriots meeting, Iroquois Hotel, New York, May 12, 1939: Spoken by McW.: "We must hate. We must get the people aroused. We must get the youth aroused."

Mobilizer meeting, October 30, 1939: Speaker B. blames all the evils of mankind on the Jews. McW. pointed out that at a meeting with General Moseley the latter suggested that the Jews be placed in detention camps. In connection with the K. K. K., he said, "It might be a good idea for us Mobilizers to take bedsheets and parade, carrying a shotgun under the sheets."

Mobilizer meeting, October 16, 1939: McW.: Among other things, he stated that Jew Harold Ickes, acting on behalf of the "murderous traitor" Roosevelt, had deprived them of free speech in Washington. He compared President Roosevelt as in the same class with Judas, Benedict Arnold, etc. A man called Happer or Harter cited the method whereby coyotes were exterminated in the West lands, comparing coyotes with the Jews, stating that poisoned beef was left out at night and picked up by the coyotes, but that, of course, some dogs found the poison—innocent victims, as it were—and the inference was that if similar methods were used on the Jews there might be some innocent Christians that snapped the bait.

Mobilizer meeting, Ebling's Casino, October 23, 1939: McW. paid high tribute to Hitler, lauding him as the "emancipator of mankind," and saying that "we need Hitler over here to clean things up."

Mobilizer meeting, October 23, 1939: Speaker C.'s speech was in behalf of a nationalist group to defend this country against the Jews. He also attacked the Catholic clergy for their selling out to the Jews, likewise the Protestant clergy. According to B., Hitler is a wonderful man and a savior of mankind. Likewise feels like McWilliams who said that we need Hitler over here now and in the future to clean things up.

Joint mobilizer-bund meeting, Ebling's Casino, November 18, 1939: Platforms decorated with American and mobilizer flags. Program began with singing of Horst Wessel song. Movies were shown. Emperor Hirohito, of Japan, applauded; the Chinese hissed. Donald S., a guest speaker, said that three great men had brought liberty to their peoples: Washington, Lincoln, and Hitler. Only Congressman he admired was THORKELSON. Concluded by prophesying a Europe under German hegemony.

Mobilizer meeting, November 20, 1939: H. C. asserted that Hitler was the "greatest man in history."

Bund meeting, November 27, 1939: Speakers included Henry C. McW., of the Christian Mobilizers, and Joe himself. Joe asserted that he was ready to punch anyone in the nose who said there was such a thing as one good Jew. McW. called President Roosevelt a traitor, and then added: "What do we do to traitors?" Offered several suggestions, he added himself: "I could kill him, shoot him; hanging is too good for him."

Bund meeting, Ebling's Casino, November 30, 1939: Mobilizer guards acting as ushers. Kunze paid high praise to "our associates, the Mobilizers."

Mobilizer meeting, New Ridgewood Hall, March 28, 1940: McW. announced that he was forming "extermination squads" to exterminate the Jews when the "day" arrives.

Christian Front meeting, Prospect Hall, March 29, 1940: Speaker C. stated that the grass died around the houses in Flatbush because of the Jews living there; that Jews maintain incubators and build up their population to carry on their work; that apartment houses become vermin-ridden when Jews move in; that he is thankful Untermyer died; and that he believes that the British steamships in our harbor should be loaded down with Jews forcibly, driven out of the harbor, and Hitler informed of date of departure, so he can sink them with his submarines.

Christian Mobilizer meeting, New Ridgewood Hall, Brooklyn, N. Y., April 4, 1940: Speaker McW. picked on someone who wanted to ask a question by saying, "You're lucky that I'm in a good mood tonight. Otherwise my crew would have knocked hell out of you and kicked you into the gutter where you belong." He then described his "crew," calling them tough I. R. A. and bund men.

Mobilizer meeting, New Ridgewood Hall, April 4, 1940: McW. announced that he was forming squads composed of the toughest elements he could find to hold meetings in Jewish districts and cause fights. Also announced that America in a few years could expect a Hitler here to be successful.

Christian Front meeting, Prospect Hall, April 5, 1940: Speaker C. lauded Hitler. Announced that the movie, Abe Lincoln in Illinois, was full of Jewish influence.

Mobilizer meeting, Eblings Casino, April 10, 1940: McW.'s lieutenant stated that "we (the Mobilizers) would not fight for the United States."

(We have the full names of all the speakers mentioned here by initials only.)

And they do not stop at words. Last summer there were a number of riots and stabbings in the streets of New York, and for the coming summer a plan was announced at a meeting held at Kiev Tavern on March 26, 1940, where Joe "McNazi" stated that it was decided that:

"Continued and greatly increased anti-Jewish agitation is to be carried on in an effort to start some sort of fight that may be developed into a conflict of major proportions. The Jews must be the ones to start this fight. The above-mentioned groups, the K. K. K., Silver Shirts, and the German-American Bund can be relied upon to join this fight on the side of the Mobilizers. If the actual fight does not start before May 1, at which time street meetings are to be again held, then roving groups are to be 'planted' at each meeting. These groups are to do the 'starting' by kicking and shoving down any Jew present. If the Jew protest, his arrest is to be ordered for disturbing the peace. 'It won't be long then before something happens.'" (This last by McWilliams.)

Well, Mr. Congressman, do you still ask: "Whose rights are to be championed? Whose religion and what race is subject to discrimination and oppression?"

Our founding fathers, in establishing this Republic, have placed two cornerstones in its foundation:

First, the Declaration of Independence, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

Second, the Bill of Rights.

It is these rights we champion. Universal human rights, which are also American rights. Are you, Mr. THORKELSON, in favor of them? Do you believe in the sentiments expressed in the Declaration of Independence? Haven't you sworn to uphold and defend the American Constitution, including our Bill of Rights?

He then proceeds by giving a list of our directors, and adds: "This list of names, which was longer last year, contains the names of many of our professors and educators who spend their time educating people in communism instead of in the fundamental principles of this Government."

This statement is entirely false.

It so happens that the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights is anti-Communist. In previous years and as late as March 31, 1940, at a conference of 300 delegates, representing 150 organizations affiliated with the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolution 1

Whereas the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics since the advent of Hitlerism as a menace continued to trade with Nazi Germany to the amount of many millions of dollars annually; and

Whereas since September 1939 the Soviet Union officially joined the Nazi Government in plundering independent neighboring states, placed itself and all its resources openly on the side of Nazi Germany, and is giving its full moral, economic, and indirect military aid to Hitler's war of conquest and Hitler's crusade against the remaining democracies of the world, including the United States; and

Whereas all members of the Communist parties in all countries, including the United States, have openly endorsed this fusion of interests between the United Soviet Socialist Republics and the Nazis, have abandoned their opposition to nazi-ism and Hitlerism, and are attacking and vilifying the democracies, just as the Nazis do: Be it

Resolved, That this conference of organizations affiliated with the Nonsectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights condemns the Communists as blood brothers of the Nazis, sees no difference between the two except in the color of their shirts, and pledges itself to continue its fight for democracy and human rights against all enemies, irrespective of the difference in color or name.

Resolution 2

Whereas for the past few years groups of superpatriots masquerading under such high-sounding names as Christian Front, Christian Mobilizers, American Patriots, and others are spreading violent Nazi propaganda, including the hatred of our democratic form of government and the spread of Hitler's racial theories; and

Whereas those subversive groups claim that they are fighting to protect the United States against communism, but definite proof conclusively shows that these groups are aided and abetted, and in some instances partially or wholly financed, by the Nazi propaganda department in Germany and by its agents in the United States; and

Whereas the Nazis and the Communists, both in Europe and in the United States, are working conjointly against all forms of democracy and for autocratic totalitarianism: Be it

Resolved, That we, as delegates to this conference of the organizations council of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, condemn these subversive groups, praise this league for the splendid work heretofore accomplished, and recommend that the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League continue to investigate and expose these subversive groups as enemies, malefactors, and attempted destroyers of these United States.

In view of this clear-cut anti-Communist stand accepted and proclaimed by the organizations comprising the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, will you, Mr. THORKELSON, still assert that "the league is a Communist organization and that the league is fighting the patriotic American citizens who are opposed to the Communists and therefore to the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League"?

Incidentally, isn't it rather late in the day to continue using anticommunism as a cloak for nazi-ism and fascism?

Hitler rode to power in Germany on the claim that he saved Germany from the dangers of communism. He claimed the indulgence and the active support of other governments and countries (and received it to a large extent) on the theory that nazi-ism is the antithesis to and the bulwark against communism. Following his example, every Nazi and Fascist group, every soap-box orator, of every one of the 57 varieties of colored shirts tried to save the world from communism. Every crime, every mean and dirty trick, every cruel and criminal act of the Nazis and their followers was excused on the theory that it helped combat communism.

Now Hitler and his Nazis have united with Stalin and his Communists to form a common blood brotherhood in a joint effort to conquer and subdue the world. The Communists whom Hitler called the bloody scum of the world, the pest, and the greatest danger to civilization, whose very presence is contaminating, the same Communists are now embraced by the Nazis as their best friends and full partners in the crusade against the democracies and the rest of the world.

Nazis and Communists have stopped their sham feud among themselves; they have become one and indivisible.

Some time ago there was issued an open letter from a Communist to Father Coughlin concerning their "commu-nazi" combination. That letter reads:

"DEAR COMRADE FATHER: Now that our leaders, Hitler and Stalin, have 'kissed and made up,' I see no reason why we in the United States should maintain our separate organizations to fight American democracy, you in the name of fascism and we in the name of communism. Why not form a united front, following the example of our illustrious leaders, Hitler and Stalin?

"I know that there still are some minor points of difference between your ideas of fascism and ours of communism. The question of our attitude toward the Jews, the question of private property, the question of class dictatorship, and of religious persecution separate our movements, but they are only minor points of policy. In reality we are fully in accord even as to these few points.

"You know, Father, that only the uninformed link Judaism with bolshevism. You and I, as practical, educated men, know the true facts. In Czarist Russia the Jews were not permitted to be workers, artisans, professionals, or farmers. They were crowded into a few small towns and were forced to be small traders or middlemen.

"When we Bolsheviks came into power we divided the population into several classes in accordance with their importance to the state (talk about a classless society). The workers and peasants came first, the soldiers next, Government officials next, professionals next, etc. And do you know what we did with the majority of the Jews, Father? We declared they were declassed, their property confiscated, and they were allowed to die of starvation or to subsist on the pittance which they received from the Jews outside of Russia. For a time we even refused to recognize their young children as full-fledged Soviet citizens.

"It is really a grim joke to speak of Jewish bolshevism or to assume that the Bolsheviks treated the majority of their Jews less cruelly than the Nazis did. We Bolsheviks have as little love for the racial brothers of Jesus Christ as you have. We have even repudiated Him, His apostles, and His creed, for they were all of Jewish origin. You, on the other hand, profess reverence for and belief in the Saviour, who was a Jew, the Jewish Carpenter of Nazareth, yet you persecute unto death His brothers and sisters, which does seem very queer, if you'll permit me to say so. It was well enough to keep up that pretense as long as the Fascists and Bolsheviks were fighting each other, but now, since Hitler and Stalin signed a peace treaty, we may as well tell our followers the truth, even if it means disillusioning them regarding our policy toward the Jews.

"The same holds true as to the question of private property. Although we in Russia have abolished private property and the Fascists in Germany and in Italy have not, in all three countries everything belongs to the state. The private capitalist in Germany has as much voice in determining his production, sales price, worker's staff, or what to do with his profits, if any, as the foreman in a Soviet factory. The Soviet State owns everything in Russia and the Hitler government owns everything, for it owns everybody in Germany. The same condition exists in Italy.

"As to class dictatorship, I hope that you as an intelligent person (and I trust that you are intelligent in spite of your articles I read and your speeches I heard) will not raise this question.

"What rights have the workers in Russia? They are chained to their jobs—just as the workers in Germany are to theirs; they have just as little voice in determining their wages and their working conditions. In Russia it is a capital offense for a worker to strike. To be sure, the Russian workers enjoy vacations, which they never did under the Czar, but so do the German workers through their 'strength through joy' organizations.

"There is only one political party in Russia—the Communist Party—and it rules supreme in the name of the working class; and there is only one political party in Germany—the Nazi Party—and it rules supreme in the name of the German people. Even the names of the ruling parties are alike, for the official name of Hitler's Nazi Party is 'Nazional Sozialistische Arbeiter Partei.'

"Then as to the question of religion: The Bolsheviks have expropriated (taken away) the enormous properties and fabulous riches of the Russian church. So has Hitler, only he did it and still does it gradually, while the Russians have done it all at once. The Soviets discourage religious beliefs and interfere with the churches. So does Hitler. You are surely aware that through the Hitler youth the Nazis seek to steal the children away from the religion of their parents. They close secular schools, censor church sermons, and have even prohibited the sale of the Bible in book stores. The Bolsheviks have imprisoned and killed many clerics as enemies of the Soviet state just as Hitler imprisoned and killed clerics of all religious denominations as enemies of the Nazi state. The Bolsheviks discourage but do not prohibit limited exercise of religious beliefs, and so do Hitler and his Nazis. And after a score of years of godless propaganda there are still millions of religious worshippers in Russia, just as there are in Germany. Even the attempt of the Nazis to establish a Nazi-controlled church is but an aping of the new 'living church' in Russia which the Bolsheviks established some years ago.

"And as to individual liberties, freedom of speech, of the press, of assemblage, etc., I defy anyone to find the difference between Germany and Russia.

"So you see, dear Father Coughlin, there is really nothing to differentiate fascism from communism except the color of their shirts, and that is not enough to keep our movements apart. Fascism and communism are both opposed to freedom, democracy, and the right of the individual citizen. So why not form a united front between the Fascists, whom you represent, and the Communists in the United States, whom we represent? I feel sure that Stalin would permit Earl Browder to sign such a treaty with you and you would have no trouble at all to get Hitler's permission. Why should he object? He never yet honored his signature to any treaty or any promise he ever made.

"We may call your combined forces 'red' fascism or 'black brown' bolshevism—it really doesn't matter. C. F. may remain our insignia, for it may mean Christian Front, Communist Front, or Common Front, and I have already devised a new salute, which consists of three parts or movements:

"1. The Communist raised arm and clenched fist, followed by

"2. Stretching out the arm and opening the fist into a Nazi salute, followed by

"3. A Bronx cheer.

"Come, come, dear Father Coughlin. I know you attacked the Bolsheviks bitterly and preached fascism as the only defense against us, but it should not be hard for you to eat your words and grasp our hands as those of brothers and coworkers in a common cause. Surely your attacks on bolshevism were not more caustic than Herr Hitler's and he has not hesitated to conclude an agreement of mutual friendship with Stalin, throwing the Anti-Comintern Pact overboard.

"After all, dear Father, we have really no choice in this matter. The cardinal principle on which both bolshevism and fascism are based is: Follow the leader, the Fuehrer or the Duce. It is not for us to think or consider where they lead us, or what they let us in for. Thinking or deliberating on the part of the individual citizen is a trait of the decaying democracies. We of the 'vigorous' Fascist and Communist states have but one duty—not to think, not to discuss, not even to justify, but blindly to obey the leader, wherever he leads us. And since Hitler and Stalin decreed a united front, we must obey them.

"So let us consolidate the Daily Worker with Social Justice, and under joint auspices let us march together toward the conquest of these United States for the glory of our leaders—Stalin and Hitler, or Hitler and Stalin, if you prefer it that way.

"Amen.

"Obediently yours,

"COMMUNAZI."

In view of all this, isn't it rather silly, at this late date, to use anticommunism as a justification for nazi-ism or fascism? Why, there is no longer any difference between them. One can't be for nazi-ism unless one is also for communism, and one can't honestly be against communism unless also against nazi-ism and fascism. There is no longer a question of nazi-ism versus communism, but a bitter fight by the communazis against democracy, and in our country against our democratic institutions and our Government.

So why not drop the mask of anti-Communist, Mr. THORKELSON, and show your true colors? Are you for communazi-ism or for our American democracy? You can't serve God and the devil simultaneously.

You say: "It is important for the Government to ask the Nonsectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights to lay its cards on the table for it is the most subversive group of all."

Here, Mr. Congressman, without waiting for the Government's request, are our cards:

We print literature, every piece of which is obtainable for the asking, including:

1. The Bill of Rights, and a list of groups who are seeking to destroy it. (Any subversiveness in that?)

2. A pamphlet containing the pictures and the criminal records of some of the leaders of the so-called Christian Mobilizers. (This is the same organization whom you addressed and praised so much in New York on March 4, 1940, in Ebling's Casino.)

3. An expose of the un-American activities of many of the so-called Christian groups.

4. An expose of the Nazi propaganda that is smuggled into the United States and documentary proof of the connection of some of our "patriots" with foreign propagandists.

5. Exposure of connections between the Italian Fascist, Nazi Bund, native traitors, Canadian and English Fascists, and their interlocking directorate.

6. Pamphlets concerning visits to Nazi Germany and what one can expect to find there.

7. A monthly bulletin exposing current Nazi and Nazi-inspired activities in the United States.

As to our "subversiveness" have you ever heard of any subversive group turning over its information and results of its activities to the proper Government authorities? We are doing it. Are the Nazi, "patriotic," or Communist organizations acting in a similar way?

These are our cards and we are anxious for the public to see them. In fact we are spending our last pennies to place them on public view. Will your friends, the Fascists, do the same? We doubt it and we will therefore save them the trouble of uncovering at least one of their cards.

You, Mr. THORKELSON, claim that we accuse American groups of being Fascist. One of these groups is the Christian Mobilizers, with whose program you seem to agree inasmuch as you spoke at their meeting on March 4, 1940, and praised their activities, as we pointed out in the beginning of this letter.

Here then is a card marked, "History of the Christian Mobilizers." We quote:

"Toward the end of May 1939, Joe, Thomas, George, Phil, and Z——r full names are in the affidavit) met in a little beer garden on Amsterdam Avenue. Joe told us that it was high time that a strong militant fascistic organization be formed for the purpose of putting the aryans on top and the Jews on the bottom. It would have to be a 'leadership' organization where one is to give orders and everyone else is to take orders. He stated that this organization was to endeavor to get a large following, have able speakers, and to form a corps of guardsmen similar to the storm troopers in Germany. Joe stated that the Christian Front was composed of a bunch of pussyfooters, the German-American Bund was out of luck because of its German tie-up and would never get anywhere, and that all other organizations had no specific plan and poor leaders. It was then and there decided to form a new organization which shall be known as the Christian Mobilizers. Joe said that each of us present at this beer garden would be the head of a department. He also said that this organization ought to start in the Bronx because there was a very large Jewish population there and also because there was a large Catholic population to cope with the Jews. He said it would be easy to play up alleged injustices by Jews, and we could make these more apparent in the Bronx.

"In August 1939, Joe and a few of us visited Camp Siegfried; it was a German day, and Kuhn and Joe addressed the crowd and received a great ovation.

"At the next meeting it was announced from the platform that strong, husky men were wanted to serve as guards. About 150 volunteered. A member of the bund was appointed as their drill master * * *."

This, Mr. THORKELSON, is from a sworn affidavit now in the hands of the Federal authorities. We have the names of the guards, too. This is the American patriotic organization which "is so anxious to get rid of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League and who, probably, induced you to attack the league on the pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD."

What do you say about putting "more cards on the table?"

Now let us take up your other question about where we get our money and what we do with it.

We are a non-profit-making corporation, and our books are audited every 3 months by a certified public accountant. Our books are kept (not destroyed), and our money is received in $1, $2, $3, $5, and $10 contributions from organizations and individuals who still believe in democracy and in the necessity of defending it against "native" and imported Nazis.

We trust that even you will not accuse us of being supported by the Nazis, and no one but an imbecile could suspect, after reading our resolutions, that we would receive support from the Communists. At any rate, we issue official receipts for every dollar we receive and have copies of same ready for any investigation. Can you say so much for your Nazi friends?

But let us proceed with THORKELSON's attack. He says:

"The people should bear in mind that all information in the Nation's press appears from one angle alone, namely, the angle of the internationalists. It is not an American angle, it does not express American opinion but expresses, instead, an unassimilable alien philosophy." And later in the same paragraph you say: "The present war is not a war of the people but is, instead, a strife in which the people will be sacrificed in order to establish a super world government over which the internationalists can reign unmolested and free."

Now, the Nazis apply the term "internationalists" to Jews, but you, Mr. THORKELSON, are not a Nazi, or are you? Whom do you mean by this term? We assume that you mean the Jews.

Now, the Jews can be termed internationalists because of their religion and because of their racial group. Jews in the United States, England, France, Germany, Spain, Africa, South America, Canada, etc., are all Jews, and all have the same religion. But have you ever heard of the Catholics, Mr. THORKELSON? The American English, Spanish, Italian, etc., Catholics all have the same religion. And how about the Protestants? Haven't the American, British, German, etc., Protestants the same religion? If their religion stamps the Jews as internationalists, how about the Catholics and Protestants?

Or, if it is their racial group, how about the Germans? We have Germans in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Central and South American republics, Africa, European countries, and, wherever they are, they are Germans. Aren't the Germans true internationalists?

Why repeat the Nazi appellation of internationalists to Jews and not to any other religious or racial group? And if you don't mean the Jews, whom or what do you mean by the term "internationalists"; or do you mean anything at all?

In justice to you—we wish to be just even to our enemies and opponents—and out of respect for your intelligence, we are ready, with your permission, to assume that you are not the author of the article in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, for it contains so many gross and foolish mistakes that you could not possibly make them.

As a Congressman, you could not ask what right the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League has to assist the Government agencies. You surely know, or ought to, that it is not only the privilege but the duty of every citizen to help the Government in apprehending public enemies and traitors to the safety of the Nation. No matter how little you may know about economics, you could not have said that the fight of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League against the spread of nazi-ism in the United States is retarding our economic recovery. You could not have made the mistake of quoting from our literature that there are between 700 and 1,000 subversive Nazi-inspired organizations spreading racial hatred in the United States, and then ask us where we get the money to support these 700 to 1,000 organizations. Who would suspect that the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League is supporting 1,000 Nazi organizations in the United States?

We are therefore ready to assume, again with your permission, that some stupid fellow wrote that article and wish to absolve you for the foolish statements made by that fool. But even if this be the case, you should have asked for the privilege of reading the speech before it was inserted under your name in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, for on page 2014 of the Appendix of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, lines 24 and 25, you are made to say, "who but the Communists desire to foster the principles of democracy in the Republic of the United States?"

You are anticommunistic, that is certain. You consider the Communists in the United States enemies of our Government and traitors to our country. You state that ours is a democratic Republic. That means, if it means anything, that democracy and republicanism are the keystone of the United States. You say that you are against anything the Communists are for but when you assert that the Communists are the only ones who desire to foster the principles of democracy in the Republic of the United States, you imply that you are an enemy of democracy.

Now, as a private citizen, you have as much right to be a rabid anti-Democrat as Hitler, Stalin, or Mussolini, but, as a Congressman, you have taken an oath to defend this Republic and our democratic form of government. If you are against them, what are you doing in the Congress of the United States? If you are for them, what is this nonsense about only Communists fostering the principles of democracy in the American Republic?

In closing, permit us to remind you that in recent years, in Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, and now in Norway, Nazi agents and native traitors have betrayed and sold their countries into the hands of Hitler. In all these countries the Nazis have induced, bribed, or by other means influenced native crackpots, megalomaniacs, or downright traitors to becloud the issues with such phrases as "Aryanism," "patriotism," "communism," "racism," "internationalists," etc. These served as an anaesthetic for the unthinking multitudes.

The same trick is now being tried by the Nazi agents and their hirelings in our country, the United States.

We who observe these termites and recognize their tactics, pledge ourselves to continue exposing their treacherous activities, irrespective of whether they wear red, brown, black, silver, white, or dirty shirts, and regardless of whether they spew their poison from soap boxes in Columbus Circle or from the exalted seats of legislatures.

NON-SECTARIAN ANTI-NAZI LEAGUE
TO CHAMPION HUMAN RIGHTS.

Mr. SABATH. I feel that it is but fair that this organization should have the right to answer the unjustified and unwarranted attacks made by the gentleman from Montana, and also for the further reason that he is said to have caused to be printed for certain other subversive organizations reprints of these attacks which are being mailed out by them, as I understand, under his frank, at a tremendous cost to the Government. It is the first time in my many years of service that I have made a unanimous-consent request that would cost the Government any additional sum of money which in this case will amount to approximately $225. However, in checking up on the extensions and remarks of the gentleman from Montana, I find that they have been printed at a cost of some $10,000 to the Government, a sum many times greater by far than that indulged in for extension of remarks by any other Member of the House in the present Congress.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire of the Chair if it is the intention of the House to take up any legislative matters during the remainder of this week other than the bill now pending before the House?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If we complete the consideration of the pending bill in a reasonable time tomorrow, there are two resolutions reported by the Committee on Rules, one with reference to the New York Fair and the other with reference to the San Francisco Fair, that Members from those localities and others interested say must be passed and in effect before the 11th of May. It is the intention of the Chair, if the bill we have been considering today and which we will further consider tomorrow is completed within a reasonable time, to recognize members of the Rules Committee to call up those rules.

Mr. MAGNUSON. May I ask further, Mr. Speaker, if it is also intended to call up the conference report on the Wheeler-Lea bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It was announced in the House today, definitely, that that conference report would not come up until Thursday next.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Other than these two, the Chair is not cognizant of any other matters that will be considered tomorrow?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Not at the moment. Of course, we are working from hour to hour now.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. WOLFENDEN of Pennsylvania, indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. HARE, for the remainder of the week, on account of important business.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

[Mr. VAN ZANDT addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix of the RECORD.]

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a joint resolution of the House of the following title, which was thereupon signed by the Speaker pro tempore:

H. J. Res. 431. Joint resolution to extend to the 1940 New York World's Fair and the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition the provisions according privileges under certain customs and other laws to the expositions of 1939.

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced his signature to an enrolled joint resolution of the Senate of the following title:

S. J. Res. 252. Joint resolution to amend section 5 (b) of the act of October 6, 1917, as amended, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 14 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, May 3, 1940, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on the Public Lands on Friday, May 3, 1940, at 10 a. m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider various bills.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of a subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, at 10 a. m., Tuesday, May 7, 1940, for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 457, entitled "For the Transfer of the Marketing Laws Survey to the Department of Commerce."

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on Monday, May 13, 1940, at 10 a. m.

Business to be considered: To begin hearings on S. 280 and H. R. 145—motion pictures. All statements favoring the bill will be heard first. All statements opposing the bill will follow:

COMMITTEE ON PATENTS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Patents on Thursday, May 9, 1940, at 10:30 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 8441, H. R. 8442, and H. R. 8444, all of which relate to amendments to the patent laws.

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Patents on Thursday, May 16, 1940, at 10:30 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 9384, H. R. 9386, and H. R. 9388, all of which relate to amendments to the patent laws.

COMMITTEE ON IRRIGATION AND RECLAMATION

The Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation will meet on Saturday, May 4, 1940, at 10 a. m., in room 128, House Office Building, for the consideration of H. R. 9093.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1587. A letter from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting in accordance with section 9 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, a report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, of the operations under sections 7 to 14, inclusive, of this act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

1588. A letter from the Attorney General, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill to amend section 355 of the Revised Statutes to authorize the Attorney General to approve the title to low-value lands and interests in lands acquired by or on behalf of the United States subject to infirmities; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

1589. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill for the relief of Dr. Lawrence T. Post, G. F. Allen, and D. Buddrus; to the Committee on Claims.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. COSTELLO: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 7254. A bill authorizing the temporary detail of J. L. Savage, an employee of the United States, to service under the Government of the State of New South Wales, Australia; without amendment (Rept. No. 2062). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ELSTON: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 7611. A bill to provide for the rank and title of lieutenant general of the Regular Army; with amendment (Rept. No. 2064). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MANSFIELD: Committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses. H. R. 6264. A bill authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 2065). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. HARNESS: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 3095. An act for the relief of Harry Huston; without amendment (Rept. No. 2063). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. LUDLOW:

H. R. 9631 (by request). A bill to authorize the appropriation of $200,000 for the purpose of constructing a national airport and aviation school at Indianapolis, Marion County, Ind., for training Negro citizens to become aviators in the United States Aviation Corps, and as aviators in the United States Army and the Government's subsidies; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PAGÁN:

H. R. 9632. A bill concerning the act of May 5, 1939, passed by the Legislature of Puerto Rico, relating to bonds; to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

By Mr. RANDOLPH:

H. R. 9633. A bill to enlarge and extend the power and jurisdiction of the Board of Education over degree-conferring institutions operating within the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. SPARKMAN:

H. R. 9634. A bill to amend the Tennessee Valley Authority Act, as amended, by striking therefrom subsection (k) of section 4 and substituting therefor a new subsection (k); to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. TENEROWICZ:

H. R. 9635. A bill authorizing the organization of a full regiment of colored combat troops as a part of the National Guard of the State of Michigan; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. VINSON of Georgia:

H. R. 9636. A bill authorizing the conveyance to the Commonwealth of Virginia of a portion of the naval reservation known as Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. CURTIS:

H. R. 9637. A bill to provide for financing wells and pumping systems for farms and for a method of repayment; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. GAVAGAN:

H. R. 9638. A bill authorizing and adopting the improvement of East River, N. Y.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. MAAS:

H. R. 9639. A bill to amend certain sections of the Naval Reserve Act, 1938, as amended; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WHITTINGTON:

H. R. 9640. A bill authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Flood Control.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANGELL:

H. R. 9641. A bill to correct the naval record of John B. Dolan; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mrs. BOLTON:

H. R. 9642. A bill for the relief of Caroline Janes; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DEMPSEY:

H. R. 9643. A bill for the relief of Herman C. Hawkins and others; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GARRETT:

H. R. 9644. A bill for the relief of Roy Kendrick; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HULL:

H. R. 9645. A bill for the relief of Mrs. William Butak, Dorothy Clyde, Mrs. Albert Westcott, Mrs. Albert Meyer, Florence Johnson, Marie Grill, Mrs. Leo Maloney, Marian McDonald, Mrs. Edward Beier, Mrs. E. L. Bly, Mrs. Lucien Miller, Lois Kehnl, Reka Berg, Mrs. Ollis Klicker, Wilma Vogler, and Mary Chisholm; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KLEBERG:

H. R. 9646. A bill for the relief of Farmers Rural Telephone Association; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MAGNUSON:

H. R. 9647. A bill to enable Sadao Tanaka to remain permanently in the United States; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. MONRONEY:

H. R. 9648. A bill granting a pension to Maud Carrico; to the Committee on Pensions.

H. R. 9649. A bill granting a pension to Annie Joyce; to the Committee on Pensions.

H. R. 9650. A bill for the relief of Maynard Goss; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mrs. O'DAY:

H. R. 9651. A bill for the relief of Meier Langermann, his wife Friederike, and son Joseph; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SABATH:

H. R. 9652. A bill for the relief of Kresimir Matijevic; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SIMPSON:

H. R. 9653. A bill granting a pension to Jacob G. Simmons; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

7839. By Mr. CHIPERFIELD: Petition of the Illinois Association of County Superintendents of Highways of District No. 4, urging immediate consideration and passage of the Hatch bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

7840. By Mr. ELSTON: Petition of various citizens of Cincinnati, Ohio, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the Federal chain-store tax bill (H. R. 1); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7841. By Mr. FLAHERTY: Petition of the Animal Rescue League of Boston, Mass.; opposing the use of animals in the testing of high explosives; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

7842. By Mr. JARRETT: Petition of the American Legion Auxiliary, East Brady, Pa.; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

7843. By Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY: Petition of the Railway Labor Executives' Association, Chicago, Ill., opposing House bill 7133; to the Committee on Labor.

7844. Also, petition of the Textile Workers Union of America, New York City, opposing any and all amendments, including the Smith and Norton amendments, to the National Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

7845. Also, petition of the United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers of America, district No. 4, Newark, N. J., expressing opposition to the Norton and Smith amendments to the National Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

7846. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the New York State Farm Bureau Federation, Ithaca, N. Y., favoring section 32 of the agricultural appropriation bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

7847. Also, petition of the New York State Waterways Association, Inc., Albany, N. Y., concerning the conference report on Senate bill 2009; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7848. Also, petition of the Merca Traffic Service Bureau, New York City, favoring the amending of section 10 (a) of the transportation bill (S. 2009); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7849. Also, petition of the American Short Line Railroad Association, Washington, D. C., favoring the adoption of the conference report on Senate bill 2009; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7850. Also, petition of the Seatrain Lines, Inc., New York City, concerning the Wheeler-Lea transportation conference report on Senate bill 2009; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7851. Also, petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and Switchmen's Union of North America, favoring recommiting transportation bill (S. 2009); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7852. By Mr. LYNCH: Petition of the Merca Traffic Service Bureau, New York, N. Y., urging on behalf of 1,200 shippers that section 10 (a) of the transportation bill be amended to retain the present 3-year limitation period for recovery of overcharges in lieu of the 2-year period proposed in the bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7853. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the New York State Waterways Association, Inc., Albany, N. Y., opposing enactment of Senate bill 2009, to amend the Interstate Commerce Act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7854. Also, petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and Switchmen's Union of North America, Washington, D. C., urging recommitment of the conference report on Senate bill 2009; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7855. Also, petition of the Merca Travel Service Bureau, New York City, urging the amending of section 10 (a) of Senate bill 2009, the Transportation Act of 1940; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7856. By Mr. RANKIN: Petition of the Legislature of Mississippi; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7857. Also, petition of the Legislature of Mississippi; to the Committee on Appropriations.

7858. Also, petition of the Legislature of Mississippi; to the Committee on Appropriations.

7859. Also, petition of the Legislature of Mississippi; to the Committee on Roads.

7860. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the District of Columbia Chapter, National Lawyers Guild, Washington, D. C., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938; to the Committee on Labor.

7861. Also, petition of the Farmer Labor Central Committee (Curtiss Olson), Roseau, Minn., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the La Follette-Wheeler-Bankhead bill concerning agriculture; to the Committee on Agriculture.

7862. Also, petition of the Long Beach Junior Chamber of Commerce, Long Beach, Calif., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the reorganization measures affecting the Civil Aeronautics Authority; to the Select Committee on Government Organization.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, MAY 3, 1940

The House met at 12 o'clock noon, and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore, Mr. RAYBURN.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Increase our faith, O God, and forgive wherein we have faltered and failed; in much thought of the world, we have missed the passion of Jesus. Let us be less troubled about the ways of others and more alive in the higher realms of thought, feeling, and tolerance; less disturbed about the ebb and flow of the changing scenes of life. Take away the persistent shadow of self and fill us with godly consideration for the honesty and high motives of our fellow men. We pray that we may walk together in our own land of the living, for Thou hast dealt bountifully with us. If we hallow our blessings, reverence our fair name, esteem our influence and power, we shall experience a spiritual enrichment. We most humbly pray for all churches in their devoted endeavors to promote cooperation and good will throughout the broad earth. Oh, hasten the hour in which all faiths shall blaze a pathway of brotherhood in unchartered lands and the divine plan shall arise to replace the broken strings in the harp of the world. Through Christ, our Saviour. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 8745. An act making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 8438) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Navy Department and the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes," disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon; and appoints Mr. BYRNES, Mr. GLASS, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. OVERTON, Mr. WALSH, Mr. HALE, and Mr. LODGE to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8319) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Departments of State, Commerce, and Justice, and for the judiciary, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate having proceeded to reconsider the bill (H. R. 289) entitled "An act for the relief of officers and soldiers of the Volunteer service of the United States mustered into service for the War with Spain and who were held in service in the Philippine Islands after the ratification of the treaty of peace, April 11, 1899," returned by the President of the United States to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, with his objections, and passed by the House on a reconsideration of the same, it was—

Resolved, That the said bill pass, two-thirds of the Senators present having voted in the affirmative.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on the following dates the President approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

An April 26, 1940:

H. R. 3406. An act for forest protection against the white-pine blister rust, and for other purposes.

On April 30, 1940:

H. R. 7406. An act granting the consent of Congress to the General State Authority, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and/or the Pennsylvania Bridge and Tunnel Commission, either singly or jointly, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Susquehanna River at or near the city of Middletown, Pa.;

H. R. 7407. An act granting the consent of Congress to the General State Authority, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and/or the Pennsylvania Bridge and Tunnel Commission, either singly or jointly, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Susquehanna River at or near the city of Millersburg, Pa.;

H. R. 7655. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Delaware River between the village of Barryville, N. Y., and the village of Shohola, Pa.;

H. R. 7660. An act to amend section 35B of the United States Criminal Code to prohibit purchase or receipt in pledge of clothing and other supplies issued to veterans maintained in Veterans' Administration facilities;

H. R. 7663. An act providing for sick leave for substitute postal employees;

H. R. 7814. An act for the relief of Gerald Henry Simpson;

H. R. 8320. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River near Jefferson Barracks, Mo.;

H. R. 8397. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge or bridges across the St. Louis River at or near the city of Duluth, Minn., and the city of Superior, Wis., and to amend the act of August 7, 1939, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8398. An act amending acts extending the franking privilege to widows of ex-Presidents of the United States;

H. R. 8467. An act authorizing the Superior Oil Co., a California corporation, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge or causeway and approaches thereto, across the old channel of the Wabash River from Cut-Off Island, Posey County, Ind., to White County, Ill.;

H. R. 8471. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Susquehanna River, at or near Wyalusing between Terry and Wyalusing Townships, in the county of Bradford, and in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania;

H. R. 8495. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge or bridges across the Mississippi River at or near the cities of Dubuque, Iowa, and East Dubuque, Ill., and to amend the act of July 18, 1939, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8508. An act to amend the Subsistence Expense Act of 1926, as amended by the act of June 30, 1932 (ch. 314, sec. 209, 47 Stat. 405);

H. R. 8530. An act for the relief of Esther Cottingham Grab;

H. R. 8583. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Little Falls, Minn.;

H. R. 8650. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State Highway Department of South Carolina to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Great Pee Dee River, at or near Cashua Ferry, S. C.;

H. R. 8772. An act to amend the act of August 23, 1912 (37 Stat. 414; U. S. C., title 31, sec. 679);

H. R. 9047. An act to provide for the transfer of United States prisoners in certain cases; and

H. J. Res. 275. Joint resolution to authorize the President to present the Distinguished Flying Cross to Frank W. Seifert and Lt. V. Hine, deceased.

On May 1, 1940:

H. R. 7246. An act for the relief of Madeline Vera Buchholz; and

H. R. 8500. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to execute an easement deed to the State of New Mexico for the use and occupation of lands and water areas at Conchas Dam and Reservoir project, New Mexico.

On May 3, 1940:

H. J. Res. 437. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim I Am An American Day for the recognition, observance, and commemoration of American citizenship.

DEPARTMENTS OF STATE, COMMERCE, AND JUSTICE, AND THE JUDICIARY, APPROPRIATION BILL, 1941

Mr. McANDREWS submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 8319) making appropriations for the Departments of State, Commerce, and Justice, and for the judiciary, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes.

DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR APPROPRIATION BILL, 1941

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 8745) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado? (After a pause.) The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messers. TAYLOR, JOHNSON of Oklahoma, SCRUGHAM, FITZPATRICK, LEAVY, SHEPPARD, RICH, CARTER, and WHITE of Ohio.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, about 8 years ago a great American started a campaign for President of the United States. One of the principal promises held out by him was that if he were elected he would see that there was passed legislation for the relief of the "forgotten man." Great strides have been made in this direction. Billions of dollars of Government funds have been expended in an effort to rehabilitate masses of the American people. Oklahoma has benefited rather well from this program.

However, now we see the wheels of industry being speeded up by reason of increased orders for war supplies from Europe and Asia. The northern and eastern sections of the United States are enjoying, by reason of this, a major degree of recovery. None of this industrial activity is penetrating the State of Oklahoma. We in Oklahoma are still suffering from drought—five of which we have had in as many consecutive years. The fact that we have largely lost our foreign cotton market; the fact that warehouses in the United States, we are told, are still full of cotton by reason of general marketing conditions. The things which we produce in Oklahoma have enjoyed no increase in price. Livestock, corn, cotton, and wheat still are produced at a loss by the farmer. We buy finished products, however, upon a market price set for more prosperous sections of the United States. We in Oklahoma are still suffering at the hands of the railroads, who have thrown around us such a high freight-rate barrier that we can neither ship goods out nor in to Oklahoma without paying discriminatory high freight. Oklahoma is rapidly becoming the "forgotten State"; and while many of you represent districts and States who no longer need large appropriations from W. P. A. to give aid and assistance to your constituents, we in Oklahoma are as greatly in need of this assistance as we were in 1933.

Despite the fact that the present cotton program is giving some benefit and some aid and assistance to the cotton-producing States east of the Mississippi River, we in Oklahoma are suffering from the quota system, because the cotton that we are permitted to raise this year is gaged upon the 5-year average of cotton that was produced on a particular farm over the last 5-year period. Since each of these periods have been drought years in Oklahoma and have materially reduced the amount of cotton produced in Oklahoma, you can readily see that when we are permitted to plant cotton acreage based purely upon the average of the last 5-year yield the amount of cotton that we are permitted to raise is each year being reduced by the very program that in its inception was presumed to help us.

I have pending in the Congress three amendments to the present agricultural bill which would, in part, relieve this situation. But because of the fact that so many of the cotton-producing States are enjoying benefits by reason of this program, it seems well-nigh impossible to get favorable consideration for these amendments, since they would largely be of benefit only to portions of Texas, Arkansas, and Oklahoma. Unless something is done Oklahoma is surely the "forgotten State."

It has been proposed that W. P. A. appropriations will be reduced for the next fiscal year. I want to serve notice on this House that unless there is at least an appropriation asked of a billion and one-half dollars that I shall offer amendments to the appropriation bill increasing the appropriation to at least this sum.

Oklahoma's quota was in April reduced by approximately 10,000 people, over the vigorous protest of the Oklahoma delegation. We have been able now to get an agreement from those in authority in W. P. A. that there will be no further reductions in May. Oklahoma has a real case to make in this direction. We think that we should not have been cut in our quota at all, despite the fact that the money is running low. It is my contention that this money should not be pro rated equally over the United States upon the basis of population and area, but should be pro rated upon the basis of actual need, and there is no State in the United States that can show greater need for W. P. A. money and assistance than can Oklahoma. And, applying this rule, Oklahoma should not be cut in April.

It is being proposed that the new appropriation, which would normally become available on July 1, be made available on June 1. We are advised if this is done it will not be necessary to make further reductions in W. P. A. quota for June. I shall certainly support this proposition, and I shall also offer an amendment, if someone else does not do so, providing that these funds shall be spent over an 8-month period rather than a 12-month period, which will give States like Oklahoma an opportunity to employ at least a majority of those people who are so much in need of W. P. A. assistance.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Mexico?

There was no objection.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to advise the membership of the House that there is on the Speaker's desk today discharge petition No. 32, discharging the Committee on the Judiciary from further consideration of the amendments to the so-called Hatch bill, Senate 3046.

I think history will eventually record that this is not an ordinary petition, but rather a roll of honor, showing to the people of this Nation those of the Congress who are for clean politics, those who object to voting appropriations in order that a portion of the funds voted may be used for partisan political purposes and to build and maintain machines of political bosses. I sincerely trust that the membership will speedily sign petition No. 32. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HENNINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech I made before the accident and health underwriters of St. Louis on April 23.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include an article by Linn A. E. Gale, secretary of the Make Europe Pay the War Debts Committee, entitled "Make Europe Pay the War Debts."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that at the close of the legislative program of today and following any previous special orders, I may be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include an article on the subject of boy scouts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, if the President thinks that the shift of Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce all during the malodorous days of political aviation control, to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the proposed shift of C. A. A. Chairman Hinckley to the Department of Commerce will silence the storm of indignation that is going over this country against the shift of the C. A. A. to the Department of Commerce, he is sadly mistaken. I predict that this shift of men will prove a boomerang, because it exhibits to the Congress the juggling of personalities and politics in aviation supervision that is exactly the thing that we are not going to stand for. I predict that this entire move to get away from the fight on Reorganization Plan No. IV by shifting around some men is going to fail to prevent repudiation of the plan by this House.

Congress created the Civil Aeronautics Authority and made it independent.

The proposed reorganization would gag the Authority. It could then report to the Congress and the President only through the Secretary of Commerce, so the reorganization plan provides.

This censorship would silence the Authority whenever it disagrees with the Secretary of Commerce.

Congress needs independent reports on civil aeronautics. Do not gag the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on two subjects, and with one to include a list of expenditures of the Federal Government, and with the other the wildlife resources in the State of Washington.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include a quotation from S. 3876.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CITIZENSHIP

Mr. THILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. THILL. Mr. Speaker, there are few gifts as valuable as citizenship; it is a gift that is priceless. For who can measure the worth of our freedom, of our liberties of speech, religion, and the press? Who can establish the cost of the suffering and hardships borne by our founding fathers in their battles and starvation at Valley Forge, in days and nights of labor and intellectual toil? Most of us who have received this gift without doing a thing to obtain it are only too likely to forget the meaning and value of our heritage.

Each year 2,000,000 young men and women in the United States reach the voting age of 21 years. Each year thousands of foreigners receive instruction and become full-fledged citizens. It is for them in particular that Congress passed a law authorizing the President to proclaim the third Sunday in May of each year as Citizenship Day. It is altogether fitting that they should be impressed with their grave responsibilities in our self-governing Republic. On their shoulders particularly rests the burden to protect the Constitution, to preserve our liberties, and to elect the proper persons to govern our country.

I know of no finer expression of the political faith of America than is contained in the American's Creed written by my good friend the Honorable William Tyler Page:

THE AMERICAN'S CREED

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign States; a perfect Union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice, and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its Constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HARTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include two brief letters from the Newark Police Department in respect to the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association of the Newark police.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE INTER-AMERICAN BANK

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ESTABLISHING THE INTER-AMERICAN BANK

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, in connection with the inter-American bank, the draft of convention proposed April 17, 1940, is the primary document whereby the political instrumentality will come into being. The charter and by-laws are annexed to the convention.

The last paragraph of the convention which when signed would appear to obligate the United States as a Government to grant the charter for the bank is as follows:

In witness whereof the undersigned plenipotentiaries, having deposited their full powers found to be in due and proper form, sign this convention on behalf of their respective governments, and affix thereto their seals on the dates appearing opposite their signatures.

The signing of the convention officially commits the United States to the scheme subject to the granting of a charter by Congress with or without special legislation.

It would appear that the convention could be ratified as a treaty by the Senate, in which case, such ratification would operate as approval of the charter and bylaws which are a part of the convention.

Let us further observe articles V and VI of the convention which are as follows:

Article V. The present convention shall be ratified and effectuated by the high contracting parties in conformity with their respective constitutional methods. The Pan American Union shall transmit authentic certified copies of the original of the convention to the high contracting parties for the purpose of ratification. The instruments of ratification shall also be deposited in the archives of the Pan American Union, which shall notify the signatory governments of such deposit. Such notification shall be considered as an exchange of ratifications.

Article VI. The present convention shall come into effect as between such ratifying high contracting parties if and when ratifications of this convention shall have been deposited with the Pan American Union by at least 5 of the high contracting parties which have agreed to subscribe for at least a total of 145 shares of stock of the bank. Each deposit of ratification shall be accompanied by the designation of a person to serve on the organizing committee of the bank, which committee shall meet forthwith after the convention shall have come into effect as provided herein and proceed with all arrangements necessary for prompt organization of the bank.

It is well for us to bear in mind the language "in conformity with their respective constitutional methods." Of course, if the Administration desired to be very liberal in the matter of procedure, and if it wants to give the House and the Senate full opportunity to debate and really look into this whole far-reaching and highly important undertaking, it could permit bills to be introduced in both House and Senate, be referred to the House and Senate Banking and Currency Committees, proceed with full hearings, and thus give the American people some real information on this inter-American bank program. Let us hope that constitutional method will be followed.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein three editorials.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to insert certain tables showing imports and exports.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include an address by Hon. A. H. Hopkins at the annual meeting of the Franklin County National Farm Loan Association.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TENEROWICZ. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a radio address.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from New Jersey makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 93]

Bradley, Mich.	Gilchrist	Mitchell	Smith, Va.
Buckler, Minn.	Green	Murdock, Utah	Starnes, Ala.
Burgin	Halleck	Murray	Steagall
Byrne, N. Y.	Harness	Nelson	Sweeney
Claypool	Holmes	O'Leary	Thomas, N. J.
Connery	Hunter	Osmers	Ward
Crowe	Jarman	Patrick	Whelchel
Crowther	Jarrett	Risk	White, Idaho
Culkin	Kirwan	Rogers, Okla.	White, Ohio
Cummings	Knutson	Routzohn	Winter
Darrow	McLaughlin	Schulte	Woodrum, Va.
Fish	Magnuson	Shafer, Mich.	Zimmerman
Gehrmann	Merritt	Smith, Ohio

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Three hundred and seventy-nine Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Without objection, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MAAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

TURTLE MOUNTAIN INDIAN AGENCY

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report and statement on the bill (S. 1036) to authorize the purchase of certain lands adjacent to the Turtle Mountain Indian Agency in the State of North Dakota for printing in the RECORD.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including an editorial with a quotation from another editorial.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

By unanimous consent Mr. LEA was granted permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include a statement from the American Committee for the Protection of Foreign-born.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I want to address the House in connection with the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The largest airplane works in the world are in my district. I want to differ with the President when he states that the proposed reorganization of the Civil Aeronautics Authority which is based on a 5 months' study by a division of the Bureau of the Budget is a good thing. Congress created the Authority after more than 5 years of study. I believe the record of 850,000,000 passengers flown 1 mile without accident is a recommendation in itself. I say let us keep that which we have created. It has worked better than any agency of government set up in the last 8 years, or just as good. Let us not permit a hasty 5 months' study by a division of a bureau to destroy our studies of more than 5 years. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I realize that the program for next week cannot, of course, be very definite at this time, but many Members would like to know particularly what is going to happen on Monday and Tuesday.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. And Wednesday and Thursday and Friday? [Laughter.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes. I accept the correction.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Of course, Monday is unanimous-consent day, and suspensions will be in order if the Speaker desires to recognize anybody for suspensions. I have not heard that he intends to do that. If the Consent Calendar does not require too much time, we will call up the conference report on the river and harbor bill. If we do not reach the so-called San Francisco and New York World's Fairs resolutions today, they will be taken up on Tuesday. On Wednesday the conference report on the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill will be called. On Thursday, whether or not we finish consideration of the conference report on the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill, the conference report on the transportation bill will be taken up. If the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill conference report is not completed on Wednesday it will go over and will be completed on Friday.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. That is a definite program; and, of course, there is the possibility that the order concerning the Civil Aeronautics Authority may be reached on Wednesday?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Well, I certainly hope not on Wednesday.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. That is a privileged matter, of course.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Yes; but why not on Tuesday, if it is going to be taken up? We may dispose of the other two matters, but the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill conference report is so important, and a great many Members have primaries on Tuesday, and they cannot be here on that day. So, it being very desirous to get rid of the Department of Agriculture conference report next week, if any Member desires to call up the so-called veto resolution on the President's order with reference to the Civil Aeronautics Authority, I think Tuesday would be a more propitious day. [Laughter.]

AMENDMENTS TO THE FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT OF 1938

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5435) to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H. R. 5435, with Mr. PARSONS in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CASEY] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts: Page 16, line 9, after the word "act", strike out the period, insert a semicolon and the following: "or (4) any employee who is employed in any bona fide wholesale establishment."

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, this amendment has been on the desk since last Monday. It has to do with page 16 of the bill and provides an exemption from the hourly provision of the Wage and Hour Act.

Mr. Chairman, I am a stanch advocate of wage and hour legislation. I have voted for it and spoken for it every time it has been before this House. I hope, therefore, that the Members will lend ear to this amendment and give it due consideration. The wage-hour law has for its purpose the raising of the standards of living for those who toil. It seeks to prevent unconscionable exploitation of workers either in the form of low wages or long hours, and I stand firm for that principle. I rise on this floor today, however, to speak for a business that has never dreamed of doing either of these things. I speak in behalf of the so-called wholesale amendment, which many of you have heard about.

The wholesalers of this country number 177,000. They employ 1,300,000 people. They give stable employment for 52 weeks in the year. They give sick leave with pay, they give 2 weeks' vacation with pay, and they pay an average wage to these 1,300,000 employees—mark you this, an average wage of $1,875 per year. So they are not here seeking to be exempted from the pittance of 30 cents an hour. That average wage of $1,875 per year is paid to employees who work 48 hours per week.

What do these employees do? They are not engaged in speed-up production that keeps them constantly and continuously active; they are engaged in servicing other organizations—retailers, hospitals, Government institutions, railroads, steamship lines—all of whom are exempt from the provisions of this act. They must, therefore, be on hand ready to fill orders for these exempt institutions. They operate on a 48-hour week. They pay $36 per week to their employees. They operate on a 6-percent-profit basis. This business has no place in the wage-hour bill. It should not have been included. The result of their inclusion has been to work a great hardship against them.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. CARLSON. Did not the House yesterday, in adopting the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], take care of the wholesalers?

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. The Dirksen amendment goes only part of the way. The amendment I am presenting now involves a great principle. In this country certain lines of business have grown up to become American institutions. They do not exploit anybody; they pay a decent American wage and do not work their employees unconscionable hours. I am speaking in behalf of this type of business, a type of business which the Government should not, and I do not believe ever intended to, interfere with. What happens to this business that employs men 48 hours a week, paying not 30 cents an hour but 75 cents an hour, a business operating on a 6-percent-profit basis, is this: The Government says to them, in effect: "All right, you employ these men 40 hours at 75 cents an hour, but for the extra 8 hours which you work them you must pay $1.50 an hour rather than 75 cents."

This will not help the low-paid workers which the wage and hour law seeks to help; it will not prevent unconscionable hours; it will not create new employment. But I will tell you what it will do; it will open the way for him who seeks to "chisel" and take advantage of every technicality. It opens the way for new men to come into this industry and take the place of well-established businesses. It opens the way for them to come into the industry, and instead of paying the decent wage of 75 cents an hour, to pay only the 30 cents minimum.

I hope this deserving amendment is adopted. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I find myself opposed to the gentleman's amendment, which, he stated, has been on the desk since Monday. So much so I think it would have been better had the amendment remained on the desk and never been called up. This amendment would exempt from the hours provision all employees of all wholesalers. It is estimated there are 1,183,000 workers, including 800,000 in addition to those exempted by amendments already adopted.

Where are you going? Where will you end? I have tried to analyze a few of the amendments.

The Buck amendment exempts from both wages and hours 195,000 industrial employees and a vast number of additional workers employed by cooperatives.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. Just one moment, please.

Mr. BUCK. Will not the gentleman yield for a question only?

Mr. COCHRAN. That is my statement, and I will not amend it.

In addition, the Buck amendment lifts child-labor restrictions as to all workers included within its provisions. That is my definition of the Buck amendment. I let it stand without reservation.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. Not right now; I want to go on with this.

Amending section 7 (c) of the Fair Labor Standards Act extends hours exemption of 7 (c) to approximately 50,000 workers employed in the making of ice cream, malted milk, and processing cheese. This exemption is overlapped by the amendment to section 13 (a) (10) of the act. It also extends exemption for 16 weeks to approximately 148,000 workers in packing, canning, and other similar operations when performed upon products consisting wholly or in chief volume of perishable or seasonable fruits or vegetables, including dried fruits, or in handling or transportation in connection with or incidental to such operations. This is overlapped by the new amendment entitled "section 13 (a) (12)."

This amendment also extends exemption to 152,000 workers employed in the big integrated meat-packing plants in manufacturing soap, glue, grease, fertilizer, oil, oleo, and sausages.

We come now to the amendment to section 13 (a), the Case amendment. This amendment permits exemption from the hours provision of 1,750,000 employees now earning $1,500 or more per annum. This means that any employee working as much as 100 hours per week and earning only the minimum of 30 cents per hour, including truck drivers, will be deprived of all overtime compensation. This exemption to some extent overlaps the wholesale-grocery exemption offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN]. You have a second clause in this amendment which exempts the Amama Society in Iowa.

The amendment which exempts newspapers—section 13 (a) (8)—of less than 5,000 circulation, covering 20,000 workers, from wages and hours.

Amendment 13 (a) (10): By striking out the area-of-production qualification and the Andresen amendment you exempt from wages and hours approximately 714,000 workers engaged in the occupations enumerated in section 13 (a) (10).

As to section 13 (a) (12): This amendment would exempt from wages and hours 148,000 workers employed in processing any product consisting of only or in chief volume of perishable or seasonal fruits or vegetables, including dried fruits, or in handling or transportation in connection with or incidental to such operations.

Amending section 13 (b) by adding a new subsection (4): This exempts from hours the employees of any wholesaler who sells more than 50-percent dollar volume to retailers of agricultural food products. Examples of such retailers are grocery stores, general stores, many drug stores, and candy stores.

Amendment offered by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MILLER] to exempt from the hours provisions employees of all banks and trust companies would deprive of overtime compensation 221,000 workers who notoriously work long hours.

If there are any more that you want to exempt, would it not be better if you had the nerve to get up here and do what you are trying to do; that is, vote to repeal the act entirely or limit its provisions to such an extent it would be worthless? That is exactly what you are attempting to do when you load down this bill, as you have, with these destructive amendments.

I thought the original objective in enacting this legislation was to help the workers by guaranteeing them a minimum wage and maximum hours. I further held the opinion if this was done then the employer would be required to hire additional employees if he did not want to pay for overtime. That would reduce the unemployment rolls. Now you say, by adopting these amendments, millions of our citizens will not be subject to this act. I do not agree with your logic, and propose to vote to keep the act as it is rather than destroy it. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that on all future amendments the debate be limited to not more than 10 minutes. This does not apply to the pending amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and any amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. RABAUT] for 3 minutes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. When committee members are on their feet seeking recognition, are they entitled to it in preference to others or not?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognized the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. RABAUT].

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, the automobile workers have asked the Representatives from their districts to keep the present wage-hour law as it exists today on the statute books. I intend to respect their wishes. The automobile workers themselves are not affected directly by these proposed changes to the Wage and Hour Act. But they oppose any modification in the law because they wish to do for others what they would have others do unto them. They want the present law for the purpose of raising the national income, embodying as it does humanitarian and just principles.

Who are these automobile workers? They are the mechanical geniuses, coming from every State in the Union, who have gathered to produce the product of the greatest business in America. Is there anyone here who would say that these workers have forgotten their brothers in toil back home? No; their insistence on the retention of this law springs from a devotion to a principle, remembering conditions of yore.

They recognize the interrelationship between agriculture and industry. For while an increase in wages may raise the cost of the products which they consume, nevertheless these men realize that increased incomes will result in augmented sales of automobiles, and consequently will mean better employment in industry. This relationship between agriculture and industry is clearly set forth in a survey of the agricultural products used in the annual manufacture of four and one-half million automobiles. On this basis the automobile industry purchases in a single year 540,000 bales of botton; wool, the yield of 3,600,000 sheep; lumber, the product of 90,000 acres; leather, the hides of 135,000 head; flax, the yield of 4,950,000 bushels; tung oil, 3,262,000 gallons; corn, 2,250,000 bushels; hair, the yield of 382,500 goats; turpentine, 9,000,000 pounds; and sugar, the yield of 54,000 acres. Thus I could go on reciting the benefits to every State in the Union resulting from the quest for materials to pass through the hands of the automobile workers.

Incidentally, one-seventh of all the workers in the United States are engaged directly or indirectly in the automobile game. The total number of employees in the Southern States alone is 1,272,376, which number is in excess of 19 percent of the total. For example, there are 64,598 in Alabama, 56,116 in Arkansas, 87,381 in Florida, 95,821 in Georgia, 85,185 in Kentucky, 98,576 in Louisiana, 60,333 in Mississippi, 100,781 in North Carolina, 54,693 in South Carolina, 79,648 in Tennessee, 397,288 in Texas, and 91,956 in Virginia.

Six million men contribute to this beehive of an industry—selling and servicing motor vehicles, building roads, and transporting people and goods over the ribbons of highways throughout the world. Is it any wonder that these workers protested against a change in the Wage and Hour Act, which in their judgment has not yet been tried sufficiently, and which is proving a tremendous help to others in the field of employment. Now, I ask my colleagues, in view of the confusion that has existed in this House during the past 7 days, should we not admire their thoughtful and far-sighted decision?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] for 3 minutes.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman who just preceded me stopped short of telling you who furnished the money that is used for the payment of these commodities which the automobile manufacturer buys. I would like to say to you wheat growers of the West and to you cotton growers of the South that when you take your wheat and cotton to market and exchange it for an automobile, you swap from 10 to 14 hours of your hard labor for 1 of the laborer who made the automobile.

Mr. Chairman, there is nothing wrong with the pending amendment. It is more or less immaterial to me what is done with it. For myself I shall support it because I think that the wholesalers of the country find a need for the relaxation of the law insofar as hours are concerned.

The author of the amendment brought to your attention that the question of pay is not involved, since the average wage is above $1,800 a year. A large part of the operations of a wholesaler are seasonal, and the operator of such a business ought not to be compelled to pay a man drawing from $7 to $10 a day time and a half for overtime work.

This is what I took the floor to say. I trust that those who are interested in improving the wage-hour law may find it agreeable to accept in the main what has been done and not go too far in adopting amendments that will follow. I am not urging you, of course, to forejudge any amendment that may be on the Clerk's desk or any that may later be offered, but if what has been done, if finally accepted and becomes effective, we will have materially improved the wage-hour law.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. I wish to say to the gentleman that from reliable sources I have information that the amendments adopted yesterday will exempt from the hour provisions of this act over 2,000,000 workers, and if this amendment is adopted, an additional 800,000 will be excepted, which makes a total of about 3,000,000.

Mr. COX. The gentleman, of course, knows something of my views on this whole question. As far as I am concerned, I would exempt them all. I would take off the people of America this kind of regimentation that you are undertaking to impose. I believe we have gone far enough in this direction, and I think we have reached the point where we should begin to turn back. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I believe the amendments which have been offered and adopted here have been offered in good faith. I see nothing sacred about a law that has been placed upon the statute books by one Congress. I believe that after a law has been in operation for a period of time and has developed certain oppressive features it is the function of the Congress to improve it. We know that a protest has come in from the farming districts in every part of this country. They are American citizens who have a right to be heard. These amendments have been offered very largely to rectify certain mistakes that were made in the original law. I believe it would be a reflection upon the intelligence of this Congress if we were not to listen to those complaints and do everything in our power, particularly at this time when agriculture is at a low ebb, to protect agriculture and also to protect the small-business men of this country.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of New York. I have only 3 minutes, and the gentlewoman has had all the time she needs, and I say that without any discourtesy at all.

I wish to say to the Members of this House that it would be a tragedy in view of the situation in which agriculture finds itself, particularly those branches of agriculture that depend upon the small processing plants scattered throughout the fruit areas and the vegetable areas of this country, if we were not to take definite action here and support these amendments. Certainly we cannot hope to have the people of this country have very much confidence in this Congress if we fail to meet their criticisms and remedy what has worked injury to them in this legislation.

I have examined the 17 amendments that have been offered and adopted. It appears to me that they are an improvement to the present law. I was amazed yesterday when the chairman of the committee stated that it was her intention to let this bill be loaded up with amendments and then kill it and go back to the law that has worked so much injury to the country.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of New York. If the gentlewoman will pardon me, I wish to finish my remarks right now.

Mrs. NORTON. The gentleman has mentioned my name, and I think in all fairness I ought to be permitted to answer.

Mr. REED of New York. Very well; I yield to the gentlewoman.

Mrs. NORTON. I believe the gentleman's statement is entirely wrong. I said if this amendment was loaded down with amendments I certainly would do that.

Mr. REED of New York. Does the gentlewoman consider that this amendment is loaded down now?

Mrs. NORTON. I certainly do.

Mr. REED of New York. Then the gentlewoman intends to kill it, does she not, and I intend to support it.

Mrs. NORTON. I will say to the gentleman that I certainly do.

Mr. REED of New York. That is what I said in the first place.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of New York. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. ENGEL. Am I mistaken when I say that the gentlewoman from New Jersey on yesterday asked unanimous consent to attach, without a vote of the House and all at one time, the remaining six or seven amendments to this bill?

Mr. REED of New York. Yes; without any examination or debate at all.

Mrs. NORTON. The gentleman is perfectly right.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS].

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, in my opinion the debate on the question of amendments to the Fair Labor Standards Act should not close without some discussion of the important question of the amendments for agriculture in relation to the question of intrastate versus interstate commerce. A careful reading of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 will disclose its comprehensive nature.

The act is predicated upon the constitutional power of Congress to regulate commerce among the several States. That power is unlimited within its properly defined sphere, but the production of agricultural commodities is not within that sphere.

In section 3 (f) of the act agriculture is defined in terms which have been stated during this debate, and in section 13 (a) (6) appears the exemption for "any employee employed in agriculture."

This would seem to indicate that the act assumes that Congress has power to deal with the production of agricultural goods and commodities. The Supreme Court has recently held in Mulford against Smith, decided April 17, 1939, that the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 was constitutional. The case arose in connection with the provisions of the act relating to marketing quotas for flue-cured tobacco. The Court held the act constitutional on the ground that "it purports to be solely a regulation of interstate commerce which it reaches and affects at the throat where tobacco enters the stream of commerce—the marketing warehouse." The Court also stated, "the statute does not purport to control production. It sets no limit upon the acreage which may be planted or produced and imposes no penalty for the planting and producing of tobacco in excess of the marketing quota."

It would seem, therefore, that there is a tacit assumption in the Fair Labor Standards Act that the production of agricultural commodities, such as cotton, tobacco, fruits, and vegetables, corn, wheat and other grains, livestock, and such things as are ordinarily produced by farmers are within the power of Congress to regulate if we wished. Such an assumption is gratuitous and unwarranted.

Let us examine it as a practical matter as to whether farming is commerce. The farmer starts out with his tools and his power equipment, whether it be tractors, horses, or mules, and prepares his lands for a crop. He sows or plants his seed or sets out his trees and shrubs. He cultivates and tills as the crop grows and matures. His crops ripen; they are ready for harvest. The farmer moves into the fields and orchards and gathers his crop. It is still in his possession. It may be stored on his farm or moved immediately into the channels of trade. The Supreme Court has held, in the case above referred to, that at the point where the crop enters commerce, and not before, does the power of the Federal Government in the regulation of commerce apply. The fact, if it be a fact, that watermelons are, in large part, produced for interstate shipment, cannot mean that the growing of watermelons is subject to Federal regulation.

I make these remarks not to argue the cause at length before this Committee but to draw attention to the fact that the Fair Labor Standards Act has intimated that the regulation of agriculture is within the power on which the act is predicated, namely, the power to regulate commerce, although the exemption of agriculture negatived congressional desire to exercise the power in that respect. The point I am seeking to make is that farming in all its branches, including the production of food and fiber crops, among them cotton, grains, fruits, and vegetables, and livestock, is not and cannot be subject to regulation by Congress.

No mere legislation can change the Constitution. Acts are void which are not supported by constitutional authority. There is no constitutional authority for insinuation that we have the right to regulate agriculture. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CASEY].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I understand there are three other amendments to this section on the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. There are four other amendments, the Chair will state.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Then, Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 40 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BARTON of New York. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BARTON of New York: On page 16, line 5, after "Sec. 6", insert "(a)", and after line 9 insert the following: "(b) Section 13 (c) of such act is amended by striking out 'employed in agriculture' and inserting in lieu thereof 'employed in any of the operations described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of the definition of agriculture.'"

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is an amendment to an amendment previously adopted. We have already passed on that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

The amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BARTON] seeks to add a new subsection after section 6, and therefore the Chair thinks the amendment is in order and overrules the point of order.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I make the further point of order that it is an attempt to repeal or to affect by amendment an amendment already adopted. It is an amendment on an amendment, even if it is a new section or subsection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that an amendment might affect, in some degree, an amendment that had been adopted, but that does not necessarily mean that the amendment offered should be ruled out on a point of order.

The Chair overrules the point of order, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. BARTON] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BARTON of New York. Mr. Chairman, the Fair Labor Standards Act in section 13, which is entitled "Exemptions," contains this provision:

The provisions of section 12, relating to child labor, shall not apply with respect to any employee employed in agriculture. * * *

Now, the House has adopted, in the Buck amendment, a new definition of agriculture and that definition, as has been repeatedly pointed out, is in four subdivisions. Subdivisions 1 and 2 relate to those operations performed directly on the farm and, of course, it never has been the intention of Congress that the farmer should be prohibited from employing his own children in work around their own homes. My amendment would continue the exemption of child labor under subdivisions 1 and 2 of the Buck amendment, and would preclude exemptions under subdivisions 3 and 4, which pertain to operations not on the farm, but to operations outside the farm, such as harvesting maple sugar and turpentine, ginning of cotton, handling, planting, drying, packaging, processing, freezing, grading, storing agricultural or horticultural commodities, and so forth; in other words, it is an effort to make clear that we are not letting down the bars in respect of the stand which we have previously taken in outlawing child labor.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, I want to state to the committee that as far as I am personally concerned, I have no use for, and never utilize child labor in connection with any farming operations; on the other hand, I wonder if the gentleman from New York is familiar with the fact that, out of San Francisco and out of Los Angeles and various other cities, there come during the summertime whole families, and they gather up the prunes and the pears, and their children are employed in minor work. There are no schools for children to attend during that period of the year, and their services may add a little revenue, but not much, to the family exchequer. It is outdoor occupation, it is healthful, there is no such thing as long hours involved in the matter, and I wonder if the gentleman has not picked out the wrong place to suggest his amendment. I cannot accept it, not with the idea of being opposed to child-labor prohibition in industry, because I am certainly for that, but I do not believe the gentleman has thought this thing through. So I really cannot accept the amendment. I am sorry.

Mr. BARTON of New York. Mr. Chairman, may I say in answer to the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK] that it seems to me the situation which he has outlined is fully covered by sections 1 and 2 of his definition of agriculture.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of New York. Yes.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Does the gentleman's amendment apply to paragraph 10 of section 13 A? The gentleman mentioned something about canning, storing, ginning, packing, and drying of agricultural products in the raw and natural state.

Mr. BARTON of New York. This will be prohibited under my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Michigan. It is the purpose of the Chair under the motion of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK] to recognize a Member to offer an amendment, and someone else, if there are those, to oppose the amendment. That will consume 10 minutes on each amendment under the motion of the gentleman from Georgia. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I request that I be recognized for 3 minutes and that 2 minutes be granted to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN].

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan for 3 minutes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, this legislation in the beginning had for its purpose the abolition of the sweatshop and the enactment of a law which would prevent child labor. It does not seem possible to me that there is any Member on the floor or any Member of the House who advocates, or who ever at any time approved of, child labor, as that term is commonly used, or who for a moment would countenance a continuation of the sweatshop.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CASEY], who offered the amendment exempting the employees of wholesalers, in my judgment, made as good an argument as could be made by anyone, showing that the law has not only been unfairly administered but that it is unsound as a whole. Under the guise of abolishing child labor and sweatshop labor, this law was put upon the books, but, in reality and as administered, through the reduction of hours and the use of the time and a half device, it has been used to increase wages, to promote monopoly.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CASEY] pointed out that the employees of wholesalers are receiving 75 cents an hour, are working 48 hours a week, and, under the law as administered, were being paid $1.13 for overtime work; and he asked that those wholesalers be given exemption from the provisions of the law.

The gentleman is a spokesman for labor. If he exempts the employees of wholesalers, why not exempt the employees of retailers, or of those engaged in any other business? The position of the gentleman, who, if I understand his attitude correctly, opposes exemptions for others, seems entirely inconsistent. Why should wholesalers in the Third Massachusetts District, from which the gentleman comes, be exempt from the operation of the law, if not only retailers but manufacturers in the Fourth Congressional District of Michigan are not to be exempt? Why should not all those who manufacture automobiles be exempt? The average wage in the motor industry is 90 cents per hour, not 75 cents.

What is good for Michigan should be good for Massachusetts.

The objection which so many of us have to this law, to the way in which it is administered, is because, as it stands, it is a hardship upon the small employer, forcing him to pay a higher wage without an increase in production; compelling him to compete with industries which have a monopoly, like the motor industry, the steel industry, which can charge for their products almost any price they may fix and can therefore pay a wage which the small employer finds it absolutely impossible to meet.

It is not a question of the minimum wage always; it is a question of coming in, as I cited the other day, and paying common labor in the cities on Government contracts 90 cents an hour, and in the steel industry 62½ cents an hour, and then paying overtime, which forces employers in the smaller cities to compete in a market where they are hopelessly outclassed, to pay time and a half at a rate of wage under which the business cannot be carried on. It was for that purpose, in behalf of the smaller employers, who are paying a salary on a monthly or annual basis, that I offered the amendment the other day, to keep them out of the bankruptcy court.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN. If the employees the gentleman speaks of getting 62½ cents an hour, working the maximum hours under the law, could not produce a sufficient amount to fill the order, would not the employer be forced to put additional men to work? That is what we want.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Unfortunately, that is not what always happens. In some cases, the employer pays time and a half; in some other cases, he does put additional men to work.

Let me cite you an instance. A small factory can work two shifts 48 hours, but under the law, being required to pay time and a half for the 6 hours on each shift, the management employs three shifts. There are more men at work—a third more—but the management cuts the hourly rate of pay and the total wage paid to the three shifts is no greater than the amount of the total wage paid to two-thirds of that number of employees.

The purpose of this law was not to put more men to work. The purpose was to increase wages by paying time and a half for overtime.

As stated just a moment ago, another result of the operation of this law is the tendency to force out of business the smaller operators; to create a monopoly so that, by mass production, the higher wage can be paid to a few, while those who formerly worked—and because of lower living expenses, were enabled to live comfortably in the smaller towns and cities—are forced on the relief rolls where they get little, if anything.

It is futile to appoint committees to investigate monopoly; to ask for legislation preventing monopoly, and then, through a wage-hour law, through a national labor-relations law, destroy the business of the hundreds of thousands of employers throughout the Nation who are paying a wage, which, in the communities where it is paid, not only is a living wage but is a wage on which in the past hundreds of thousands—yes, millions—of workers have lived in comfort, in happiness, and have saved sufficient so as to provide themselves with economic security in their old age.

If the law was confined to the purpose for which it was originally passed, that is, the protection of the children, the abolition of the sweatshop, no one would find fault with it. It has been used, however, to aid union officials in forcing ever higher the wage scale in the few industries at the expense of a far greater number of workers employed in the smaller plants.

It has been used to extend the Government's hand into small business scattered throughout the length and the breadth of our land. It has been used as an excuse to build up another bureaucracy here in Washington; to fasten upon the taxpayers another group of tax eaters who, never having operated a business, knowing nothing of industry, guided wholly by the theories and the teachings of those who believe that our Government should be remade, are steadily—and none too slowly but very surely—making it more and more difficult for private industry to give employment.

The motor industry, the steel industry, because of the large amount of capital involved, because of the centralization of management, may be able to withstand the pressure; but the small-business man, who is the foundation of our Government, who pays the vast bulk of our taxes, cannot compete.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BARTON].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BARTON of New York) there were ayes 47 and noes 37.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed Mr. BARTON of New York and Mr. BUCK to act as tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported there were ayes 60 and noes 50.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kansas to offer an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. REES of Kansas: On page 16, line 9, after section 6, strike out the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following: "or (4) any employee employed in any incorporated bank or trust company whose capital stock does not exceed $100,000."

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order. If my memory serves me correctly, that same amendment has been voted down by the Committee previously.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, this particular amendment, I am quite sure, has not been offered before. There was an amendment offered to exempt banks doing a certain portion of their business intrastate. This amendment is to exempt the so-called "white collar" folks that we hear so much about. This amendment does not come at the request of any banks or trust companies, either.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. While some other amendments have been offered containing language somewhat similar in character, this amendment does not embody the same wording that those amendments contained. The Chair therefore overrules the point of order.

The gentleman from Kansas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, this amendment, if adopted, would exempt employees of banks and trust companies having a capitalization of $100,000 or less from the hours provisions of the Wage and Hour Act. It takes in the banks that serve the people of the smaller and medium-sized towns and all rural communities. This amendment has nothing to do with sweatshop labor. It has nothing to do with child labor. Let me say right here that I am just as much in favor of protecting the children from labor abuses as anyone in this House. This amendment has nothing to do with men and women working at hard labor for long hours and meager wages. I am in favor of protecting that group of workers also. I am just as much in favor of paying all groups fair and decent wages and of providing reasonable working hours and decent working conditions as any of you.

The group of employees included in this amendment are provided, generally speaking, with good working hours and are in almost all cases paid reasonable wages for their services, far above the minimum wage scale.

Here is what has occurred in many places, especially in the rural districts: Banks that formerly opened at, say, 9 in the morning and closed at 3 or 3:30 in the afternoon now open at 10 in the morning and close at 2 or 2:30 or possibly at 3 in the afternoon, then close Saturday afternoon or all day Saturday. This works a hardship on the merchant and the farmer, as well as the laboring man, who seeks the services of the bank. Those who manage the bank say they are required to shorten the hours in order to comply with the Wages and Hours Act, They say that if someone is "out of balance" in the accounts at the end of the day they are in violation of the law if the employee works a little overtime. They say they cannot comply with the law and serve the public by permitting the banks to remain open as they formerly did. I realize that a bank has a right to open and close its doors for business just as it may choose, but I do think the public has a right to be considered and that the present method is causing a lot of unnecessary inconvenience on the part of many patrons of the banks. The rank and file of the people have a right to be considered. I do not want the banks to give this as a reason for keeping open 4 hours a day and then close for a working day when others are employed.

As it stands, the banks place notices in the newspapers and say in substance that by reason of the Wage and Hour Act they are required to remain closed during certain hours. Banks do not stay open for long hours in any event. I just do not think the Wages and Hours Act does their employees much good, and I do think it works an inconvenience on the ordinary, average man who wants to get along. If the act would provide for more employment in the banks, it would be different. The amendment is practical and will injure no one.

Mr. HAWKS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. Yes; I shall be glad to yield to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. HAWKS. The gentleman says the banks are using it as a reason for closing. Is it not a necessity?

Mr. REES of Kansas. The gentleman from Wisconsin is right. I appreciate his contribution. There are a number of banks in his community and mine who deem it necessary to keep their banks open for only 4 or 4½ hours a day, and then remain closed almost all day on certain days of the week in order to comply with law.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I shall be glad to yield to the distinguished gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HARRINGTON. This amendment accomplishes, to all practical intents and purposes, the same thing sought to be accomplished by the amendment I offered to the Barden bill.

Mr. REES of Kansas. It does. That was a good amendment, and let me say that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HARRINGTON] was adopted by this Committee with almost no opposition. The Barden amendment was defeated, and therefore the Harrington amendment was eliminated.

Mr. HARRINGTON. I am for the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I appreciate the statement of the gentleman from Iowa.

One thing more, Mr. Chairman. This proposed amendment does not come at the request of any banker. It comes at the request of the ordinary, average individuals living in the small towns and country districts, who feel that they are entitled to this service without any additional expense or hardship on the part of anyone. Mr. Chairman, I am mindful of the statements of some of those who have preceded me, to the effect that all further amendments should be voted down, and that the bill should not be loaded with changes, and so forth.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment is practical. It is fair. It injures no one. It will be helpful to a lot of people who ought to have it. I hope you will support it.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I happen to be interested in a small bank with a capital of less than $100,000. The fact of the matter is that a real small bank is about the only kind of a bank I could be interested in. I feel that we are getting along pretty well with the law as it is now applicable to banks. I have not heard of much opposition from banks. I realize that there may be some sections of the country, particularly in the rural areas, where they might be a little inconvenienced, but on the whole I do not believe it is necessary for us to adopt this amendment. We have now adopted too many amendments, and they are not all of the proper kind to make this a better bill than the law now in existence.

We have adopted 18 or more amendments to this bill. The bill as it stands at the present moment is anything but what the bill should be. And I want to say here that the business interests of this country are just sick. Men in business today are so sick because of the laws that have been enacted in the last few years that they do not care whether they stay in business or not. Let me show you what has happened in the last 7 years as compared with the 7 years previous to the time the present administration came into power.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I cannot yield. The number of workers unemployed as an average for the 7 years previous to this administration was 4,820,000. For the last 7 years the average has been 10,617,000, or an increase of 120 percent in unemployment. That is a terrible situation after all the spending and lending the Government has been doing.

The national income for the 7 years prior to this administration was $69,062,000,000. For the last 7 years it has been $59,783,000,000, or a decrease of 13 percent. That is not good.

The number of strikes was 795 during the first 7-year period as compared with 2,505 during the last 7 years, or an increase of 215 percent in strikes annually. Is that not a terrible situation—increasing the number of strikes annually over 215 percent?

The number of workers affected by the strikes was 301,600 compared to 1,176,500, or an increase of 291 percent. That is bad for the New Deal.

Federal job holders average in the first period of 7 years was 558,200. Since the present administration came into power the number of Federal workers has jumped to 771,830, or an average increase of 38 percent. It increased 100,000 the past year in reorganization.

Coupling these figures with the laws that have been enacted during this administration, you can see that the legislation, instead of putting people to work, has taken men out of jobs. They created strikes and people were placed on the dole.

The reason this law has not worked is because it did not include everybody; when it was written it was not uniform. No law will work that is not uniform in its application. Why have favored classes in a democratic form of government?

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I cannot yield for the moment.

Let me call your attention to the statement made by the chairman of the Committee on Labor, the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. NORTON], on yesterday. She rose in her place at the committee table and said—and I quote:

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all amendments on the Clerk's desk be considered as read and adopted, and printed in the RECORD at this point.

This was an unheard-of request, when she did not know what the amendments were. It shows that she did want to kill the bill.

When you have as chairman of one of the great committees of this House a person—or when you have a committee itself—that is not more interested in trying to establish laws that are for the best interests of the American people, how can you expect to put people back to work? It cannot be done.

I say to you that if you vote to recommit this bill to the Committee on Labor, the Congress does not have very much sense, because you know they will do nothing with it. The Labor Committee of the House will bury it and bury it deep. So far as they are concerned it will be forever dead.

Mrs. NORTON and Mr. REES of Kansas rose.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. REES of Kansas. The gentleman has not yet offered a reason why my amendment should not be adopted.

Mr. RICH. I wanted to get 5 minutes in which to express my own thoughts about this legislation.

Mr. REES of Kansas. That is what I thought.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. MUNDT. Does not the gentleman believe that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas is highly desirable because it will help eliminate the very things about which the gentleman complains?

Mr. RICH. In a way, yes; but in a greater way, no. I am telling you right here and now that if you are going to put a ceiling over hours and a floor under wages, it must be uniform for all the American people. We should maintain a minimum wage and let it work for a few years until the people get accustomed to it, and keep the limit moderate. Then permit, under certain conditions, hours to be liberal to care for necessities. Then we will help the low-paid people to get more, we will help small business, and in time help the country.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will not the gentleman yield? He mentioned my name.

Mr. RICH. I do not yield right now. I have not the time. If I had, I certainly would yield to the chairman of the Labor Committee.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute for the Rees amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MILLER as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. REES of Kansas: Page 16, at the end of line 9, insert "employees of all banks and trust companies."

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I do not think it is necessary to say much about this amendment.

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. PARSONS). The point of order comes too late.

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. I just want to call it to the Chair's attention. I kind of thought it would refresh his mind.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair may say that the point of order comes too late.

The gentleman from Connecticut had already started to speak on his amendment.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I doubt if it is necessary to say much about my amendment. If a law is just and fair to the employees of a bank with a capitalization of $100,000, the same arguments would apply to the employees of a bank with a capital of $150,000 or of $10,000,000, for that matter. Most banks are operating on a 34- to 37-hour week, and as far as the daily routine is concerned are not affected by the hours provision. The situation I have in mind and which I would like to see corrected is one that has developed under the provisions of the Wage and Hour Act, wherein cashiers and tellers in a bank are entitled to time and a half for their overtime—time spent attempting to balance their own books or, in other words, looking for their own errors. Needless to say, these employees are paid two or three times the present minimum wages and are therefore not concerned about the minimum-wage provision. Certainly we do not want to penalize banks by requiring them, if they live up to the letter of the law, to pay employees time and a half while they are looking for their own errors.

When we see Members of this House like the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CASEY] pleading for amendments to this act—a man who has supported and sponsored a great deal of labor legislation—we should be convinced that there is something wrong with either the act or administration of the act. I am surprised it has taken 6 days to consider amendments to the Fair Labor Standards Act. Most of us are in agreement that some amendments should be adopted. The suggestion made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] seems reasonable. It seems to me his suggestion would have given needed relief to agriculture. One or two other amendments would have undoubtedly improved administration of the act. An amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK] amending section 7, subsection B–2, allowing employees to enter into agreement with their employer, regardless of whether the employee belonged to a labor organization or not, would have proven beneficial. I do not believe these 6 days have been wasted, because we certainly must have demonstrated to the Administrator of this act that there was a good deal of dissatisfaction with the administration of the act.

I believe, if the Administrator would take a more liberal attitude, if he would more sympathetically consider the appeals of those interested in agriculture and the appeals of other employers—in many cases of employees—it would not be necessary to adopt any of the amendments which have been offered here.

I have in mind an employer in my district who has tried to give year-round employment to a large number of people, although in his particular business 90 percent of his sales are made in the month of December. This means he is compelled to finance his operations and store a good deal of his merchandise over an 11-month period. Still he has been unable to get the Wage and Hour Administrator to rule that his is a seasonal business. A toy manufacturer in the United States has had to contend with imports from Japan and Germany. It seems to me that, instead of putting obstacles in his path, Congress should lend him every aid.

Mr. Chairman, I have voted against every amendment which has been proposed that would have reduced minimum-wage requirement. I believe 30 cents an hour is an absolute minimum. If an industry cannot maintain that minimum-wage scale, there must be something wrong in that industry. I voted against the so-called Buck amendment, although I realize a better definition of agriculture than the act now contains would have been desirable. There seemed to be a difference of opinion as to whether or not the Buck amendment would have let the bars down on child labor. I feel so strongly that child labor should be barred in every industry that I would not take a chance on voting for that amendment. Both the Barden and Norton bills have been loaded down with so many uncalled-for amendments—amendments, I am told, would exempt from the provisions of the wage-hour law more than 3,000,000 employees—that I will certainly vote against these two bills. It is my understanding that if the amendments which were adopted in the Committee of the Whole are voted down, when we go back into the House we will be called upon to vote on the original Norton bill. This bill has not even been read in the Committee of the Whole and is a bill that the Committee on Labor itself would not support. I sincerely hope that the Administrator will take the time needed to read the debate and will so govern himself that many of those who have prayed for amendments will be satisfied by administrative orders.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MILLER] for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES].

The substitute amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. REES of Kansas) there were—ayes 22, noes 45.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KRAMER: Page 16, line 9, after the word "act", strike out the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following: "or (4) any employee who is employed by the month and paid at the rate of $200 a month or more, or who is employed by the week and paid at the rate of $50 a week or more, or who is employed by the hour and paid at the rate of $1.25 an hour or more, and who is guaranteed employment of 40 hours or more a week."

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment simply exempts those employees who by reason of their employment receive a salary or compensation well in excess of that amount which is contemplated by the act and therefore should be exempt from the provisions thereof.

As has been pointed out in connection with the discussion of the shooting unit and distant locations in connection with the moving-picture industry, if an amendment providing for such an exemption is not possible, serious hardship will result to the motion-picture producer unless the specific exemption relating to the shooting unit and distant locations are provided.

In view of the fact that 40 cents an hour is the highest minimum rate contemplated by the act and $30 a week is the rate of compensation required to be paid to qualify within the Administrator's definition of executive and administrative employees, it is felt that the minima of $200 a month, $50 a week, or $1.25 an hour are more than adequately high. Other amendments have been suggested in which only a minimum monthly rate of compensation is proposed. Such an amendment would be of no benefit to the motion-picture-producing industry. In this business most employees, including executives receiving some of the highest salaries that are paid throughout the Nation, are paid on a weekly basis, and certain other highly paid employees are paid on an hourly basis. Practically no one is paid on a monthly basis. In order to avoid the objection that the hourly rate permits only a few hours of employment, which is sometimes necessary, the proposed amendment carries a proviso that to be exempt an employee must be guaranteed 40 hours or more employment a week.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that this amendment be adopted. I understand that the committee has made no objection thereto.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I believe we have wasted about 6 days of good time. As it stands right now, a simple resolution of repeal would have been a whole lot better than what you have before this body now, because you have exempted every single, solitary person but the unemployed, and the Lord knows there are enough of them. I do not see why an amendment is not offered here exempting them. It would make just as much sense as some of the amendments that have been offered and adopted during all this confusion.

The wage and hour bill has certainly done some good in this Nation. It has raised the standard of living for the common masses. You know and I know that it should remain on the books. I do not believe there is a single, solitary Member of this House who would offer an amendment to repeal the original act, but that is practically what you do if you adopt this amendment and this bill.

I am pleased to know that we did adopt the amendment with regard to child labor. I was surprised to hear men in the Well of this House say they wanted to keep children working in the fields during the summertime because of the fact that it was healthful for them. The place for children during the summertime is on the playgrounds, not in the fields toiling with their hands. They should be out on the playgrounds getting a little recreation. They should be allowed to live a normal life and not be pushed into the fields to work during the summertime, during the vacation, so that somebody can profit by child labor.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I have heard for the past 4 or 5 years many expressions from Members of this House to the effect that if labor would only get together we would know what to do. They have said that rightly, knowing there has been a very serious division in the labor movement. The oft-repeated expression has been, "If we only knew what labor wanted, if we could just get these warring forces together, we could vote intelligently on the legislation." Now you have before you a bill to which the 3 groups of organized labor in this Nation, 10,000,000 members of organized labor, the articulate workers of the Nation, the American Federation of Labor, the C. I. O., and the 20 standard railroad labor organizations are unalterably opposed. They have all expressed to me that they are opposed to any amendment to the Wage and Hour Act at this session, and they have set forth the reason.

We have seen a great demonstration in the past 5 days of what some Members of this House will do when they know the 10,000,000 organized workers of this country are together on a measure. Added to that number, I may say, are 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 inarticulate workers who have not the method of collectively expressing themselves, and they are trembling with fear today.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KEEFE. The rule under which this bill came before the House, as I recall, provided for debate upon the pending measure and the amendments thereto. The gentleman has moved to strike out the last word. If other Members are going to be denied the right to make generalized speeches which are not confined to the pending amendment, we will be here another 5 or 6 days. It seems to me the rule ought to be invoked, and I make the point of order that the gentleman is not talking on the pending amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri will proceed in order.

Mr. WOOD. If I am not talking on the amendments and the effect thereof, I would like to know what I am talking about. Does the gentleman know what I am talking about? I believe if the gentleman would listen, he would find out I am talking about this wage-hour bill.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. I may say that it is not the fault of the gentleman or the members of the Labor Committee that we have been here for several days. If the previous question had been ordered, it would have been all over then.

Mr. WOOD. That is very true.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. No; I shall not yield.

Now, a word about the amendments. I was born and raised on a farm. This is the first time I ever knew that a greenhouse is a farm. The Buck amendment, among other definitions of a farm, includes a greenhouse. You have taken all the greenhouses of the Nation from under the Wage and Hour Act, and there are many thousands of them. You have taken from under the act no less than 100,000 greenhouse workers—men and women who do the hardest work that ever has been done, either rural or urban.

Mr. Chairman, I believe the proper thing to do is to consummate our work here and send this bill back to the committee, where we may bring out later some understandable legislation. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from South Dakota insist on his point of order?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I believe this amendment does not conflict with the other amendment, so I withdraw my reservation of a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. KRAMER].

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLAND. Apropos of the statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK], can the previous question be ordered in Committee of the Whole?

The CHAIRMAN. The previous question is never in order in the Committee of the Whole.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any further amendments to section 6? [After a pause.] Are there any amendments to section 7?

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am one of those who has been sitting here during the last 5 or 6 days without indulging the patience of the House. If there is any Member of this House who is optimist enough to even believe that this bill will ever become law he has an imagination greater than any human being I have ever met. [Laughter.] Up to this time, during the debate on this bill, we have added 18 different amendments. They have covered a wide range. They have ranged from buttermilk to sawmills, affecting various parts of the country. This is only indicative of the widespread, adverse effect that the wage and hour law has had on the country affecting agriculture throughout this land; otherwise these many amendments would not have been offered. There have been more amendments offered and rejected than we have had amendments approved. There will be others, undoubtedly.

In the debate we have heard a great deal about sweatshops. I am one who voted for the wage-hour law in the hope that it would do some good. As I read and understand the debate, the opposition is not directed so much to the 30 cents an hour as the minimum wage as it is directed to the penalty of time and a half which this law provides against small business, which cannot pay it. It is not the penalty of the wage and a half at 30 cents an hour, but the wage and a half far above the minimum in the wage-hour law that imposes a burden on agriculture, business, and industry and its many diversified interests.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DONDERO. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman realize that the Senate has just sent over a bill to us with 116 amendments attached to the House bill? Why, therefore, should we worry about 18 amendments? [Laughter.]

Mr. DONDERO. Let me say to the gentleman that the legislative body at the other end of the Capitol also sent a bill back here the other day with regard to rivers and harbors with 208 amendments. Some members of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors did not even recognize it as it came back to the House.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DONDERO. I yield to the gentlewoman from New Jersey.

Mrs. NORTON. I just wanted to observe that the gentleman has stated that the bill principally affected hours and not wages. I call his attention to the fact that under the amendments that have been adopted up to the present time there have been 2,900,000 workers exempted from the wage provision of 30 cents an hour in the act.

Mr. DONDERO. Possibly, that is so. I do not want to debate the matter any further because we have heard too much about that on the floor of the House, but let me just say this.

I recall that yesterday the gentlewoman from New Jersey, the author of this bill and the chairman of the Committee on Labor, appealed to the House to adopt en bloc six amendments on the Clerk's desk without even being read. It was obvious to every member of the committee that such procedure was intended to reach just one objective and that was to load this bill down with conflicting amendments so that no Member would vote for it and completely destroy every attempt to perfect the wage and hour law to make it workable and fair.

We have heard the expression "sweatshop" used time and again during this debate. Do you know of any group of people in this country who work longer and harder and sweat more for less than the people engaged in agriculture—the farmers in this country? Their only limitation on hours is the rising and setting sun. They are exempted from the operations of this bill.

Those who are opposed to any amendment to the wage and hour law do not shed crocodile tears over the children of the farmers who assist in the work on the farm and know nothing about a minimum wage or a maximum hour. Neither do they weep over the importation of goods into this country manufactured and produced in foreign lands where child labor is used; not even when those goods come in competition with the same articles produced in this country in abundance.

The many amendments offered to many and varied activities in connection with agriculture and agricultural products—seasonal, perishable, and many others; particularly those handled by small-business concerns, processing plants, and farmers' cooperatives—is an indication of what happens when we try to pass legislation and create a frame in which to fit all of the diversified interests, activities, and ramifications of business, agriculture, and industry throughout the United States. It just cannot be done. [Applause.]

While the wage and hour law is an ideal to better the condition of the wage earner and the amount he may earn and the hours he shall work, and in which I am in full accord, nevertheless, in too many instances it has been shown to work a hardship, inequality, inequity, and to result in much unemployment. These conditions should be corrected, and there should be no opposition to making the law workable and just. I doubt whether we can pass a law without doing more harm than good, when we attempt to pass a wage and hour law to fix a standard for everybody in the United States.

Mr. Chairman, I have in my possession a short statement, prepared by an instructor at Vanderbilt University at Vanderbilt, Tenn., entitled "Unseen Effects of Wage Law," which I shall ask permission to include as a part of my remarks when we go back into the House.

The matter referred to follows:

UNSEEN EFFECTS OF WAGE LAW

(By Gus W. Dyer, professor of economics and sociology, Vanderbilt University)

The average man thinks of the industrial life of this country as confined almost exclusively to a group of big factories and medium-sized factories, located in big cities or big industrial centers. Conditions in these big industries are the foundation for practically all of the labor legislation at Washington.

The public in general is under a delusion that the big industries have driven out practically all of the small factories. The few left are not considered worthy of consideration in labor legislation. As a matter of fact, the big industries have not driven out the small factories. The small factories make up a very large part of our industrial life today.

In 1929, 210,954 factories of all types were in operation in this country. Over 7,000 of these factories employed no wage earners; 95,767 employed from 1 to 5 wage earners; 53,524 employed from 6 to 20 wage earners; and 25,022 employed from 21 to 50 wage earners. The total number of wage earners employed in these small factories was 1,689,847. The average number of wage earners in the 174,313 small industries in operation was 10.

These little factories that give employment to nearly 2,000,000 people are located in cities, towns, villages in the rural sections everywhere. Among them we find sawmills, gristmills, feed mills, chair factories, furniture factories, mattress factories, textile factories, sheet-iron industries, clothing factories, overall factories, etc.

The wages of each employee are determined by the productivity of the worker. Each gets the market value of his services. The skilled get high wages; the unskilled, the untrained, the slow, the inefficient get relatively low wages. But all are paid by the same standard—the standard of their productive capacity. With two or three members of a family at work, even at low wages, the family is able to maintain its independence and respectability.

A very large proportion of these small industries are located in small towns, villages, and rural communities. There are 13,433 small towns in this country that have populations of 2,500 or less. Over 10,000 towns have populations of less than 1,000. The combined population of these small towns is 9,183,035. This is a population greater than the combined populations of Boston, St. Louis, St. Paul, Buffalo, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, New Orleans, Dallas, Houston, Indianapolis, and Chicago. Yet little thought is given to the life and problems of these little towns.

Few of those who are operating these small industries are making much above a simple, decent living. These industries are in no condition to absorb any extra business cost. The productivity of labor is a definite, fixed quantity that can be determined definitely on the market. The labor in an industry must produce the value of the wages paid or the industry is doomed. These small industries have no reserve out of which to pay continuous losses. A minimum wage of 40 cents an hour or $3.20 a day for 8 hours would mean the elimination of all workers who cannot produce the minimum, and this would, perhaps, mean the elimination of over one-half of the workers in the small industries, and the closing of a very large proportion of these industries. It is doubtful if the serious results of the minimum wage on these industries would ever reach the newspapers.

The 13,433 small independent, self-supporting, self-respecting communities in which small business lives and thrives are the very heart of real American life and American ideals. If left alone they will take care of themselves under American constitutional industrial freedom. It is little less than a crime for an absentee, centralized government to make it illegal for honest, upright citizens to offer millions of workers in these towns an opportunity to work and support their families by their work. It is far worse for a government to force these people to join the ranks of the dependents and the mendicants.

There is a higher law than any we can pass in this body that controls the fortunes of people in their business and private affairs, and that is the inexorable law of nature which rules the products of farm and field and the impelling economic law of supply and demand which controls the markets of both the factory and the farm.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Are there any amendments pending to section 7?

The CHAIRMAN. There is none on the desk.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Then, Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on section 7 do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, are there any amendments to section 8?

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any other amendments to section 7? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. We now pass to section 8. Is there any amendment to be offered to section 8?

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. My purpose in asking recognition at this time is to call attention to the parliamentary situation. When we conclude the amendment, the Chair will then announce that the question is on the amendment as amended, which will include all of the amendments made in the Committee of the Whole to the part in italics in the printed bill. That is voted up or down. If it is rejected, of course, we then go to the reading of the original bill in the Committee of the Whole for amendment. The probability is that the amendment as amended will be adopted in the Committee of the Whole. The Committee then rises, and when the Speaker puts the question on whether a separate vote is demanded on any amendment, there will be a roll call demanded on the amendment as amended. If, perchance, that is adopted, that is one thing. If, however, it is rejected, the situation then is that the matter before the House is the original bill that appears stricken through in the printed copy. The vote, unless there is a motion to recommit, will then be on the bill which now appears stricken through. That is my understanding.

Some question has been made about the number of cannery workers exempted. Information has come to me that it is not a million people, as stated, but 285,000, many of whom receive more than the 30 cents an hour, and that consequently the number of persons who are affected in fact are many less than appear in the statement. The total number of persons employed is 432,359. Of this number, 72,019 are exempt from both the wage and hour provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act, according to a report of the Wage and Hour Division of the United States Department of Labor. I am referring to persons employed in canning, drying, preserving, packing of fruits and vegetables, as covered by the amendment. The Bland amendment exempts only those employees engaged in canning, processing, freezing, and storing of perishable fruits and vegetables and dried fruits. The amendment does not exempt approximately 75,000 employed in canning nonperishable fruits and vegetables. Therefore, the number of employees affected by the amendment exempting employees processing perishable fruits and vegetables amounts to less than 285,000, this figure being obtained by making deductions above. A large number of those people are receiving at the present time more than 30 cents an hour, so that in the last analysis, while there may be a number of persons exempted the actual number affected is much less.

When the wage and hour bill was passed we were repeatedly told that there would be imperfections, but that we could perfect the bill thereafter. Heaven knows there are imperfections, and we have been trying to the extent of our ability to perfect the original bill. That is the work we have been doing for the last 5 days—trying to perfect what the committee in its judgment and wisdom failed to do. I usually defer to the committee.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield.

Mr. BLAND. Yes.

Mr. BUCK. The gentleman will recall that probably 45 percent of the canning—at least of fresh fruits and vegetables—is done in California, and I assure the gentleman that the wage level is far more than the minimum set up in this act.

Mr. BLAND. Of course, and many States have covered the minimum wages.

Mr. BUCK. I have no doubt that that is so in Virginia and Texas and elsewhere.

Mr. BLAND. Many States have covered the situation, and are trying to do it at the present time. They are trying to improve conditions, and they are only asking that we give them an opportunity to do so.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move that debate upon this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any further amendments to section 8?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the section.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that that amendment is not in order.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can move to strike out the last two words, but all debate on this section is now closed.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, it is generally admitted by the membership of the House that almost the only reason why it is necessary to amend the Wage and Hour Act is to set the Administrator straight on his interpretation of a number of words and phrases in the present act. Even the Administrators, present and past, admit that these words and phrases are impossible of interpretation in a way that is reasonable and proper under all circumstances. That simply goes to show how difficult it is to write a law applicable to all labor and industry, be fair to all, and at the same time not be involved by so many exceptions and exemptions that even a Philadelphia lawyer could not interpret it the same way twice in succession. We have been witnessing here in the House for the past week an effort to reinterpret the act for the guidance of the Administrator, and we have heard the pleas of those injured by his interpretations and the pleas of the low-wage groups against elimination of the "floor" to wages.

Mr. Chairman, while in California we are not concerned for ourselves over the minimum-wage provisions of the act, as our workers—agricultural workers in particular—receive the highest wages paid anywhere in America, and for the most part quite substantially in excess of the minimum-wage provisions of the act; yet we are concerned over the low wages paid to workers who live elsewhere and are in competition with us. I am in favor of minimum wages for all work of an industrial type, certainly; and for agriculture we must do all we can, and then some, to bring about fair prices for farm products in order that all farmers may pay better wages and still make a fair income for themselves.

When I flew home to my district for a brief visit a few weeks ago I made a point of inquiring from a number of people, in organized labor and in agriculture and in business, concerning their views on the Wage and Hour Act. The leaders of organized labor that I spoke to were rather unconcerned. In fact, the attitude of these friends seemed to be that they themselves would rather retain the full opportunity of negotiating on these questions with employers than to have any such decisions predetermined by Federal law. They, of course, favored the abolition of sweatshops and the raising of the underpaid to decent levels, as do all of us here, but they seemed fearful lest the Government encroach too far on their precincts, that of collective bargaining.

Our farmers—and most of them distribute through cooperatives—were greatly concerned over the seasonal provisions of the act as they are interpreted by the Administrator, and over his rulings concerning area of production, and I firmly believe that they are entirely right. They were vitally interested in the definition placed upon "agriculture," and in that I join them, too. By voting for the Buck amendment I have endeavored to aid in clarifying that definition, and by voting for the Barton amendment I have endeavored to clarify and safeguard against the employment of child labor in certain activities of agriculture. As a youth I myself worked in a canning factory in summer vacation months and was none the worse for the experience, but I realize that there are situations in the United States where children are viciously exploited. This I would by all means prevent.

When the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND] offered his amendment which takes certain cannery workers and others out from under the protection of both wages and hours I voted against it, because of all people these are entitled to protection of minimum wages most certainly, although I realize that most of them desire as many hours of work as they can get during the comparatively short seasonal operations of these plants.

I have voted for and against many other amendments, but my purpose has been to maintain minimum-wage provisions and to make the hours provisions as elastic as is reasonable in order to enable workers to make as much money as they can in seasonal work and at the same time place no undue burdens upon the producers. Some things that I voted for have been defeated and some that I voted against have been adopted. I am frank to say that there is much that is now in the bill that I do not favor, but I shall be forced to trust in the good officers of the body that sits in the other end of the Capitol so to correct our mistakes that this shall become a good amendment to the Wage and Hour Act, and of real benefit to those who find themselves injured by the rulings and interpretations and findings of the greatly harassed Administrator. My decision in this matter is at best a close one as there is much in this measure now that I object to, but I trust that in voting for this committee amendment, as it has been amended here, it will, if adopted, go to the other end of the Capitol and be set in proper order.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, may I say that while nearly everyone seems to favor minimum-wage protection, many fail to consider the fact that minimum-wage provisions will not do us any good unless we protect such wages from the competition of the coolie labor of Asia, the peon and slave labor of this Hemisphere, and the low-wage groups of Europe. We must have a protective tariff, and a good one, if we are to keep out those products from abroad that compete with our labor and make low wages in this country a necessity if people are to work at all. No one here has ventured to try to justify lowering tariffs, as is now being done through reciprocal-trade agreements, and at the same time maintain and improve our standard of living. Those things do not fit together and some day, before too long, I hope, the American workers and the American people generally will wake up to it. I hope it will not be too late.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any other amendment to section 8? The Chair hears none.

We will pass to section 9. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BARTON] is recognized to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BARTON of New York: Page 18, after line 23, insert a new section, as follows:

"Section 15 of the act is amended by adding a new paragraph immediately after paragraph (b), to read and to be lettered as follows:

"'(c) No employer, agent, contractor, or subcontractor (as such terms are defined by the Administrator or his authorized representative), directly or indirectly, shall cause any goods to be produced by home workers in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands subject to the provisions of section 6 unless he shall hold a certificate issued by the Administrator or his authorized representative. The Administrator, or his authorized representative, shall have power to make such regulations or orders, including regulations or orders providing for the issuance and revocation of such certificates, and for standards restricting the number of such agents, contractors, or subcontractors, as are necessary or appropriate to safeguard to home workers in Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands the minimum rates of pay provided by section 6. Such regulations or orders may require the posting of a compliance bond with the Administrator in an amount of not more than $2,500. This subsection shall take effect upon the expiration of 60 days from the date of its enactment.'"

Mr. BARTON of New York. Mr. Chairman, this is merely a perfecting amendment. The Committee has already adopted an amendment empowering the Administrator to fix the rates for piece work in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. The amendment now before the Committee gives the Administrator the power to license contractors by the issuing of certificates to them, inasmuch as most of the piece work in the islands is controlled by contractors. Such licenses would make it possible for the Administrator to keep track of those who are in control of the piece-work industry and to make sure that the law is observed.

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I yield.

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. Did I understand the gentleman to say this was a technical amendment?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I say it is a perfecting amendment.

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. Did I further understand the gentleman to say that the Administrator would have to issue all these certificates?

Mr. BARTON of New York. This gives him the power to issue certificates to contractors and subcontractors in the islands, who are in charge of the piece-work industry.

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. I do not question the gentleman, but I wonder if he has discussed that amendment with the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I have not discussed it with the Resident Commissioner, but it has been discussed with the Administrator of the act, and it is offered at his request. The gentleman understands we have already accepted an amendment fixing piece-work rates in the islands.

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. Yes. The only thing that disturbs me about it, if I may say to the gentleman, I am reasoning somewhat on this amendment as I did on some of the agricultural amendments the gentleman has offered. I think the gentleman from Puerto Rico would know more about the Puerto Rican situation than the gentleman from New York would know. I am interested in his version.

Mr. BARTON of New York. I will be glad to yield.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Does the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BARDEN] oppose any regulation whatever of this home work in Puerto Rico, which is handed down from contractor to contractor, whereby handkerchiefs which sell for $12 a dozen in New York are made by these women and children who receive only 5 cents a dozen? Does not the gentleman want some regulation of that exploitation at all? Does he want a clear field for these exploiters from the city of New York down in Puerto Rico?

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. Would you kindly tell the gentleman we are not talking about the same thing he is?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Well, it is the same thing. The gentleman does not want to understand when he feels that it hurts him.

Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina. Well, you cannot hurt me.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Oh, yes; I can.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of New York. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I wish to ask the gentleman from New York if he really means to say to us that he recommends that the needle industry of Puerto Rico, insofar as it relates to piece work, is to be put into the hands of a Federal bureau, so that the Administrator of the Wage and Hour Act can, in a word, dispose of the rights, or confer proprietary rights on certain individuals who are qualified according to the Administrator's rules, inside and outside, official and otherwise, and turn the whole needlework industry of Puerto Rico over to that kind of bureaucratic control? I just cannot believe that he means to do that.

Mr. BARTON of New York. The committee has already adopted an amendment giving the Administrator power to fix rates of wages on piece work at rates commensurate with the hourly wages established by the industry committees. All this amendment does is simply give him the right to license these contractors who are giving out this piece work, to require such reports from them as will make it possible for him to know whether they have paid the rates he has fixed.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If the gentleman will permit a further interruption I may state that I have no objection to the Administrator's issuing the rules, but I do object to that Administrator or any other Administrator having the power to issue a license to those who engage in private industry, whether it is in Puerto Rico or in the continental United States. I do not believe we should go so far as that.

I hope that the Chair will permit the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico to give us further light on this.

Mr. BARTON of New York. Mr. Chairman, I shall be very glad to yield to the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Will the Chair kindly inform me whether further amendments are pending to this section?

The CHAIRMAN. There are no further amendments to this section pending at the desk.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia moves that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

The question is on the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I desire this time on this amendment just to make two or three observations. We have in Puerto Rico at the present time approximately 1,800,000 people. The Puerto Rican population is increasing at the rate of 35,000 to 40,000 per annum. Within the last few years you have sent about $160,000,000 of Federal funds to Puerto Rico, of which amount about $32,500,000 constituted benefit payments in connection with the soil conservation and excise tax on agricultural operations. You are now being asked in different bills and proposals before the Budget Director and legislative and appropriation committees of the House, some of which will have to be acted upon this current session, for sums aggregating in excess of another $125,000,000, all in the name of relief and rehabilitation and work of that kind financed by the Federal Treasury. You are moving in the direction of a quarter of a billion dollars for all of these projects under way and being proposed. Among the 225,000 up to 500,000 certifiable unemployables you have probably 70,000 people there out of work in the needle industry alone as a result of the application of the Wage and Hour Act, which has, according to testimony submitted, reduced the industry's operations to about 40 percent of capacity. You are converting the Puerto Rican people into a communistic state and you have in operation there an undertaking the like of which in size and reliance upon Federal funds is carried on nowhere else under the American flag. To save my life, I cannot understand why this House should further encourage that proposition by authorizing the Wage and Hour Act Administrator to license—to license those who still have courage enough to go ahead and carry on some type of needlework operation that will give a little work to the people there and enable them to be self-sustaining and be somewhat independent of the inadequate—if that is to be their sole income—Federal appropriations being made.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. No; I decline to yield to the gentleman from New York. He has spoken several times on this proposition and has failed to present to the House the full facts upon which to act. I believe that he would have the people rely more upon appropriations from the Federal Treasury and less upon their own efforts at wages which have heretofore prevailed. In this we disagree, because I would not personally destroy the economy which must compete with Chinese and Japanese workers, but I would give the Puerto Ricans the market in preference to foreign countries. Let them work and thereby reduce the burden on the Federal Treasury. The local legislature can, if it will, eliminate a lot of the graft and subcontracting connected with the needlework industry and thereby greatly assist the people, and we should insist that be done and that the industry in this manner be preserved and the people better protected as to income for their efforts applied to the needlework. To enforce through the Fair Labor Standards Act provisions that result in a destruction of the industry for these people and make them dependent upon Federal grants and appropriations is unfair and I have no sympathy with such a course. Later I hope to be able to obtain time to present further facts and statistics to the Members of the House.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there further amendments to section 9? (After a pause.) The Chair hears none.

We pass to section 10. The gentleman from California [Mr. KRAMER] has an amendment pending at the desk which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KRAMER: Page 19, line 11, after the word "damages", insert:

"No such action hereafter commenced shall be maintained for any unpaid minimum wages or unpaid overtime compensation which accrued more than 6 months before the commencement of such action."

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment simply fixes a limit of time in which the action may be brought either by reason of violation under the civil or criminal aspects of the act.

Employers who violate provisions of the act with respect to the payment of overtime, however innocently, are liable for the unpaid overtime, for an equal amount in addition as liquidated damages, for costs and attorneys' fees. They are also subject to a fine of $10,000 and 6 months' imprisonment.

It is extremely difficult in many cases to determine whether or not the overtime provisions of the act are applicable. The discussion above with respect to the difficulty of applying the definitions of the exempt classes is proof of this.

With regard to many groups of employees a basis of employment is determined on which, at least, is acquiesced in by the employees. In many other cases the arrangement is approved by an agreement between the producer-employer and a bona fide labor organization representing the employees. Under such circumstances it is manifestly unfair for employees who have continued in their employment without objection over a period of years to sue for large amounts of overtime which are alleged to have accumulated. The same is true with respect to criminal prosecution of employers under these circumstances.

For these reasons it is urged that a short period of limitation should be provided for, both with respect to civil liability and criminal prosecution.

I believe it only fair that some limitation be placed in order that many months or years may not go by before some action is brought against an employer.

I hope the amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KRAMER. I yield.

Mr. HOOK. As I understood the language of the gentleman's amendment it appeared to me to be not a statute of limitation but a statute limiting the amount that may be sued for, not over 6 months of back pay.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there further amendments to section 10? (After a pause.) The Chair hears none.

Is there amendment to section 11?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes, or 10 minutes in all.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, the parliamentary situation after the reading of the substitute for amendment has been completed will be a vote on agreeing to the substitute as amended. If the substitute is agreed to, then it supersedes the Norton bill, and when you go into the House there will be only one vote on that amendment. A separate vote can be demanded upon the committee amendment as amended. I refer to the various amendments because many Members who come from districts that are both industrial and agricultural will be in a very, very difficult position on account of the fact that in this substitute have been included many amendments that are going to be viewed with extreme disfavor by one side or the other or approved by one side or the other. Personally I have no objection to the substitute going to the House, because I am going to vote against it, but if I represented a district that had both industry and agriculture in it, with the situation as it now exists, with this substitute loaded up as it is why, I would have no hesitancy in voting the substitute down in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. RAYBURN. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. RAYBURN. We have been voting and we have been perfecting the substitute. What will be our condition if in the Committee of the Whole we vote down the substitute? We are still in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. McCORMACK. Absolutely.

Mr. RAYBURN. Then the original Norton bill will be open for amendment?

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes.

Mr. RAYBURN. And all of these amendments may be offered and adopted?

Mr. McCORMACK. Exactly.

Mr. RAYBURN. And 6 or 7 days more will be used.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is exactly the situation.

Mr. RAYBURN. If in the Committee of the Whole the Committee votes to adopt the substitute, even though the Members are not for the substitute and would not vote for the bill when it goes back into the House, a vote can be had upon the substitute and a motion to recommit the bill would be in order in the House. We will get somewhere that way.

Mr. McCORMACK. I agree with the gentleman, but that would be, in my opinion, legislative inconsistency. I am not characterizing the observations of my friend, but I am not going to be in the position of urging the membership to accept the substitute loaded down, then defeat it in the House. Furthermore, in the House there will be a roll call on this substitute. It does not bother me. I am against it. But if I represented a district where there was industry and agriculture, with this substitute loaded up as it is, then I would have a direct question presented to me of a very practical nature. I would not blame any Member of the House who is in that position for considering it.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Will my good friend from Massachusetts let us do our own worrying? [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman from Massachusetts is doing no worrying.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Then do not worry over us.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am not worrying about the gentleman either. I am simply calling this to the attention of my colleagues for whatever it may be worth, and the gentleman is not the whole House. It is a very practical matter which some of them who are in a tight situation must consider.

Mr. BLAND. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. BLAND. Suppose the substitute is voted down in the House. Then does not the vote recur on the original Norton bill?

Mr. McCORMACK. That is my understanding.

Mr. BLAND. If there is a motion to recommit, we will vote on the motion to recommit. If the motion to recommit is voted down, and the previous question is ordered, the vote will come then on the passage or rejection of the original Norton bill?

Mr. McCORMACK. Exactly; but that does not obviate the uncomfortable position that many Members will be in who come from a district where there is industry and agriculture.

Mr. WARREN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I do not fear it myself. It does not disturb me personally. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. WARREN. The gentleman from Virginia asked what would take place in the House and the gentleman very correctly informed him; but if the substitute should be voted down in the Committee of the Whole, then we will be here, as was properly stated by the gentleman from Texas, for the next 6 days on the same bill.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is the practical situation.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. If the gentleman and his friends on the other side of the aisle will support the perfecting American amendment to section 12 which I have pending on the Clerk's desk, then nobody will have to hesitate about a roll-call vote in the House. I think we can jump on the band wagon and vote for the bill whether we come from a farming or industrial district.

Mr. McCORMACK. I have no knowledge of the amendment, and I will reserve my own judgment in relation to it.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COCHRAN. If, as the gentleman says, we vote down the substitute in the Committee of the Whole, we would then consider the Norton bill again.

Mr. McCORMACK. Exactly.

Mr. COCHRAN. There is nothing that would prevent the same amendments that have been adopted or voted down during the past 7 days from being offered again to the Norton bill?

Mr. McCORMACK. That would be a matter for the Chair to pass upon. In my opinion, they would be in order.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman is an outstanding parliamentarian. I know his view is correct.

Mr. McCORMACK. All we can do is rely on the intelligence of this body at that time.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Does not the gentleman realize that the necessity and the reason for having so many amendments to this bill is because of the erroneous interpretations that have been made by the Wage and Hour Administrator?

Mr. McCORMACK. I think most of these amendments are emotional. Men are on the spot. It is the old group ganging up such as we have on the tariff, and we see the results, as has been evidenced all this week by probably the most disgraceful spectacle this Congress has engaged in during my 12 years as a Member of this body. It is not a Congress; it is simply a chaotic group of individuals.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to proceed for 5 additional minutes, so that I may yield.

Mr. BUCK. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I would like to know whether the gentleman will answer questions.

Mr. McCORMACK. I cannot yield any more. I withdraw my request, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BUCK. Will the gentleman vote for the Buck amendment if we get back on the Norton bill?

I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. McCORMACK. I have withdrawn my request, Mr. Chairman, so the gentleman cannot have the pleasure of objecting.

Mr. BUCK. I would not have any pleasure in objecting to a request by the gentleman.

Mr. McCORMACK. I asked for 5 minutes because so many Members rose asking me to yield. I will yield to everyone if I am given 5 more minutes.

Mr. BUCK. I withdraw my objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. In connection with the previous question vote, if that had been agreed on——

Mr. BUCK. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. McCORMACK. I cannot yield.

Mr. BUCK. The gentleman is not showing charity, at least.

Mr. McCORMACK. Charity? Charity has very little place in this body on a question of this kind, when an effort is being made to sabotage one of the finest pieces of legislation ever enacted by the Congress of the United States. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts declines to yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. On the previous-question vote, if the previous question had been ordered, we would never have had this spectacle. For the RECORD, because some people might be interested in knowing, I have had that vote broken down. Thirty-one Republicans voted for the previous question, or about 30 percent of the Republicans who voted on that question; 109 Republicans voted against the previous question, or approximately 70 percent of the Republicans who voted on that question; 66⅔ percent of the Democrats voting on that question voted for the previous question; about 33⅓ percent of the Democrats voting on that question voted against it. The adoption of the previous question would have stopped this attempt to sabotage the wage and hour law. [Applause.]

Under the privilege extended to me to revise and extend my remarks, I insert a statement as to the effect of some of the amendments adopted to the substitute amendment of the committee and the harmful effect that such amendments would have upon the existing wage and hour law. I also include a letter which I received from A. J. Altmeyer, Chairman of the Social Security Board, forwarding to me certain information which I requested as to the effect of the amendments on the part of my friend the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK].

I also include the report of the Committee on Ways and Means, found on pages 52 and 53, Report No. 728, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, relating to H. R. 6635, amendment to the Social Security Act, relating to a portion of the Buck amendment. Under this portion of the paragraph, for example, services performed in the sorting or grading of citrus fruits or in the cleaning of beans as an incident to their preparation for market will be excepted, irrespective of whether performed in the employ of a farmer, a farmers' cooperative, or a commercial handler of such commodities.

A few days ago the House rejected the Barden bill by a vote of approximately 3 to 1 as a measure which would have destroyed the wage and hour law. That bill proposed to deny the benefits of 30 cents an hour to approximately a million employees. Today the Members of this House have before them the Norton bill, in which practically all of the Barden amendments have been attached, and in addition other changes which make it much worse than the Barden bill. As the committee amendments stand today, they would exempt tens of thousands more workers than the Barden bill.

While the Barden bill proposed to exempt approximately 379,000 workers in the canning industry, the Norton bill, as amended, would exempt 550,000. In fact, every canner in the United States who is canning any food product except fish would be exempt from both wages and hours. Congressman BLAND secured the exemption of fish canning in the original law.

COMPARATIVE SUMMARY OF EXEMPTIONS CONTAINED IN PRESENT ACT, BARDEN BILL, AND NORTON BILL, AS AMENDED

Present act, 256,000.

Barden bill, 928,000 in addition to present act.

Committee bill, as amended, 1,012,000 in addition to present act.

So that the Members will be fully informed of the manner in which they propose to destroy the Fair Labor Standards Act, I shall summarize briefly the type of operation and the particular manufacturers and corporations that would be exempt.

Wage and hour exemptions

1. The manufacturer of all dairy products such as process cheese, ice cream, casein, condensed milk, evaporated milk, dried milk 191,000
   Examples: Borden Milk Co., National Dairy Products, Kraft Cheese Co., Carnation Milk Co., Swift & Co.
2. The ginning, compressing, and storing of cotton 110,000
   This exemption includes the huge compresses and warehouses each employing many hundreds of workers and located in such ports as New Orleans, Savannah, and Atlanta.
   Examiners: Anderson-Clayton Co., Federal Compress & Warehouse Co.

Wage and hour exemptions—Continued

3. Canning, packing, preserving, handling, transporting, processing, and freezing of all agricultural and horticultural commodities---------- 550,000
This amendment, when read in connection with other parts of the bill exempts practically all work that is performed in connection with agricultural food products from the time they leave the farm until they reach the consumer, except wholesalers, who have a complete hours exemption. All canning of agricultural and horticultural commodities is exempt, which includes such "drylines" as pork and beans and recanning operations. The manufacture of all pickles, all jams, all jellies, all preserves, all juices, and all the tremendous warehouses storing such products and all railroads and trucking companies carrying such products are given wage and hour exemptions.
Examples: Libby, McNeil & Libby, Heinz 57 Varieties, Campbells, Vita-Food, Del Monte, California Packing Corporation (largest in world), Sunkist Orange Corporation.
4. Nuts. The shelling and processing of nuts---------- 15,000
This would exempt the pecan sheller.
5. Handling and grading of livestock commodities-------- 29,000
Example: Union Stockyards of Chicago.
6. Manufacture of wines---------- 5,000
Example: Virginia Dare.
7. Preparing, curing, and bagging of grease wool, mohair, and rabbit fur---------- 7,000
8. Poultry slaughtering, dressing, refrigerating, and packing---------- 28,000
Examples: Swift & Co., Armour & Co., Cudahy.
9. Grading, canning, freezing, drying, and packing of eggs- 12,000
Examples: Swift & Co., Land O'Lakes Cooperative operating in over 30 States.
10. Grading, cleaning, storing of grains, beans, and seeds-- 63,000
Examples: Includes largest grain elevators in world located in South Chicago.
11. Stripping, stemming, fermenting, packing, storing of leaf tobacco---------- 82,000
Examples: Imperial Tobacco, Ltd., Liggett & Myers Co., R. J. Reynolds Co., Browne & Williamson.
12. Handling, drying, baling, etc., hops and fiber and forage crops---------- 8,000
Examples: Anheuser-Busch, Pabst's Blue Ribbon.
13. Storing and warehousing of all agricultural and horticultural commodities---------- 22,000
Examples: Produce Terminal, Chicago, Pennsylvania Railroad Produce Terminal, B. & O.-Reading Produce Terminal.
14. Handling and transportation---------- 55,000
Note: The Bland amendment exempts all handling or transportation in connection with most food products.
Example: Pennsylvania Railroad, all warehouse terminals, etc.
15. Commercial hatcheries---------- 10,000
This process is the hatching of baby chicks and very few such hatcheries are located on farms but rather in cities and is an industrial operation.
16. Nurseries. Handling, grading, and packing---------- 3,000
17. Waterways. Operation or maintenance of canals, reservoirs, or waterways---------- 8,000
18. Newspapers with circulation of less than 5,000-------- 20,000
This is a conservative estimate. It may well run as much as 50,000.
19. Firefighting employees (estimate)---------- 50,000

My sources of above statistics except where figure is shown to be estimate are Ninth Biennial Census of Manufactures, 1937; 1935 Census of Business; Estimates of A. A. A., N. R. A., and others; testimony at Wage and Hour Division hearings; Women's Bureau, United States Department of Labor; Bureau of Labor Statistics, Department of Labor; and so forth.

While the amendments of the gentleman from California, Congressman BUCK, the gentleman from Minnesota, Congressman AUGUST H. ANDRESEN, and the gentleman from Virginia, Congressman BLAND, are overlapping, the exemption figures given above show only the aggregate exemptions; that is, no exemption is counted more than once. As the Andresen amendment was the same as a bill introduced by Senator WILEY, of Wisconsin, S. 3047, on which the Wage and Hour Division was requested to report more than 2 months ago, the exemption figures had already been computed.

SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD,
Washington, May 2, 1940.

Hon. JOHN W. MCCORMACK,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN MCCORMACK: In accordance with our telephone conversation this will confirm my statement that our preliminary estimates indicate that the revision of the agricultural labor provision in the 1939 amendments to the Social Security Act will exclude about 300,000 to 350,000 additional persons in any year, depending upon employment conditions and other related factors.

The seasonal character of agricultural operations and the probability that some of the effects of the 1939 amendments are still not predictable seems to indicate that these estimates are the minimum rather than the maximum. These estimates have been based upon the number of jobs involved but because of the high turn-over due to the seasonal character of much of the work, the total number affected may easily be 600,000 or 700,000.

The original 1935 Social Security Act excluded "argicultural labor" and this term was defined by regulations to mean, in general, work on a farm and in the employ of a farm operator in connection with the production of crops and the management of livestock. The 1939 amendments broaden this definition by stating that the employee can perform the services for any "person" and include all operations which are "incident to farming." The 1939 amendments broaden the term so as to definitely exclude persons employed by nonfarm employers such as large-scale business firms that purchase and harvest an entire crop (such as chain stores or commission houses). This broader language also means that work in connection with the preparation of natural agricultural products for market and transportation, "to market or to a carrier" is exempted service when it is performed for a "farmer," "cooperative," or "group" of farmers and the products are 50 percent of their own production. This language is intended to provide exemption for central plants that clean, grade, pack, and prepare products for market, store, and transport the products to market or a carrier. In the case of fruits and vegetables, the exemptions are extended to services "incident to marketing," which is intended to include preparation and transportation to a carrier or market, whether done by a group of producers or by a commercial handler.

I am enclosing a copy of the report of the Ways and Means Committee in which you will find reference to the 1939 amendments at pages 51–54. I am also enclosing a copy of the regulations issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue in which you will find the regulations relating to agricultural labor at pages 23–26.

In connection with your inquiry about the status of cooperatives under the amendments, you will note that the regulations specifically except farmers' cooperatives with respect to marketing as well as handling, planting, drying, packing, packaging, processing, freezing, grading, and storing, even though 49 percent of the produce handled is on behalf of nonmembers.

As you know, the Social Security Board recommended last year that coverage be extended to agricultural labor. The Board's recommendation follows in full:

"The Board believes that the agricultural labor limitation on coverage should be modified. It is, of course, apparent that the problem of covering the independent farmer cannot be finally solved, except as part of a general program to cover the self-employed. It is also recognized that the complete inclusion of employees engaged in agricultural labor is fraught with great administrative difficulties. However, the Board believes that the inclusion of large-scale farming operations, often of a semi-industrial character, probably would reduce rather than increase administrative difficulties.

"At present it is almost impossible to delimit the field of agricultural labor with anything like the certainty required for administration and for general understanding by employers and employees affected. The extent of the exception is shadowy, indeed, where the producer also engages in processing and marketing.

"The Board recommends that the language of the present exception relating to agricultural labor be modified to make it certain that this exception applies only to the services of a farmhand employed by a small farmer to do the ordinary work connected with his farm. The Board further recommends that, with a reasonable time allowed before the effective date, the agricultural labor exception be eliminated entirely."

Sincerely yours,

A. J. ALTMEYER, Chairman.

Paragraph (4) of the subsection extends the exemption to service (though not performed in the employ of the owner or tenant of a farm) performed in the handling, freezing, grading, storing, or delivering to storage or to market or to a carrier for transportation to market, any agricultural or horticultural commodity, provided such service is performed as an incident to ordinary farming operations, or, in the case of fruits and vegetables, as an incident to the preparation of such fruits or vegetables for market. The provisions of the paragraph, however, do not extend to services performed in connection with commercial canning or commercial freezing, nor to services performed in connection with any agricultural or horticultural commodity after its delivery to a terminal market for distribution for consumption. The expression "as an incident to ordinary farming operations" is, in general, intended to cover all services of the character described in the paragraph which are ordinarily performed by the employees of a farmer or by employees of a farmers' cooperative organization or group, as a prerequisite to the marketing, in its unmanufactured state, of any agricultural or horticultural commodity produced by such farmer or by the members of such organization or group. The expression also includes the delivery of such commodity to the place where, in the ordinary and natural course of the particular kind of farming operations involved, the commodity accumulates in storage for distribution into the usual channels of commerce and consumption. To the extent that such farmers, organizations, or groups engage in the handling, etc., of commodities other than those of their own production or that of their members, such handling, etc., is not regarded as being carried on "as an incident to ordinary farming operations." In such a case the rules set forth in subsection (c) of this section apply.

In the case of fruits and vegetables, however, whether or not of a perishable nature, services performed in the handling, drying, packing, etc., of those commodities constitute "agricultural labor" even though not performed as an incident to ordinary farming operations, provided they are rendered as an incident to the preparation of such fruits or vegetables for market. Under this portion of the paragraph, for example, services performed in the sorting or grading of citrus fruits or in the cleaning of beans, as an incident to their preparation for market, will be excepted irrespective of whether performed in the employ of a farmer, a farmers' cooperative, or a commercial handler of such commodities.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I object, and rise in opposition to that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan, a member of the committee, objects to the withdrawal of the pro forma amendment, and rises in opposition to the amendment. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK], and I hope he will forgive me this time for referring to him—may I have the gentleman's permission to proceed today? I notice the smile on the gentleman's face even though he does not audibly grant me the permission, so assuming that his smile and his silence indicate consent I will go along. He and I the other day were discussing the question of charity, of kindly feeling toward the welfare of others, and in view of his remarks made on that occasion, I hope I will today get through what I have to say without being subject to criticism. Greatly do I admire the gentleman from Massachusetts, though I must confess that coming from the country, as I do, and having both industry and agriculture in the district, while he comes from an industrial district in which there are no farms, we do not always agree upon legislative policies.

I want to thank the gentleman for the charitable, the kindly, the friendly, the very sympathetic attitude which he took toward the Republican Members of this House. He expressed the deepest solicitude and an amazing apprehension of what might happen to us should we disregard the advice which he was giving.

He is friendly to labor, but from what he said I gather that he thought the rest of us were not. However, no one as he spoke could but marvel at his friendly feeling toward those on the minority side. He was so concerned over our future welfare, though, whether as an individual or as a member of the Democratic Party, I am unable to judge. He was so fearful that some of us on this side would not be back in 1941 that he took the floor and by his charming personality, obtained by unanimous consent an additional 5 minutes to caution us that if we did not follow his advice that when we go back into the House we will have a record vote and from that our constituents will learn our attitude on this legislation. In fact, he advised us to watch our step or the home folks would get a line on where we stood on this measure.

Let me say in my own behalf, for I speak only for myself, that I thank the gentleman for his very deep interest in my political welfare. Let me assure him that there are some on the minority side—in fact not a few—whose constituents always know our attitude on legislation.

The gentleman warned us to beware of hypocrisy. He told us, if I understood him correctly, that some of us were putting amendments into this bill that we did not really want; that we were adding them to the bill so as to overload it and bring about its defeat; then he warned us that if we were not careful, that if we did not vote down the amended bill here in Committee, when we went back into the House there would be a roll call and our hypocrisy would be disclosed.

I fail to see any great difference between that brand of hypocrisy and the kind of hypocrisy which would result if we followed the gentleman's advice. In the first instance, it is quite true that if we offered amendments for the purpose of making the bill obnoxious and those amendments were adopted and thus the bill defeated, we would be guilty of hypocrisy, but I know of no one who offered an amendment for that purpose, and the gentleman failed to name anyone who followed that course.

In the second place, if we voted the bill down in Committee so as to avoid a roll call, would it not be equally true that we were dodging the issue, attempting to fool our constituents, and so be guilty of hypocrisy? But the gentleman need not worry about what will happen to those on the minority side. I am quite sure that, while he has the kindliest, the most friendly, feeling toward many of us individually, thinking politically he would consider it no great hardship to his party if many of us were not returned.

Instead of worrying and fretting and being solicitous about the minority Members, their political future, and their reception by their constituents during the coming November, the gentleman might well devote his great ability, and he is a man of great ability; his great eloquence, and he is an eloquent orator, toward the solution of some of the problems which confronted the Nation when the present administration took over, and which, after 7 long years, are still with us. He might devote his thought toward some sound method of keeping the Government's expenditures within its income and so avoiding the national bankruptcy which his leader stated would inevitably come if we continued to roll up deficits, and how we have rolled them up. And, that question solved, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK] might then take up the question of ending the unemployment which the latest accounts show was still so distressingly with us. The gentleman has plenty to worry about without borrowing our troubles.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes; just for a question.

Mr. BUCK. If the procedure suggested by the gentleman from Massachusetts were adopted, the whole purpose of it would be to defeat the substitute as amended and come back and vote on the Buck amendment again, which has been twice ratified by the House.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Of course, the gentleman from Massachusetts said something about the ridiculousness—he did not use that word, but that is what he meant—of our procedure. What about the procedure of the opposition, those who do not want any amendments to the labor law? Did you ever in all your experience, you older Members of the House, know of a committee, a major committee—a minor committee of the House, let us put it—coming in with a bill and then repudiating the bill after the House had amended it, with the chairman of that committee announcing that when the proper time came she was going to ask to have it recommitted so that there would be no legislation?

I never presume to speak for anyone else on the minority side. I can speak only for myself, and I say to you on the majority side that it certainly shows either a lack of ability or a lack of courage for a committee to bring in legislation——

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I will in just a minute—and then for the House to take up that legislation, debate it for 6 days and then refuse to express its opinion on that legislation by a record vote.

In my humble judgment, the procedure which we have been following for the last few days in this House is the most democratic that has been attempted in the last 5 years. Every Member has had an opportunity to offer his amendment; every Member has had opportunity to discuss every amendment and there is little reason why if the various bills offered had been thoroughly studied prior to the beginning of the debate and attendance on the floor had been constant, the Members should not be fully advised as to the legislation.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes.

Mrs. NORTON. The gentleman knows perfectly well why I made that observation and why I said I would withdraw my support from this bill and ask that it be recommitted. I made the statement that I would vote to recommit the bill if it was adopted with the present amendments included.

This is not the bill that was reported from the Labor Committee at all. It is not a bill at all. It is a monstrosity.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The Member from New Jersey, the chairman of the Labor Committee [Mrs. NORTON], may so designate it if she will; nevertheless, it is the result of 5 days' debate on the floor of the House. If amendments have been adopted which are not proper amendments, that is the fault of those who did not stay on the floor and vote down those amendments. If I am not mistaken, the chairman of the committee at one time during the debate asked that all amendments which were pending at that time be adopted, even though those amendments had been neither read nor debated.

If this bill is a monstrosity, that may be due to the failure of some to vote against those amendments. Many of the amendments were adopted by a vote of less than 100; some because less than 50 votes were cast against them. If Members of the House would stay on the floor, debate, and listen to the debate, and then vote, we would at least have legislation by the peoples' representatives; not by a committee. By the votes taken in the House during this debate, the membership has overwhelmingly indicated that it desired substantial amendment of the Wage and Hour Act.

If the committee will not prepare that sort of a bill and if the House now votes down the amendments which have been made in the House, by refusing to accept the amended bill, it is quite probable that the House will then send the bill back to the committee for some constructive amendments which will take care of the many improper rulings of the Administrator, a bill which will meet the approval of that very, very large group who are demanding relief from some of its provisions. If the committee refuses to bring in such amendments at this session, the people will have opportunity in November to pass upon the acts of each of us.

For myself, I shall welcome on this occasion, as I have always welcomed, an opportunity to express my convictions publicly on the record.

I do hope that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] will not worry himself unduly over my political fate or over the political future of any of the Members on the minority side.

Let us adopt the substitute as amended and thus show that we have faith in our ability here in the House to legislate for the people who sent us here. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, this has been a strange and an unusual procedure. It started out as a very strange and unusual procedure when the Rules Committee, for the first time in the history of that committee, as far as I can find by looking up the record, adopted and brought to the House the kind of rule under which we are considering this bill. The same thing could have been accomplished by the Rules Committee reporting an open rule on the Norton bill. Then the bill would have been subject to every germane amendment and we would, in all probability, have saved 3 or 4 days in the consideration of the measure.

In the next place, when the Committee on Labor rewrote entirely the original Norton bill, if the committee had introduced a new bill, without any amendment or any substitute, a clean bill would have come before the House of Representatives, and that would have prevented part of the unusual procedure we have had here today.

But, specifically, in reply to my good friend the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] as to being put in an embarrassing position if we do not vote down in Committee of the Whole this amended Norton amendment and we go into the House with the Members being put on the spot by voting on the Norton substitute, as amended, let me say to you that if in the Committee the Norton substitute as amended is voted down, then the original Norton bill is up for consideration and amendment, and a separate vote, then, when it gets back into the House, may be ordered on each and every single amendment that has been adopted in the Committee of the Whole. So I think if I were wanting to be comfortable about the legislation, I would rather take one embarrassing vote than to take 25 or 30. [Applause.]

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate upon this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. This is the first time that I have asked for recognition during the debate and the consideration of this bill. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN], who preceded me, has addressed the House at least a dozen times, always claiming that this bill is detrimental to the small-business man. I say to him that the small-business man who employs a small number of people is excluded from the operation of the bill, and so are the farm laborers and farmers—each and every one of them who toil on a farm. They are all excluded.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. No. Therefore the pretense that the many amendments are being offered in the interest of the small-business man and the farmer is not well founded or justifiable. This argument is being resorted to only as a pretext to obtain the necessary votes to emasculate the bill and mislead the people. The gentleman stated that under the Fair Labor Standards Act small businesses and the farmers have suffered. I have in my possession a circular from the American Federation of Labor, which I received yesterday, showing that 1,100,000 people are now employed above the number that were employed last year. I have reports, and you have reports, showing that all classes of business and industry are on the upgrade, that profits have increased, and employment and wages have increased. Therefore the arguments that we have been hearing the last few days to the effect that this legislation has adversely affected business conditions are plainly without any foundation whatsoever. What, then, is the underlying reason why this bill is before us here today? The bill was not brought here by the friends of labor.

No, Mr. Chairman, the bill is before us because it was forced onto this floor by the very men who originally opposed this legislation, and who, today, are still not interested in the cause of labor, but who are trying to exempt their favored employers from the provisions of this law which affords at least a measure of protection to their underpaid employees.

Word has just reached me on the floor, Mr. Chairman, to the effect that the American Chamber of Commerce, now in session in Washington, has just gone on record in opposition to the wage and hour provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act. No doubt the chamber timed its meeting with the consideration of this bill by Congress. If any further proof were needed, which it is not, to show who is behind the opposition to decent wages in this country, this action of the American Chamber of Commerce supplies it. It proves clearly that the gentlemen endeavoring by sweatshop-inspired amendments to destroy the act were not exercising their efforts in the interest of the laboring man or the farmer, but at the behest of the manufacturers, profiteers, and other conscienceless employers who believe in long hours and starvation wages. For I submit that a wage of $12.60 weekly, which, make no mistake, is the real issue here today, will not support an average American family with hardly the barest necessaries of life. But the small-business man and the farmer are not members of the American Chamber of Commerce, and the only interest the member of this reactionary organization has in the little fellow is to use him, and at as small a wage as he can force him to accept.

It is nothing new to me, Mr. Chairman, to hear that those who reap the largest profits or draw down the fattest dividends are often the most reluctant to pay a living wage. The increase in the market price of stocks and bonds during 7 years of the Roosevelt administration has amounted to $43,000,000,000, a sum sufficient to wipe out the entire national debt. And 250 big corporations have announced an increase of profits of 50 percent as compared with the same period last year. But notwithstanding all their increased prosperity, not a few of even the most prosperous hate to part with a small portion of their increased incomes to the workers who by their daily toil made this increased wealth possible.

This law that they are seeking to destroy has accomplished a great deal, no matter what we may have heard here today to the contrary. I could cite hundreds of instances where girls, men, and women, who toiled for 12 or 15 cents an hour, are now receiving 30 cents an hour.

Mr. Chairman, you have heard the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK], and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN], explain the complicated rule under which this bill was taken up. I feel it my duty again to call attention to the fact, as you will all recall, that although I am the chairman of the Rules Committee, I opposed the strange rule under which this bill is before us in my committee, on this floor and urged its defeat so that the bill could be taken up under an open rule. This would have saved the House at least 4 days' time. But, unfortunately, due to the unholy alliance of the Republicans and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] and his followers on both sides of the aisle, the rule was adopted, all in the hope that their coalition would be strong enough in votes to emasculate or destroy the Wage and Hour Act. The gentleman from Georgia, in his determination to force upon the House this rule to emasculate the act, made a rather unkind attack upon me when he made the statement that "it is a funny bird that befouls its own nest." I ignored his statement at the time, but I say now it would more aptly apply to him, and with greater force, than anyone else, because, as you all know, the Rules Committee was created for the purpose of expediting the consideration of legislation recommended by the party in power and in this instance, it so happens that the gentleman belongs to the majority party. Notwithstanding that, he has time and again joined hands with Republican opposition on this proposed legislation and other legislation as well, all for the purpose of destroying laws enacted by his party in the interest of the masses—the wage earners and farmers of this country.

Mr. Chairman, I repeat that those who originally opposed the passage of this beneficial labor legislation, are the ones who are clamoring for the passage of this bill under the pretext of aiding the farmers, when, as a matter of fact, they know very well the farmers are already exempt. I am satisfied that the farmers will understand that they are being conveniently used. This law, in fact, is beneficial to the farmers because it provides shorter hours and higher wages, thus giving employment to more men and women and increasing their purchasing power, whereby they are enabled to purchase more of the products that the farmer grows. It is inconceivable how this law could be detrimental to the farmer. As far as I know, no outstanding farm organization has urged the emasculation or the destruction of the law. It is the packing, canning, sugar, and cotton lobbies who would profit. The only other interests that might be benefited if the many exemptions were finally adopted would be the manufacturers, meat-packing plants, terminal grain elevators, and Borden, and Kraft, and similar manufacturers of dairy products. These interests, and some of the carpetbagger manufacturers in the South who sold out their stockholders and bondholders in the East and North, who moved their plants south to obtain labor which they could work longer hours at less wages than in the East or North.

Mr. Chairman, the people of this country should be made familiar with the unfair representations and untruths on the part of those who are trying to scuttle this law. I believe that the bill as now amended would exempt nearly 3,000,000 people and, therefore, no friend of labor, men who believe in a fair wage and child-labor restrictions, can support it or vote for it. I, therefore, shall vote to recommit the bill to give the Labor Committee an opportunity to prepare and report a bill to eliminate any defects or unfair provisions in the present law. However, at this very time, and for some time past, the very able and fair Administrator, Colonel Fleming, of the Wage and Hour Division, in whom I have the greatest confidence, is making a sincere study of complaints, and proven defects or unworkable provisions are being corrected by the promulgation of regulations to the end that any unfair or undue hardships may be eliminated.

Most newspapers not controlled by the interests have substantiated the facts I have given, and some with even greater force. I hold an article appearing in the Capital Times, of Madison, Wis., under date of April 22, which clearly sets forth the reasons why the Barden bill is being advocated for enactment and why an effort is being made to destroy the present Fair Labor Standards Act. I take the liberty of including it in my remarks at this point:

USING THE WISCONSIN "PROTECT THE FARMER" TECHNIQUE AGAINST THE WAGE AND HOUR LAW

It worked so well in Wisconsin that they are now trying it out in Washington.

Yes; we are referring to the reactionary technique of using the farmer as a front in smashing labor legislation.

Here in Wisconsin the big industrialists and powerful business interests wrecked the State labor relations law, a model measure for the protection of workers' rights, and imposed antilabor legislation in its place.

This antilabor blitzkrieg was accomplished behind the front of the so-called Wisconsin Council of Agriculture, and the blasting of labor was done in the name of protecting the farmer.

These tactics worked so well in Wisconsin that they are now being applied in Washington on a national scale in the current big-business assault on the wage and hour law.

Those trying to wreck the national wage and hour law cloaking their attack behind claims that they are trying to "protect the farmer" and "clear up certain ambiguities in the statute."

They claim the changes they advocate in the law will bring about these things. But when these changes, incorporated in a bill introduced by Representative BARDEN of North Carolina, are carefully examined, it is seen that their effect would be to destroy the wage and hour law by exempting from its provisions those who most need its protection.

Stripped of the claims of its reactionary supporters, the Barden bill is found to have nothing to do with farmers, who do not come under the wage and hour law.

What the Barden bill would do is to take away the law's protection from 1,500,000 workers who perform industrial operations on agricultural, horticultural, and dairy products after they have left the farm and until they reach the ultimate retail distributors.

It is difficult to see how it would benefit the farmers to permit greedy employers who process farm products after they have left the farm to pay their workers less than the 30 cents per hour minimum provided for under the law.

From the standpoint of simple economics, the exact opposite is true. The minimum weekly wage of these 1,500,000 workers under the Wage and Hour Act is only $12.60. Reduce that minimum and the limited purchasing power of these workers to buy the products of the farm as retail consumers becomes even lower. Then, what becomes of the farmers' market?

It seems incredible that there are Members of Congress and business leaders who are willing to throw their support and influence to legislation that would permit employers to slash wages below the weekly level of $12.60. Yet these same men make speeches about the high "American standard of living" and talk about the "American way."

The Barden bill has been on the congressional calendar since last July, but its reactionary proponents have not been able to get it out for a vote. Now, by switching to tactics used by the antilabor interests in Wisconsin and playing up the "protect the farmer" pose, it appears that action will be taken on the measure.

When that vote comes, Members of Congress who are really for the farmer will treat this measure for the vicious scheme it is and hand it a crushing defeat.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment. I hope that we are fast arriving at the close of debate on this measure. The House will soon vote either to accept or reject the legislation. I just want to say to those Members of the House who voted to reject the Barden amendments because they believed that the measure went too far, that this bill as amended to date is far more destructive than the Barden bill. The Coffee amendment, adopted yesterday or the day before for persons engaged in the meat-packing industry will exempt about 152,000 workers from the hours provision of the Wage and Hour Act. The Barden bill would have exempted the same number of workers under a similar provision. Yesterday the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], in rather a facetious manner, said that there had been 17 amendments already adopted, and he did not see any reason why his amendment should not be adopted as the eighteenth. I submit that this is about the most compelling argument he could advance for the adoption of the amendment presented by him. That disarmingly innocent amendment which the gentleman playfully presented to the House and which was adopted deprives some 375,000 workers of the protection of this act.

A similiar amendment contained in the Barden bill would have eliminated only 138,000 workers. An amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE], and passed, removes the protection of this act from all persons earning an annual salary of $1,500 or over. The adoption of that particular amendment takes out of the provisions of this act 1,750,000 workers.

We have also adopted another amendment today affecting workers engaged in wholesale establishments. That amendment serves to increase the hours of 800,000 workers. This bill, as amended at the close of yesterday's business, removes 2,277,000 workers from the hours' provisions of the act, and by adding 800,000 that are taken out of the act by the adoption of the wholesalers' amendment this morning, a total of some 3,000,000 persons would be exempted from the hours' provisions of this act as against an estimated 1,500,000 that would have been exempted from the hours' provision under the Barden bill. And if we should add the large number of persons exempted under the Andresen amendment which was adopted yesterday, the disparity would be even greater. The comparative number of persons who would be affected by exemption from wage provisions under the Barden and Norton bills has been explained by a previous speaker.

You rejected the Barden bill as too drastic. On the same basis, I submit that the reasons for rejecting this bill are even stronger and more compelling. The haphazard efforts to amend the Wage and Hour Act here clearly demonstrate the need for sending it back to the committee for more careful and intelligent study. Send it back for reconsideration and require those employers who seek exemption from the provisions of this act to make a proper showing as to why they should be exempted. Do not enact this haphazard piecemeal monstrosity that seeks to pass as legislation.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired on this section.

Is there any other amendment to section 10? The Chair hears none.

We will pass to section 11. Is there any amendment to section 11? The Chair hears none.

We will pass now to section 12. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SUMNERS of Texas: On page 21, line 2, after the word "government", insert the following: "or to commodities manufactured in any State penal or correctional institution for use by any other State or political subdivision thereof; to parts for the repair of farm machinery; or to agricultural commodities."

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute amendment for the Sumners amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is not in order at the present time.

The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, may I direct the attention of the Committee to the fact that the proposed amendment is to the provision of the bill having to do with the transportation of convict-made goods? The language just read has been agreed to by the two chief groups, at least, interested in this character of legislation. On the one hand, there are those who are interested in providing labor for persons who are in penitentiaries and similar institutions. Then, of course, there are those who are interested in protecting free labor against convict competition.

I want to make this clearly understood: I do not mean to say that the language here is satisfactory to everybody. There will be an amendment offered by gentlemen who represent one of the Northwestern States giving exemption of transportation for binder twine and farm implements, I believe, but this language here, I would like to repeat, in conclusion, is language which has been agreed upon by the two chief groups interested in this matter.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Will the gentleman explain the language with respect to exemption of commodities?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Shall I read it again?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I think that will be well, if I might make the suggestion.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. It is provided that for the transportation of "commodities manufactured in any State penal or correctional institution for use by any other State or political subdivision thereof; to parts for the repair of farm machinery; or to agricultural commodities."

Mr. WHITTINGTON. That was particularly what I had reference to.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. At first there was included the words "processed agricultural commodities", but by agreement the word "processed" was stricken out, so as to make it perfectly certain that commodities, like baled cotton, for instance, could be shipped under the provisions of this act.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. In other words, under the provisions of your amendment, cotton produced by convict labor could be shipped?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ALEXANDER: On page 20, in line 7, strike out the entire section 12 as amended.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, I would prefer to be heard on the substitute to the amendment. I was on my feet at the time demanding recognition, and I had already informed the Chair that I had a substitute amendment to offer.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman have a substitute to offer that does not strike out section 12?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It was the understanding of the Chair that the gentleman proposed to strike out the entire section, which was not in order as a substitute to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS].

Mr. ALEXANDER. I have a substitute which adds a few words.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will report the substitute offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ALEXANDER as a substitute to the amendment offered by Mr. SUMNERS of Texas: On page 21, line 2, strike out the period, insert a comma, and add: "or to commodities manufactured in any State penal or correctional institution for use by any other State or political subdivision, or resident thereof, or to parts for the repair of farm machinery, or to agricultural commodities, or farm machinery, or binder twine."

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I yield.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Is not the purpose of this amendment just to add to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas that was adopted, the language, "or farm machinery, or binder twine," so that they will be included as part of the exemptions outlined in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. ALEXANDER. That is essentially correct. The purpose of that was to take care of our situation in Minnesota.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I am in accord with the object sought by the gentleman from Minnesota, but it strikes me that it should be offered as an amendment to the amendment and not as a substitute, because if it is offered as a substitute it will strike out the language in the Sumners amendment with respect to penal institutions.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. No. I beg the gentleman's pardon. It just adds to the Sumners amendment that has already been accepted, the phrase "or farm machinery, or binder twine."

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Is the Alexander amendment offered as a substitute for the Sumners amendment; will it be substituted for the language of the Sumners amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that in conferring with the gentleman from Minnesota before the amendment was offered, the Chair understood that the gentleman from Minnesota meant to strike out the section. It could not, therefore, be offered as a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas. In the meantime the substitute was rewritten, and there being no objection the Chair permitted the gentleman to offer this as a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. My parliamentary inquiry is: If this substitute or this amendment is agreed to, this language proposed by the gentleman from Minnesota will be added to the language proposed by the gentleman from Texas which was adopted. Am I right?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The Alexander amendment will not strike out the Sumners amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct; it adds to instead of striking out.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. The gentleman's amendment simply exempts binder twine manufactured in the institutions of his State and probably eight other States in the Union similarly affected; it simply takes them out from the operation of the wage-hour law. Is that correct?

Mr. ALEXANDER. That is correct. It would take care of the Michigan situation as well as the Minnesota situation.

Mr. DONDERO. That is exactly what I had in mind.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, in my particular State we have a prison which is giving employment and carrying on a rehabilitation program for approximately 1,450 men who are in our State prison. They manufacture farm machinery and binder twine and have been doing this for many years. They sell it not alone to the farmers of the State of Minnesota but to farmers throughout the entire Northwest. This service has been greatly enjoyed by the farm population of that section. I want to say just a word or two as to who was interested in putting this section into the bill. It has no place in a wage-hour bill. It was slipped into this bill simply for one reason; it was slipped in by the Harvester Trust, because for years they have been trying to do away with the service which our State prison has been giving the farmers in connection with farm machinery and binder twine.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I yield.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Is it not a fact that the Committee on the Judiciary almost unanimously killed this same provision about 3 weeks ago?

Mr. ALEXANDER. They voted to table another similar bill, although it had passed the Senate.

It has been said that labor is interested in this provision. I cannot find that labor has any justification for being interested. I doubt if they are interested, because in the investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, to which I referred the other day, there was not a word said about the machinations of labor or the attempt of labor to kill off this industry or to do away with this rehabilitation program. But page after page of the hearings is filled with excerpts from letters and testimony which absolutely proves that for years the Harvester Trust has been attempting to control, to buy, and to operate our State legislature with the idea of killing off the State prison industry. I want to read, if I have time, a few of the excerpts which will prove my point.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The gentleman's amendment includes the language of the Sumners amendment with an addition.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Yes; farm machinery and binder twine. Listen to this. This is a letter sent by officials of the Implement Trust:

> I spent two days in Chicago, and before the meeting with the representatives of Minnesota present—

This is testimony taken back in 1936—

> we had a meeting of the implement industry. We agreed that in no event would we without a fight permit them to sell in interstate commerce.

And again, following this meeting the next day, the same gentleman's letter testified:

> I was thoroughly disappointed with the meeting. So we had another meeting and informed the prison authorities that we would expect them to ship no goods in interstate commerce except on contracts which were approved by them prior to January, and that we expected them to curtail their production.

In other words, telling a State instrumentality what it could do and what it could not do. I could go on, Mr. Chairman, if I had time, and read excerpt after excerpt from this book showing the control which, according to letters passing between various officials of the Implement Trust, they claim to have and did have and exercised from time to time over the legislature of the State.

I want to read the last section here, which gives you an insight into this thing:

> Our contact, instead of bringing it out Saturday, did not bring it out until Wednesday night about 10 o'clock, and at 10:30 the amended bill was passed with only two dissenting votes. It was up to our contact to so manipulate that there would be no legislation, and that is what he succeeded in doing. He did not send the bill over to the senate until 2 o'clock in the morning, and at this late date it required only five objectors to kill the bill. Our man got five, Charles Fowler two, and the legislation was killed at 3:30 in the morning. I was there in the gallery, but no one knew that I was interested.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER]?

Mr. LESINSKI. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER].

Mr. Chairman, I hope the membership of the House will thoroughly understand just exactly what this substitute does. It amends the first part of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS], so that it will read—> or to commodities manufactured in any State penal or correctional institution for use by any other State or political subdivision thereof or residents thereof.

Mr. Chairman, this means that convict labor may manufacture anything it wants to anywhere in the United States and send it to any State in the Union without any restrictions whatsoever. Those words were not included in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Is the gentleman not forgetting the Hawes-Cooper Act, which is now on the statute books, and which prohibits the transportation and sale of prison goods in States that do not want it?

Mr. TABER. I am forgetting nothing. I am telling the House what the gentleman's amendment says and I hope he will understand that he is trying not only to work something in that he has told us about but he is trying to break down completely the Hawes-Cooper Act. That is what he is doing, and I hope the House will not be deceived by this attempt.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I cannot yield.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The gentleman is impugning the motives of a Member.

Mr. TABER. I am not impugning the motives of anyone. I am telling the House what is in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota, and I do not think we ought to in any way deceive the House as to what is in it.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] showed me the amendment he proposed to introduce, and I copied it myself and gave it to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER]. If it was changed, it was changed after he showed the amendment to me.

Mr. TABER. I know what was read so far as the Sumners amendment is concerned. I looked at it, and I looked at the other amendment, and there is added the phrase "or residents thereof," indicating that there can be sold by any State institution convict-made goods to the citizens of any other State and any goods whatever. We must not endorse that kind of business. It is absolutely ridiculous. I am going to tell you about the binder-twine business, because you ought to know the truth about it. I want to tell you the truth about the situation.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I cannot yield.

The International Harvestor Co. manufactures a very small portion of the binder twine involved here. I served upon the Cooper committee back in 1928 which investigated the prison situation throughout the country. As a result of the operations of that committee the old Hawes-Cooper Act was passed, and it laid out a program to get rid as far as we could of convict labor. It was the understanding at the time that gradually the public sale of convict-made goods should be stopped. Now, we should not at this time and in this way go ahead and attempt to destroy the old Hawes-Cooper Act which is designed to protect the honest workingman of this country from convict labor.

Mr. Chairman, I hope that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER] will be rejected.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER].

The substitute was rejected.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. As I understand it, this amendment which we just voted on was in addition to the Sumners amendment already adopted?

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. So as the record stands the Sumners amendment has been agreed to?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. And the Committee has rejected the last substitute amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ALEXANDER: On page 20, line 17, strike out the entire section 12 as amended.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment that has just been offered is exactly like the one offered 3 days ago by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] and agreed to by the Committee at that time as an amendment to the so-called Barden bill. I can see no reason why we should change our opinion or viewpoint today from that expressed here a few days ago. However, in order to protect these prisons throughout the country and the work they are doing in rehabilitating the unfortunates who are in them, I feel that it is very essential that we again adopt this amendment.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] a few moments ago made a great point about doing away with the Hawes-Cooper law. I admit that the Hawes-Cooper law should not be done away with and it is not my intention to attempt to do away with it. I believe it is quite a just and equitable act, taking into consideration all the things we must in considering this problem. However, I want to call your attention to a very important point in any consideration of this subject. If you will refer to your copies of the bill H. R. 5435, you will notice that the last four lines of the section we are now considering read as follows:

The provisions of this section shall not be deemed to repeal or supersede any other act relating to the transportation or sale of goods made by convicts or prisoners.

Why do you put this provision in the bill? Either the gentleman from New York is mistaken in what he has been telling you or, if you adopt this section, you have not adopted anything, because you are still leaving the law regarding prison-made goods exactly as it stands on the statute books today in the Hawes-Cooper Act, and that is what we should do. So what is the object? Why put this section in here or keep it in here? You cannot accomplish anything by it, so let us throw it out, as provided by my amendment. If you will read these last four lines, you can see there is absolutely nothing to be accomplished, nothing to be attained, by the adoption of this section. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I suggest that you throw out this entire section and save all this trouble.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Is it not true that this provision occurs all through the bills, the Norton bill, the Barden bill, and the Ramspeck bill, and that the Committee of the Whole the other day struck this provision out on the motion of the gentleman from Texas? The gentleman's present amendment, if adopted, would do the same thing in this bill.

Mr. ALEXANDER. That is absolutely correct.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. That would leave the present act just as it is and would not repeal any law at all.

Mr. ALEXANDER. That is right.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The wage-hour law has nothing to do with prison labor, because that is one place where all hours are the same and all labor is uniform.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I want to add this one closing remark. In the Minnesota prison we are paying as much or more wages per hour than the Wage and Hour Act requires, and our men there are working only 40 hours a week in the factory. What is to be gained by inserting any such clause as this? Remember who wants it, and vote accordingly. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment close in 5 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pending amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I strongly disapprove of any measure that allows convict labor to compete with the labor of workers all over our country. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SCHAFER] offered an amendment a few days ago to protect the minimum-wage and maximum-hour standards of this bill by providing that it shall be unlawful to import goods from any country unless such goods are produced under similar wage and hour provisions in that country. Apropos of this, I have stamps showing that table linen purchased right here in Washington was made in Soviet Russia. These stamps were on linen made in Soviet Russia. When the purchaser arrived home she looked over her purchase and saw these labels. She and her husband immediately rewrapped the linen and returned it to the store. They also canceled their account with that store, because they did not want to purchase any goods made in Soviet Russia by poorly paid Communist labor.

These stamps were on the linen made in Russia by Communists, actual communistic labor. While the people who work in Russia are not in prison, they have no freedom of thought or action, or of religion, and no freedom in their work. I will show you this stamp here now. You can see it later if you wish to.

It is unnecessary to point out to you the conditions under which these goods are manufactured. They are produced under such wage and hour conditions that our labor can never compete with them, and they should not be obliged to do so. We must protect our workers from this cheap-labor merchandise.

Unfortunately, the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin failed. Republican Members of the House voted almost solidly against the reciprocal-trade treaties which made this unfair, unholy competition possible. I hope they will not make chiseling and unfair competition between different communities in the United States possible. It seems to me they place themselves in a very untenable position if they vote for anything of the kind.

I wish to remind my Republican colleagues, especially because they voted almost solidly against the reciprocal-trade treaties in the belief that it was unfair to have this unholy and unfair competition from Russia and other countries such as Japan, that pay lower wages to their workers, and that these reciprocal-trade treaties make this possible. I hope sincerely that when it comes to a vote on the bill they will not allow chiseling and unfair competition between the different communities or different zones in this country. It seems to me if they do so they are in an extremely untenable position. They will allow goods to be made in different zones where goods can be produced for a lower sum, but they voted not to allow goods to come in from foreign countries and allow goods made under unfair and unequal conditions abroad to compete with goods produced in our own country. Some of them are probably considering voting at the moment to create unfair conditions as to different sections, different zones, if you will, in the United States. I hope they will reconsider that and not vote to make their position totally inconsistent and unfair.

It has always been a great source of pride to me that I represent a district which saw the very beginnings of the cotton textile industry in America. Lowell, Mass., for many years was known as the spindle city, the Manchester of America. The question of wages and hours has been an everyday subject in that community from the very inception of the industry. A great many of the good labor laws—for which the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is noted—have come about through the foresight and the energy of those mill girls of the early days. They worked hard and faithfully to protect the worker in industry, not only against the long, tiresome, tedious hours of labor but against wage scales that did not permit normal and healthful living. Women had the first and the finest part in that great struggle. They won their fight against child labor, for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts was the first State of the Union to enact direct regulatory provisions for child labor, and it was the first State to enforce such laws. The women won their fight for protectional hours for women, and as a result better conditions followed for all workers. I for one am proud of their accomplishments. At this late date, when our labor, our workers, have won the reputation of being the best in the world—the best trained, the best paid, and the best treated—we are not going to take a step backward. We are going forward. But it would not be a forward step to establish a differential in wages between urban and rural communities. The employer in the small communities has an advantage over those in the more densely populated district. Invariably the cost of living is lower in the small community, rents are lower, food commodities are less, taxes are lower. To my mind, it would be a very dangerous experiment. We have already seen the great disruption caused in the textile industry by the difference in labor costs in the southern mills as compared with northern mills, and in our boot and shoe and our leather industry similar conditions have prevailed. Factories have been abandoned to lie idle; families in some cases have been separated and caused to move from their neighbors and friends because their employment has shifted to a more advantageous sector where cheaper labor costs prevail. I doubt if the migration of industry is good for anyone. Anything that disturbs the normal living, the normal contentment, of the worker is not progress. It is retrogression. I hope sincerely that nothing in this bill will promote wage competition between communities or between sections of our country. You will find that if industries migrate into the rural communities in order to pay lower wages, that after a time the workers from the farms will organize just as those early workers in the mills at Lowell, Mass., those girls from the farms, organized for better wages and better hours.

Again I wish to remind the House, Mr. Chairman, that the Massachusetts women workers, by securing child labor and protective laws for women, blazed the trail for better labor conditions all over the United States. We must not allow their work to be undone; we must advance rather than retreat. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment; and in order to have sufficient time to present properly the case for my amendment, I ask unanimous consent that my time be extended 5 minutes.

Mr. FADDIS. I object, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin: On page 21, line 7, after the period at the end of line 7, insert a new section, as follows:

"SEC. 21. In order to protect the minimum-wage and maximum-hour standards prescribed in sections 6 and 7, it shall be unlawful for any person to import or cause to be imported from any foreign country, in any manner or by any means whatsoever, or aid or assist in importing any goods, wares, and merchandise manufactured, produced, or mined wholly or in part in foreign countries unless such imports are produced, manufactured, or mined under the same minimum-wage and maximum-hour limitations which are applicable to producing, manufacturing, or mining the same kind of goods, wares, and merchandise in the United States."

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is offered in order to protect American agriculture and industry and the employees therein from unfair, cheap, chiseling competition of foreign imports which are produced by foreign workers who labor long hours for wages which are far below the minimum fixed under the Wage and Hour Act.

Unless this amendment is adopted we are going to drive many hundreds of thousands of American workers who are now employed into the ranks of the unemployed. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CLEVENGER] the other day exhibited on the floor of the House some cotton goods manufactured in Japan, where textile workers receive a wage of 29 cents a day and work from 90 to 96 hours a week. I particularly want to call the attention of our brethren from the Cotton States to the fact that the Japanese are now importing much of their cotton from Brazil and other South American countries. In Japan they use the same machinery and have the same high-speed prcduction which we have in the United States. The textile workers in Japan receive 29 cents a day and work 90 hours a week in the manufacture of the cotton goods which were exhibited on the floor of the House by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CLEVENGER]. When a salesman who sells this cheaply produced imported Japanese goods competes with a salesman who sells cloth produced by an American cotton textile plant which uses American cotton and pays the high American wages, we know that the man who sells the American product will not be able to obtain the order because the price of the product which he sells will naturally be far in excess of that imported from Japan. Mr. Chairman, I verily believe that the Wage and Hour Act keeps millions of American workers in the ranks of unemployed, while we permit the unfair chiseling competition of foreign imports produced by foreign workers who work long hours for wages which are very much lower than the minimum wage established under the Wage and Hour Act for competing workers in the United States.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. MUNDT. If the gentleman's amendment is adopted, would it not remove the reason given by the President of the United States when he wrote the American Navy to buy Argentine beef because it could be produced cheaper down there with low standards of labor?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Most certainly it would do that, and it would furnish additional jobs for unemployed American workers in our meat-packing and other industries in the United States.

Some of you gentlemen on my left criticize exemptions for 200,000 and 300,000 and 1,000,000 workers from the beneficent provisions of the Wage and Hour Act. I call upon those friends of labor to vote for my amendment and put about 250,000,000 foreign workers in foreign lands under its beneficent provisions when the products of their labor compete with free American workers who can work only a limited number of hours a week for a limited minimum wage under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938. My amendment will protect American agriculture and industry and employees therein from unfair chiseling foreign competition and put some fairness into the act. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, are there any other amendments on the desk?

The CHAIRMAN. There are three or four further amendments.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and any amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. ROBSION] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, we have listened carefully during the last 6 or 7 days to scores of speeches made on H. R. 5435, H. R. 7349, and H. R. 7133, and a hundred or two amendments offered to these bills.

The procedure in considering these bills has been the most unusual of any I have seen since I have been a Member of the House. The Norton bill—H. R. 5435—was introduced in the House on March 29, 1939. It was referred to the Committee on Labor of the House for consideration. On April 27, 1939, the Labor Committee reported the Norton bill to the House. This committee struck out all after the enacting clause and offered an amendment as a substitute containing more than 12 printed pages. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BARDEN] introduced H. R. 7133 on July 11, 1939, and this bill was referred to the Committee on Labor of the House. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK] introduced H. R. 7349 on July 24, 1939, and it was referred to the Committee on Labor of the House. The Labor Committee made no report on the Ramspeck or Barden bills. A few days ago the Rules Committee of the House, made up of 4 Republicans and 10 Democrats, reported out a very unusual and extraordinary rule making in order the consideration of the Norton bill with the substitute bill, the Barden bill, and the Ramspeck bill—in other words, making in order for consideration at the same time four bills, all of which are highly technical and complicated.

The steps taken on these bills have been most unusual and extraordinary. After reading one paragraph of the Norton bill, the Barden bill was offered as a substitute to the committee substitute of the Norton bill. We had 2 or 3 days of debate on the Barden bill, with scores of amendments offered and many of them adopted. The Barden bill was so mutilated with amendments that the gentleman from North Caroline [Mr. BARDEN] disowned the bill and refused to support it, and the motion to substitute it for the committee substitute to the Norton bill was defeated by a vote of 66 to 156, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BARDEN] himself refusing to vote for his bill, as amended.

Under the rule it was next in order to offer the Ramspeck bill as a substitute to the substituted Norton bill. This motion was made by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS]. On a vote on the motion not a vote was cast for it. Neither the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] nor the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK] voted for it.

It was then in order to consider further the substitute to the Norton bill, and during several days of debate scores of amendments were offered and many amendments adopted. The Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union will soon be called on to adopt or reject the so-called substitute to the Norton bill. If the substitute is defeated, then it will be in order to consider the original Norton bill, H. R. 5435, and under the rules of the House only two votes can then be considered—to recommit the bill or vote it up or down.

These measures were born out of confusion, and they have now reached the point of confusion confounded. It was claimed by the authors of the bills that their purpose was to give some relief to agriculture and free the workers in agriculture from some of the rigid provisions of the wage and hour law. They were introduced in the name of the farmers, but as we progressed in debate and with amendments it was soon apparent that the bills were not in the interest of either agriculture or labor.

It seems to me that all groups interested in this legislation must show a more reasonable and cooperative attitude or there will be no legislation at all. I am one of those who were and still are friendly and interested in the wage and hour law and its honest enforcement. We have more than 40,000,000 persons in the United States working for wages. However high the purpose of this act is, we must bear in mind that a measure affecting more than 40,000,000 workers—agriculture and industry—could not be expected to be perfect. Time and experience will disclose that the act is not perfect and some amendments may be necessary. I think the leaders and friends of labor recognize that some amendments are necessary in the interest of justice to agriculture, labor, and industry.

I do not agree with those who contend that this law is perfect; neither do I agree with those who desire to emasculate the law or destroy it.

The substitute amendment to the Norton bill as it now appears, with scores of amendments, is not in the interest of agriculture. It is an industrial bill. It will remove the protection of the wage and hour law from more than 3,000,000 factory, shop, mill, and processing-plant workers. Of course, the purpose of many of those who offered and voted for these amendments, was to take away from these 3,000,000 or more industrial workers the 30-cents-an-hour wage or the 40-hour week or both. In view of the high cost of living, I do not see how any worker can be expected to support himself and family on less than 30 cents an hour and $12 a week, and in view of the fact that we have approximately 11,000,000 unemployed workers in this country, it seems to me that it is unfair to do away with the 40-hour week. [Applause.]

No nation has ever been prosperous with low wages, peon labor, and sweatshops. This Nation has never enjoyed prosperity with low wages. Low wages mean reduced buying power of the workers. The miners receive 50 cents an hour and more—on an average nearly 70 cents with a 35-hour workweek. The steel and railroad workers, on an average, receive 50 cents an hour or more with an 8-hour day. As I understand it, the automobile workers receive more than 70 cents an hour on the average and many of the automobile factories have voluntarily agreed to a 36-hour week.

If this substitutee, as amended, to the Norton bill is agreed to, it will mean that the employers of more than 3,000,000 industrial workers in packing, processing, and other plants and factories can legally pay their workers less than 30 cents an hour and work them as many hours as the workers may be compelled to work under the circumstances—perhaps 10, 12, or even 16 hours. This substitute, as amended, removes the protection of the wage and hour law from the poorest paid workers in this country, the persons who really need the protection of the law.

This is all being done in the name of helping the farmers. In my opinion, it will not help agriculture. It will cut down the buying power of these 3,000,000 workers and their families and they will be less able to buy the products of the farmers, and for this and other reasons I shall vote against this substitute, as amended, to the Norton bill; and if the Committee of the Whole House should adopt it, I shall vote in the House against this substitute as amended; and if this substitute as amended is defeated, I shall then vote against recommitting the original Norton bill, as some of the supporters of the Barden bill, the Ramspeck bill, and the substitute to the Norton bill and some of those offering amendments to these bills have threatened to do, because I believe the original Norton bill offers some real relief to agriculture. It cuts out the so-called area of production that has been most objectionable to the farmers of the country and it relieves the farmers of those provisions that are objectionable to them and which are claimed to be a real hindrance to agriculture.

It seems to me that some of those who are opposed to any amendments to the wage and hour law and those who desire to emasculate the wage and hour law are making common cause by advocating and having put on these bills such objectionable amendments as will insure the defeat or the recommittal of the bill, so that no bill at all will be passed. I think the Congress should weigh these matters most carefully and cooperate together in correcting any injustices that may appear in the law, so that agriculture may have its just rights and no injustice be done to labor or industry. Agriculture must depend upon labor and industry, and likewise labor and industry must depend upon each other and on agriculture in order for our country to be prosperous. Injury and injustice to one is certainly reflected in the others.

The Congress should not adjourn until it has given at least all the relief provided in the Norton bill for agriculture, and it should be willing to consider such other amendments as may appear to be necessary to do justice to the farmers of the Nation.

The Democrats have a large majority on all the committees and nearly a hundred majority in the House. If no bill is passed to help the farmers of the Nation, this administration must shoulder the full responsibility of the failure.

BILLS DISCRIMINATORY

The Barden bill was loaded down with amendments favorable to industry and against the workers in many lines of industry to such an extent that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BARDEN] himself threw up his hands and disclaimed his own bill and voted against it. These amendments had changed the bill that was intended to help agriculture into a bill designed especially to aid certain branches of industry and against the workers in industry. It discriminated against labor, and especially in that section of our country that paid the lowest wages and had unreasonable hours. I know of no industry in my congressional district that this bill, as amended, would have benefited. It would help the meat packers and certain processing plants in certain sections of the country. It will not benefit any of the factories, shops, or other industries in many districts; neither would it benefit the farmers or the workers in my district. It greatly discriminates against the factories, shops, mills, and workers in my district.

The substitute to the Norton bill, as amended, would have been of very little benefit to agriculture. It would have benefited factories, mills, plants, and shops as a rule where low wages were paid and long hours were worked. It exempts more than 3,000,000 wage earners in these shops, mills, factories, processing plants, and so forth, and would not benefit either the farmers or the industrial plants or the workers in my district.

I have voted against the Barden bill, as amended, as did the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BARDEN] himself, and I likewise voted against the Ramspeck bill, as the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK], the author of the bill, disclaimed it himself, and I shall vote against the substitute to the Norton bill, as amended, and on a roll call in the House I shall vote against it, and if it is defeated I shall vote against recommitting the Norton bill. I am unwilling to confess that this Congress cannot pass a reasonable bill in behalf of the farmers of this Nation.

I do not believe that a bill can be passed to aid the farmers of this country so long as those in this House insist that we exempt from the operation of the wage and hour law 3,000,000 factory, mill, shop, and plant workers. I am convinced that the American people do not desire our industrial workers should receive less than 30 cents an hour, or $12 a week. How can they pay rent, provide food, clothing, shelter, medical care, and educational opportunities for their families in view of the high cost of living with less than $12 a week?

Congress should not hesitate to help the farmers of this Nation. We should repeal the reciprocal-trade agreements and give the American markets to American farmers, cut out products made in foreign lands with cheap labor that can be produced in this country, and give this work to American workers. We should see to it that American labor, industry, and farmers have the benefit of this rich American market.

NEW DEAL POLICIES WRONG

This administration forced through the so-called reciprocal-trade agreements. These agreements between our Government and foreign countries have removed the tariff and other protection to the farmers, workers, and industries of this country. Since these reciprocal-trade agreements have been in effect approximately $4,000,000,000 worth of foreign farm products have come into our country in competition with American farmers, and our farmers now must be given subsidies in order to survive. Why should we permit the farm products produced by peon labor in Mexico, South America, Japan, and other countries to be shipped into our country in competition with our farmers and farm laborers? An amendment was offered to the Barden bill and to the Norton bill to prevent these farm products being shipped into this country in competition with our farmers, but these amendments were defeated, and the American farmers must continue to compete with these cheap foreign products.

Under the reciprocal-trade agreements billions of dollars' worth of industrial products have come into this country in direct competition with American industry and industrial workers, and our industries and industrial workers must compete with the low wages, long hours, child labor of foreign countries. I strongly favor our American workers receiving good wages and reasonable hours as provided by our laws. Our American industries must show that they pay decent wages and have reasonable hours and no child labor before the products of their factories, shops, mills, mines, and plants are allowed to enter interstate commerce. Why does not this New Deal administration require the producers of goods and products in foreign lands coming into this country to show that their wages, hours, and working conditions are comparable to ours, and that they are not produced by child or prison labor? Why have a wage-hour, and child-labor law and a prohibition against prison-made goods apply to our own industries and workers and then permit these goods to come into our country from foreign lands, produced by workers receiving very low wages, working very long hours, some of them more than 80 hours a week, and receiving as little as a dollar a week, and children of all ages and persons in prison helping to produce these goods?

It is conditions like these and the unfair manner in which our laws are administered that keeps approximately 11,000,000 workers in this country idle and makes it necessary to provide subsidies and bonuses for our farmers. American labor,

American farmers, and industry need to be relieved from these conditions.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin. This is the same amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin to the Barden bill; and as I stated at that time, the matter was very carefully gone into by the Committee on Labor at the time the original wage-hour law was drafted, and our late beloved friend Mr. Connery, who was chairman of the committee at that time, was very much in favor of the idea which the gentleman has suggested. However, when the committee had before it representatives of the various departments, including the State Department, it soon became evident to those of us on the committee that it was impractical and impossible of administration. I have before me a statement of the State Department, which I shall not undertake to read, but I shall read one or two paragraphs. Referring to the gentleman's amendment it says:

It needs only casual reading to show that it would prohibit the importation of a great number of raw materials, such as metals, ores, chemicals, vegetables, and products which do not exist in this country and which cannot be produced at all in this country—

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. No.

and which are essential to American industrial products. It would automatically stop the imports of crude rubber, which is produced abroad under labor conditions which do not conform to the conditions of the Fair Labor Standards Act. It would bar every pound of coffee, every bunch of bananas, every thread of silk. It would keep out medicinal drugs. It would make impossible the manufacture in the United States of radios, telephones, automobiles, and a thousand other household necessities, because it would deprive American manufacturers of the materials that must go into these appliances.

All of us, as I said the other day, are interested in maintaining the American standard of living, but we have to be practical about it, and this amendment would absolutely embargo many things that this country needs and make it impossible for our own people to operate.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes.

Mr. MAY. Would it not also embargo the importation of strategic war material?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Unquestionably. As the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs suggests—and it is a very important point—it would prevent our importation of necessary materials for national defense.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes.

Mr. MUNDT. The criticism which the gentleman read from the Department of State was applicable to the amendment offered a few days ago, but is entirely beside the point so far as the amendment offered today is concerned, because this deals only with competitive raw materials and not with rubber, coffee, silk, or any of the materials referred to by the gentleman.

Mr. RAMSPECK. The principle of the amendment is wrong, in the first place; and, in the second place, nobody knows what is competitive. We might find a great many things that the gentleman would say are not competitive, but which really are competitive, and we ought not to write into this law anything dealing with the tariff, and that is what the gentleman is trying to do. He is trying to destroy the trade-treaty program of this administration in a roundabout way, without making a direct attack upon it, which the gentleman on that side made and failed in a short time ago.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. No; I do not yield. I hope the Committee will again vote this amendment down.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin) there were—ayes 75, noes 121.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ALEXANDER: Page 21, after line 7, insert: "That section 13 (a) of the act approved June 25, 1938 (52 Stat. 1069), entitled the 'Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938,' be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding a new subsection 12 as follows: 'or (12) any employee of an office or loft building or apartment house engaged in maintenance or service activities, whether or not the owner of the office or loft building is otherwise engaged in interstate commerce': Provided, That this shall not apply to the provisions of section 6."

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman will state the point of order.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that this is offered in the wrong place. Section 5 of the bill contained amendments to section 13 (a) of the act, and this amendment should have been offered at that point.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Minnesota desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I concede the point of order, Mr. Chairman, and I ask unanimous consent that we may return to section 5 in order that I may submit the amendment at that point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mrs. NORTON and Mr. BARDEN of North Carolina objected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The gentleman from Missouri offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri: Page 20, after line 6, following the period, insert the following new section:

"In order to protect the standards prescribed by this act, 5 days, or 40 hours within any one 5-day week, shall constitute the workweek for all officers and employees of the Federal Government and the District of Columbia (including the officers and employees of every corporation created by authority of an act of Congress which is controlled or owned by the United States Government, whether or not such officers and employees are paid from funds appropriated by Congress), except the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States. Any officer or employee whose workweek is defined in the preceding paragraph shall be permitted to work in excess of 5 days or 40 hours in any one 5-day workweek upon certification in writing to the Bureau of the Budget by the head of the department, independent establishment, or other agency in which such officer or employee serves that the public interest, or an emergency, requires such additional service and that no suitable substitute is available. In any such case, the officer or employee shall, at the election of the head of such department, establishment, or agency, either be paid for such additional service at the rate of one and one-half times the hourly rate of pay received by such officer or employee, whether paid on a per annum, per diem, hourly, piecework, or any other basis, or be allowed compensatory leave of absence without loss of pay, equal to one and one-half times the period during which such additional service was performed: Provided, That in all cases in which such additional service is elected to be compensated by payment of funds, such compensation shall be made on or before the second regular date of salary payment following the performance of such additional service: Provided further, That in all cases in which such additional service is elected to be compensated by the allowance of compensatory leave of absence without loss of pay such leave shall be added to the amount of annual leave to which the officer or employee is otherwise entitled and shall be subject to all of the rules and regulations now or hereafter pertaining to the grant of annual leave, except that employees in the Postal Service who have heretofore been entitled to compensatory leave of absence for service performed on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays, and who so elect, shall continue to receive such compensatory leave of absence, subject to the terms of this section, on 1 day within 5 working days next succeeding the day on which such excess service is performed or compensatory leave granted, when granted for work performed on the preceding Saturday, Sunday, or holiday: And provided further, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to overtime services performed by Federal employees at the expense of private interests according to law.

"Nothing in this section shall be construed to increase the number of hours of work in any day or week heretofore required of any officer or employee.

"All acts and parts of acts applicable to the personnel affected by this section which are in conflict with the provisions herein contained are hereby repealed."

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane to this bill nor to the point where it is offered.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The question is on the committee substitute, as amended, to the bill H. R. 5435.

The question was taken, and the committee substitute as amended was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee does now rise.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore, Mr. RAYBURN, having resumed the chair, Mr. PARSONS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 5435, to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, pursuant to House Resolution 289, he reported the same back to the House with an amendment adopted in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BUCK. On what is the vote by yeas and nays ordered?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On the amendment as amended in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I wanted the House to have the benefit of that knowledge.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. To prefer a unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The Chair will not entertain a unanimous-consent request at this time.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, there seems to be quite a misunderstanding as to what we are voting on. As I understand it, we are voting on the committee substitute?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On the committee substitute as amended in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MICHENER. Then there will be another vote on the passage of the bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Naturally. [Laughter.]

The Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 171, nays 211, not voting 48, as follows:

[Roll No. 94]

YEAS—171

Allen, Ill.	Church	Engel	Jensen
Allen, Pa.	Clark	Faddis	Johns
Andersen, H. Carl	Clevenger	Ford, Leland M.	Johnson, Ill.
Anderson, Calif.	Coffee, Nebr.	Gamble	Johnson, Luther A.
Andresen, A. H.	Cole, N. Y.	Garrett	Johnson, Okla.
Andrews	Collins	Gathings	Jones, Ohio
Arends	Colmer	Gearhart	Jonkman
Ball	Cooper	Gibbs	Keefe
Barden, N. C.	Costello	Gifford	Kerr
Bland	Courtney	Goodwin	Kilburn
Bolles	Cox	Gore	Kilday
Boren	Cravens	Gossett	Kinzer
Boykin	Crawford	Grant, Ala.	Kitchens
Brewster	Creal	Gregory	Kleberg
Brown, Ga.	Crowther	Gross	Kocialkowski
Brown, Ohio	Cummings	Guyer, Kans.	Lambertson
Buck	Curtis	Gwynne	Lanham
Bulwinkle	DeRouen	Hall, Edwin A.	Lea
Burch	Dies	Hancock	LeCompte
Byrns, Tenn.	Dirksen	Harrington	Lewis, Colo.
Caldwell	Disney	Hawks	Luce
Camp	Dondero	Hendricks	McGehee
Cannon, Mo.	Doxey	Hinshaw	McGregor
Carlson	Drewry	Hobbs	McLean
Cartwright	Dworshak	Hoffman	McMillan, Clara
Case, S. Dak.	Eaton	Hope	McMillan, John L.
Chapman	Elliott	Horton	Maas
Chiperfield	Ellis	Jenkins, Ohio	Mansfield
Martin, Iowa	Peterson, Fla.	Ryan	Tinkham
Mason	Peterson, Ga.	Sheppard	Treadway
Massingale	Pittenger	Short	Vincent, Ky.
Michener	Plumley	Simpson	Vinson, Ga.
Mills, Ark.	Poage	Smith, Va.	Vorys, Ohio
Monroney	Polk	South	Wadsworth
Mott	Rankin	Sparkman	Warren
Mouton	Reece, Tenn.	Stefan	Weaver
Mundt	Reed, Ill.	Sumner, Ill.	West
Norrell	Reed, N. Y.	Sweet	Wheat
O'Brien	Rees, Kans.	Taber	Whittington
Oliver	Robertson	Talle	Williams, Del.
Osmers	Rockefeller	Tarver	Woodruff, Mich.
Patton	Rodgers, Pa.	Terry	Youngdahl
Pearson	Rutherford	Thorkelson

NAYS—211

Alexander	Edmiston	Kennedy, Md.	Robinson, Utah
Allen, La.	Elston	Kennedy, Michael	Robsion, Ky.
Anderson, Mo.	Englebright	Keogh	Rogers, Mass.
Angell	Evans	Kramer	Romjue
Arnold	Fay	Kunkel	Routzohn
Austin	Fenton	Landis	Sabath
Barry	Ferguson	Larrabee	Sacks
Barton, N. Y.	Fernandez	Leavy	Sandager
Bates, Ky.	Fish	Lemke	Sasscer
Bates, Mass.	Fitzpatrick	Lesinski	Satterfield
Beam	Flaherty	Lewis, Ohio	Schaefer, Ill.
Beckworth	Flannagan	Ludlow	Schafer, Wis.
Bell	Flannery	Lynch	Schiffler
Bender	Folger	McAndrews	Schuetz
Blackney	Ford, Thomas F.	McArdle	Schwert
Bloom	Fries	McCormack	Scrugham
Boehne	Fulmer	McDowell	Seccombe
Bolton	Gartner	McKeough	Secrest
Bradley, Pa.	Gavagan	McLeod	Seger
Brooks	Gehrmann	Maciejewski	Shanley
Bryson	Gerlach	Mahon	Shannon
Buckler, Minn.	Geyer, Calif.	Maloney	Sheridan
Buckley, N. Y.	Gillie	Marcantonio	Smith, Conn.
Burdick	Graham	Marshall	Smith, Ill.
Byron	Grant, Ind.	Martin, Ill.	Smith, Wash.
Cannon, Fla.	Griffith	Martin, Mass.	Smith, W. Va.
Carter	Hall, Leonard W.	May	Snyder
Casey, Mass.	Hart	Miller	Somers, N. Y.
Celler	Harter, N. Y.	Mills, La.	Spence
Clason	Harter, Ohio	Monkiewicz	Springer
Cluett	Hartley	Moser	Sullivan
Cochran	Havenner	Murdock, Ariz.	Sumners, Tex.
Coffee, Wash.	Healey	Murdock, Utah	Sutphin
Connery	Hennings	Murray	Sweeney
Corbett	Hess	Myers	Tenerowicz
Crosser	Hill	Nichols	Thill
Culkin	Hook	Norton	Thomas, Tex.
Cullen	Houston	O'Connor	Thomason
D'Alesandro	Hull	O'Day	Tibbott
Darden, Va.	Izac	O'Neal	Tolan
Davis	Jacobsen	O'Toole	Van Zandt
Delaney	Jenks, N. H.	Pace	Voorhis, Calif.
Dempsey	Jennings	Parsons	Vreeland
Dickstein	Johnson, Ind.	Patman	Walter
Dingell	Johnson, Lyndon	Pfeifer	Welch
Ditter	Johnson, W. Va.	Pierce	White, Idaho
Doughton	Jones, Tex.	Powers	Wigglesworth
Douglas	Kean	Rabaut	Williams, Mo.
Duncan	Kee	Ramspeck	Winter
Dunn	Kefauver	Rayburn	Wolcott
Durham	Keller	Rich	Wolverton, N. J.
Eberharter	Kelly	Richards	Wood
Edelstein	Kennedy, Martin	Risk

NOT VOTING—48

Barnes	Green	McLaughlin	Starnes, Ala.
Boland	Halleck	Magnuson	Steagall
Bradley, Mich.	Hare	Merritt	Stearns, N. H.
Burgin	Harness	Mitchell	Taylor,
Byrne, N. Y.	Holmes	Nelson	Thomas, N. J.
Claypool	Hunter	O'Leary	Wallgren
Cole, Md.	Jarman	Patrick	Ward
Cooley	Jarrett	Randolph	Whelchel
Crowe	Jeffries	Rogers, Okla.	White, Ohio
Darrow	Kirwan	Schulte	Wolfenden, Pa.
Ford, Miss.	Knutson	Shafer, Mich.	Woodrum, Va.
Gilchrist	McGranery	Smith, Ohio	Zimmerman

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Ward (for) with Mr. Boland (against).
Mr. Knutson (for) with Mr. Holmes (against).
Mr. Hare (for) with Mr. Hunter (against).
Mr. Cooley (for) with Mr. Magnuson (against).
Mr. Gilchrist (for) with Mr. Jeffries (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. Woodrum of Virginia with Mr. Thomas of New Jersey.
Mr. Starnes of Alabama with Mr. Wolfenden of Pennsylvania.
Mr. Schulte with Mr. Harness.
Mr. Patrick with Mr. Jarrett.
Mr. Kirwan with Mr. White of Ohio.
Mr. Cole of Maryland with Mr. Halleck.
Mr. Claypool with Mr. Bradley of Michigan.
Mr. Ford of Mississippi with Mr. Smith of Ohio.

Mr. Wallgren with Mr. Darrow.
Mr. Jarman with Mr. Stearns of New Hampshire.
Mr. Steagall with Mr. Shafer of Michigan.
Mr. Burgin with Mr. McLaughlin.
Mr. Zimmerman with Mr. Taylor.
Mr. Nelson with Mr. Crowe.
Mr. O'Leary with Mr. Barnes.
Mr. McGranery with Mr. Byrne of New York.
Mr. Green with Mr. Whelchel.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

The result of the vote was announced, as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. WADSWORTH, Mrs. NORTON, and Mr. MARCANTONIO rose.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I was on my feet with a motion to recommit.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I have a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] was first on his feet.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I was on my feet from the beginning.

The SPEAKER. The gentlewoman from New Jersey, by asking for the yeas and nays, cannot take away the right of the gentleman from New York to offer at this point a motion to recommit the bill.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I have a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I am.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman qualifies. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WADSWORTH moves to recommit the bill H. R. 5435 to the Committee on Labor.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order against the motion to recommit that it is not reduced to writing as required by the rules of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion to recommit has been reported by the Clerk and is now in order. The point of order is overruled.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, on the motion to recommit I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska and Mr. HINSHAW rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman from Nebraska rise?

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. To submit a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Does the vote now recur on the bill which was stricken through, which no one has ever read?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

For what purpose does the gentleman from California rise?

Mr. HINSHAW. For a similar purpose. I wanted to know what we are now voting on.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit the original Norton bill. The Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 205, nays 175, not voting 50, as follows:

[Roll No. 95]

YEAS—205

Alexander	Dworshak	Kefauver	Robertson
Allen, La.	Eberharter	Keller	Robinson, Utah
Allen, Pa.	Edelstein	Kelly	Romjue
Andersen, H. Carl	Edmiston	Kennedy Md.	Sabath
Anderson, Mo.	Elliott	Kennedy, Michael	Sacks
Andresen, A. H.	Engel	Keogh	Sasscer
Andrews	Evans	Kilburn	Schaefer, Ill.
Angell	Faddis	Kramer	Schiffler
Arnold	Fay	Kunkel	Schuetz
Ball	Fenton	Landis	Schwert
Barry	Fernandez	Larrabee	Scrugham
Bates, Ky.	Fitzpatrick	LeCompte	Secrest
Beam	Flaherty	Lemke	Seger
Bell	Flannagan	Lesinski	Shanley
Blackney	Flannery	Luce	Shannon
Bland	Ford, Thomas F.	Ludlow	Sheridan
Bloom	Fries	Lynch	Smith, Conn.
Boehne	Gartner	McAndrews	Smith, Wash.
Bradley, Pa.	Gavagan	McArdle	Smith, W. Va.
Brewster	Gearhart	McCormack	Snyder
Brooks	Gehrmann	McDowell	Spence
Brown, Ohio	Gerlach	McGregor	Springer
Bryson	Geyer, Calif.	McKeough	Sullivan
Buck	Gillie	McLeod	Sutphin
Buckler, Minn.	Goodwin	McMillan, Clara G.	Sweeney
Buckley, N. Y.	Graham	Maas	Taber
Burdick	Grant, Ind.	Maciejewski	Talle
Byron	Griffith	Maloney	Tenerowicz
Carter	Gross	Marcantonio	Tibbott
Cartwright	Guyer, Kans.	Martin, Ill.	Tolan
Casey, Mass.	Gwynne	Martin, Iowa	Van Zandt
Celler	Hall, Edwin A.	May	Voorhis, Calif.
Clevenger	Harter, N. Y.	Miller	Vorys, Ohio
Cluett	Harter, Ohio	Mills, La.	Vreeland
Cochran	Havenner	Monkiewicz	Wadsworth
Coffee, Wash.	Hawks	Moser	Walter
Cole, N. Y.	Healey	Mouton	Welch
Connery	Hennings	Murdock, Utah	Wheat
Corbett	Hill	Murray	White, Idaho
Crawford	Hinshaw	Myers	Wigglesworth
Crosser	Hoffman	O'Brien	Williams, Del.
Culkin	Hook	O'Connor	Williams, Mo.
Cullen	Horton	O'Day	Winter
D'Alesandro	Houston	Oliver	Wolcott
Delaney	Hull	O'Neal	Wolverton, N. J.
DeRouen	Izac	O'Toole	Wood
Dickstein	Jenkins, Ohio	Parsons	Woodruff, Mich.
Dingell	Jensen	Pfeifer	Youngdahl
Ditter	Johnson, Ind.	Powers	Zimmerman
Douglas	Johnson, W. Va.	Rabaut
Duncan	Jones, Ohio	Reed, N. Y.
Dunn	Kee	Richards

NAYS—175

Allen, Ill.	Davis	Johnson, Luther A.	Pearson
Anderson, Calif.	Dempsey	Johnson, Lyndon	Peterson, Fla.
Arends	Dies	Johnson, Okla.	Peterson, Ga.
Austin	Dirksen	Jones, Tex.	Pierce
Barden, N. C.	Dondero	Jonkman	Pittenger
Barton, N. Y.	Doughton	Kean	Plumley
Bates, Mass.	Doxey	Keefe	Poage
Beckworth	Drewry	Kerr	Polk
Bender	Durham	Kilday	Ramspeck
Bolles	Eaton	Kinzer	Rankin
Bolton	Ellis	Kitchens	Rayburn
Boren	Elston	Kleberg	Reece, Tenn.
Boykin	Englebright	Kocialkowski	Reed, Ill.
Brown, Ga.	Ferguson	Lambertson	Rees, Kans.
Bulwinkle	Fish	Lanham	Rich
Burch	Folger	Lea	Robsion, Ky.
Byrns, Tenn.	Ford, Leland M.	Leavy	Rockefeller
Caldwell	Fulmer	Lewis, Colo.	Rodgers, Pa.
Camp	Gamble	Lewis, Ohio	Rogers, Mass.
Cannon, Fla.	Garrett	McGehee	Routzohn
Cannon, Mo.	Gathings	McLean	Rutherford
Carlson	Gibbs	McMillan, John L.	Ryan
Case, S. Dak.	Gifford	Mahon	Sandager
Chapman	Gore	Mansfield	Satterfield
Chiperfield	Gossett	Marshall	Schafer, Wis.
Church	Grant, Ala.	Martin, Mass.	Seccombe
Clark	Gregory	Mason	Sheppard
Clason	Hall, Leonard W.	Massingale	Short
Coffee, Nebr.	Hancock	Michener	Simpson
Collins	Harrington	Mills, Ark.	Smith, Ill.
Colmer	Hart	Monroney	Smith, Va.
Cooper	Hartley	Mott	Somers, N. Y.
Costello	Hendricks	Mundt	South
Courtney	Hess	Murdock, Ariz.	Sparkman
Cox	Hobbs	Nichols	Stefan
Cravens	Hope	Norrell	Sumner, Ill.
Creal	Jacobsen	Norton	Sumners, Tex.
Crowther	Jenks, N. H.	Osmers	Sweet
Cummings	Jennings	Pace	Tarver
Curtis	Johns	Patman	Terry
Darden, Va.	Johnson, Ill.	Patton	Thill

Thomas, Tex.	Tinkham	Vinson, Ga.	West
Thomason	Treadway	Warren	Whittington
Thorkelson	Vincent, Ky.	Weaver

NOT VOTING—50

Barnes	Green	McLaughlin	Starnes, Ala.
Boland	Halleck	Magnuson	Steagall
Bradley, Mich.	Hare	Merritt	Stearns, N. H.
Burgin	Harness	Mitchell	Taylor
Byrne, N. Y.	Holmes	Nelson	Thomas, N. J.
Claypool	Hunter	O'Leary	Wallgren
Cole, Md.	Jarman	Patrick	Ward
Cooley	Jarrett	Randolph	Whelchel
Crowe	Jeffries	Risk	White, Ohio
Darrow	Kennedy, Martin	Rogers, Okla.	Wolfenden, Pa.
Disney	Kirwan	Schulte	Woodrum, Va.
Ford, Miss.	Knutson	Shafer, Mich.
Gilchrist	McGranery	Smith, Ohio

So the motion to recommit was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. Martin J. Kennedy (for) with Mr. Knutson (against).
Mr. Boland (for) with Mr. Ward (against).
Mr. O'Leary (for) with Mr. Holmes (against).
Mr. Magnuson (for) with Mr. Cooley (against).
Mr. Gilchrist (for) with Mr. Jeffries (against).
Mr. Hunter (for) with Mr. Hare (against).
Mr. Wallgren (for) with Mr. Thomas of New Jersey (against).

General pairs:

Mr. Woodrum of Virginia with Mr. Wolfenden of Pennsylvania.
Mr. Schulte with Mr. Harness.
Mr. Patrick with Mr. Jarrett.
Mr. Cole of Maryland with Mr. White of Ohio.
Mr. Claypool with Mr. Bradley of Michigan.
Mr. Ford of Mississippi with Mr. Smith of Ohio.
Mr. Jarman with Mr. Stearns of New Hampshire.
Mr. Steagall with Mr. Shafer of Michigan.
Mr. Burgin with Mr. McLaughlin.
Mr. Nelson with Mr. Crowe.
Mr. McGranery with Mr. Disney.
Mr. Green with Mr. Whelchel.
Mr. Byrne of New York with Mr. Risk.
Mr. Barnes with Mr. Halleck.
Mr. Taylor with Mr. Darrow.
Mr. Starnes of Alabama with Mr. Kirwan.

Messrs. BURCH, HART, PIERCE, KLEBERG, and Miss SUMNER of Illinois changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. SABATH, a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a statement from George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BULWINKLE]?

There was no objection.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their own remarks on the bill just acted upon, H. R. 5435.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. NORTON]?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. NORTON]?

There was no objection.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, on the motion to recommit I voted "nay." On yesterday I said once or twice during debate that if the amendments were adopted I would certainly vote to recommit and would myself offer the motion. The committee amendments not having been adopted, my position is consistent when I vote against the motion to recommit.

I want to make that very clear to the House, because there seems to be some misunderstanding. The bill that we would have voted on is the original bill, which contained very many fine exemptions, including area of production and some others which would have helped in the administration of the act. None of the amendments in the original act would have destroyed the principle of the act. On the contrary, they would have strengthened it.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. KIRWAN, is unavoidably absent. If present, he would have voted "nay" on the Norton amendment and "yea" on the motion to recommit.

VETO MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES—H. R. 4929, A BILL TO AMEND THE ACT OF JUNE 23, 1938 (H. DOC. NO. 714)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following veto message from the President of the United States:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 4929, a bill to amend the act of June 23, 1938.

This bill was originally composed of perfecting amendments to the act of June 23, 1938, establishing a new system of promotion and retirement for commissioned personnel of the line of the Navy; and as such contained no substantial changes in principle. Each of these amendments was considered desirable by the Navy Department, the most important one being for the purpose of eliminating the doubt that existed relative to the pay of officers retired under certain conditions, a doubt which has been removed by a decision of the Comptroller General.

Amendments of lesser importance were prompted by the desirability of a return to the previous practice of furnishing selection boards with the medical records of eligible officers and by the equity of allowing to officers selected for promotion as fitted but not for retention on the active list the retired pay of the grade in which retired in lieu of that of the grade from which promoted. Included also were clarifying amendments to accomplish the intent of the Congress.

During the progress of this bill through the Congress, however, amendments in committee, on the floor, and in conference not only changed the character of the bill but introduced a number of objectionable provisions. The effect of these provisions is such as to outweigh a few desirable features which the bill admittedly contains.

The amendment in section 12, subsection (f) of Public, No. 703, Seventy-fifth Congress, contains a provision compelling the retention on the active list until June 30, 1944, of certain officers transferred to the Regular Navy in 1920, provided they were on July 21, 1939, assigned to duty involving flying. Eight officers would be immediately affected, and the total number, including future years, would probably be not more than 15 or 20.

This is really not a current issue or problem. These officers are on active duty now, and will be retained on active duty after retirement because their services are needed.

Furthermore, in addition to these 8 aviators, there are 50 other officers in the same grade who would normally retire on June 30, 1940. Their cases are not taken care of by this bill, and there would seem to be merit in the thought that the bill as passed is discriminatory.

As a matter of fact and of necessity, it is probable that nearly all of these officers will be retained by me on active duty after retirement. Therefore, the objective of the bill can be taken care of without legislation.

The purpose of the amendment to section 13, subsection (a) of Public No. 703, Seventy-fifth Congress, increasing from eight to nine the number of vacancies that must occur annually in the grade of rear admiral also can be attained without legislation.

I fully approve the thought that it is desirable to speed up the retirement of rear admirals and general officers of the Marine Corps in order to create a quicker flow of promotion for younger men.

At this particular time, and because of the extremely difficult and uncertain status of international relations, I hesitate to approve specific mandatory legislation and believe that this should wait until the next session of the Congress.

This is especially so because the proposal in this bill is mandatory for a number of years to come.

I have, however, existing authority to accomplish the same purpose whenever it is desirable. As Commander in Chief I have the power under existing law to furlough any officer of the Navy. Officers placed on furlough receive half pay and no allowances, and I anticipate that any rear admirals about to be placed on furlough will request voluntary retirement in order to become entitled to three-fourths pay.

As Commander in Chief, therefore, I intend, after consultation with the Chief of Naval Operations, the Commander in Chief of the United States Fleet, and the Commander, Battle Forces, United States Fleet, to exercise this authority by furloughing a sufficient number of our rear admirals whose retirement will immediately cause an annual average of at least nine vacancies in that grade. It is entirely possible that I may furlough one or two more. Thus the intention of this act will be carried out without legislation.

The third provision would grant to Brig. Gen. James J. Meade, United States Marine Corps, retired, and to this officer alone, an increase of $1,500 per annum in the amount of his retired pay. It is true that this provision is discriminatory. A technical construction of the law, however, based on one very old precedent, may be legally correct, but this construction is, I think, contrary to the intent of the Congress. I would, therefore, approve of this increase of $1,500 per annum in the amount of Brig. Gen. Meade's retired pay if it were presented to me in a separate act.

Finally, section 3 of this act is now unnecessary because I have already directed the appointment of a board of officers of the Navy to carry out the provision of that section.

For the above reasons I do not feel that the necessities of the situation in respect to the major provisions of the bill will justify my approval of it.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, May 3, 1940.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The objections of the President will spread at large upon the Journal.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, in view of the statement in the veto message that the objectives the bill contemplates in the main will be carried out, I move that the message and the accompanying papers be printed and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. DITTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DITTER. Is it a fact that the objectives will only be carried out so long as the emergency lasts, and that those who were intended to be benefited by the act as we passed it will still be subject to the hazards that they previously were subjected to when the emergency is over and when that will be over is unknown?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that when the bill passed the House, all officers who had been passed over were by the House amendments retained in the service until they retired according to other provisions of the law. The conferees reached an agreement that all officers who were brought into the service in 1920 and assigned to aviation duty should be retained until 1944. The veto message states that these officers will be retained in the service during the emergency and, as the gentleman correctly stated, no one knows how long the emergency will last. In connection with the other provision in the bill by which the House sought to eliminate by mandatory statute, nine admirals, the veto message states that this will be accomplished and, in addition thereto, probably one or two more, by a law which is now on the statute books.

Mr. MAAS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. MAAS. Is this with the understanding that the matter will be taken up actively in the committee and the message discussed in the committee?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. My motion is that the veto message and all papers be printed and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs. The Naval Affairs Committee can then take whatever action it sees fit.

Mr. MAAS. I would like to have an understanding with the chairman of the committee that he will convene the committee.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Of course, the committee is in session all the time, and any matter which any Member wants to bring up is always brought up.

Mr. Chairman, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The motion was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT OVER

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER]?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MCCORMACK asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a telegram.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by Mr. Ray C. Kirkpatrick before the convention of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by Mr. Kirkpatrick, of the Federal Works Agency before the convention of the Louisiana State Federation of Labor at Shreveport, La.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein certain quotations from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and three statements by the President.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Delegate from Hawaii?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the reading of the Journal and disposition of business on the Speaker's table, and following the legislative program of the day and any special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a study by Robert Lansing, one-time Secretary of State.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

Mr. SOMERS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by the Secretary of the Treasury this morning.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, at the conclusion of the legislative program of the day and following any special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

FARM TENANCY PROGRAM

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I am imposing upon the House at this late hour to once more call the attention of Members and the country to the fact that funds are urgently needed to carry out the farm-tenancy program under the Jones-Bankhead Farm Tenancy Act.

I also want to take this occasion to again call attention to the fact that Senate bill No. 1836, a real, practical farm-tenancy act, was passed by the Senate the 7th of last July. That bill, which is similar to a bill offered by me in the House, was reported favorably out of the House Committee on Agriculture on February 26, 1940. The Rules Committee has been asked to give a rule to make this bill a special order, the request having been made by the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and his committee, so I understand, but same so far has been ignored, or at least not been acted upon. All indications point to the fact that this measure will sleep peacefully and never be reported to this House unless Members who are interested make strong demands on the House Rules Committee.

Certainly we are not unfair or unreasonable in demanding that the House have an opportunity to vote on this measure, of so vital importance to the agricultural States of the Nation and the homeless farmers of the country, before the adjournment of the present session of Congress. [Applause.]

In the meantime I desire to again remind Members of the House that about Wednesday of next week the Members will have an opportunity to consider the 11 amendments to the agriculture appropriation bill, placed there by the Senate. The most of these 11 amendments, which I have heretofore briefly discussed, are of great and far-reaching importance, especially parity payments to farmers, the extension of the surplus commodities program, as well as carrying on the farm-tenancy program.

One of the most important of the Senate amendments is that authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend $50,000,000 to the needy and deserving farm tenants to enable them to own their own farms. As I pointed out on the floor of this House a few days ago, many Members of the House who would not vote for a direct appropriation from the Treasury to carry on the farm-tenancy program have expressed a willingness to go along on the Senate amendment to make loans to the farmers, every dollar of which will be paid back with interest to the Government.

The R. F. C. has made hundreds of millions of dollars of sound loans to large and small businessmen alike, but no loans ever made by the R. F. C. will be any more sound or safe than funds loaned to real dirt farmers, which loans will be secured by first mortgages on good farms. So within a few days Members of Congress will have an opportunity to say by their votes if they feel that Congress should treat the broke and landless farmers as they have already treated businessmen, large and small. [Applause.]

Since the Senate incorporated and passed this amendment to the agriculture bill without, as I recall, a dissenting vote, an amendment which I understand was written and agreed to, except for the change of one word, by Hon. Jesse Jones, Chairman of the R. F. C., a rumor has spread around the cloakroom and corridors of the Capitol that the President of the United States was against the farm-tenancy amendment.

After a recent meeting of about 50 Members of the House representing some 30 States, at which time I was honored by being selected chairman of the group, I took the liberty of wiring the President of the United States while he was at Warm Springs, advising him the rumor which I felt then was unfounded, and asked that he advise leaders in Congress his attitude on the farm-tenancy amendment in question. In his message to both the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, as shown by the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of April 30, the President has advised Congress in no uncertain terms as to his position. You will note from reading his message, which I am again having printed, that he makes it clear that he is not opposed to the Senate provision of the agricultural bill. He further states that he is anxious that such a provision for the farm-tenancy program be made in the Department of Agriculture Appropriation Act for 1941.

The President's message is as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, April 30, 1940.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE.

SIR: My attention has been called to an apparent disagreement between the House and Senate conferees with respect to the farm-tenancy program under title I of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, for which I included in the annual Budget for 1941 an estimate in the sum of $25,000,000.

I am anxious that provision for this program be made in the Department of Agriculture Appropriation Act for 1941, which is now in the final stages of congressional action. I wish, therefore, to advise that if, in view of the many pressing budgetary needs for 1941, the Congress feels this item might better be financed through a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation than by means of the direct appropriation proposed in the Budget, I would have no objection to adoption of the loan plan, provided the language of the bill making provisions for the loan by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has the approval of Administrator Jones.

Respectfully,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, at the conclusion of the legislative program of the day, and following any special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. MCGRANERY, is unavoidably absent. If he were present, he would have voted against the Norton committee amendment to the wage-hour bill and for the motion to recommit the bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks on two subjects, and in one to include a short article and in the other certain tables.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEYER of California and Mr. SOUTH asked and were given permission to extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include in the remarks I made this afternoon on the revision a copy of a letter I have received.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, at the conclusion of the legislative program of the day and following any special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include in the remarks I made this afternoon two short paragraphs taken from the proposed convention on the inter-American bank, and also to include in my remarks on the wage and hour bill certain excerpts from a report I have received from the Governor of Puerto Rico.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made in Committee of the Whole this afternoon and include therein some additional paragraphs from the Federal Trade Commission report to which I referred.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a short editorial from Capital Times, of Madison, Wis.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. CREAL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including therein the bill (S. 3046) to extend to certain officers and employees in the several States and the District of Columbia the provisions of the act entitled "An act to prevent pernicious political activities," approved August 2, 1939.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the special order of the House, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HENNINGS] is recognized for 15 minutes.

OUR RELATIONS WITH MEXICO

Mr. HENNINGS. Mr. Speaker, a month ago today, on April 3, 1940, Secretary of State Cordell Hull declared it to be "a matter of grave concern to this Government" that "during the last 25 years one American interest in Mexico after another has suffered at the hands of the Mexican Government," and "this treatment of American citizens" is "wholly unjustifiable under any principle of equity or international law." The foregoing quotations refer to one of the most important foreign problems confronting the United States.

The position of the United States in this dispute with Mexico rests upon solid legal grounds. Secretary Hull said—I quote further:

> In the opinion of the United States, the legality of an expropriation is contingent upon adequate, effective, and prompt compensation. The difference between our two Governments with respect to this principle lies in the fact that the Government of Mexico has assumed and continues to assume a right without compliance with the condition necessary to give such exercise a recognizable status of legality.

Elsewhere, and throughout the note, Secretary Hull emphasized that the whole structure of friendly intercourse between nations rested—

> Upon respect on the part of governments and of peoples for each other's rights under international law;

That—

> Prompt and just compensation for expropriated property was a part of this structure—

And—

> A principle to which most governments of the world have * * * subscribed * * * and practiced * * * and which must be maintained; * * * the Government of Mexico has professed support of this principle of law—

But—

> The Government of Mexico has, however, unfortunately, not carried this principle into practice.

Necessarily, Secretary Hull's indictment of the Government of Mexico is couched in general terms. It covers a period of 25 years' accumulation of complaints by American citizens arising from the seizure of their properties in defiance of and in violation of the law of nations. It discloses that Mexico has adopted a new and strange conception of government that is not only contrary to international law but foreign to the principles which prevail among the constitutional democracies of this continent with reference to the sanctity of human rights vouchsafed by the charters of the American republics. [Applause.]

The situation is indeed, as Secretary Hull said, "a matter of grave concern to this Government," and one calling for immediate investigation by the Congress.

On the same day on which Secretary Hull's note was delivered to the Mexican Ambassador, April 3, 1940, I introduced House Resolution 454 for the creation of a select committee to investigate—

> The activities and policies of the United Mexican States insofar as such activities and policies relate to and affect the rights of citizens of the United States with a view to determining whether, in fact, the Government of the United Mexican States has been or is now, through violations of the principles of international law, denying justice to citizens of the United States.

The resolution was predicated on—

> The fixed policy of the Government of the United States to seek a world order under law and justice and to enforce respect for the principles of international law as a guide to just and peaceful relations between nations.

It was offered because serious charges of offenses by Mexico against the law of nations had been filed in the Congress by citizens and because it is in the public interest and in the interest of international comity that, if such charges be found true, the Congress should "take any and all means available under the Constitution to the end that commensurate justice be obtained."

Obviously, the purpose of this resolution is to supplement and implement the enforcement of international law in our relations with Mexico.

It provides an opportunity for the Congress, in the exercise of powers within its province, to give full effect to the law of nations as a solvent for international disputes. It affords a peaceful means of expressing our desire for the rule of law upon this continent.

There has been no congressional investigation of the last 20 of the total 25 years during which Mexico's socialistic program has led to the present grave situation between the two countries.

There has been a continuing and consistent policy of the United States toward Mexico since the abortive challenge offered by European powers to the Monroe Doctrine when they imposed the rule of Emperor Maximilian (1861–68). A Senate committee in 1920 recommended the continuance of the policy enunciated by Secretary of State Seward in 1878 to the effect that recognition by the United States should be withheld from the Government of Mexico—headed at that time by General Diaz—until assured that it—

> Is possessed of stability to endure and of the disposition to comply with the rules of international comity and the obligations of treaties.

On September 1, 1923, in pursuance of its continuing policy toward Mexico, the United States recognized the government of General Obregon upon his formal acceptance of certain conditions and treaties that had been agreed upon in the course of the prerecognition—Bucareli—conferences held in Mexico City, May 15 to August 15, 1923. Obregon's approval of these certain conditions and treaties was assumed to satisfy the requirements of the United States with respect to his government's "disposition to comply with the rules of international comity and the obligations of treaties," and was expected to place relationships between the two countries on firm and legal grounds.

Unhappily, however, succeeding Mexican administrations disavowed the conditions and agreements which Obregon has formally approved and have since failed to comply with obligations imposed by the treaties—or claims conventions—that were also entered into as conditions precedent to recognition. Thus Mexico has shattered the legal foundation upon which present relations between the two countries were based in 1923. The structure of relations is now precariously maintained by diplomatic props of one kind or another. Its collapse is threatened by the accelerating accumulation of complaints against Mexico arising from the seizure of American property in violation of the principles of international law.

The spoliation of American citizens by the Government of Mexico began about 1915 after a wave of extreme radicalism, instigated largely by foreign agitators, had overthrown the government of President Diaz in 1911, and launched the Republic into bloody revolution and economic disaster. The principles of this radicalism were then incorporated in the constitution of 1917 to give a semblance of legality, under Mexican law, to the revolutionary expropriation program which has since been followed by the Mexican Government with increasing intensity, frequency, and boldness.

Expulsion of American citizens and seizure of their property began slowly at first, in 1912, when American railroad employees were driven from their jobs and forced to return to the United States. Next the railroads themselves, which had been built and financed largely by American energy and capital, were seized December 4, 1914, on the pretext of military necessity. Then American farmers, singly and in groups, were harassed and driven from their small homes in Mexico, as were many other American businessmen, miners, and industrialists who suffered at the hands of the Mexican Government and were forced to abandon the land of their adoption.

As time went on and diplomatic remedies all too frequently proved unavailing, Mexico became bolder in her seizures, more ruthless in her treatment of our citizens, and more unamenable to diplomatic suggestion. In 1937 Mexico brazenly nationalized the great railroad system. And when the heavens failed to fall in punishment of this act the Government had the temperity to seize the foreign oil industry in 1938, while continuing and intensifying her seizures of other American properties by various and sundry devices, legal and otherwise.

During the past 20 years the United States has exercised extreme forbearance and patience toward Mexico in the face of frequent or constant provocation arising from her acts of aggression against our citizens and her failure to reciprocate our many favors, such as the purchase of her silver at prices above the world market. We have been long suffering and kind to Mexico, even while our citizens have been calling for help and for the justice to which they are entitled under our Constitution and under the law of nations.

We have been sympathetic with Mexico's alleged aspirations of social betterment for her humble people, even when it appeared that her program was merely a pretense behind which a few military and political favorites of the Government might acquire the wealth of the nation. We have demonstrated beyond cavil our desire to be a good neighbor. But Mexico has resisted our friendly advances and disregarded our friendly admonitions to conform the conduct of her social reforms to the requirements of justice and law.

The spirit of reciprocity is strangely lacking in our relations with Mexico. Our southern neighbor fails to measure up to the definition of a "good neighbor" within the meaning of our good-neighbor policy as enunciated by President Roosevelt in his inaugural address March 4, 1933, and repeated in his address at Chautauqua, August 14, 1936, as follows:

> In the field of world policy I would dedicate this Nation to the policy of the good neighbor—the neighbor who resolutely respects himself and, because he does so, respects the rights of others; the neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors.

An even graver aspect of our relations with Mexico arises from the clash of her socialistic laws with the long-established law of nations and the laws that commonly prevail on this continent for the preservation of human and individual rights. Mexico is the first of the 21 constitutional democracies that comprise the Pan American Union to abandon the principles of the Bill of Rights contained in our Constitution and copied in some form or other in the fundamental charters of all the American republics. Mexico is the first to succumb to the totalitarian and communistic principle that gives to the State absolute powers. Her surrender is the first breach in the dike of democracy. Her laws and conduct are the greatest menace that now confront the peace and security of this hemisphere, because they resist and challenge the laws and justice which govern these sister republics.

Assuming that an investigation will confirm what I have said here and that Mexico has, indeed, been guilty of denials of justice and violation of international law.

What is our duty in the matter?

If Mexico's course is uncurbed, how will our trade and interests in the rest of Latin America be affected?

Will private capital seek investments in other Latin American republics, or will these nations also embark on similar programs of expropriation and confiscation?

Will the solidarity and harmony of the Western Hemisphere be enhanced by the possible spread of Mexico's doctrines?

Will the prestige and hegemony of the United States be adversely affected if we avoid the issue now?

Do the foreign political influences which have gained a foothold in Mexico by methods of "peaceful penetration" constitute a menace and challenge to the Monroe Doctrine and the system of free governments set up on this continent?

Shall we continue to recognize Mexico as a friendly member of the family of nations if she has failed to reciprocate our good neighborliness?

Finally, will we be consistent in our frequently expressed desire for "a world order under law and justice" and employ such measures as the law of nations places within the reach of an aggrieved State for the protection of its citizens and for the maintenance of its rights and respect?

I do not persume here to answer these questions. They are questions that come within the province of the Congress to answer. I propound them, however, because their answers depend on a determination of whether international law still prevails to regulate the conduct of nations on this continent or whether its effectiveness has been broken down by its avoidance by Mexico.

Because I believe that firm reliance upon and enforcement of the law of nations offers the surest guaranty for the peace of this hemisphere and the well-being of its peoples, I ask the adoption of my resolution (H. Res. 454) for an investigation of the activities and policies of the Government of Mexico insofar as they relate to and affect the rights of citizens of the United States.

It is the duty of the Congress to investigate the serious charges that have been made against Mexico by the Secretary of State and by citizens of the United States.

It is the duty of the Congress to define and punish offenses against the law of nations and otherwise enforce the principles of international law wherever and whenever the rights of our Government and our citizens have been infringed upon.

It is the duty of the Congress to make the record straight with respect to our relations with our nearest southern neighbor, because vital questions are at stake which only the Congress is qualified to pass upon. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made on the floor this afternoon while in Committee on the wage and hour law by inserting a short statement entitled "The Unseen Effects of the Wage-Hour Law," by an instructor at Vanderbilt University, in Tennessee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COOPER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the previous order of the House, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein editorials from the Nashville Tennessean, the Memphis Press-Scimitar, and the Commercial Appeal, of Memphis.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, the President has announced that the proposed reorganization of the Civil Aeronautics Authority has resulted in a flood of protest. This protest he describes as misinformation, and, according to the press, he has stated that the protestants are either ignorant, gullible, or playing politics.

This is a sweeping condemnation of the air-line pilots, the mechanics, the radio operators, and the dispatchers of the American Federation of Labor, of air-line management, of thousands of private and miscellaneous fliers, of the aircraft insurance underwriters, of the air-express division of the Railway Express Agency, of a host of our leading newspapers and of nearly every important news commentator. For the flood of protest referred to by the President comes from all of these, to say nothing of the protest from many Members of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. We are all very much interested in the gentleman's comments, because of his experience in the subject of aviation. The question I desire to ask the gentleman may seem impertinent, but I think it important. In addition to the criticisms which the gentleman has mentioned, that the President made against those who are protesting this transfer, I believe he said that the objections came from people who are selfishly interested. I know of the gentleman's deep interest in this subject. Has the gentleman any selfish interest in this transfer or in the preservation of the present status of the C. A. A.?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I have no selfish interest whatever. Also, my interest, as is the interest of the distinguished gentleman from Ohio, is in the preservation and perfection of commercial and private aviation in this country. The gentleman from Ohio was a very distinguished aviator in the military service of his country during the late war and is interested in aviation in this country. He has no selfish interest in this proposition, and neither have I.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. And may I interrupt further to make this observation? I am sure that those of us who know of the services of the gentleman from Tennessee in his country's air force as a reserve officer know that any criticism he makes will not be because he is misinformed, and I feel confident that the others in the House who are patriotically opposing this move are not misinformed, nor do I know of any who has any special interest. [Applause.]

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Ohio for his contribution. The record of the Civil Aeronautics Authority for the past 14 months in being, I think, is at least in part responsible for not having a single fatality on any major air line. This reminds of the old story that you have all heard, but which is very appropriate here, of a school teacher who said to the little boy, "How much are 2 and 2?" He said, "4." She replied, "good;" and the boy said, "Hell, that is perfect." [Laughter.] For the last 14 months, in my opinion at least, the Civil Aeronautics Authority has made a perfect record, and for that reason I think we should hesitate and be very careful and duly deliberate before we tinker with it.

For during many years prior to 1938 the regulation of aviation safety by the Department of Commerce wrote many sad chapters in the history of this newest field of human activity.

Many have been the mistakes made on the part of the Government in the regulation and development of aviation, and the consequences have been tragic. One of the mistakes was made in 1933 when, under a previous reorganization act, the President provided that the Assistant Secretary of Commerce whose duties theretofore had been exclusively devoted to aviation should thereafter include whatever functions the Secretary of Commerce might wish to assign to him.

Under the Air Commerce Act of 1926 the original legislation for aviation safety in this country, in the formulation and adoption of which Congressman CLARENCE LEA was instrumental, had created a new Assistant Secretary of Commerce and provided that he should devote himself to aviation exclusively. In the 1933 reorganization the President, in effect, repealed this provision of the 1926 act and empowered the Secretary of Commerce to assign whatever functions he wished to the office of Assistant Secretary which had thus been created.

The Secretary of Commerce did assign varying functions to that Assistant Secretary, so that his time and energy were no longer devoted exclusively to the development of aviation.

There ensued a regrettable retrogression in the Department's record in dealing with aviation. It became increasingly difficult to secure for aviation the attention it merited. Confusion, delay, and passing the buck became an order of the day.

When, due to the failure of Government adequately to pace technical advance in the art of aeronautics, an air liner crashed in the State of Missouri and carried Senator Cutting to his death, the attention of the Congress of the United States was riveted upon the mistakes upon which the Department of Commerce had been guilty. A committee under the chairmanship of Senator Copeland conducted one of the most exhaustive investigations ever conducted in the field of aviation. The results of that investigation were embodied in three notable reports in which the committee weighed the evidence and made its findings.

The committee found many things that were wrong—politics, vacillation, incompetence, whitewashing, buck passing.

Among the several serious criticisms which the Senate committee made of the Department of Commerce there was included a finding that the action whereby an Assistant Secretary of Commerce was no longer exclusively charged with the development of aviation had resulted in a lowering of the prestige and morale of the Bureau of Air Commerce and had permitted a system to develop in which responsibility was not definitely fixed. Thus had buck passing, whitewashing, and vacillation been facilitated.

The findings of the committee and the evidence so abundantly supporting those findings led many Members of the Congress to give serious thought and study to necessary reform. A cardinal lesson learned was that never again should a situation be permitted where the action of one man in an executive department could so materially alter the regulation and development of aviation, where the agency charged with the regulation of aeronautics could by the action of one man in an executive department be thus reduced in importance, where the action of one man in an executive department could cause a condition where responsibility could not be definitely fixed.

From this bitter lesson, from the accident-strewn record of mistakes and incompetence, there grew the sober conviction on the part of the Congress that the only real remedy was to take responsibility for aviation away from a busy executive department, occupied as it was with many different functions, and place it in an independent agency, not subject to the will of a single individual, with responsibility fixed by the Congress itself.

As the studies and investigations of congressional committees continued through the years, the Civil Aeronautics Act was evolved, with a type of organization worked out by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee under the leadership of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEA], peculiarly suited to the needs of aeronautics and responding to the insistent demands of a growing aviation public for stability and security both in governmental policy and in the governmental organization charged with administering the policy.

The machinery created by the House committee and adopted by the Congress provides for a five-man authority as an independent agency of Government, modeled upon the Interstate Commerce Commission and vested with all regulatory powers over civil aeronautics. An administrator likewise was created, responsible to the President, but under a mandate to work and cooperate with the Authority and charged with the purely executive functions of constructing and maintaining the airways and engaging in promotional work. In addition a small board was set up, the Air Safety Board, and given one duty, and one duty only, namely, the investigation of accidents, and the making of findings and recommendations. The reason for providing for this Board was the unanimous agreement on the part of all students of the subject that at this stage in the development of aeronautics absolute fearless and impartial investigation by an agency of Government of the cause of aircraft accidents was indispensable. The regulating agency should not be in the position of investigating its own work.

Coherence and coordination in this organization was assured by vesting in the five-man authority complete power over the expenditure of funds.

This organization was a response to the peculiar needs of aeronautics. It was not hastily formulated after a few months' study. It grew directly out of years of investigation and was the product of the most careful thought.

The proposal now is to reorganize that Authority, to transfer all its functions with those of the Administrator into the Department of Commerce, abolish the Air Safety Board, and give to the Secretary of Commerce control over all budgetary personnel and related matters.

In his press release defending this move, the President has stated that the Secretary will not have control over personnel and that the Authority will still be able to submit its own budget. But the President's press release will not control what is done in the future. The words of his order will control. And in section 7 C of Reorganization Plan No. IV, it is expressly provided that budgetary and personnel matters must be under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce to be controlled through facilities which he designates. Moreover, the reorganization plan states that the new Civil Aeronautics Board will be independent of the Secretary of Commerce only with respect to certain limited functions of adjudication, rule making, and investigation. It does not provide for independence with respect to other functions. And chief among the other functions are those of appointing personnel and controlling expenditures.

This means in a word that the independence of the present Authority is to be vitally impaired and that the organization worked out by Congress so painstakingly is to be destroyed. We are to go back to a regime of one-man control, the very type of regime which proved its grevious faults in a record scarred with the wreckage of aircraft and the charred remains of pilots and passengers.

This organization, says the President, resulted from a few months' study by a division of the Bureau of the Budget.

Not for a few months, but for many years did Congress investigate and study before it created the present Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The judgment of Congress has been vindicated by the record of outstanding and unquestioned accomplishment which the Authority has made. For the first time in all history more than a year has gone by without a single accident on the scheduled air lines in this country. The greatest advance in the whole history of transportation—land, water, and air—has been made since the Authority took office.

The judgment of Congress has been vindicated by the record. The judgment of a division of the Bureau of the Budget is impeached by the record. Obviously the President has been ill-advised. Let Congress act now and, by preventing the reorganization, prevent likewise the tragic consequences of ill advice. Let Congress preserve what it created. Let Congress maintain the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

[From the Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal]

STICK TO THE C. A. A.

President Roosevelt has recently suggested junking the set-up under which commercial flying is now operating for a return to the control of the Department of Commerce under Secretary Harry Hopkins and the old Bureau of Air Commerce. The proposal is one of those things that one can hardly believe even when he sees it with his own eyes and hears it with his own ears.

For 12 years under the Bureau of Air Commerce the Government's contacts with the air lines were bungling, inefficient, ridden hard by politics, and generally ineffectual. The air lines got into a rut, or were forced into it, and struggled long to get out. About 2 years ago they did escape and came under the sponsorship of the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the independent Air Safety Board.

Under the new regime, the whole face of things has been changed for the better. The air lines recently completed a full year of operation in which there was not a single fatality charged to them. In other ways the air lines have showed new life and made steady progress. They have been uniformly pleased with the C. A. A. and the Air Safety Board, and they are protesting emphatically against the switch-back suggested by President Roosevelt.

The Air Line Pilots' Association, composed of the men who sit back of the guns and fly the ships, say they want to stick to the C. A. A. To be exact, they declare "this is once more a fight to save an industry and to save human life." The friends of commercial flying should rally around and let themselves be heard against this inexplicable plan to set back the clock of the Nation's air lines. Senator PAT MCCARRAN has already introduced a resolution to set aside the President's proposal, and it wouldn't hurt to cheer that move if you fly or have any interest in preserving and advancing a growing industry of vital necessity.

[From the Memphis (Tenn.) Press-Scimitar of April 23, 1940]

NO RETREAT ON AVIATION

President Roosevelt is too busy to give personal attention to all details of the Government reorganization plans which are prepared for him to submit to Congress. The latest of these plans proposes one change which we hope does not represent the President's own idea and which, in any event, should not be carried out.

It would return the Civil Aeronautics Authority to its former status as a Bureau under the Department of Commerce.

As an independent agency, the C. A. A. has operated with nonpartisan competence and to the general satisfaction of the aviation industry and the public. The most dramatic evidence of its efficiency is that in more than a year not a single passenger or employee on the great commercial transport lines which it supervises has been killed or seriously injured. Its fairness is attested by the fact that none of its decisions has been appealed to the courts.

On the other hand, the record of attempts to regulate aviation through a Commerce Department Bureau was filled with evidence of politics, incompetence, and general dissatisfaction.

Congress has authority under the Reorganization Act to disapprove the President's proposals. In this case, where the proposal is to retreat from a method which has proved good to a method which proved bad, Congress certainly should use that authority.

[From the Nashville Tennessean of April 27, 1940]

IS IT SAFE?

Only after much travail was the President authorized by Congress to reorganize Federal administrative bureaus for efficiency and economy. The order was needed, for independent agencies had multiplied beyond computation and neither the President nor Congress could deal with them intelligently without some system of pyramided responsibility.

In the main the reorganization moves directed by the executive department have served the aims set forth by Congress. It is not surprising, however, that an isolated instance should have arisen wherein a transfer of responsibility appears definitely ill-advised.

This instance relates to the latest Presidential order which, among other shifts, places the Civil Aeronautics Authority in the Commerce Department and abolishes the Air Safety Board.

Instant objection to this amalgamation was made by those most concerned—the air pilots—and by Congressmen and Senators whose concern for the development of commercial aviation is known to be wholly disinterested. The air pilots themselves feel that the move would actually lessen the efficiency of the C. A. A. by confusing its work in red tape and possible political strife. And their feeling can be understood when it is appreciated that, under the present set-up, commercial aviation has just completed its first whole year without a serious mishap or the loss of a life.

Primarily the pilots are convinced that the Air Safety Board, as now constituted, and completely independent of the C. A. A., should not be molested. It is a matter of somewhat secondary importance whether or not the C. A. A. is brought under Commerce.

The function of the Air Safety Board is to investigate every accident that occurs, to fix the responsibility, wherever it may lie, and to recommend to the C. A. A. measures to eliminate the cause. The C. A. A. then issues such regulations as may be necessary.

Formerly the Air Authority not only issued the rules and regulations, but also conducted the investigations of accidents, and it was a reasonable presumption that the Authority would be disposed to suspend or modify blame when the fault should be found to lie with its own regulations.

Creation of the Air Safety Board corrected the circumstances which made that temptation and set a purely objective watch on all matters pertaining to safety.

The pilots, who may be excused for thinking of their own lives as well as those of their passengers, stand on this position: "Is it safe? If it is not safe it is not sound." And their thought extends to the mode of Government supervision.

We agree with them, as all reasonable people must. The President should retract any order impairing the independence of the Air Safety Board or Congress should make it a point to prevent such an order from taking effect.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. BOEHNE, for 1 week, on account of important official business.

To Mr. JOHNS, for 3 legislative days, on account of important business.

To Mr. LARRABEE, for 1 week, on account of official business.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 37 minutes p. m.) the House, under the order heretofore adopted, adjourned until Monday, May 6, 1940, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON IRRIGATION AND RECLAMATION

The Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation will meet on Saturday, May 4, 1940, at 10 a. m., in room 128, House Office Building, for the consideration of H. R. 9093.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of a subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a. m., Tuesday, May 7, 1940, for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 457, entitled "For the Transfer of the Marketing Laws Survey to the Department of Commerce."

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on Monday, May 13, 1940, at 10 a. m.

Business to be considered: To begin hearings on S. 280 and H. R. 145—motion pictures. All statements favoring the bill will be heard first. All statements opposing the bill will follow:

COMMITTEE ON PATENTS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Patents on Thursday, May 9, 1940, at 10: 30 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 8441, H. R. 8442, and H. R. 8444, all of which relate to amendments to the patent laws.

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Patents on Thursday, May 16, 1940, at 10: 30 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 9384, H. R. 9386, and H. R. 9388, all of which relate to amendments to the patent laws.

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

There will be meetings of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization Tuesday, May 7, and Wednesday, May 8, 1940, at 10 a. m., for the consideration of: Tuesday, H. R. 6127, Nationality Code; and Wednesday, H. R. 8310, to deport Communists.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold the following hearings at 10 a. m. on the dates specified:

Wednesday, May 8, 1940:

H. R. 9581, to amend the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended. (This bill has to do with tax exemption of a construction reserve fund to aid in the construction of new vessels. It is an improved form of H. R. 5883.)

Tuesday, May 14, 1940:

H. R. 9553, to amend and clarify certain acts pertaining to the Coast Guard, and for other purposes.

Thursday, May 16, 1940:

H. R. 9477, to apply laws covering steam vessels to certain passenger-carrying vessels.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1590. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated April 23, 1940, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustrations, on reexamination of Richmond Harbor, Calif., requested by resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted June 23, 1939 (H. Doc. No. 715); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed, with two illustrations.

1591. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated April 24, 1940, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on reexamination of channel from Oyster, Va., to the Atlantic Ocean, requested by resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted June 8, 1938 (H. Doc. No. 716); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

1592. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill authorizing the conveyance to the Commonwealth of Virginia of a portion of the naval reservation known as Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

1593. A letter from the Acting Secretary of Commerce, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill to amend section 4336 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by section 312 of the Anti-Smuggling Act of 1935; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. McANDREWS: Committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses. H. R. 8319. A bill making appropriations for Departments of State, Commerce, and Justice, and for the judiciary for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 2066). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HILL: Committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses. S. 1036. An act to authorize the purchase of certain lands adjacent to the Turtle Mountain Indian Agency in the State of North Dakota (Rept. No. 2067). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2068. Report on the disposition of records in the War Department. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2069. Report on the disposition of records in the Department of Commerce. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2070. Report on the disposition of records in the Federal Works Agency, Works Project Administration. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2071. Report on the disposition of records in the Veterans' Administration. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2072. Report on the disposition of records in the Post Office Department. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2073. Report on the disposition of records by the United States marshal for the northern district of Ohio. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2074. Report on the disposition of records by the United States marshal for the district of North Dakota with the approval of the Department of Justice. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2075. Report on the disposition of records by the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, with the approval of the senior judge of that district. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2076. Report on the disposition of records in the Department of Agriculture. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2077. Report on the disposition of records in the Department of the Interior in the custody of The National Archives. Ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CUMMINGS:

H. R. 9654. A bill to extend, for an additional year, the provisions of the Sugar Act of 1937 and the taxes with respect to sugar; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. McCORMACK:

H. R. 9655. A bill permitting the establishment of 5-day workweeks for any part or for the whole year in the Federal Departments of the Federal service; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. McGEHEE:

H. R. 9656. A bill to authorize the acceptance of donations of property for the Vicksburg National Military Park, in the State of Mississippi, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. DEMPSEY:

H. R. 9657. A bill to increase and stabilize employment by providing loans and grants for non-Federal public-works projects, and making an appropriation therefor; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. VOORHIS of California:

H. R. 9658. A bill to provide a dollar of stable purchasing power in the United States; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. DIRKSEN:

H. Con. Res. 61. A concurrent resolution to disapprove Reorganization Plan No. IV; to the Select Committee on Government Organization.

By Mr. TAYLOR:

H. Con. Res. 62. A concurrent resolution to provide for printing additional copies of hearings held by the Committee on Appropriations; to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. CUMMINGS:

H. Res. 484. A resolution to provide for an investigation of the sugar industry and problems related to sugar; to the Committee on Rules.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. JENNINGS:

H. R. 9659. A bill for the relief of the legal guardian of Howard Burkette; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia:

H. R. 9660. A bill granting an increase of pension to Mary Ella Wallace; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CREAL:

H. R. 9661. A bill for the relief of John E. Newman; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. POWERS:

H. R. 9662. A bill for the relief of John Huff; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's table and referred as follows:

7863. By Mr. MICHAEL J. KENNEDY: Petition of the Cigar Manufacturers Association of America, Inc., suggesting certain amendments to the Wage and Hour Act; to the Committee on Labor.

7864. Also, petition of Advertising Women of New York, Inc., urging increase of appropriations for Work Projects Administration in order to halt dismissals; to the Committee on Appropriations.

7865. Also, petition of the State of New York Department of Public Works, favoring enactment of House bill 9575, authorizing $125,000,000 for roads to be contributed by the Federal Government; to the Committee on Roads.

7866. Also, petition of the Merca Traffic Service Bureau, representing 1,200 shippers located throughout the United States, urging that section 10 (a) of the transportation bill be amended to retain the present 3-year limitation period for recovering freight overcharges in lieu of the 2-year period proposed in said bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7867. Also, petition of the Card Towing Line, Inc., of New York City, opposing enactment of the Wheeler-Lea transportation bill without inclusion of the Miller-Wadsworth amendment; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7868. Also, petition of the New York State Waterways Association, Inc., opposing enactment of Wheeler-Lea transportation bill as discriminatory against water carriers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7869. Also, petition of Frank J. Taylor, president American Merchant Marine Institute, Inc., of New York City, opposing enactment of the Wheeler-Lea transportation bill as reported by conferees as being detrimental to the interests of water carriers, shippers, and ultimately, consumers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7870. Also, petition of the Russell Ros Towing Co., Inc., opposing transportation bill unless Miller-Wadsworth amendment is included; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7871. Also, petition of the American Communications Association, opposing all amendments to the National Labor Relations Act except those offered by the Congress of Industrial Organizations; to the Committee on Labor.

7872. Also, petition of the David C. Reid Co., Inc., of New York City, opposing adoption of conference report on Wheeler-Lea Transportation Act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. KEOGH:

7873. Petition of the Brooklyn Church and Mission Federation, favoring farm-tenant loans and opposing any cutting of the fifty million already appropriated for farm-tenant loans from Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7874. Also, petition of the American Communications Association, New York City, opposing all amendments to the National Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

7875. Also, petition of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, committee on legislation, Washington, D. C., concerning the Neely bill (S. 230); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7876. Also, petition of A. W. Brandt, superintendent of public works, State of New York, Albany, N. Y., favoring the passage of House bill 9575; to the Committee on Roads.

7877. Also, petition of the New York Tow Boat Exchange, Inc., opposing the transportation bill, S. 2009, unless it contains the Miller-Wadsworth amendment; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7878. Also, petition of Frank J. Taylor, president, American Merchant Marine Institute, Inc., New York City, favoring the elimination of the water-carrier section from the conference report of the Wheeler-Lea bill, S. 2009, because the Maritime Commission has jurisdiction over these matters at the present time; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7879. Also, petition of Joseph P. Ryan, president, International Longshoremen's Association, New York City, favoring recommiting the conference report on Senate bill 2009, it being detrimental to water carriers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7880. Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, city of New York, concerning House bill 9000, widows and orphans bill; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

7881. Also, petition of the International Lumber Distributors Association, New York City, favoring the passage of House Joint Resolution 519; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

7882. By Mr. MONKIEWICZ: Resolution of the Connecticut Department of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, favoring a permanent national peace and nonparticipation in the present conflict abroad, at the same time favoring adequate national defenses; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

7883. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, committee on legislation, Washington, D. C., urging support of the Neely bill (S. 280); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7884. By Mr. DEROUEN: Petition of the Enterprise Club, Lake Charles, La., condemning the recent smear campaign directed at Hon. J. Edgar Hoover, Chief, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, and opposing wholesale circulation of communistic and other alien propaganda in Congress and throughout the United States; to the Special Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities.

7885. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Department of Public Works of the State of New York, Albany, N. Y., favoring the enactment of House bill 9575; to the Committee on Roads.

7886. Also, petition of the Brooklyn Church and Mission Federation, Brooklyn, N. Y., urging support of farm-tenant loans from Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7887. Also, petition of the Intercoastal Lumber and Distributors Asociation, Inc., New York City, concerning House Joint Resolution 519, to suspend section 510 (g) of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

7888. By Mr. SANDAGER: Memorial of the Rhode Island Airmen's Association, of Hillsgrove, R. I., opposing the transfer of the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Commerce Department; to the Select Committee on Government Organization.

7889. By Mr. SCHWERT: Petition bearing 36 signatures, urging hearing and favorable action on Senate bill 1664, a bill making four grades for watchmen, messengers, post-office and railway-mail laborers; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

7890. Also, petition bearing 36 signatures, favoring and requesting early action on House bill 237, providing promotional examinations for post-office employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

7891. By Mr. WHITE of Idaho: Petition signed by A. B. Frost, of Caldwell, Idaho, for the Caldwell Local, Workers Alliance of Idaho, Inc., regarding certain conditions relating to the Work Projects Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations.

7892. By Mr. VOORHIS of California: Petition of W. A. Stevens, of Monrovia, Calif., and 72 others, urging that the President and Representatives in Congress take prompt, decisive action looking toward the early enactment of a national retirement pension law, on a pay-as-you-go basis, embodying the fundamental principles of House bill 5620, now before Congress, which would pay to all citizens of the United States, 60 years of age and over, an adequate monthly annuity, as proposed in said act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7893. Also, petition of Morrill J. Godfrey, of Downey, Calif., and 73 others, urging that the President and Representatives in Congress take prompt, decisive action looking toward the early enactment of a national retirement pension law, on a pay-as-you-go basis, embodying the fundamental principles of House bill 5620, now before Congress, which would pay to all citizens of the United States, 60 years of age and over, an adequate monthly annuity, as proposed in said act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7894. Also, petition of William Borthwick, tax commissioner, of Honolulu, T. H., and 57 others, urging that the President and Representatives in Congress take prompt, decisive action looking toward the early enactment of a national retirement pension law, on a pay-as-you-go basis, embodying the fundamental principles of House bill 5620, now before Congress, which would pay to all citizens of the United States, 60 years of age and over, an adequate monthly annuity, as proposed in said act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7895. Also, petition of Dwight A. Hartzell, of Wilmar, Calif., and 54 others, urging that the President and Representatives in Congress take prompt, decisive action looking toward the early enactment of a national retirement pension law, on a pay-as-you-go basis, embodying the fundamental principles of House bill 5620, now before Congress, which would pay to all citizens of the United States, 60 years of age and over, an adequate monthly annuity, as proposed in said act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7896. Also, petition of Dora Katz, of Monrovia, Calif., and 38 others, urging that the President and Representatives in Congress take prompt, decisive action looking toward the early enactment of a national retirement pension law, on a pay-as-you-go basis, embodying the fundamental principles of House bill 5620, now before Congress, which would pay to all citizens of the United States, 60 years of age and over, an adequate monthly annuity, as proposed in said act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7897. Also, petition of Emma Reed, of San Gabriel, Calif., and 72 others, urging that the President and Representatives in Congress take prompt, decisive action looking toward the early enactment of a national retirement pension law, on a pay-as-you-go basis, embodying the fundamental principles of House bill 5620, now before Congress, which would pay to all citizens of the United States 60 years of age and over an adequate monthly annuity, as proposed in said act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7898. Also, petition of Rachal Stoney, of South Pasadena, Calif., and 55 others, urging that the President and Representatives in Congress take prompt, decisive action looking toward the early enactment of a national retirement pension law, on a pay-as-you-go basis, embodying the fundamental principles of House bill 5620, now before Congress, which would pay to all citizens of the United States 60 years of age and over an adequate monthly annuity, as proposed in said act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7899. Also, petition of A. L. Bachman, of South Pasadena, Calif., and 72 others, urging that the President and Representatives in Congress take prompt, decisive action looking toward the early enactment of a national retirement pension law, on a pay-as-you-go basis, embodying the fundamental principles of House bill 5620, now before Congress, which would pay to all citizens of the United States 60 years of age and over an adequate monthly annuity, as proposed in said act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7900. Also, petition of Mrs. B. Estella Marshall, of San Gabriel, Calif., and 19 others, urging that the President and Representatives in Congress take prompt, decisive action looking toward the early enactment of a national retirement pension law, on a pay-as-you-go basis, embodying the fundamental principles of House bill 5620, now before Congress, which would pay to all citizens of the United States 60 years of age and over an adequate monthly annuity, as proposed in said act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7901. Also, petition of Mrs. E. J. McDowell, of El Monte, Calif., and 144 others, urging that the President and Representatives in Congress take prompt, decisive action looking toward the early enactment of a national retirement pension law, on a pay-as-you-go basis, embodying the fundamental principles of House bill 5620, now before Congress, which would pay to all citizens of the United States, 60 years of age and over, an adequate monthly annuity, as proposed in said act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7902. Also, petition of H. H. Thush, of Inglewood, Calif., and 19 others, endorsing the House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7903. Also, petition of Ruth C. Taysley, of Glendale, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7904. Also, petition of Charles F. Reid, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7905. Also, petition of John W. Walling, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 22 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7906. Also, petition of Bernard Lundle, of Santee, Calif., and 22 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7907. Also, petition of N. N. Hayes, of Oroville, Calif., and 25 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7908. Also, petition of Alfred C. Miner, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 22 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7909. Also, petition of H. U. Morrison, of Carlotte, Calif., and 15 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7910. Also, petition of I. J. Fischer, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 78 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7911. Also, petition of John H. Hammond, of Glendale, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7912. Also, petition of W. B. Edwards, of Blythe, Calif., and 49 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7913. Also, petition of Edward G. Frank, of Los Angeles, Calif., and nine others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7914. Also, petition of Arthur F. Wahlquist, of Yucaipa, Calif., and three others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7915. Also, petition of E. N. Gunn, of Los Angeles, Calif., and seven others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the service by Congress for the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7916. Also, petition of R. W. Suell, of Los Angeles, Calif., and six others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7917. Also, petition of Robert L. Parker, of South Pasadena, Calif., and nine others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7918. Also, petition of J. H. Thompson, of Fresno, Calif., and two others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7919. Also, petition of H. Tomlinson, of Big Bear City, Calif., and nine others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7920. Also, petition of Charles F. Bean, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7921. Also, petition of Harry L. Thompson, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 22 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7922. Also, petition of H. Rupp, of Fond du Lac, Wis., and 53 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7923. Also, petition of J. G. Collins, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 25 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7924. Also, petition of John K. Lafferty, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7925. Also, petition of E. M. Carlesen, of Glendale, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7926. Also, petition of Leona Parkinson, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 33 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7927. Also, petition of Frederick F. Zepp, of Vallejo, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7928. Also, petition of Harry R. Wilson, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7929. Also, petition of N. E. Graham, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 22 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7930. Also, petition of Douglas M. Wasson, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7931. Also, petition of Arthur Neff, of Oceanside, Calif., and 17 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7932. Also, petition of John C. Goetze, of Oakland, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7933. Also, petition of Henry I. Henriksen, of Van Nuys, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7934. Also, petition of William H. Mills, of Inglewood, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7935. Also, petition of Homer F. Remillard, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7936. Also, petition of George A. Law, of Long Beach, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power, and requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7937. Also, petition of F. H. Corwell, of San Jose, Calif., and 124 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power, and requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7938. Also, petition of Katherine Shoupe, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power, and requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7939. Also, petition of W. O. Shumate, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 49 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power, and requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7940. Also, petition of Mrs. I. James, of Mount View, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power, and requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7941. Also, petition of John J. Radrick, of San Jose, Calif., and 16 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7942. Also, petition of Robert Munzal, of San Jose, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7943. Also, petition of Ralph C. Dills, of Compton, Calif., and seven others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7944. Also, petition of Ben Miller, of Elkhart, Ind., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7945. Also, petition of Pearl Darr, of Goshen, Ind., and 114 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7946. Also, petition of J. H. Ley, of Plainview, Minn., and 108 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7947. Also, petition of G. E. Moon, of Goshen, Ind., and 286 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7948. Also, petition of John T. Lange, of Boise, Idaho, and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7949. Also, petition of Dr. R. L. Moore, of Goshen, Ind., and 17 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7950. Also, petition of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Straight, of Bedford, Iowa, and 23 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7951. Also, petition of Clarence Wittsey, of Sheridan, Mo., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7952. Also, petition of E. E. Dorris, of Sheridan, Mo., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7953. Also, petition of William Collins, of Sandusky, Ohio, and 59 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7954. Also, petition of E. Schmieder, of Chicago, Ill., and 27 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7955. Also, petition of Frederick J. Schnell, of Chicago, Ill., and 80 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7956. Also, petition of B. J. Callahan, of Chicago, Ill., and 40 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7957. Also, petition of Frederick Cappetta, of Chicago, Ill., and 40 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7958. Also, petition of John Kulovitz, of Chicago, Ill., and 60 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7959. Also, petition of John P. Shefke, of Chicago, Ill., and 60 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7960. Also, petition of Elizabeth Karlov, of Park Ridge, Ill., and 40 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7961. Also, petition of Homer S. Dum, of Downers Grove, Ill., and 40 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7962. Also, petition of Edwin A. Drath, of Chicago, Ill., and 59 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7963. Also, petition of M. Andersen, of Chicago, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7964. Also, petition of William Hibsch, of Chicago, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7965. Also, petition of F. B. Hartl, of Chicago, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7966. Also, petition of Charles R. Cole, of Chicago, Ill., and 20 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7967. Also, petition of B. H. Hindman, of Chicago, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7968. Also, petition of Walter W. Cline, of Chicago, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7969. Also, petition of Louis Holmes, of Chicago, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7970. Also, petition of Richard J. Hansel, of Chicago, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7971. Also, petition of Frank Klampferer, of Chicago, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7972. Also, petition of Ludwig Mathieson, of Chicago, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7973. Also, petition of Wm. J. Hibach, of Chicago, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7974. Also, petition of Floyd A. Unger, of Chicago, Ill., and 20 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7975. Also, petition of Jean Steinman, of Chicago, Ill., and 20 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7976. Also, petition of Robert D. Ernst, of Cicero, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7977. Also, petition of A. C. Korsgren, of Glencoe, Ill., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7978. Also, petition of Dr. Robert Conrod, of Denton, Tex., and 14 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7979. Also, petition of J. C. Jaqua, of Alvordton, Ohio, and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7980. Also, petition of Emilie L. Janton, of Ramsey, N. J., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7981. Also, petition of Albert R. Sneider, of Ramsey, N. J., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7982. Also, petition of John J. Fitzpatrick, of New York City, N. Y., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of the constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7983. Also, petition of Albert Luberto, of Jersey City, N. J., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7984. Also, petition of Raymond T. Sanford, of Middletown, R. I., and 22 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7985. Also, petition of Frank McGever, of Detroit, Mich., and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7986. Also, petition of J. C. Zoeter, of Kansas City, Kans., and 94 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7987. Also, petition of Ollie Parton, of Akron, Ohio, and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7988. Also, petition of W. H. Patterson, of Lincoln, Nebr., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7989. Also, petition of Eloise M. Carpenter, of Oakland, Calif., and 20 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7990. Also, petition of Earl C. Barber, of Santa Barbara, Calif., and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7991. Also, petition of Alphonse J. Pouliot, of Cecilville, Calif., and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7992. Also, petition of George E. Wiles, of Stockton, Calif., and 16 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7993. Also, petition of Mamie Marcum, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7994. Also, petition of Gertrude Gillam, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7995. Also, petition of Mrs. Harry Hugos, of Alhambra, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committtee on Banking and Currency.

7996. Also, petition of John Jenny, of Tujunga, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7997. Also, petition of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kahl, of Whittier, Calif., and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7998. Also, petition of Leonard R. Holliday, of Anaheim, Calif., and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7999. Also, petition of Evelyn Meade, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8000. Also, petition of Catherine St. Day, of Monrovia, Calif., and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8001. Also, petition of James Fairfield, of Monrovia, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8002. Also, petition of Charles J. Kroening, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8003. Also, petition of Katie Palozzolo, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8004. Also, petition of J. O. Caves, of Baldwin Park, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8005. Also, petition of Peter H. Meyer, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8006. Also, petition of George Radweiller, of Hollywood, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8007. Also, petition of J. H. Evans, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8008. Also, petition of Ella M. Fenely, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8009. Also, petition of Charles W. St. Clair, of Monrovia, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8010. Also, petition of Walter D. Jones, of Baldwin Park, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8011. Also, petition of Anna K. McDonald, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 20 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8012. Also, petition of Charles W. Stine, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 29 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8013. Also, petition of Harvey F. Darby, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8014. Also, petition of E. R. Brewer, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8015. Also, petition of Walter I. Froehligh, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 52 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8016. Also, petition of R. E. Roland, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8017. Also, petition of Grace B. Jewett, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 18 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8018. Also, petition of J. W. Hays, of Redlands, Calif., and 14 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8019. Also, petition of Myrta E. Thomas, of San Diego, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8020. Also, petition of James R. Henry, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8021. Also, petition of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Newby, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 23 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8022. Also, petition of Mr. and Mrs. Eric A. Intze, of Santa Monica, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8023. Also, petition of Francis H. Hardy, of Colton, Calif., and 63 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8024. Also, petition of C. H. Neal, of Venice, Calif., and 29 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8025. Also, petition of Johnny L. Wingert, of Bloomington, Calif., and 114 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8026. Also, petition of Wallis D. McPherson, of Downey, Calif., and 22 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8027. Also, petition of Maude Hefferman, of Venice, Calif., and 19 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8028. Also, petition of Fred T. Mason, of Torrance, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8029. Also, petition of Roscoe E. McBride, of Whittier, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8030. Also, petition of H. S. McClees, of Delano, Calif., and 14 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8031. Also, petition of Daniel E. Knock, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 16 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8032. Also, petition of Alice E. Barber, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 15 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8033. Also, petition of Rudolph Arthur Ludwig, of San Pedro, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8034. Also, petition of J. L. Garth, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8035. Also, petition of Clarence Anderson, of Kingsbury, Calif., and 18 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8036. Also, petition of Arthur Richard, of Paradise, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8037. Also, petition of James E. Wright, of Oakland, Calif., and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8038. Also, petition of John Jerina, of Fontana, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8039. Also, petition of Celia M. Tibbetts, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8040. Also, petition of J. Evich, of Santa Barbara, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8041. Also, petition of Edgar Hagemann, of Whittier, Calif., and 14 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8042. Also, petition of Helen A. Foster, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 2 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8043. Also, petition of Elizabeth W. Burbank, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8044. Also, petition of Robert G. Vaden, of Long Beach, Calif., and 23 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8045. Also, petition of Wanell T. Birch, of Hollywood, Calif., and 21 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8046. Also, petition of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hadley, of Whittier, Calif, and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8047. Also, petition of Isabel Burgess, of Studio City, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8048. Also, petition of Melvin L. Tooker, of Willowbrook, Calif., and 8 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8049. Also, petition of Ella G. Dean, of La Canada, Calif., and 3 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8050. Also, petition of Frank H. Ralph, of La Habra, Calif., and 6 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8051. Also, petition of Robert P. Gross, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8052. Also, petition of Louis Chasson, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 24 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8053. Also, petition of John G. Kroon, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 17 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8054. Also, petition of Arthur F. Hagerman, of Templeton, Calif., and 10 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8055. Also, petition of James G. Slatter, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 22 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8056. Also, petition of Wilbur C. Miller, of San Jose, Calif., and 20 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8057. Also, petition of John H. Lang, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 26 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8058. Also, petition of John E. Gray, of Pasadena, Calif., and 17 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8059. Also, petition of Charles E. Lynch, of Riverside, Calif., and 14 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8060. Also, petition of Jack L. Mitchell, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 20 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8061. Also, petition of Mrs. J. Kursinski, of Alhambra, Calif., and 14 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8062. Also, petition of H. M. Callecod, of Chula Vista, Calif., and 17 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8063. Also, petition of Gaston J. Bertormean, of Los Angeles, Calif., and 10 others, endorsing House bill 4931, providing for Government ownership of the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and for the exercise by Congress of its constitutional money power; requesting the Banking and Currency Committee to hold hearings on the said bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8064. By the SPEAKER: Petition of Local Union, No. 60, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Indianapolis, Ind., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to Senate bill 591, United States Housing Authority program; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8065. Also, petition of the Council of Social Agencies, Detroit, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to Senate bill 591, United States Housing Authority program; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8066. Also, petition of We the Americans, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to House bill 9449, concerning Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8067. Also, petition of the Northern District of the American Lutheran Church, Portland, Oreg., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to neutrality and peace; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

SENATE

MONDAY, MAY 6, 1940

(Legislative day of Wednesday, April 24, 1940)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

Rev. William L. Darby, D. D., executive secretary, Washington Federation of Churches, offered the following prayer:

Thou God of men and nations, we appear before Thee today with grateful thanks for the multitude of Thy mercies to us and to the children of men everywhere. We would not be silent when flowers and trees around us on this beautiful spring day are showing forth Thy praise. Yet some of us are not living in harmony with Thy will, and need to seek divine forgiveness because of the way in which we are treating our fellow men. War and strife across the seas, both east and west, destroy the sense of human brotherhood. Wrong and injustice at home, we know, tend to produce the same result. Grant us, we pray, the grace and strength to live together in the world as the sons of the Most High. Give peace and fellowship in place of bloodshed and slaughter throughout the whole earth.

Thy blessing we ask upon our country, that America may play her part well in these trying days. Grant Thy guidance to the President of the United States, the Vice President, and the Members of the Congress, that, with wisdom and prudence, they may perform their respective duties to both God and man. May all of us realize our responsibility for the betterment of conditions among our own people in this favored land and for the promotion of human welfare in lands abroad. In all our purposes and undertakings give us the mind and spirit of Jesus Christ our Lord. We ask in His name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day of Thursday, May 2, 1940, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—APPROVAL OF BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed the following act and joint resolution:

On April 30, 1940:

S. 2661. An act to provide for rearrangement of the location of the several boards of local inspectors.

On May 3, 1940:

S. J. Res. 199. Joint resolution amending Public Resolution No. 112 of the Seventy-fifth Congress and Public Resolution No. 48 of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8745) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. TAYLOR, Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma, Mr. SCRUGHAM, Mr. FITZPATRICK, Mr. LEAVY, Mr. SHEPPARD, Mr. RICH, Mr. CARTER, and Mr. WHITE of Ohio were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 8475) to limit the interpretation of the term "products of American fisheries," in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker pro tempore had affixed his signature to the following enrolled joint resolutions, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. J. Res. 252. Joint resolution to amend section 5 (b) of the act of October 6, 1917, as amended, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 431. Joint resolution to extend to the 1940 New York World's Fair and the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition the provisions according privileges under certain customs and other laws to the exposition of 1939.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	La Follette	Russell
Ashurst	Davis	Lee	Schwartz
Austin	Donahey	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Downey	Lucas	Sheppard
Bankhead	Ellender	Lundeen	Shipstead
Barbour	Frazier	McCarran	Smathers
Barkley	Gerry	McKellar	Smith
Bilbo	Gillette	McNary	Stewart
Bone	Guffey	Maloney	Taft
Brown	Gurney	Mead	Thomas, Idaho
Bulow	Hale	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Harrison	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Byrd	Hatch	Murray	Townsend
Byrnes	Hayden	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Herring	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Caraway	Holman	Overton	Wagner
Chavez	Hughes	Pepper	Walsh
Clark, Idaho	Johnson, Calif.	Pittman	Wheeler
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Reed	White
Connally	King	Reynolds	Wiley

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN], and the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SLATTERY] are unavoidably detained from the Senate.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. CHANDLER], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senators from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT and Mr. NEELY], the Senators from Maryland [Mr. RADCLIFFE and Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN] are absent on public business.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] is absent because of illness.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the Senators from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES and Mr. TOBEY], the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE], and my colleague the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] are necessarily absent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL CROP INSURANCE ACT—VETO MESSAGE (S. DOC. NO. 193)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying bill, referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Senate:

I am returning herewith, without my approval, a bill (S. 2635) to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act.

This bill would extend to cotton the system of Federal crop insurance now experimentally applied to wheat.

In my message to Congress on February 18, 1937, advocating initiation of wheat-crop insurance under Federal auspices, I expressed the belief that such insurance should be extended to other commodities when "application of the plan to wheat has provided a backlog of experience in applying the principles of crop insurance."

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation has just completed 1 year of experience with wheat-crop insurance and is entering upon a second year with three times the first-year volume of insurance coverage. While the initial year's business has resulted in great benefit to the insured producers, it has resulted, nevertheless, in an impairment of $1,430,000 in the Corporation's capital, over and above the costs of administration and research, which are borne by the Government. It seems evident, therefore, that we do not have as yet the essential "backlog of experience" required for the establishment of a sound actuarial basis for crop insurance—that is, for a crop-insurance plan that would be fully self-supporting, with premium rates sufficient to cover costs of administration, as well as of indemnities. Moreover, when such a plan is established, I think that the producers of all major agricultural crops should share in its benefits.

Since this bill merely broadens the scope of an experiment not yet on a satisfactory actuarial basis, and fails to provide a fully self-supporting insurance plan for general application to all crops, I do not feel that I would be justified in giving it my approval.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, May 4, 1940.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8745) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes; and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. HAYDEN. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. MCKELLAR, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. ADAMS, Mr. BANKHEAD, Mr. NYE, and Mr. HOLMAN, conferees on the part of the Senate.

REPORT OF THE ARCHITECT OF THE CAPITOL (S. DOC. NO. 192)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Architect of the Capitol, transmitting, pursuant to law, his annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1939, which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds and ordered to be printed.

LANDOWNERS ON UINTAH INDIAN IRRIGATION PROJECT, UTAH

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to provide relief for, and to promote the interest of, landowners on the Uintah Indian irrigation project, Utah, and for other purposes, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

AMENDMENT OF REVISED STATUTES AS AMENDED BY ANTISMUGGLING ACT OF 1935

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of Commerce, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend section 4336 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a memorial from officers and members of Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council, C. I. O., of Harrisburg, Pa., remonstrating against adoption of the so-called Smith-Norton amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions of the Northwestern District of the American Lutheran Church, favoring the preservation of neutrality and peace, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Unión de Mujeres Americanas, United Women of the Americas, New York City, N. Y., favoring the issuance of a commemorative postage stamp in honor of Mary Ball Washington, mother of George Washington, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Council of Social Agencies of Metropolitan Detroit, Detroit, Mich., favoring the enactment of Senate bill 591, to amend the United States Housing Act of 1937, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. TYDINGS presented a resolution of the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association, Washington, D. C., protesting against the enactment of the bill (H. R. 8692) to amend the act to regulate the practice of podiatry in the District of Columbia, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. VANDENBERG presented a petition of sundry citizens of Wayne County, Mich., praying for the enactment of the bill (S. 2009) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by extending its application to additional types of carriers and transportation and modifying certain provisions thereof, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SETTLEMENT AND DEVELOPMENT OF ALASKA

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, Senate bill 3577 is a bill "to provide for the settlement and development of Alaska." Alaska has no representation in the Senate, and as the citizens of Alaska apparently have very profound objection to the program embodied in this particular bill, I ask that a brief analysis or statement regarding it from the Juneau Chamber of Commerce be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It there objection?

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ANALYSIS OF S. 3577—BEING "A BILL TO PROVIDE FOR THE SETTLEMENT AND DEVELOPMENT OF ALASKA"

This is a measure designed to make effective the so-called Slattery plan for opening up Alaska to settlement by European refugees and to create Government-chartered development corporations for industrial utilization of the Territory's natural resources. Salmon fishing and canning are excluded.

The bill places full authority for granting charters, upon the filing with him of articles of incorporation conforming to certain conditions satisfactory to him, upon the Secretary of the Interior. He is given absolute power in the matter of issuance of regulations over the corporations and authorized, in case of violations of requirements, to bring legal action to terminate the charters.

While the admission of now ineligible immigrants to the Territory is the most objectionable feature of the proposed law, there are other features which are worth serious consideration.

Subsection 4 of section 3 provides: "The maximum rate of interest to be paid on debentures and the maximum rate of dividend to be paid upon stock: Provided, That in no case shall such rate of interest or dividend be higher than 6 percent per annum."

This is purely a limitation on interest that can be paid upon bonds, but it does not set a limit upon the earning power of the corporation. It might actually earn much more than 6 percent upon its investment, but it could pay only the stated 6 percent upon its stock. There is no prohibition against surplus earnings anywhere in the bill.

Section 4 sets the minimum capitalization at $10,000,000 and a minimum cash at the outset of $2,500,000 in either stock or debentures. There is no limitation upon the amount of either bonded indebtedness or stock subscriptions.

This could easily lead to speculation on a tremendous scale, more especially so in view of the provision contained in section 13, which specifically exempts the corporations' securities from the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 and, therefore, from jurisdiction under the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Transfers of voting stock legally held to any alien not a certified settler is prohibited and such transfers declared to be null and void. It seems doubtful if this would be upheld in the courts. It might be that the courts would hold that any legal stockholder could dispose of his property, including voting stock in the corporation, to whomever and wherever he could do so at a profit, or, for that matter, even at a loss.

Corporations would be authorized to certify annually the number of settlers to be brought into the Territory. These would be of three types:

1. At least 50 percent of the total to be citizens of the United States if they make application and possess necessary qualifications.
2. Aliens who are admissable under immigration quotas in proportion to the several national quotas.
3. Aliens between the ages of 16 and 45 other than quota immigrants.

These would be given visas permitting them to enter Alaska as corporation settlers under the certification of the corporation. They would be required to remain in Alaska for a period of 5 years or such longer time as it might require for them to enter the classification of quota immigrants and thus entitled legally to admission to the country. They could not engage in any occupation or trade other than that specified in the bill as long as they remained nonquota immigrants.

This is the provision to which Alaskans have strenuously protested. Delegate DIMOND has publicly termed it an effort to make out of Alaska a concentration or detention camp. It is an apt phrase and wholly justified.

In the end, if the many thousands of European refugees were brought here in large groups, it would not be many years until the Territorial culture and economy would be transferred from American to alien, a transformation Alaskans do not want and which the Nation as a whole should not desire.

Mr. DIMOND has announced his opposition to the measure. He should have the united support of civic and commercial organizations throughout the Territory, and of all Alaskans regardless of party.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 8024) to provide for the leasing of restricted allotments of deceased Indians in certain circumstances, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1570) thereon.

Mr. CONNALLY, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 3828) to amend section 107 of the Judicial Code, as amended, to eliminate the requirement that suitable accommodations for holding the court at Winchester, Tenn., be provided by the local authorities, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1571) thereon.

REPORTS ON DISPOSITION OF EXECUTIVE PAPERS

Mr. BARKLEY, from the Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers, to which were referred, for examination and recommendation, 10 lists of records transmitted to the Senate by the Archivist of the United States, which appeared to have no permanent value or historical interest, submitted reports thereon pursuant to law.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on today, May 6, 1940, that that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled joint resolution (S. J. Res. 252) to amend section 5 (b) of the act of October 6, 1917, as amended, and for other purposes.

ACCEPTANCE AND DEDICATION OF PAINTING, SIGNING OF THE CONSTITUTION

Mr. BARKLEY. From the Committee on the Library I report an original concurrent resolution. I may say that, under the rule, the resolution will have to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, as it provides for an expenditure of $1,000 from the contingent funds of the Senate and the House for the purpose of holding ceremonies in the rotunda accepting and dedicating a work of art produced under a previous joint resolution authorizing the employment of an artist to paint a scene depicting the signing of the Constitution of the United States. That work has been completed; it is a marvelous piece of painting. At a little later date, we shall have the ceremony in the rotunda accepting and dedicating the picture, which will be hung in the Capitol later.

I ask that the resolution now reported by me from the Committee on the Library be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, in order that the committee may pass on the question of expenditure.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 45) was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the commission authorized to employ an artist to paint a painting of the scene at the signing of the Constitution, created by Public Resolution No. 11, approved April 20, 1939, be, and it is hereby, authorized to place temporarily in the rotunda of the Capitol the painting by the artist employed by the said commission, and to hold ceremonies in the rotunda on the said occasion.

The Architect of the Capitol is hereby authorized to make the necessary arrangements for the ceremonies, the expenses of which shall not exceed the sum of $1,000, of which one-half shall be payable from the contingent fund of the Senate and one-half from the contingent fund of the House of Representatives upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the commission.

ADDITIONAL COPIES ON REPORT OF STATUS OF WILDLIFE

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, by direction of the Committee on Printing, I report back favorably from that committee, without amendment, Senate Resolution 263, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 263) submitted by Mr. PITTMAN on April 24, 1940, was considered and agreed to as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed 1,800 additional copies of Senate Report No. 1203, submitted pursuant to Senate Resolution 246 (71st Cong.), entitled "The Status of Wildlife in the United States," of which 1,500 copies shall be for the use of the Special Committee on the Conservation of Wildlife Resources and 300 copies for the use of the Senate document room.

LAWS AND TREATIES RELATING TO INDIAN AFFAIRS

Mr. HAYDEN. From the Committee on Printing I report back favorably, with an amendment, Senate Resolution 141, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution, which had been submitted by Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma on June 5, 1939.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Printing was, on line 6, after the word "document", to strike out—

And that 50 additional copies of each be printed for the use of the Indian Office and Indian agencies, 30 additional copies of each for the use of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, 30 additional copies of each for the use of the House Committee on Indian Affairs, and 30 additional copies of each for use of the compilers.

So as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the manuscript of the laws, agreements, Executive orders, proclamations, etc., relating to Indian Affairs, prepared under Senate Resolution No. 60, Seventy-fifth Congress, first session, to be known as Laws and Treaties Relating to Indian Affairs, volume 5, be printed as a Senate document.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri:

S. 3915. A bill for the relief of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BURKE:

S. 3916. A bill for the relief of Lawrence T. Post, G. F. Allen, and D. Buddrus; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MEAD:

S. 3917. A bill for the relief of Guy T. Morris; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 3918. A bill adopting and authorizing the improvement of East River, N. Y.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself and Mr. CHAVEZ):

S. 3919. A bill to postpone for 1 year the date of the transmission to Congress by the United States Coronado Exposition Commission of a statement of its expenditures; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. WAGNER:

S. 3920. A bill to amend the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, approved June 25, 1938, as amended June 20, 1939, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. MINTON:

S. 3921. A bill granting an increase of pension to Sarah A. Hollis (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

S. 3922. A bill granting a pension to James C. Keeley; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MALONEY:

S. 3923. A bill for the relief of Austin L. Tierney; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

(Mr. WAGNER also introduced Senate bill 3924, which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and appears under a separate heading.)

(Mr. GURNEY introduced Senate bill 3925, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. GUFFEY:

S. 3926. A bill to authorize the Secretary of War to provide a license for the construction of a pile dolphin and walkway at Fort Mifflin Military Reservation, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BAILEY:

S. 3927. A bill to provide for the administration of the Washington National Airport, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. WALSH:

S. J. Res. 253. Joint resolution providing for the celebration in 1945 of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

(Mr. WILEY introduced Senate Joint Resolution 254, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and appears under a separate heading.)

PERMANENT DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS UNDER SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to introduce a bill for appropriate reference.

This bill, providing systematic insurance protection for wage earners totally and permanently disabled before they reach the retirement age, would meet the economic needs of those who have hitherto been the forgotten men of our social-security system. As pointed out in the last annual report of the Social Security Board:

There is an anomaly in present provisions for social insurance in that benefits are payable to unemployed workers who are well and able to work but not to those, with perhaps a precisely similar work history, who are unemployed because they are sick, and for that very reason are probably in more serious need. A similar anomaly exists in the fact that insurance provision has been made for the worker who is incapacitated by old age while none yet exists for younger persons with nonoccupational disabilities which produce an even more prolonged loss of earning power, even though persons in the latter group are more likely to have responsibilities for dependents. Appropriate measures to safeguard health and offset the losses occasioned by disability are an essential link in the defenses which are being erected to prevent or relieve dependency and to promote security in the United States.

This anomalous gap in our Social Security Act should be promptly closed. The present Railroad Retirement Act, as well as the old-age insurance system in practically every other industrial country in the world, authorizes benefits for the permanently disabled.

The bill, with necessary technical changes, follows closely the proposal which I introduced last year when the revision of the Social Security Act was under consideration. Benefits are payable to wage earners totally and permanently disabled and covered by old-age and survivors insurance. Benefits are geared into the old-age insurance system, including the allowances for dependents. For at least 10 years the added cost of these benefits would be comparatively small and would be met out of the existing Old Age and Survivors' Insurance Fund without any increase in the schedule of contributions by employers and employees in the present law.

Humanity and economy require that the disabled beneficiaries be restored to health in all cases where medical and surgical skill have progressed far enough to offer a remedy. The bill anticipates the need for rehabilitation, where such services may aid in restoring the beneficiary's working ability. The funds to be expended for the purpose of rehabilitation are carefully limited and could not be utilized for the construction of hospitals or other institutions.

The bill I would wish to have referred to the Committee on Finance, which has just established a special subcommittee to study the old-age insurance and related provisions of the Social Security Act. I am confident that the subcommittee, when it begins its deliberations, will give early attention to the problem of the permanently disabled, of whom the Advisory Council on Old Age wrote in its report:

> No other group in our population is more completely dependent or in a more desperate economic situation.

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3924) amending the Social Security Act so as to provide insurance benefits for wage earners permanently and totally disabled for causes not arising out of their employment, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Finance.

AMENDMENT OF RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, at this time I ask unanimous consent to introduce a bill proposing to amend the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act which was approved on June 25, 1938, and which was amended June 20, 1939, and became operative on July 1, 1939.

Therefore, the present Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act has been in operation for a period of some 10 months. A huge reserve is being built up, much more than is necessary to take care of the payments for railroad unemployment, in accordance with the payment provisions of the act itself.

Within the past few days a bill has been introduced by the senior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] seeking to increase the benefit payments now provided by existing law. This bill, S. 3906, was introduced on May 2. The Association of American Railroads is in complete agreement that some changes should be made, but considers that the percentage of increased benefits should not be as large as proposed in S. 3906. As I understand, a great deal of effort has been made as between the railroad employer and the railroad employee, seeking to reconcile their individual ideas so that a plan agreed on may be submitted to Congress.

I feel I am wholly consistent in offering the employer's ideas at this time, inasmuch as the employee's ideas have already been offered as represented by the bill introduced last week. I feel that the bill which I am offering now should be studied carefully by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, at the same time S. 3906 is being studied. A thorough study must be made so that fair consideration shall be given to the railroad employees and the railroads themselves, bearing in mind that during these times of world stress, the railroads and their employees must be a harmonious whole, because both are so vital to our national defense.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill which I offer at this time be printed in the RECORD following my remarks, and that there also be printed in the RECORD, following my remarks, an explanatory letter from the Association of American Railroads, together with a schedule showing a comparison between the provisions of Senate bill 3906 and the bill which I offer at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 3925) to amend the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, approved June 25, 1938, as amended June 20, 1939, was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.,

SECTION 1. Subsection (h) of section 1 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, approved June 25, 1938 (52 Stat. 1094), as amended June 20, 1939 (53 Stat. 845), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(h) The term 'registration period' means, with respect to any employee, the period of 14 consecutive calendar days which begins with the first day for which such employee registers in accordance with such regulations as the Board may prescribe, and thereafter each period of 14 consecutive calendar days which begins with the first day for which he next registers after the end of his last preceding registration period."

SEC. 2. Subsection (j) of section 1 of said act is hereby amended by inserting the following sentence at the end of the first sentence thereof:

"The term 'remuneration' also includes earned income other than for services for hire when in excess of an average of $1 per day during any registration period, if the accruel thereof in whole or in part is ascertainable with respect to a particular day or particular days."

SEC. 3. Subsection (1) of section 1 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(1) The term 'base year' means the calendar year immediately preceding the beginning of the benefit year."

SEC. 4. Subsection (n) of section 1 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(n) The term 'benefit year' means the 12 months' period beginning July 1 of any year and ending June 30 of the following year, except that a registration period beginning in one benefit year and ending in another shall be deemed to be in the benefit year in which it begins."

SEC. 5. Subsection (a) of section 2 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(a) A qualified employee shall be paid benefits for each day of unemployment in excess of 4 during any registration period other than that prescribed as a waiting period in section 3 of this act.

"The benefits payable to any such employee for each such day of unemployment shall be the amount appearing in the following table in column II on the line on which, in column I, appears the compensation-range containing the total amount of compensation payable to him with respect to employment in his base year:

Total compensation:	Daily benefit amount
$150 to $399.99	$1.50
$400 to $699.99	2.00
$700 to $999.99	2.50
$1,000 to $1,299.99	3.00
$1,300 to $1,599.99	3.50
$1,600 and over	4.00

SEC. 6. Subsection (b) of section 3 of said act is hereby amended by striking the first sentence thereof and substituting therefor the following: "Within his benefit year he has had a waiting period of one registration period during which he had at least 7 days of unemployment."

SEC. 7. Paragraph (iv) of subsection (a) of section 4 of said act is hereby amended by striking therefrom the term "half month" and inserting in lieu thereof the term "registration period."

SEC. 8. Paragraph (vi) of subsection (a) of section 4 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(vi) Any day in any registration period comprising the last 14 days of a period of 28 days with respect to which the Board finds that he earned, in train and engine service, yard service, dining-car service, sleeping-car service, parlor-car service, or other pullman-car or similar service, or express service on trains, at least the equivalent of 32 times his daily benefit rate."

SEC. 9. Subsection (a) of section 4 of said act is hereby further amended by adding at the end thereof the following additional paragraph:

"(vii) Any Sunday which is not immediately preceded and immediately followed by a day of unemployment other than a holiday; and any holiday which is not immediately preceded and immediately followed by a day of unemployment other than a Sunday or other holiday."

SEC. 10. Subsections (a) and (b) of section 8 of said act are hereby amended to read as follows:

(a) Every employer shall pay a contribution, with respect to having employees in his service, equal to the percent hereinafter set forth of so much of the compensation as is not in excess of $300 for any calendar month payable by him to any employee with respect to employment after June 30, 1939: Provided, however, That if compensation is payable to an employee by more than one employer with respect to any such calendar month the contributions required by this subsection shall apply to not more than $300 of the aggregate compensation payable to said employee by all said employers with respect to such calendar month, and each such employer shall be liable for that proportion of the contribution with respect to such compensation which the amount payable by him to the employee with respect to such calendar month bears to the aggregate compensation payable to such employee by all employers with respect to such calendar month:

"(i) With respect to employment during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1939, and ending June 30, 1940, the rate shall be 3 percent;

"(ii) With respect to employment during any fiscal year after June 30, 1940, the rate shall be that appearing in the following table in column II on the line on which appears, in column I, a range of amounts within which falls the amount of the assets of the railroad unemployment insurance account as of June 30 of the preceding fiscal year:

Insurance-account assets:	Contribution rate
Less than $100,000,000	3 percent
$100,000,000 but less than $125,000,000	2 percent
$125,000,000 or more	1 percent

"It shall be the duty of the Board, as soon as practicable after the close of each fiscal year, to make a determination of the amount of the assets of the account as of June 30 of said year and give notice thereof, and of the resulting contribution rate for the ensuing year, to all employers and employee representatives subject to this act. In making such determination, the Board shall include as assets of the account, in addition to all amounts credited thereto, all amounts transferable to that account under the provisions of sections 13 and 14 of this act, and shall make reasonable estimates of the amounts so transferable if the exact amounts thereof have not been agreed to in accordance with the provisions of said sections.

"(b) Each employee representative shall pay, with respect to his income, a contribution equal to the percent prescribed in subsection (a) of this section of so much of the compensation of such employee representative as is not in excess of $300 for any calendar month, paid to him for services performed as an employee representative after June 30, 1939. The compensation of an employee representative and the contribution with respect thereto shall be determined in the same manner and with the same effect as if the employee organization by which such employee representative is employed were an employer as defined in this act."

SEC. 11. Subsection (c) of section 11 of said act is hereby amended by striking the clause at the beginning thereof, reading:

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all moneys at any time credited to the fund are hereby permanently appropriated to the Board to be continuously available to the Board without further appropriation for any expenses necessary or incidental to administering this act" and substituting therefor the following:

"There are hereby authorized to be appropriated from the fund such amounts as may be required to meet all expenses necessary or incidental to administering this act."

SEC. 12. Subsection (d) of section 11 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(d) So much of the balance in the fund as of June 30 of each year as is in excess of $6,000,000 shall as of such date be transferred from the fund and credited to the account."

SEC. 13. The provisions of this act (except sec. 11) shall take effect on July 1, 1940, except that a half month which is begun prior to such date in accordance with the act of which this act is amendatory, and regulations made thereunder, and which includes such date, shall continue, and benefits with respect thereto shall be computed and paid in the same manner and with the same effect as if this act had not been enacted, and the provisions of this act shall become operative with respect to any employee having any such half month only upon the termination of such half month. The provisions of section 11 of this act shall take effect on July 1, 1941.

The explanatory letter and schedule presented by Mr. GURNEY in connection with the bill are as follows:

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN RAILROADS,
BUREAU OF RAILWAY ECONOMICS,
Washington, D. C., May 6, 1940.

Hon. CHAN GURNEY,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: In compliance with your request for information with respect to amendments proposed by the Association of American Railroads to the present Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, I attach two copies of a typewritten statement along the lines of your request. This statement shows, as to the principal features, a comparison of the provisions of the present act (R. U. I. A.), the proposed railroad amendments (railroad bill), the amendments proposed by railway labor (S. 3906) introduced by Senator WAGNER on May 2, and the present Unemployment Compensation Act of the State of South Dakota.

You will recall that the present Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act was enacted by Congress in 1938, and became effective on July 1, 1939, so that it has been in operation now for approximately 10 months. During these 10 months railway employment has been generally on the upward trend, each month of that period showing greater employment than in the same month of the next preceding year. I attach two copies of a statement, which shows the percentage of increase in employment on railways of class I, during each of those months up to March 1940, the latest month for which we now have available statistics. Because of the favorable employment conditions during this period the amount of unemployment benefits paid out has been below normal.

These favorable conditions, and the considerable sum that is expected to be turned over to the railroad unemployment reserve fund from the several State unemployment funds, as provided under the present act, are the factors that lead railway labor to request Congress to amend the act by making radical increases in the present scale of benefits, which will produce 100-percent increase in the total benefit payments annually. These are written into S. 3906.

We feel that some increase in benefits is justified, especially in those features which will increase the amount of weekly benefit. The railroad bill is designed to meet this particular situation. Our best estimate is that the amendments in that bill will increase the benefit payments by about 25 percent annually, which is as large an increase as we believe it wise to propose at this time, before we have had sufficient experience with the workings of the present act over a cycle of both rising and falling employment trends.

So far as possible, the railroad bill follows the provisions contained in S. 3906, although it does not, of course, go so far as that bill in respect to certain provisions.

I have stated that S. 3906 will increase benefit scales about 100 percent, and the railroad bill about 25 percent. These percentages cannot be assigned to any one change in the benefit provisions under the act, because all the changes affect each other in a complex pattern, and must be considered jointly. The estimate of 100 percent for S. 3906 is that of Chairman Murray W. Latimer of the Railroad Retirement Board, who in a memorandum dated March 28, 1940, made an estimate of increase in costs for the amendments proposed by S. 3906, and stated that "the proposed effect of all these changes is to increase the cost by 100 percent, that is, to double the benefit outlay required by the present law." The estimate of 25 percent is arrived at by our experts, who have made a careful analysis of the proposed changes, and believe that their estimate is a reasonable one.

The railroad bill provides for a graduated scale of contribution, or tax, on the pay rolls. The tax, which is 3 percent under the present act, is wholly paid by the employers, and applies to all pay rolls up to $300 per month per man. The scale provided in the railroad bill would leave the tax at its present rate of 3 percent, so long as the cash and other assets in the unemployment insurance reserve fund are less than $100,000,000. If the fund is greater than $100,000,000 as of June 30 of any fiscal year, the tax for the succeeding fiscal year becomes 2 percent; if greater than $125,000,000, the tax for the succeeding year becomes 1 percent. It returns to 3 percent, however, whenever the reserve fund declines below $100,000,000 on any June 30. We believe that this reserve is amply sufficient to protect and assure the financial soundness of the system, that it will afford greater benefits to the employees than the present act, and at the same time will offer employers an incentive to stabilize their employment, and in that way obtain a reduction in tax rate. No such tax scale is set up in S. 3906.

In addition, S. 3906 contains a number of provisions which would enable the Railroad Retirement Board, the administrative agency under the act, to spend money for administrative purposes without any check or supervision by Congress or by any Government agency. We believe that sound and economical administration demands that such a check be set up. We do not, therefore, adopt the administrative provisions of S. 3906, but instead have provided in sections 11 and 12 of the railroad bill that the Railroad Retirement Board shall be required to obtain annual appropriations from Congress for its administrative expenses under the act, and that when the balance in the administrative fund exceeds $6,000,000, on June 30 of any year the excess shall be transferred to the unemployment insurance reserve fund.

I shall be glad to supply additional information on the railroad bill, the present act, or the bill introduced by Senator WAGNER, or to answer any questions that may arise regarding them.

Very truly yours,

J. H. PARMELEE, Director.

PERCENTAGE INCREASE IN NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES—RAILWAYS OF CLASS I—JULY 1939–MARCH 1940

Increase over same month of next preceding year

	Percent
July 1939	7.8
August	6.9
September	5.8
October	8.1
November	8.1
December	7.0
January 1940	6.1
February	5.5
March	4.2

Comparative provisions of Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act (R. U. I. A.), proposed railroad bill, S. 3906

Provision	Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act	Railroad bill	Wagner bill (S. 3906)
Registration period	Subsec. (h) of sec. 1: 15 consecutive days	Sec. 1: 14 consecutive days	Subsec. (h) of sec. 3: Same as railroad bill.
Self-employment	No provision	Sec. 2: Earnings from self-employment of $1 or less per day does not bar a person from unemployment benefits.	Subsec. (k) of sec. 5: Same as railroad bill.
Base year	Subsec. (L) sec. 1: For benefit year beginning on or after July 1, last completed calendar year. For benefit year beginning before July 1, next to last completed calendar year.	Sec. 3: Calendar year immediately preceding benefit year.	Subsec. (n) sec. 8: Same as railroad bill.
Benefit year	Subsec. (n) sec. 1: 12 months beginning with first day of first 15-day period for which benefits are payable.	Sec. 4: Uniform benefit year July 1 to June 30	Subsec. (m) sec. 7: Same as railroad bill.
Benefit scale	Subsec. (a) sec. 2: Total compensation in base year and daily benefit amount: $150–$199 $1.75 $200–$474 2.00 $475–$749 2.25 $750–$1,024 2.50 $1,025–$1,299 2.75 $1,300 and over 3.00	Sec. 5: Total compensation in base year and daily benefit amount: $150–$399 $1.50 $400–$699 2.00 $700–$999 2.50 $1,000–$1,299 3.00 $1,300–$1,599 3.50 $1,600 and over 4.00	Subsec. (a) sec. 9: Same as railroad bill, except that daily benefit for base year wages $150–$390 is $1.75 instead of $1.50.
Weekly benefits for total unemployment at wages in base year of:
$150	$6.53	$7.50	$8.75.
$400	$7.46	$10.00	$10.00.
$700	$8.40	$12.50	$12.50.
$1,000	$9.33	$15.00	$15.00.
$1,300	$11.20	$17.50	$17.50.
$1,600	$11.20	$20.00	$20.00.
Aggregate benefits in benefit year for total unemployment	Minimum, $149 Maximum, $240	Minimum, $120 Maximum, $320	Minimum, $175. Maximum, $400.
Waiting period	Subsec. (b) of sec. 3: 15 consecutive days with not less than 8 days of unemployment.	Sec. 6: 14 consecutive days with not less than 7 days of unemployment.	Subsec. (a) sec. 9: 7 days of unemployment in first registration period.
Certain classes of employees paid on mileage basis.	Par. (vi) of subsec. (a) sec. 4: Not eligible for benefits if earnings during 15 days equal 8 times daily scheduled rates of pay.	Sec. 8: Not eligible for benefits if earnings during 28 days equal 32 times daily benefit rate.	Par. (vi) (vii) sec. 18: Not eligible for benefits if earnings during 14 days equal 20 times daily benefit rate, or during 28 days equal 40 times daily benefit rate.
Sundays and holidays	No provision	Sec. 9, par. (vii): Sundays and holidays not considered as days of unemployment unless immediately preceded and followed by a day of unemployment.	Sec. 18, par. (viii): Same as railroad bill.
Contribution (or tax) rate	Sec. 8, subsec. (a): 3 percent on compensation not in excess of $300 per month, payable by employer.	Sec. 10: When insurance account assets as of June 30, of preceding fiscal year are: Less than $100,000,000 [1] 3 $100,000,000 but less than $125,000,000 [1] 2 $125,000,000 or more [1] 1	Same as present act.

[1] Percent rate for fiscal years after June 30, 1940.

NATIONAL DAIRY DAY

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to introduce and have read a joint resolution which I am now presenting to provide for the observance of a national dairy day.

It is not my intention to comment on the resolution at this time, but I should like to point out that milk production is now at near record levels—all-time high.

As a consequence national dairy organizations are drafting plans for a national dairy month in June to promote greater consumption of dairy products. Many well-known national dairy organizations are participating in this worth-while movement.

It is apparent that the challenge of record dairy production can be met only by a curtailment in production or an increase in the extent of the present market or a more intensive use of the existing market.

I believe the answer to record dairy production will eventually be found in research which will develop new industrial uses for milk and its byproducts. Along with this research I believe it is vital that a conscientious effort be made to increase the per capita consumption of dairy products. If our per capita consumption, for example, paralleled that of Holland, our dairy problem would be solved, and we would, incidentally, be a healthier people.

There being no objection, the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 254) providing for the observance of National Dairy Day was read the first time by its title, the second time at length, and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That for the purpose of stimulating the per capita consumption of dairy products the President is hereby requested, by proclamation, to designate a day in the month of June 1940 as National Dairy Day which may be appropriately observed throughout the United States.

REFERENCE OF A BILL

On motion by Mr. BONE, the bill (S. 2687) to establish a circuit court of appeals for patents was taken from the calendar and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

On motion by Mr. HARRISON, the Committee on Finance was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 3366) for the relief of John C. Gardner, and it was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

IMPROVEMENT OF HIGHWAYS—AMENDMENTS

Mr. HAYDEN submitted an amendment in the nature of a substitute, and Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado submitted an amendment, intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to the bill (S. 3105) to assist the States in the improvement of highways, which were each referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed.

ADDRESS BY THE PRESIDENT TO DELEGATES ATTENDING THE NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF GOVERNMENT

[Mr. BROWN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by the President to the delegates attending the National Institute of Government, conducted by the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, May 3, 1940, which appears in the appendix.]

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT ON CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY AND AIR SAFETY BOARD

[Mr. BYRNES asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a statement by the President of the United States with reference to the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the Air Safety Board, which appears in the Appendix.]

CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY AND AIR SAFETY BOARD

[Mr. BYRNES asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to Robert H. Hinckley, Chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and a letter from the Attorney General to the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, both with reference to the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the Air Safety Board, which appear in the Appendix.]

SPEECH BY MR. HOMER MAT ADAMS INTRODUCING THE PRESIDENT AT JEFFERSON DAY DINNER ON APRIL 20, 1940

[Mr. BARKLEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a speech introducing the President, delivered by

Homer Mat Adams, president of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, at the Jefferson Day dinner, Washington, D. C., April 20, 1940, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY HON. CHARLES EVANS HUGHES BEFORE ELMIRA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, MAY 3, 1907

[Mr. BARKLEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Hon. Charles Evans Hughes before the Elmira Chamber of Commerce on May 3, 1907, which appears in the Appendix.]

GOVERNMENT AND BUSINESS CAN COOPERATE

[Mr. MEAD asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD addresses on the subject "Government and Business Can Cooperate," delivered by himself, by Hon. Robert H. Jackson, Attorney General of the United States, and by Mr. Henry I. Harriman, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, on the occasion of the Democratic forum held at the Riverside Stadium, Washington, D. C., on the evening of the 3d instant, which appear in the Appendix.]

BANKING SYSTEM FOR SMALL BUSINESS

[Mr. MEAD asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address by Mr. Peter R. Nehemkis, Jr., special counsel, Investment Banking Section, Securities and Exchange Commission, delivered on the 2d instant before the Kiwanis Club of Newark, N. J., entitled "Wanted: A New Banking System for Small Business," which appears in the Appendix.]

AMERICA'S DUTY TO THE FUTURE—ADDRESS BY J. EDGAR HOOVER

[Mr. ASHURST asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address on America's Duty to the Future, delivered by J. Edgar Hoover before the New York Federation of Women's Clubs, Hotel Astor, New York City, May 3, 1940, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY JUDGE SAUL A. YAGER ON MR. JUSTICE BLACK

[Mr. LEE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address by Judge Saul A. Yager on Mr. Justice Black, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT OF NORWICH UNIVERSITY AT UNVEILING OF PAINTING OF ADMIRAL DEWEY

[Mr. AUSTIN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Dr. John Martin Thomas, president of Norwich University, on the occasion of the unveiling of a painting of Admiral George Dewey, at Montpelier, Vt., on May 1, 1940, which appears in the Appendix.]

HON. JAMES A. FARLEY AND THE PRESIDENCY

[Mr. MCKELLAR asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article by Harold Brayman entitled "Colorful Jim Farley Looms Large in Demo Presidential Picture," published in the Chattanooga (Tenn.) News-Free Press, of April 20, 1940, which appears in the Appendix.]

ARTICLE BY CARNEGIE PEACE LIBRARY ON THE COST OF WAR

[Mr. BONE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article by the Carnegie Peace Library entitled "The Cost of War in General," which appears in the Appendix.]

ARTICLE BY ERNEST LINDLEY ON WALTER-LOGAN BILL

[Mr. MINTON asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article by Ernest Lindley on the Walter-Logan bill, published in the Washington Post of May 3, 1940, which appears in the Appendix.]

NAVY AND MARINE MEMORIAL

[Mr. DANAHER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial dealing with the completion of the Navy and Marine Memorial on Columbia Island, Washington, D. C., published in the Sunday Star of May 5, 1940, which appears in the Appendix.]

ARTICLE FROM CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR ON SILVER-PURCHASE PROGRAM

[Mr. WILEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article written by H. B. Elliston and published in the Christian Science Monitor of May 3, 1940, relating to the silver-purchase program, which appears in the Appendix.]

AMERICA AND THE EUROPEAN WAR

[Mr. SHIPSTEAD asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD two editorials; one from the Wanderer of the issue of May 2 and the other from the Lutheran Companion of the issue of April 25, in regard to the European war, which appear in the Appendix.]

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

[Mr. WILEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the Washington Evening Star of May 6, 1940, under the heading "F. B. I. Exonerated," which appears in the Appendix.]

SALE OF PLANES TO ALLIES

[Mr. REYNOLDS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article from the Washington Times-Herald relating to the sale of planes to the Allies, which appears in the Appendix.]

NATIONAL DEFENSE

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, there is a great deal of perplexity in the minds of many of us regarding the form in which an adequate national defense should be developed. There is a distinct difference of opinion respecting the relative value of surface craft in the Navy and aircraft. Then there is an equally distinct difference of opinion regarding categories of naval craft, with particular reference to the utility of the superdreadnaughts, which we have now started to construct.

The Secretary of the Navy, in a press conference last week end, had some very important things to say upon this subject. I am asking that the report of his press conference and the statement he had to make upon the subject be inserted in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EDISON SAYS NAVY FACES AIR MENACE—PLANES' ADVANTAGE IS CALLED TEMPORARY, BUT HE SUGGESTS NEW BATTLESHIP DESIGN

(By Frank L. Kluckhohn)

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Secretary Edison declared today that airplanes have a "temporary" advantage over battleships under modern conditions of warfare. He proposed the rebuilding of the "top sides" of existing battleships and "a real basic change" in the design of new ones.

The airplane, he added, has made inadvisable certain types of naval activity, particularly some types of action close to shore.

The remarks of the Secretary of the Navy, made in his first press conference since he observed the Navy's Pacific maneuvers, were considered perhaps the most authoritative comment to date by a responsible naval official of any country on the vital controversy as to whether the airplane or the battleship is superior. The issue has been sharpened since the struggle for Norway began. He has at his disposal this Government's information from all quarters.

Mr. Edison made clear that he did not think airplanes could actually sink American battleships, but asserted frankly that at present they might damage a ship's controls. His discussion on the airplane against the battleship took place in connection with his expressed belief that sea power is as important to a nation as ever.

NEW DESIGNS CITED AS THE NEED

The attitude taken was that American ships should be improved to meet the new air weapon as they have been redesigned to meet other new weapons in the past. He cautioned that the scope of air operations is limited.

"I think that aircraft have a temporary advantage over ships," Mr. Edison declared. "This can be overcome by improved armor and armaments on the top side of the vessels.

"One thing that stands out very forcibly with me is that our ships have been designed to meet weapons in existence many years. These weapons are gunfire, shell fire, and submarines. Not enough attention has been paid to the top sides of our ships to permit them to meet this air weapon.

"I think we now ought to alter the top side of our ships to eliminate as far as possible every projection likely to splinter and itself become a projectile."

The Secretary added that he did not think that extensive changes could be made on warships already commissioned, expressing the opinion that new battleships should be constructed differently "from the bottom up" as a result of air developments.

DOUBTS SHIPS CAN BE PATCHED UP

"I do not believe we can patch ships up, because it is a matter of changing basic designs which will take some time," he said. "We don't want to go into it half-baked. To redesign ships all the way through would be the real solution. Rebuilding isn't the real answer.

"I do not believe many ships can be sunk by air, but the top side and the controls can be disorganized."

A reporter remarked that discussion of air against sea power seemed to be concentrated on whether a plane could sink a battleship and asked whether airplanes did not limit naval operations because of the danger.

"Yes; in a minor way," Mr. Edison replied. "There are some minor operations where the risk has been increased to such an extent it would be inadvisable to attempt them."

In the classification of naval activities barred by air power he mentioned "certain close-in operations of a mass formation subject to continued air raids." He remarked that ships "might want to be farther away or use a distributed formation."

Capt. Morton Deyo, aide to the Secretary, explained:

"A naval expedition operating close to very large air concentrations is subject to very great damage. But airplanes can operate only close to bases and at very short range now. A small naval unit would be very silly to operate close to a large air concentration. Planes based on ships are at a great disadvantage against short-based planes because they are operating from a vulnerable base."

FOR SOME CHANGES AT PRESENT

Secretary Edison said that changes in existing ships should include "putting aintiaircraft guns in turrets and placing control apparatus where it will be protected." He would not ask for appropriations for changes of structure at this session of Congress, he remarked, because he had to confer with Navy Department officials as to modifications of design.

"I may be talked out of it," he added, smiling.

The Secretary revealed that steps are contemplated to increase the armor on the bottom of warships to protect them against mines.

"The side armor of battleships is strong enough to withstand projectiles," he remarked. "The bottoms of our ships are pretty thin and that's true of all navies."

Discussing changes in the superstructure and general construction of ships to protect them against air attack, Mr. Edison remarked that such changes also were required in the light of experience with heavy modern gun projectiles. He said that in the battle of three British ships with the Graf Spee, "the Exeter was pretty well battered up and the ship had to be worked by hand." Nevertheless, he noted, the ship finally reached England.

While warships were protected by three types of control, full automatic, local control, and the manual method, he thought that with 16-inch shells now in use automatic controls should be better protected.

"On lighter ships in the past few years, aircraft guns have been placed in turrets and something has been done about general protection," he said. "Even so, I do not think enough has been done."

SEES WEAK POINT AT PEARL HARBOR

As a result of his observations while with the fleet, the Secretary suggested that oil tanks at Pearl Harbor, Hawaiian base, "stand out as targets and a few bombs on those tanks might cripple our storage enormously. He advocated placing the tanks below ground in bomb-proof tanks.

The belief was expressed by the Secretary that the Navy needed more auxiliary ships, that more money should be appropriated for ammunition to be used in target practice and that ships should carry more oil in their tanks.

"I think we have a splendid Navy," he emphasized at the close of his conference. "I am very much pleased with the fleet and the way it is handled. The enlisted men are fine; we have a splendid type of young men coming into the Navy now. We always have had fine officers."

He said that naval construction has now reached a peak and that ships could not be constructed faster except by expanding shipyards at great cost. Nevertheless, he believed that "a 25-percent increase in authorization would be better than 11 percent." He explained that with the larger appropriation the Navy would be able to plan construction better.

PROHIBITION OF FOREIGN-SILVER PURCHASES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 785) to repeal the Silver Purchase Act of 1934, to provide for the sale of silver, and for other purposes.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I have offered to the pending bill of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND] an amendment which in effect provides that there shall be no further purchases of silver which is the product of foreign countries except and unless the purchase price, under arrangements and agreements with the Treasury Department, shall be applied to payment for exports of agricultural products of the United States.

It has been testified by Mr. Eccles, Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and by Mr. Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, that the silver purchased under the Silver Purchase Act has, as to the purchase price, all been applied to payment for exports from the United States. It is contended, of course, by Mr. Eccles, as quoted by the Senator from Delaware, that silver is a worthless commodity, that we have no use for it, and therefore, although it furnished a market for over a billion dollars' worth of our products, that nevertheless we received nothing of value for them.

Let us see the situation in this country with regard to cotton and wheat at the present time. I do not have to remind the Senate of the dire condition of cotton and wheat, particularly cotton. We have on hand an enormous surplus supply of cotton. We are not finding a market for it. Apparently, we shall not be able to export it unless we pay an export bonus in some form or other, so that the export may compensate the cotton producer.

Agricultural products for many years have been below parity with reference to other products of industry. For 7 years the administration has been making every effort it possibly could make, at enormous expense, to bring about a parity of agricultural products. So far as I know, that has not been accomplished. The producers of agricultural products have been compensated for the loss, however, in various ways. This is costing our Government, I am informed, nearly a billion dollars a year raised by taxes on our people.

If it is possible to encourage a market for the export of cotton and wheat through any kind of legislation which does not constitute a tax upon the people of the United States, it should be done. Since the beginning of the present World War agricultural products have been in an even more desperate situation than for many years. It is perfectly obvious that Great Britain and France have to rely upon the United States to supply them with arms, ammunition, and implements of war. It is also known that under the Neutrality Act they cannot obtain credit in this country, and will not be able to obtain credit in this country during the present war while they are belligerents. Obviously, therefore, they must conserve their gold securities. It is estimated that they have probably seven or eight billion dollars' worth of gold securities available with which they can buy war materials in this country; but to conserve that gold supply they have to buy all other kinds of products in the countries where they can buy them with their exportable goods. Personally I do not blame them for adopting that course. They are at war. They have stopped buying our cotton, wheat, canned goods, fruits, tobacco, and other articles of export. They have to do without them unless they can trade their goods for them in some other country. As a matter of fact, we do not need their goods in this country at the present time, with probably ten or eleven million people idle. Our own industry requires stimulation. But, under this amendment, if silver can be bought in payment for agricultural exports, what happens? Great Britain and France want cotton. They want wheat. They can get the best cotton here. They can get a surplus supply of wheat here. They go into Mexico with their manufactured articles and sell their manufactured articles to Mexico for silver at 35 cents an ounce. Why? Because if 35 cents an ounce is the world's market price—which it is now, and has been for some time—we will take that silver from Great Britain or France at 35 cents an ounce if it is applied to payment for cotton, or wheat, or other agricultural exports. The result of it is that we have enabled Mexico to use her chief product to buy manufactured goods from Great Britain and France and we have enabled Great Britain and France to take the same silver and purchase cotton, and wheat, and other agricultural products in the United States at the fixed price of 35 cents an ounce. That is what will happen in this matter if my amendment is adopted.

Let me say that that follows as a logical proposition provided silver is not a worthless commodity, as has been charged by Mr. Eccles, and repeated on the floor of the Senate by the Senator from Delaware.

It must be remembered that half of the people of the world have never had any money to use except silver. China has had two or three billion ounces of silver hidden away in the floors and walls of her buildings for ages. Right now, the only thing with which China can buy anything in this country or anywhere else is silver. China can buy in Great Britain with silver today at 35 cents an ounce. She can buy in France. She can buy anywhere.

Then there is India, with its two-hundred-and-odd millions of people. They have been hoarding silver since the beginning of time as their measure of wealth; as their reservoir; as their bank account. Whenever a famine comes, they cut off some of the silver which hangs as jewelry on the wives of India, and they go into the marts and buy food with it. Every effort of the British Government to do away with the use of silver in India has been an utter failure. They desired to do it, of course, for monetary reasons. If they could establish the paper pound sterling in India, they would have a stronger control over the finances of India.

They abolished the mint of India years ago; they have imposed high import duties on silver in order to prevent it being imported into India; they have done everything they could along that line; yet they cannot force the people of India to accept and retain the paper money of Great Britain.

Gold may all come to the United States some day. Gold might be demonitized by all the countries of the world except the United States. Not so with regard to silver. Silver is scattered among too many people in the world for that to happen. Over half of the people of the world have it.

One would think there was a river of silver flowing somewhere that was going to dump itself into the United States. Let us see about that. Last year the world production of gold was 40,240,000 ounces. The production of silver was 259,913,000 ounces. What is the ratio of production? The ratio of production is only 6.47 ounces of silver to 1 ounce of gold. Yet for 400 years, down to 1913, the average production of gold and silver in the world was 14½ ounces of silver to 1 ounce of gold.

If supply and demand have anything to do with the matter, gold should be getting cheaper and silver dearer. The production of silver has been steadily decreasing throughout the world, and the supply of gold has been steadily increasing.

But it is said that there is no country on a silver basis. I might counter by saying there is no country on a gold basis. It is said that, there being no country on a silver basis, silver is not money. Yet the only money with which the 415,000,000 people of China have to buy is silver, and they have bought our automobiles in this country with silver. They borrowed the money, and paid it back. The only thing with which the people of India have to buy is silver. When they desire to purchase something in Great Britain—and they are almost compelled to buy there, under the law—they take silver rupees and buy pound sterling, and with the pound sterling they buy in Great Britain. But the primary money of purchase was silver, and it is still the ultimate money of purchase.

I have in my possession a memorandum written by one of the greatest monetary experts in this country, whose name I am not at liberty to divulge at this time, because his opinion was given to me in confidence; but he gave it as his opinion that the effort of the United States Government to place the world on a gold standard is futile. He calls attention to the fact that Professor Kemmerer went to China to try to place China on a gold standard. They paid him $50,000 for his advice, and continued to use silver.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK of Idaho in the chair). Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. What has been the average annual purchase of foreign silver in the United States for the last 5 years?

Mr. PITTMAN. The total purchase of silver was 1,865,200,000 ounces.

Mr. McNARY. That is close enough; about 300,000,000 ounces a year.

Mr. PITTMAN. About 300,000,000 ounces a year.

Mr. McNARY. I am interested in the Senator's proposal, inasmuch as it attempts to augment the purchase of our agricultural products. In the Senator's opinion, would the purchase of a limited amount of agricultural products bring about diminution of the importation of silver?

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not think so. I think we will import, perhaps, in payment for agricultural products, a billion ounces of silver in the next year.

Mr. McNARY. In the various statements which have been made on the floor of the Senate and before the committees of the Senate and the House, I do not recall that there has been any indication of a great amount of exports to Mexico. I do not know why Mexico should buy American products because they can dispose of their silver here. What is the Senator's view as to that?

Mr. PITTMAN. I will try to explain it again.

Mr. McNARY. I may add, that we have covered that matter in the reciprocal-trade agreements, and Canada and Mexico and India produce most of the silver which comes into this country. I wish the Senator would direct himself to that point. As I recall, we sell scarcely anything to India, very little to Mexico, some quantity to Canada, which is sold now largely because of necessity under the trade agreements and because they require some of our products, but such sales would not be increased by any means through the purchase of silver.

I have no quarrel with the Senator's proposal. I may say to the Senator frankly that I am against all the schemes to bring foreign silver to this country, but I desire to ascertain whether there is any merit to the proposal, whether it would indeed result in an increase in the purchase of our agricultural products.

Mr. PITTMAN. I will endeavor to explain the matter. Perhaps I was not sufficiently definite in my previous statement.

Mexico does not desire to purchase agricultural products from the United States, it is true; Canada does not desire to purchase many agricultural products from the United States; that is correct; but Great Britain and France do desire to purchase agricultural products here.

Mr. McNARY. That explanation does not explain, to me.

Mr. PITTMAN. Possibly if the Senator will wait awhile——

Mr. McNARY. I hope the Senator will explain it. I am willing to wait.

Mr. PITTMAN. I have agreed with the Senator as to Mexico and Canada, but I have asserted that Great Britain and France desire to purchase agricultural products in this country. There is no doubt of that. They cannot purchase agricultural products here because all they can use in their purchase is gold. They have not the exports with which to purchase them, and we do not care about their exports now. They have nothing but gold with which to purchase in this country, and they need all their gold with which to purchase arms, ammunition, and implements of war. Still, they would like to purchase agricultural products; but how can they purchase?

If our Treasury will accept silver from Mexico at 35 cents an ounce, assuming that is the world price, in payment for exports of cotton and wheat, then Great Britain and France would be glad to sell their manufactured products to Mexico for silver at 35 cents an ounce, because it has an absolute market in the United States at 35 cents an ounce and with it they could buy wheat, cotton, and other products. The same thing is true with regard to Canada. Canada produces about 20,000,000 ounces of silver a year. Great Britain would like to sell some of her manufactured products to Canada, and does so. She would sell them for silver at 35 cents an ounce, and Great Britain would buy, provided that 35-cents-an-ounce silver would purchase cotton and wheat in this country, at a value of 35 cents an ounce.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, let me remind the able Senator that Great Britain has placed restrictions on the importation of both cotton and wheat and is getting all such commodities she desires from markets outside the United States. It is not a question of not having the gold with which to pay. Great Britain has colonies, and there are other countries with which she must deal, which are supplying her all the cotton and all the wheat she needs, and today she has raised a barrier against further shipments of subsidized grain and wheat into her markets.

Mr. PITTMAN. She has raised a barrier for the very reason I have stated, namely, she would have to buy here with gold, and she needs to keep that. But I think the Senator is mistaken in saying that England and France do not desire any American cotton. They cannot buy American cotton because they have nothing but gold with which to buy it; but they can buy the cotton if they can buy silver with manufactured goods in Mexico, and turn that silver over at the same price for cotton in the United States.

Mr. VANDENBERG. They can do that right now, but they do not.

Mr. PITTMAN. No; they cannot do that right now.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Why not?

Mr. PITTMAN. Because there is no determination as to what the money shall be used for.

Mr. VANDENBERG. But they are free to use it for the precise purpose the Senator indicates, and they do not so use it.

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; but they have no knowledge as to whether tomorrow or next week the Government of the United States may not cease to accept foreign silver. They cannot contract with manufactured goods and buy silver with them in Mexico, Peru, and Canada unless there is a law under which they know that this Government will accept the silver at the world price for agricultural products.

Mr. VANDENBERG. But the system has operated for 5 years, and they have never reverted to the triangular formula the Senator indicates. Is not that the fact?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; because we accepted the silver exchange, the dollar exchange, for automobiles and sewing machines. Automobiles and sewing machines were the things they took out of this country. The dollar exchange furnished them went into the export of manufactured articles. It went into exports looking to the war. Long before the war was declared they were buying trucks and automobiles, and other machinery of that kind, looking to the war. They were buying road machines. The millions of dollars of exchange we gave them in this country went into those manufactured articles. There is no question about it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. As I understand the Senator's scheme, he proposes to transfer from United States domestic production to foreign production all the industrial products which Mexico has been buying here. Is that correct?

Mr. PITTMAN. If I had my way in the matter, I would transfer it all to agriculture.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In other words, the Senator is willing definitely and deliberately to penalize American industry, under his plan?

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not propose to penalize American industry, which is a nice expression the Senator uses, but, instead of paying out a billion dollars a year to our agriculturalists, I am proposing that we furnish them a market, as far as possible.

The automobile industry of the Senator's State is not suffering. It never has suffered. Everyone knows that agriculture has been at the lowest possible point, by comparison with manufacturing, and, knowing these circumstances as we do, knowing that they are becoming worse by virtue of the war, it does not do now to stand here and complain against aiding agriculture because possibly it will mean the sale of a few less automobiles.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield further to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That may be the Senator's view of what cannot properly be said on the floor of the Senate at the present time, but I would assert that either it is right or it is wrong to buy foreign silver; and, if it is right, then the flow should be free in respect to the products of the United States which are sold as a result. The buying of foreign silver is either right or it is wrong. The Senator from Nevada is trying to find a middle ground between right and wrong.

Mr. PITTMAN. Does the Senator from Michigan believe in paying subsidies to agriculture?

Mr. VANDENBERG. That all depends. I do not believe in doing it in the round-about method of subsidizing silver, as it is done at present.

Mr. PITTMAN. Does the Senator believe in the subsidizing of agriculture that is taking place at the present time?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I do not know what it is.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator has been here in the Senate and should know about it. Does the Senator approve of those things?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Will the Senator be specific in his question, and I will tell him what I believe.

Mr. PITTMAN. Does the Senator believe in the paying of parity payments?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I do not at the present time.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator does not at the present time?

Mr. VANDENBERG. No; because we have not any money with which to make the payments.

Mr. PITTMAN. Does the Senator believe in making loans to agriculture?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator believes in that part of it, does he not?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. Does not that constitute a bonus?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Certainly it does.

Mr. PITTMAN. Then the Senator is in favor of a bonus to agriculture?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I am in favor of a legitimate bonus to agriculture, within proper regulations. That has nothing to do with the use of a collateral silver bonus, or a gold bonus either, for that matter.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator is speaking of a silver bonus. The Silver Purchase Act does not allow the Government to buy at anything except the world price. If silver is bought at the world price, does that constitute a bonus to the silver miners of the West? Not at all. The silver miners of the West have but little interest in this bill. I do not think they have any interest in it directly. There is a separate law which deals with them. I am now arguing this proposition based on my amendment. I think it would be an outrage to continue the purchase of American silver, as we have done, and let the benefits of that purchase go to those industries which do not need it, and keep the benefits away from agriculture, which does need it. So, unless my amendment is agreed to, I shall probably consider voting for the bill introduced by the Senator from Delaware. I have not made up my mind yet whether I shall or not, but I think there is such a splendid opportunity to furnish a market for agriculture and agricultural products, that I think we ought to do it.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Delaware?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I am glad to hear the Senator say that he may vote for the bill, but I understood the Senator to say that we could not buy silver except at the world price.

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Under the authority granted the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary can fix his buying price at any point he desires. That has been clear throughout the administration of the Silver Purchase Act of 1934; it is clear from the fact that after the passage of the bill by the Senate last June he reduced the Treasury's buying price immediately from 43 cents to 35 cents an ounce. He has full authority to reduce the price again at this present minute if he so desires, or he has full authority to increase the price. Is that not correct?

Mr. PITTMAN. Not under the intent of the act. We know that. Whether administratively he can do that, I do not know.

Mr. TOWNSEND. He has been doing it all along. Each day the Treasury sends out word as to what price it will pay for foreign silver.

Mr. PITTMAN. But not under the act. He is supposed to buy it at the world price until it goes to $1.29, or until one-quarter of the metallic reserves of the United States is in silver.

Let me call the attention of the Senate to the fact that fear is being stimulated that if we stop buying silver the price will go to nothing. I do not think that will happen.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I do not, either.

Mr. PITTMAN. The average price of silver since 1913 has been 53 cents an ounce. Let me call the attention of the Senate to another thing: Silver has always been a war metal. In the last war small silver coins were used to pay soldiers. During the World War silver rose to nearly a dollar an ounce, and stayed there. There was no buying of silver by the United States Government. There was no buying of silver by any government. Silver moved to the country where it was needed, and it was needed to pay the soldiers. After the World War was over, in January 1920, without any government buying silver, with our Government doing its best to hold the price down, silver went to $1.38 an ounce. What did our Government do then? It made available 50,000,000 silver dollars out of the Treasury of the United States to break that market, and did break it below 60 cents an ounce, but after it broke it to below 60 cents an ounce, it remained between 50 cents and 60 cents an ounce until 1932, when in the great financial crash, with everything else, it went down, and went to 34.58 cents an ounce.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. As evidence that our Government, the world's largest buyer of silver, fixes the price for silver, and that the price was sufficiently high to attract silver even when the Secretary of the Treasury reduced the price from 43 cents to 35 cents an ounce, we are still getting all the surplus silver.

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not think we are getting all the silver.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Practically all.

Mr. PITTMAN. There is no doubt that India is full of silver in the form of jewelry. There is no doubt that silver is hidden in China. But we have only purchased 9,000,000 ounces a month during the last year. Does the Senator realize that?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I think, so far as India is concerned, that England has put an embargo on silver movements in India.

Mr. PITTMAN. Oh, yes; it is free to prevent it from going out; but, notwithstanding that, silver can come out of India. It can pay an export duty.

Mr. TOWNSEND. And when it comes out we get it.

Mr. PITTMAN. There are five or six billion ounces of silver there. There are two or three billion ounces of silver in China; yet on the Secretary's bid of 35 cents an ounce he has only been able to get about 9,000,000 ounces of silver a month. It is even less than that much a month, because it is less than 100,000,000 ounces a year. If we bought 100,000,000 ounces of foreign silver a year for 10 years it would not affect the United States a particle.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one further question?

Mr. PITTMAN. Certainly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I think the Senator may have already adverted to it. I am proceeding on the theory that the continued purchase of foreign silver is not in any aspect necessary for the welfare of domestic-silver producers. Am I correct?

Mr. PITTMAN. I think so. That is my opinion on the subject. We have a coinage law for silver which the Senator from Michigan helped me pass, and for which I am very grateful, and that takes it out of the discretion of anybody—the Secretary of the Treasury or anyone else. I do not conceive that that law would be affected by the passage of the pending measure. There are others who think it might be affected, but that is merely a matter of opinion. I am not arguing the question from that standpoint.

It is said that silver is a worthless metal. I wish to read a few lines from a very interesting letter I have before me. I shall first read a paragraph of this letter written by Dr. Alexander Goetz, associate professor of physics, California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Calif. I may say that the professor, under a foundation, has been studying the uses of silver for 2 years. Let me read one paragraph from this letter, which is quite interesting. The professor says:

> Relative to the physical and chemical qualities of silver, the metal is unique as far as a number of properties are concerned; for instance, it is the best conductor for heat as well as for electricity, it has the highest brilliancy when polished, it is the only metal which can be made so extremely sensitive toward the influence of light that it renders the art of photography possible. In fact, up to now, one has not found any substance which could ever serve for silver, even as a poor substitute; and the statement appears thus to be justified that if only the photochemical qualities of silver are considered, any modern civilization without silver would find itself most severely handicapped.

I do not want to read all the letter. I wish to put it in the RECORD. I may call the attention of the Senate to this letter. This scientist states that silver is the greatest germicide known. For instance, heretofore it has been used only in connection with argyrol and some such medical combinations. But now after years of experiment the professor has found that a minute quantity of silver mixed with manganese oxide to furnish the oxygen can be put into a jar that is alive with bacteria and in 15 minutes the jar is free of all bacteria. He has made a thousand tests of that kind. He has taken an ordinary drinking glass and placed it in saliva containing millions of harmful bacteria, and then he has swabbed it around the edges with this fine silver solution, and not a germ was alive in 15 minutes.

I shall not attempt to go into the details of this letter, but I want the Senate to read it. I think every Senator who reads it will thereafter disagree with the distinguished chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and even the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND] when they assert that silver is a mere "bag of shells."

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have not been arguing against the industrial use of silver. The Senator cannot find that I have tried to adduce any argument against the industrial use of silver. In fact, S. 785, in its original form, sought to appropriate money to increase the industrial use of silver. I have been arguing against the purchase of foreign silver and its addition to our monetary stock, when we have absolutely no monetary need for it. To illustrate how England feels, England has licensed silver imports and under the regulations even Canada may not send her silver to England.

Mr. PITTMAN. England will be very glad to get it in about 3 or 4 months.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I am talking about the present situation. We are taking silver from many foreign countries. The economists, the experts, the advisory council of the Federal Reserve Board, and the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board, all say that we have no monetary use whatever for it.

Mr. PITTMAN. I know that; but what Mr. Eccles has to say about it does not bind the mind of the Senator from Delaware or the mind of the Senator from Nevada. I think this Government could get along and exist without Mr. Eccles; nor do I think that all the functions of the Senate and House should be set aside by reason of the opinion of Mr. Eccles. Mr. Eccles says that silver is a useless commodity, like shells. I cannot understand how on earth a reputable, intelligent man can make such a statement in the face of the facts which I have shown.

With respect to the uses of silver, let me refer to the report of Handy and Harman, silver brokers. They have been frequently quoted by the Senator from Delaware. The report shows that the consumption of silver by the arts and industries in the United States and Canada for the year 1939 was estimated by Messrs. Handy and Harman, silver brokers, to be 34,000,000 ounces, an increase of 25 percent over the preceding year. The three most important classifications, from the consumption standpoint, increased their consumption from 1938 to 1939 as follows: Sterling silverware, 20 percent; silver-plated ware, 30 percent; and motion pictures, 10 percent. As a matter of fact, the rapid increase in consumption of silver in the arts and sciences and commerce threatens to consume all the production. That is the truth about the matter.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator will not argue that if the pending bill should pass, individuals or firms that wanted to buy silver could not still continue to buy foreign silver. They could still continue to buy it, and more cheaply than ever, thus stimulating the industrial demand for silver. The bill would not affect their purchases at all, and they could fix the price.

Mr. PITTMAN. I am not dealing with that question. As was stated by the junior Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], if silver has a value of 35 cents an ounce, either commercially or in any other way, irrespective of its monetary use, that is the commercial price of silver for use in commerce. If silver is not like a bunch of shells, if it is a precious metal, then if we should accept it in payment for our agricultural products we should be accepting something of value for a surplus commodity which we cannot dispose of today. It seems to me that would be a very wise thing to do.

Mr. President, in closing I wish to put in the RECORD a few memoranda which I have prepared. I do not want to take the time of the Senate to read them, because those who are interested will read them in the RECORD, and those who are not interested would not listen to them if they were present. The memoranda give in brief statements the whole history of silver from the beginning of time, showing the production of silver everywhere, and its movement; also the Bland Act, the Allison Act, and all legislation affecting silver since 1792. I think the information will be of great value to the Senator from Delaware. I know he would like to have the facts which come from the statistical departments of the Government.

The other day the Senator challenged anyone to show that silver is used as a monetary medium anywhere except in the United States. I call his attention to the fact that all the great commercial countries have monetary silver, and that they use that monetary silver. The quantity of monetary silver in use in the various countries has been steadily increasing. They are adding to their monetary silver; and they have added to it to such an extent that they have increased the use of silver by more than $1,000,000,000.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. What I was attempting to explain was that no country in the world employs silver as a standard of value and therefore no country will accept silver in settlement of its balance of international payments. It will accept gold, but will not accept silver.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator may be speaking of governments. However, one can go into China with a chunk of silver and buy food, housing, and clothing. One can go into India with a chunk of silver and buy food, housing, and clothing. In fact, one can go into any country I know of in the world with a chunk of silver and buy food, clothing, and shelter. One cannot do so with a piece of American paper money.

Mr. TOWNSEND. What I was arguing was that no country in the world will accept silver in settlement of adverse trade balances. The Senator's argument in support of his amendment is along the line that other countries will accept agricultural products. We do not expect to send any such products to Mexico or Canada, where we obtain most of our silver. If France or England were able to raise 35 cents an ounce to purchase Mexican silver for the purpose of sending that silver here to buy our farm products, they could just as well send the 35 cents directly to us now, or at any other time, and buy our products. The roundabout scheme offers no advantage to them, and certainly offers none to us.

Mr. PITTMAN. They have done so, but they will not do so with the Senator's bill pending.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Why not?

Mr. PITTMAN. Because if the bill should pass, the United States would not buy any more Mexican silver. We would not buy any silver from India. We would not buy any silver from London. However, if the bill does not pass, what will be the result? Other countries will sell their manufactured goods to Mexico.

Mr. TOWNSEND. But if England and France must first raise the 35 cents an ounce to buy silver from Mexico and then send the silver to us, they might just as well send us the 35 cents directly.

Mr. PITTMAN. I think the Senator is mistaken. If they have to buy the 35 cents with gold, that is one thing. If they can buy the 35 cents with trucks, that is another thing. Unless my amendment is adopted, Great Britain will not purchase agricultural products here, because she will have to purchase with gold. She has no balance of trade with which to purchase. If the Senator objects to Great Britain buying silver in Mexico at 35 cents an ounce with automobiles, with the arrangement and understanding that she can use that 35 cents to buy agricultural products, then we have a difference of opinion.

Mr. TOWNSEND. With England licensing silver imports and refusing to buy any silver from Canada, one of her own dominions, it seems to me we are going a long way when we purchase from Canada silver for which we have no use.

Mr. PITTMAN. That is the same old answer—"We have no use for it." If the silver bought 100,000,000 bushels of wheat or 100,000 bales of cotton, somebody would benefit—somebody who is not now benefiting and never could benefit under the present arrangement. If the silver went into buying in this country canned fruits, which Great Britain discontinued buying because she could not afford to use her gold for that purpose, somebody would be greatly helped.

We know that the proposal embodied in the amendment is a good one. We know that it would furnish an export market. However, the idea that silver is a worthless, useless commodity, an idea fathered by Mr. Eccles, has been broadcast over the country.

I have read a portion of a letter from Professor Goetz, of the California Institute of Technology, a distinguished scientist, in which he stated that silver has a quality which no other metal or no other thing in the world has—the quality of sensitivity to light, so that it can be used in photography. But for that quality there would be no photography. No substitute for silver has ever been found.

We have the report of Handy & Harman, silver purchasers, who state that 34,000,000 ounces of silver were used last year in the United States in the arts and sciences, and that there was an increase of 20 percent in 1939 over 1938.

We have the further fact that the production of silver in the world today has dropped from a ratio of 14½ ounces of silver to 1 ounce of gold to 6.47 ounces of silver to 1 ounce of gold. The demand for silver is increasing. Its production has been steadily decreasing.

I call attention to an article—which I think I shall later ask permission to have printed in the RECORD—written by a very distinguished monetary expert, who makes reference to what is happening to gold. Japan, China, and India will have to go back on the silver basis in self-defense.

All these things show the value of silver. It is said that we have no use for silver. Let us see whether or not we have any use for it. We have silver money in this country to the value of $2,266,763,000. It is nonretirable money. It has some intrinsic value, at least. That money is recognized all over the world to be of some value.

We have in this country approximately $7,000,000,000 in currency. The amount varies, but we have approximately $7,000,000,000 in currency. Three-fourths of that currency consists of Federal Reserve notes. What is behind the Federal Reserve note today? Is there anything behind it? I remember one time when it had to have 40 percent gold back of it. Has any Federal Reserve bank got any gold back of it today? What is back of it? Nothing. Who determines the issue of that money? The United States Government? No; certainly not. It is determined by the bankers. When the bankers want to issue more money they place securities with the Federal Reserve Board, and then the amount of currency desired is issued to them. So, when they desire to retire a part or all of that circulation, the Government cannot keep it in circulation; what they do with it is to take it back to the Federal Reserve Board, ask to have it canceled, and have their securities returned to them.

We have not any national money in the United States today except silver. We have over $2,000,000,000 of silver money. That is the only nonretireable money in the United States. Every dollar of the Federal Reserve notes issued could be canceled tomorrow.

The Government, under the Constitution, is supposed to coin and issue money. It has abandoned that constitutional prerogative. It says to the bankers of this country, "You"—not the United States Government—"will determine when we need more currency and when we need less currency." When the banks get panicky, at a time when currency should be issued, when there is no credit, the banks close down on both of them. That is due to a natural fear they have. I say, however, that no bank has a right to control the nonretireable money of the country.

Do not understand me as saying that I do not think the Federal Reserve Act was a good act, but it was an emergency act. It was never intended that the sole currency of this country should be Federal Reserve notes, and it was never considered that they should be. Every banker, including Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Eccles, who has testified before the Special Committee on Silver Investigation, has said that this country should have at least $5,000,000,000 of nonretireable circulating currency. Where are we going to get it? We have $2,000,000,000 nonretireable silver currency; we have not any gold currency at all.

What we should do is to issue silver certificates or silver coin against the 1,200,000,000 ounces of seigniorage silver the Government now owns. Then we would have three and a half billion dollars of silver money in this country.

Then there should be coined into little coins, such as the $5 gold pieces, all the gold that comes into this country, and the Government should take them and pay relief charges, put such coin into the hands of individuals and induce them to hide it or hoard it. Mr. Aldrich said that gold so accumulated was the safest reserve in the world.

Do we forget that in 1872 when Bismarck was in France he demanded a payment of 5,000,000,000 gold francs before he would leave? Bismarck did not have the slightest idea that the people of France could raise 5,000,000,000 gold francs; there was no gold in the banks; it was an excuse for making France a German colony; but the people of France were a frugal people; gold coins had been accumulated and hid in the floors and in the walls of houses, and when the French Government called on the peasants of France to bring in all the gold they had and take notes of their Government, they brought in 5,000,000,000 gold francs. That seems to be a sound kind of monetary system.

In our country today, if we should call on the people to come in with gold they could not do so. If we should call on them to come in with silver, all they could come in with would be the few silver coins in circulation in this country.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Referring to the Senator's statement regarding the constitutional control of coinage, and so forth, and the Senator's reference to the fact that the general ultimate control of our monetary system is now in private banks, may I ask the Senator, in his judgment, would it substantially correct that phase of the situation if all the stock of the Federal Reserve banks were owned by the Government of the United States?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes, undoubtedly it would; but I am only dealing with facts as they exist today. If they were Government institutions they would be under the control of Congress. However, they are private banks and are not under the control of Congress.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I think the point rather important. At the present time the control by private banks is pretty largely theoretical, inasmuch as the Federal Reserve Board itself exercises such overwhelming ultimate control. For that reason, it seems to me that it is really a very questionable process to maintain private ownership of any stock in the Federal Reserve System because I think it leads to a very great misconception regarding what is happening to our money.

Mr. PITTMAN. Under the law, there is probably a great deal to what the Senator from Michigan says; under the administration of the law, however, there is very little to what he says. As a matter of fact, the advisory board of the banks, apparently, dictate the policy of the Federal Reserve System, and probably wisely so. I would not doubt that a group of big bankers know more about monetary subjects than does the Federal Reserve Board, and probably it is wise to take their advice, but it is unfortunate, nevertheless, to have to do so. They have control, of course, over the discount rate, and such control proved an utter failure during the boom days of 1929. They have control over open market transactions, which is a method by which they can inflate or deflate currency and credit. But, nevertheless, that does not reach the point. We have not a sound monetary system. Those who issue the Federal Reserve notes have no gold at all. Mr. Eccles testified before our committee that the Government owned the gold. I was attempting to ascertain what the peculiar relation was. The Federal Reserve banks issue money, Federal Reserve notes; the banks call for it; put up their securities; the printing press goes to work. They can inflate it or deflate it or they can contract it to nothing. It would be very unfortunate if all the retireable Federal Reserve notes were withdrawn from circulation. We would then have a little over $2,000,000,000 of silver coin circulating in the entire country.

We know that there is a scientific relationship between income bank deposits and loans. We know that if we had a $100,000,000,000 national income we would have a great bank debt, which probably would be greater than deposits by 2 to 1. I think that every monetary expert not only in the United States but elsewhere agrees that the nonretireable circulating national currency should be 10 percent of the national income. We will say that 10 percent of money is a safe currency reserve. It will take $10,000,000,000 currency reserve for $100,000,000,000 national income.

But, Mr. President, we have no gold in circulation; we have nothing in circulation that gold is behind. We have a paper currency called Federal Reserve notes that are withdrawable or issuable at the will of the banks. That is the exact situation we are in, and that is not a very sound situation.

Talk about silver not being received in exchange in foreign countries. The pound sterling is not received in exchange in the United States, and yet the pound sterling has more gold behind it than have Federal Reserve notes. The Federal Reserve note has only a possibility behind it, but the pound sterling actually has gold behind it to the extent probably in the case of the English national currency, not their fiduciary currency, of 10 percent.

It is now said that they will not accept silver exchange. No; they will not accept silver exchange, and we will not accept the pound sterling, either. They will have to put gold metal in our hands in this country. We do not care whether it has a stamp on it or not; it will buy something anywhere in the world, exactly the same as silver will.

I think it is a peculiar thing that the same delusion which undoubtedly arose in the Bryan era with regard to silver should have been perpetuated down the line during all these years. We all remember those debates. We heard of "dishonest money," "hoards of silver pouring into this country," and many similar things. I have often thought, looking back on the history of the matter, that it would have been very much better for Mr. Bryan if he had dealt with our own monetary system, and had provided for the unlimited coinage of American gold and American silver. If that had been done, probably there would have been no particular fight against it. But the delusion created by the speakers of that day has gone down through history. We find all the civilized countries of the world using silver coin in increasing quantities; we find India and China with vast quantities of it, the only thing with which they can buy, and, although Great Britain for years and years has been trying to stamp out the use of silver in India, the effort has failed. They placed heavy import duties upon silver to keep the Indians from buying it, and the Indians smuggled it in. They put export duties upon silver to keep people from shipping silver out, but they shipped it out when they got ready. It is a natural thing. It cannot be overcome. When we see these two metals that have circulated side by side since the earliest dawn of history; when we look back in the Bible and see that Abraham bought a grave for his wife with a few pieces of silver, and we find the betrayal of Christ associated with silver, and as we read down through the ages, we find that silver has been the money of the masses. It has been the circulating money. Gold has been held by the rulers and the kings in their treasuries; and so it is today. Gold today is held by the rulers, or buried in the ground, while silver is freely circulating throughout this country. No one has ever questioned its value or its worth; and when the greenbacks were going to pieces after the Civil War it was the gold and the silver coming out of the Comstock mines of Nevada that saved their credit and restored them to par.

I wish to read a brief extract. I want to go back again to the World War.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator yield before he proceeds to that phase of the discussion?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I understand that the Senator is not a member of the Committee on Banking and Currency. Is that correct?

Mr. PITTMAN. That is true.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Has the Senator given attention to this bill with relation to its form as first introduced as to the effect it would have had if it had been enacted into law? The facts are that the bill as first introduced was stricken out and a new bill was prepared.

Mr. PITTMAN. That is true.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Is the Senator aware that the bill as originally introduced provided not only for the repeal of the so-called Silver Purchase Act of 1934, but also repealed the bill passed by the Congress last year relating to and affecting the price of domestically mined silver?

Mr. PITTMAN. I was under that impression. That is the reason why I went before the committee. I do not know whether or not it would have had that legal effect, but I was under that impression; but when I was before the committee the amendment which has since been reported by the committee had been presented, and it seemed not to effect that result.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The first few lines on the first page of the pending bill, if they had been enacted into law, would have stopped not only the purchase of foreign silver but the purchase of all silver, domestically mined and otherwise.

If the Senator will permit me, I should like to read into the RECORD the first four or five lines, commencing on page 1, line 3.

That the Silver Purchase Act of 1934 is hereby repealed.

That refers to the measure known as the Silver Purchase Act, under which we buy silver from any source.

Further:

And all power and authority of the President and the Secretary of the Treasury with respect to the acquisition of silver, the changing of the weight or content of the standard silver dollar or the monetary value of silver, or the issuance of silver certificates—

That relates to the amendment attached to the so-called Agricultural Adjustment Act passed in 1933.

The next lines are the particular lines which refer to domestically produced silver. I read:

under any act of Congress, shall cease and terminate on the date of enactment of this act.

So anything relating to silver under any act of Congress would have been repealed if the original bill had been enacted into law.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator from Oklahoma has read the bill as it was introduced. When the bill passed last year, as Senators will remember, the price of domestic silver was fixed by law at 71 cents an ounce. The Committee on Banking and Currency held lengthy hearings on the pending bill, and after those hearings and after passage of the act of July 6, 1939, amended the bill—S. 785—in its present form; and it was reported out in its present form, after due consideration and hearings, by a vote of 14 to 4.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, there is one other subject to which I wish to refer, and then I shall conclude. As I have previously said, I am not going to read memoranda of statistics, but I ask unanimous consent to place in the RECORD as a part of my remarks, at the close of my remarks, certain statistics and documents.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. PITTMAN. I now desire to call the attention of the Senate to something that happened in 1918, during the World War. At that time we were in the World War. The Secretary of the Treasury for India came over here. He, with the British Ambassador, Lord Reading, met with the Secretary of the Treasury, and I was called into the meeting. He stated that they had had great difficulty in educating the Indians to accept paper money; that they had finally induced them to accept paper money on the promise and the practice that they could go into any bank with a paper rupee and get a silver rupee for it. That was going along nicely for 2 or 3 years, when the banks became careless, and commenced to reduce their reserves behind the paper notes. Then the Germans got in there with the propaganda which they used so extensively in the war, and convinced the people of India that there was not sufficient silver in the banks to redeem their paper rupees, and there was a run on the banks. Lord Reading stated to the Treasury Department that unless the British could get 200,000,000 ounces of silver at once, they would have to declare that paper currency irredeemable, and if they did there would be a revolution in India.

That meeting was held in March 1918, just at the time of the last big drive of the Germans in France. It was utterly impossible at that time for the British Government to draw any troops away from the French front, to take them to India to stop a revolution; and yet, strange as it may seem, there was not a supply of silver in all the world from which 200,000,000 ounces could be obtained except the silver dollars lying in the Treasury of the United States as security for the silver certificates which had been issued, and which silver certificates were redeemable on presentation. That money was in circulation. We had no right to touch it, but it was absolutely essential to get silver to redeem those India paper notes. So Congress passed an act authorizing the Treasury Department to break up 250,000,000 standard silver dollars which were lying in the Treasury as security for silver certificates and sell them to Great Britain at the rate of $1 an ounce, the price prevailing at that time. Actually, before that bill passed, the Treasury Department issued and shipped 8,000,000 ounces of silver. Things of that kind may happen again.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I desire to pursue for another question or two the subject about which I spoke earlier in the afternoon.

Mr. PITTMAN. Will the Senator let me read this statement first, so as not to break in on that subject?

Mr. McNARY. Certainly. I thought the Senator had finished discussing that subject.

Mr. PITTMAN. It is very brief. This is a portion of a speech delivered by Lord Reading in New York when he was retiring as British Ambassador to the United States. It was delivered at a banquet given him at that time by the English Speaking Union of New York. This is what he had to say about that transaction in a speech at a dinner of farewell tendered him by the English Speaking Union on February 12, 1921:

> My views on this subject are too well known to need repetition, and were I so minded I could relate tales during my experience in America on the four visits to it during the war which would take a long time in telling, but each incident of which would impress upon you most deeply the value and generosity of American friendship. There is just one incident to which I will briefly refer which has not been told you. During the war, as you know, every attempt was made to sow dissension in the Empire by insidious propaganda. Every attempt was made to create distrust of the British and of the British Empire. There arose in India a situation which is not known to the general public, but gives material for a story which illustrates American good will and friendship as well as anything I know during the war—except, perhaps, the greatest event of all, when President Wilson agreed that American troops should be brigaded with the British and the French if they were needed.
>
> It was a moment when, owing to the war and to this propaganda, there was a great scarcity of silver in India as well as elsewhere, and in India it was of more consequence than in most places. There was a moment at which we were very hard pressed to find the metallic reserve, particularly the silver which was necessary in India, it being incumbent that the paper note issue should be convertible immediately into the silver rupee. Owing to this great scarcity our difficulty was to find the silver. There was no means but one; that seemed impossible. In the vaults of the American Treasury there were vast stores of silver preserved there as the financial backing against the notes which were issued—silver which could not be disturbed, no matter how much it was wanted. It could not be taken out of the vaults of the United States except by act of Congress, to whatever party they belonged, joined in an endeavor to meet the situation by passing an act of Congress without discussion, because discussion would have been serious.
>
> Practically without any debate this measure was passed in almost record shortness of time. It became a law within a very few days of its seeing the light. The vast millions of ounces of silver from the vaults were released and were sent across by arrangement between America and ourselves to India, with which America had no concern but simply because it was necessary at that moment to help the British Empire. Nothing was said of this. Even the newspapers—remember the newspapers were conscious of it—knew as well as possible what was happening; but they did not mention it because they knew that if they did they would detract largely from the generous services that America was rendering and they passed it over in silence. Nothing has been heard of it or said of it since. I do not know myself that now, long after the war, America has ever claimed in any way our recognition of that service.
>
> I only instance for the purpose of bringing home to the mind of the British people not only what America can do if she once sets her mind to do a thing, but I want strongly to impress upon you the generosity with which America responded to the demands which were made upon her.

He was referring to the act approved April 12, 1918, which I introduced.

Now I will be glad to answer the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I wish to ascertain more particularly from the able Senator from Nevada whether he thinks that the restriction which this amendment would place upon the existing purchase act would in any way interfere with or diminish the flow of foreign silver into this country.

Mr. PITTMAN. I will try to answer, of course, though I think the Senator can answer as well as I can.

Mr. McNARY. I am opposed to the continuation of the purchase act. I would be disposed more kindly toward the amendment if I thought it would curtail the inflow of silver, but I cannot conceive that other nations, with the trade agreements existing, and considering their ability to purchase agricultural commodities at this time in practically the quantities they desire, would in fact be willing to exchange the agricultural products because of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada. That is a fair question. If it would not have any effect on the inflow, then we may dismiss it. If it would partially curtail the inflow, I would think more of it than I do now. I cannot conceive how it would have any particular effect on the importation of silver. I think it would largely and very drastically diminish the amount of silver coming to this country. If that be the case, I think more of the Senator's amendment than I would if it would permit the free flow of silver to this country.

Mr. PITTMAN. The unfortunate thing about the Senator is that he has largely made up his mind how he is going to vote, though his mind is partially open, as I can see from his question.

Mr. McNARY. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. If the amendment would not result in the purchase of any agricultural commodities, then it would accomplish what the bill would; that is, stop the purchase of foreign silver.

Mr. McNARY. Exactly.

Mr. PITTMAN. If it would result in the purchase of a large quantity of agricultural products, would it be unfortunate, in the Senator's opinion?

Mr. McNARY. No. I say that if the silver comes in, and it is limited to the purchase of agricultural commodities, that is one view; but I desire to understand from the Senator whether, if the amendment should be adopted, he thinks it would impinge upon or lessen the free flow of silver.

Silver is coming into the country now at the rate of about 300,000,000 ounces a year. Does the Senator think it would continue to flow in, and that that would bring about the purchase of a larger quantity of agricultural products?

Mr. PITTMAN. I stated before what I believe would happen, and I will state it again: I believe that Great Britain wants cotton and wheat, and knowing that she cannot buy our agricultural products except with gold, because of the balance of trade against her, I believe she would buy the cotton and wheat if she could buy them with her manufactured articles, and I know she could buy them with her manufactured articles through Mexico if my amendment should be adopted. I believe it would result in a very large supply of silver being bought elsewhere in the world by Great Britain and France, where they could buy it with their export products, and Great Britain would sell her export products for it, if she knew certainly that when she got the silver she could buy our agricultural products with it at the same value for silver. That is my view.

I think a considerable quantity of silver would come in under that plan and would result in the purchase of our agricultural products. If I am mistaken, however, and not much silver were brought in, still I would be content, because if silver should come here in large quantities, I should want it used to pay for agricultural products. If it were not used for that purpose, I should not want it to come in.

Mr. McNARY. This is a fair question: Does the Senator believe that if it were confined to the purchase of agricultural products it would stimulate the inflow of silver, using the average for the past 5 years of about 200,000,000 ounces a year?

Mr. PITTMAN. I know of a time when the foreign nations purchased 600,000,000 ounces in 1 year. They could purchase a billion ounces in 1 year if they desired, if it were applied to the purchase of agricultural products. To what extent it will be done no one can possibly know, but I know that what I have stated is accurate. If a great deal of it comes in at 35 cents an ounce, and is applied to the payments for exports in the way of agricultural products, I do not care how much comes in, because I am sure silver will be worth 35 cents throughout the world forever.

On the other hand, if I am mistaken, and foreign countries do not convert their manufactured products into silver with which to buy agricultural products, and very little comes in, that will be satisfactory to me. So I think it works both ways.

EXHIBIT 1

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27, 1940.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
The Capitol, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR PITTMAN: Responding to your request made during our conversation last Wednesday, I should like to submit to you the enclosed exposé, which may serve as an answer to the question whether or not silver should be considered, aside from its application to coinage and silverware, a "useless commodity."

In the hope that the exposé will contain the material you desire, I have the honor to be,

Very sincerely yours,

DR. ALEXANDER GOETZ,
Associate Professor of Physics, California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Calif.

THE INDUSTRIAL APPLICABILITY OF SILVER

The usefulness of an elementary metal has to be judged from an analysis of its various physical and chemical characteristics, none of which are identical for two different metals. Obviously in case of two metals with similar characteristics, the preference has to go to the metal which is less costly. The price of the metal becomes less important if these desirable physical and chemical properties are unique. Typical examples for this case are metals like rhodium, vanadium, gallium, and iridium, which are very rare and costly indeed but, for certain purposes, cannot be replaced by a cheaper metal because of the uniqueness of their qualities.

Relative to the physical and chemical qualities of silver, the metal is unique as far as a number of properties are concerned; for instance, it is the best conductor for heat as well as for electricity; it has the highest brilliancy when polished; it is the only metal which can be made so extremely sensitive toward the influence of light that it renders the art of photography possible. In fact, up to now, one has not found any substance which could ever serve for silver, even as a poor substitute; and the statement appears thus to be justified that if only the photochemical qualities of silver are considered, any modern civilization without silver would find itself most severely handicapped.

The photochemical application is, however, by far not the only use of the metal in industry, although it comprises at the time its largest commercial consumption aside from silverplate.

The peculiar situation that silver is considered a precious metal, due to its scarcity and its resistance to corrosion, has caused a prejudice against its wider practical usage; consequently, its unique chemical qualities have created in the past very little stimulus to thorough investigations into other useful applications of the metal. This situation has changed in recent years, and numerous investigations in different laboratories have brought to light practical applications of the metal in which new results can be achieved.

Practical developments of some of such uses are well underway, and look decidedly hopeful. A few shall be enumerated in the following:

1. Silver, being a metal which has considerable resistance toward any form of corrosion, in particular against alkali, has also the advantage that most of its chemical compounds; that is, its corrosion products are next to insoluble in water. These qualities render silver as a lining for vats, pipes, tubes, etc., an indispensable metal in certain branches of the chemical industries.

Furthermore, the disadvantageous effects which the corrosion products of other metals have are practically absent from silver and render it particularly apt to come in touch with foodstuffs (realized empirically long ago with the use of silver tableware). Its use as inner lining for tin cans is thus highly advantageous. This is important especially for certain foodstuffs which are easily discolored, or for very delicate tastes such as fruit juices, beer, and probably also wine where the present methods are safe but far from perfect. The lining of food containers with silver can be made so thin that the cost is not prohibitive, and it can be safely anticipated this particular application will increase the industrial demand for the metal considerably.

2. Another property in which silver is practically unique is its deadly action on a large variety of primitive forms of life, such as practically all dangerous bacteria and yeasts. Although other heavy metals, like mercury, lead, etc., are known to be excellent disinfectants, they cannot be used as such in cases where the disinfected material is for human consumption because these metals are also severely poisonous to humans. In this respect silver is different from the other heavy metals, inasmuch as its poisoning power (toxicity) for animals and humans is very small, so that very large doses are needed to produce silver poisoning, whereas extremely small doses are necessary to kill bacteria. It appears for this reason that silver will be able to replace other disinfectants in a number of fields.

The advantage of silver before, for instance, chlorine is the absense of odor or taste. It must, however, be realized that the applicability of silver for these purposes is very much less broad than the applicability of chlorine, but it may also be mentioned that sanitation plants using silver for sterilization of water and numerous beverages have been in use already for many years in a number of European countries. It is expected that future developments in this field will add appreciably to the consumption of silver.

3. There are many applications in other fields in which silver has been used and where its use is likely to increase, such as its use in linings for bearings, where silver combines two highly desirable qualities, inasmuch as it does not alloy with steel and because of its very good heat conductivity, causing a quick dissipation of the heat developed by friction.

Among the many other industrial uses, only a few may be enumerated:

4. Silver as powder compound in plastic substances;

5. As an ideal material for electric contact surfaces, decreasing the loss of power in generators, motors, and being widely in use wherever the making and breaking of contacts has to be absolutely reliable, as, for instance, in railroad signals;

6. In the pharmaceutical industry; and

7. As a substitute for gold or platinum in the field of dentistry.

Finally, it may be mentioned that a highly desirable quality, peculiar for metallic silver, is its catalytic properties which accelerate the chemical processes taking place when aging alcoholic beverages, such as wines and liquors.

In addition, there are hundreds of minor uses of the metal or its compounds, which, however, call only for relatively small quantities.

It appears, thus, quite safe to state that the future will see in this metal an increasingly desirable industrial material.

DR. ALEXANDER GOETZ,
Associate Professor of Physics, California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Calif.

APRIL 26, 1940.

SILVER STATEMENT

The actual silver money of the United States on December 31, 1939, was $2,266,763,746, consisting of 1,752,850,000 ounces. An additional stock of seigniorage silver, amounting to $1,656,200,000 and consisting of 1,200,000,000 ounces, is held by the Treasury but has not been monetized.

The total silver production of the United States, for the period 1792–1939, was 3,579,100,000 ounces. The commercial value of this silver was $2,770,000,000 and the monetary value was $4,627,776,000. For this period the average commercial value of domestically produced silver was $0.777 per fine ounce.

The silver money, representing actual money, at the end of 1939, was 49 percent of the total United States silver production, and the nonmonetized seigniorage silver represented 34.5 percent of the total United States silver production.

The total gold production of the United States for the period 1792–1939, was 255,412,671 ounces, which had a commercial value of $5,660,036,000. The United States gold monetary stock, at the end of 1939, amounted to seventeen thousand six hundred and forty-three and four-tenths millions of dollars, which was 311.7 percent of the total United States production of gold.

The total gold monetary stock is withdrawn from monetary use and circulation in the United States. Gold may be withdrawn by foreign central bankers upon the presentation of dollar demand, subject to export license from the Secretary of the Treasury.

The silver exports of the United States, for the period 1873–1939, had a commercial value of three thousand five hundred and ten and five-tenths millions of dollars, and silver imports had a commercial value of three thousand one hundred and ninety-eight and two-tenths millions of dollars. At the end of 1939, regardless of the tremendous importations of silver for the period 1934–39, the United States still had an excess of exports of the white metal, amounting to three hundred and two and three-tenths millions of dollars.

The average price paid for American-produced silver during the period 1873–1939 was 75.7 cents per ounce.

The monetary value of United States silver exports for the period 1873–1939 was six thousand and three and three-tenths millions of dollars, and the monetary value of silver imports during the same period was five thousand four hundred and seventy-seven and two-tenths millions of dollars. The excess of exports of silver for this period had a monetary value of five hundred and fifty-six and one-tenth millions of dollars.

The United States gold imports for the period 1873–1939 had a value of nineteen thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven millions of dollars, and the value of gold exports for the same period was six thousand seven hundred and seventy millions of dollars. The excess of gold imports for the period 1873–1939 was thirteen thousand and twenty-seven millions of dollars, more than twice the value of the total gold mined in the United States during the life of the Nation.

Little consideration has been given to the fact that the silver production of the world has become relatively stationary, whereas the production of gold, copper, lead, zinc, and steel is undergoing a constant increase.

On the other hand, world gold production is increasing at a much more rapid rate, by quantity, than copper, lead, zinc, and steel. The relative lag in the world production of silver, together with the noncirculation of gold, is rapidly deepening the depression throughout the world by causing the price levels to fall and international commerce to shrink.

The lag in silver production is generic. All but three silver mines in the United States have been exhausted. At least 80 percent of the silver of the United States comes from ores containing gold, copper, lead, and zinc.

The low price of world silver depresses production of the industrial metals beside contracting annual gold and silver increment and replacement. New uses for silver in commercial fields are absorbing currently produced silver in ever-increasing amounts, as well as consuming increasing amounts of existing silver stocks.

Vast amounts of old silver and ornamental silver are purchased by the industrial consumers. The consumption of silver by the arts and industries in the United States and Canada for the year 1939 was estimated by Messrs. Handy and Harman, silver brokers, to be 34,000,000 ounces, an increase of 25 percent over the preceding year. The three most important classifications, from the consumption standpoint, increased consumption from 1938 to 1939, as follows:

	Percent
Sterling silverware	20
Silver-plated ware	30
Motion pictures	10

There have been a great many new uses for silver undergoing development during the last 3 years, which will draw heavily on silver supplies in ever-increasing amounts in future years. These uses include purification of drinking water; silver linings in cans containing liquids, solid foods, and beverages; pasteurization of wines; and production of nontarnishable silver products for all classes of domestic uses, and for the beautification of homes. Silver is being added, in small quantities, to steel to make it noncorrosive, especially in salt water and polluted atmospheres.

All of these uses, and many others, seriously will reduce silver stocks which formerly have been available for monetary uses, and which will be necessary for monetary use in the future because of the vast public debts and disrupted monetary systems of war-torn countries throughout the world.

STATEMENT TO BANKING AND CURRENCY COMMITTEE BY HON. KEY PITTMAN

(1) I do know that our surplus exportable products were purchased with the foreign silver that our Government purchased under the Silver Purchase Act. In other words, the foreign silver purchased by the Government was purchased with our surplus exportable products. I do not believe that this will be denied. In fact, Chairman Eccles, of the Federal Reserve System, admitted this fact in his testimony before the Senate Committee on the Investigation of the Administration of the Silver Purchase Act. It is true that Mr. Eccles qualified his admission by stating that probably if these exports had not been purchased by silver they might have been purchased by gold.

If this be true, then the American producer has been greatly benefited, and the Government has not lost anything, if silver has even the value of 35 cents per ounce, because the Government would have purchased such products if not exported.

To hold that the Government has lost in the transaction, we must hold that silver is a worthless commodity. It is this subject that I desire particularly to direct my attention to.

Gold and silver have constituted the money metals of the world since the beginning of history. Over half of the people of the world today have no money with which to purchase abroad save silver. There is nowhere in the world today that you can go that you can't buy food, clothing, and shelter with a chunk of silver. There are many places in the world where you could not buy these necessaries of life with a Federal Reserve note. There is no known substitute for silver for use as subsidiary currency throughout the world. We constantly hear the ignorant say that the civilized world has abandoned silver as money.

The figures supplied by the Treasury Department at the hearings before the special committee of the United States Senate on the investigation of the Silver Purchase Act disclosed that since the 1st day of January 1921 the monetary silver in substantially all countries of the world has been increased 2,395,384,344 ounces. The net increase of silver consumed in coinage for all countries, excluding the United States, for the period 1921–39, has been 1,303,507,135 ounces. The average price now in use by the 10 leading countries of the world in the coinage of silver is $2.10 per ounce. I attach a copy of that statement.

Silver is a war metal. During every great war the demand for silver, chiefly for the purpose of paying soldiers, has increased and the price has risen.

Take as an example the effect of the last great World War upon the demand for silver and its great increase in price. In 1913 the world price of silver was 61.2 cents per ounce. In 1915, 1 year after the war commenced, the price was 67.1 cents per ounce. In 1917 it was 84 cents per ounce. In 1918, it was 98.4 cents per ounce. After the war was over, in 1919, it was $1.12 per ounce. In 1920, it was $1.02.

Then the United States Government made available to exporters of silver 50,000,000 of standard silver dollars for the purpose of beating down the price of silver, under the excuse that the silver bullion price had gone above the monetary price in the United States. The Government did not intend to bring the price of silver below the monetary price but intended and did accomplish the beating down of silver from $1.38 an ounce to 60 cents an ounce. If the present war lasts for 2 years, I predict that the price of silver will go above $1 an ounce, unless our Government conspires with other governments to beat down the market price of silver.

We constantly hear the argument that no country is today on the silver basis. What difference does that make to countries like India and China, who have nothing but silver with which to buy foreign imports? India is compelled to buy pound sterling with silver. The more silver she has to pay for pound sterling, the less pound sterling she has with which to buy foreign imports. The same condition has existed and does even now exist in China.

All monetary experts, including Chairman Eccles, have testified before our Special Committee Investigating the Administration of the Silver Purchase Act, that our Government should at all times have a minimum of $5,000,000,000 in national circulation as money. How can you have a minimum of $5,000,000,000 in circulating currency unless you have $5,000,000,000 in nonretirable currency? We have not today $5,000,000,000 in nonretirable currency because $4,667,000,000 of our circulating currency consists of Federal Reserve notes, which are retirable at the will of the banks. The only nonretirable currency in circulation today is silver currency, amounting to $1,568,000,000.

The Government could today issue its United States seigniorage silver in the form of silver currency, and thus add to the nonretirable currency of the United States $1,223,000,000. The total then, of the nonretirable silver currency in circulation in the United States would be only $3,811,900,000.

These monetary experts place the minimum fixed circulating currency at $5,000,000,000. As a matter of fact, the nonretirable circulating currency of the United States should be at least 10 percent of the total bank deposits and also 10 percent of national income, if income happens to be greater than total bank deposits.

It is to be hoped that the Government can coin, issue, and circulate at least a billion and half dollars in gold coins. If this were done, still we would have only slightly more than $5,000,000,000 in nonretirable currency. We now have an estimated income of $68,000,000,000 in the United States for 1939.

The resources of the United States justify a $100,000,000,000 income, which would require a $100,000,000,000 in deposits, with a turn-over of 10 times per year to support the income of $100,000,000,000.

This situation in sound finance would require $10,000,000,000 nonretirable national currency, with 100-percent metallic coverage.

Mr. Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, only recently gave it as his opinion that gold should be coined and circulated. That means nationalizing all currency. He stated that the safest reserve in the world was gold coin hoarded by the people. I thoroughly agree with Mr. Aldrich. I think that it follows equally that it would be a splendid reserve as against panics. If the people of the country have difficulty in getting sufficient gold to hoard, they should have an opportunity to hoard some silver currency.

The real, great issue is whether we are going to have managed currency without relation to metallic coverage or whether we are going to have national currency 100 percent covered by gold and silver.

The fear that of systems of managed currency throughout the world will cause the abandonment of gold reserves is just as absurd as the assertion that silver is a worthless commodity.

We may have sufficient silver at the present time, although I do not believe it.

I know the great benefit the Silver Purchase Act accomplished in the past. The Treasury Department can inform you of the present situation.

(2) One billion people of the world, whose currencies are associated with sterling in the dollar, utilize silver with which to buy sterling or dollar exchange to pay for merchandise imported from the United States, Great Britain, and other countries.

(3) The silver-owning populations will buy American cotton at the rate of 10 pounds of cotton per ounce of silver, and will purchase wheat at the rate of one bushel per ounce of silver.

(4) When the price of silver is depressed below parity, coinage value, it has the direct effect of raising export prices of cotton, wheat, and other commodities above the parity price levels to such an extent that foreigners who wish to purchase American goods by converting silver into dollar exchange find the prices prohibitive.

(5) For the period 1933–39, the average price of export cotton was 10.9 cents per pound, but the foreigners had to pay 31 cents a pound for same at the United States monetary value of silver.

(6) For the period 1933–39, the average export price of wheat was $1.05 per bushel, but the foreigners had to pay $2.25 per bushel in silver at the United States coinage value.

(7) For the period 1933–39, 65 percent of the monetary value of all silver imported into the United States was taken by the Treasury Department as seigniorage, and the foreign buyer was given 35 percent with which to pay for exports.

(8) Nonmonetized silver, collected as seigniorage, has accumulated in the Treasury having a coinage value of $1,672,000,000.

(9) The above cotton, wheat, and silver figures are taken from the accompanying tables and charts, which were compiled for the period 1865–1939 by the United States Tariff Commission, which were made for and delivered to the Senate Special Silver Committee a few days ago.

(10) These tables show that the export price of commodities of the United States change directly with changes in the world price of silver.

(11) The Tariff Commission tables bear out my statements to the effect that when gold and silver were in general circulation the purchasing power of the gold dollar varied inversely with the world price of silver, and that the purchasing power of the silver in the dollar is equal to its world price multiplied by the purchasing power of the dollar.

(12) When a silver market exists free from barriers and embargoes (a) price levels of all international commodities in gold-standard countries as well as silver-using ones change with changes in the world price of silver; (b) silver is so universally distributed amongst one-half of the people of the world that changes in its price react immediately on the price of commodities; and (c) gold is concentrated to such an extent that price levels of international commodities respond very slowly to changes in the gold price.

(13) By dispensing with the seigniorage tax on silver in favor of agriculture, export prices of cotton would reach a normal parity at 12.9 cents per pound, and export wheat would reach parity at $1.29 per bushel, without subsidies. The unit price and volume of commodities and industrial exports would immediately increase to a total value equal to 10 percent of national income.

(14) The value of United States exports, when computed as a percentage of national income, varies directly with the world price of silver.

(15) For the 5-year period 1916–20, during which the price of silver was 71 percent of parity ($1.29 per ounce), the value of exports averaged 12.9 percent of national income.

For the 5-year period 1934–39, when the average price of silver was 44 percent of parity, the value of total exports was 60 percent of parity. The value of total exports for the period averaged 4.4 percent of national income.

During the 1916–20 period unit value index of exports averaged above 100, and during the 1934–39 period the unit price index averaged 66. For the year 1939 the unit value index of exports was 70.

(16) Changes in the world price of silver are followed by corresponding changes in the value of exports, imports, national income, and price levels. (See chart entitled "International Commerce Is Affected by World Price of Silver.")

BARRIERS AND EMBARGOES CREATED AGAINST PRICE AND SHIPMENTS OF SILVER

(17) The British-Indian Government, during February 1940, sponsored a bill to reduce the silver content of the fractional rupee (4 anna) from eleven-twelfths to 0.500 fine. This raises the Indian coinage rate from $1.01 per ounce of silver to $1.86. British silver is coined at the value of $2.56 per ounce.

Great Britain and British India promote minimum value for silver bullion by adopting maximum silver coinage rates, India's rate being approximately 50 percent higher than the United States, and England, 100 percent higher.

(18) British India maintains an import tax on silver bullion at approximately 6.25 cents per ounce, and they contemplate raising this import duty in the next Indian budget.

(19) The British-Indian Government, during January of this year, adopted a policy of selling silver to Indian buyers at 23.5 pence per ounce, and buying same at 21.5 pence per ounce. Their buying price is higher than the United States Treasury buying price. Both Great Britain and India have embargoes on silver imports.

(20) The British-Indian Government silver stock has been reduced to 100,000,000 ounces but the inhabitants of India hold at least 5,000,000,000 ounces, and are consistent buyers of silver when barriers and embargoes do not prohibit their operations.

(21) The United States Silver Purchase Act of 1934 requires the payment of a 50-percent silver profit on silver-bullion transactions. This tax prevents American citizens from buying silver from foreigners who wish to establish dollar credits required to pay for merchandise to be purchased in the United States.

(22) Since the Treasury Department lowered its bid for world silver at 35 cents per ounce in July 1939, Great Britain and India have controlled the world price of silver and maintained its price at the lowest level ever recorded.

(23) There should be no barriers or embargoes created by any country to interfere with international money, either silver or gold, because of their direct, depressing effects on the price and volume of world trade.

Today the citizens of the United States, Great Britain, India, France, and Germany are prevented from dealing in silver without restrictions and penalties. Therefore the silver price and the movement of silver are the results of an international racket.

Quotation from the Economist (London): "These fluctuations in the price of silver are obviously the outcome of speculative indiscretions and of the virtually monopolistic position which the Government of India holds both in the indigenous and the London markets for the metal."

UNITED STATES EXCESS OF EXPORTS OF SILVER, 1870–1939

(24) After the operation of the Silver Purchase Act, for a period of 6 years, the United States still maintained an excess of exports of silver of $360,000,000 for the period 1870–1939. Excess of silver exports prevailed during 58 years of the period, amounting to one thousand four hundred and one and seven-tenths millions of dollars, and an excess of imports prevailed for 12 years, amounting to one thousand and thirty-seven and six-tenths millions of dollars. Of the 12 years representing excess of imports, the 6-year period (1934–39) was $966,716,000,000, or 93 percent of the total.

UNITED STATES EXCESS OF EXPORTS OF MERCHANDISE, 1870–1939

(25) The United States excess of exports of merchandise for this 70-year period has been forty and seventy-nine one-hundredths billions of dollars. At the end of 1914 the merchandise excess of exports was ten and twenty-six one-hundredths billions of dollars. The increase of excess of exports of merchandise for the period 1915–39 was thirty and fifty-three one-hundredths billions of dollars.

UNITED STATES IMPORTS OF GOLD, 1870–1939

(26) The total excess of imports of gold for this period was $13,600,000,000. Until 1916 gold exports exceeded imports, and at the end of 1933 the excess of imports was only $1,480,000,000. For the period 1934–39 the excess of gold imports has been eleven and one-tenth billions of dollars.

(27) FOREIGN COMMERCE—SILVER, GOLD, AND MERCHANDISE, 1870–1939

United States excess of exports of silver	$360,000,000
United States excess of exports of merchandise	40,744,000,000
Total excess of exports of silver and merchandise	41,100,000,000
United States excess of imports of gold	13,600,000,000
Excess of exports of merchandise not paid for at the end of 1939	27,500,000,000

(28) FOREIGN COMMERCE—SILVER, GOLD, AND MERCHANDISE, 1934–39

Silver excess of imports	$966,716,000
Gold excess of imports	11,122,738,000
Total	12,089,454,000
Merchandise excess of exports	3,005,117,000
Gold imports not offset by merchandise exports	9,084,337,000

The present administration is the first since 1848, to balance excess of merchandise exports, with excess of imports of silver and gold. In fact, additional gold over and above a foreign trade balance for the period 1934–39 has been imported in the sum of $9,084,337, which represents a collection of overdue payments for excess of exports of merchandise created by former administrations.

EXCESS RESERVES OF SILVER

(29) Silver is purchased by the Government and paid for with new national money—silver certificates. Credit moneys of the banks necessarily do not enter into the purchases of silver; therefore, additions to silver money inherently do not increase bank reserves.

When silver certificates are deposited in the banks, they become part of net demand deposits and therefore create legal reserve of 22.25 cents per dollar and excess reserves of 77.5 cents per dollar, but the silver certificates in circulation do not create either legal or excess reserves. The reserves created by silver certificates are set forth in the following table:

Silver certificates, total amount	$1,772,211,742
In circulation, no reserves	1,469,353,514
Held by Federal Reserve banks and agents	302,858,228
Legal reserves demand deposits, 22.5 percent	68,123,100
Excess reserve demand deposits, 77.5 percent	234,735,128

(30) EXCESS OF GOLD RESERVES

Gold certificates, total amount	$15,630,531,386
In circulation	None
Legal reserves, 15 percent of sixty-four and four-tenths billions of dollars	9,800,000,000
Excess reserves	5,830,531,386

METALLIC CONVERSION VALUES OF SILVER AND GOLD DOLLARS

(31) Silver certificates are convertible into silver bullion at the New York price of silver which is an arbitrarily low price fixed by the Treasury Department. At the present time the Treasury silver price is 35 cents per ounce, and therefore silver certificates are convertible at the rate of 27 cents per dollar.

Federal Reserve notes and bank deposits (for use in the United States) are not convertible into either gold or silver. Federal Reserve notes and bank deposits can be exchanged for silver certificates, which can then be converted into silver, but only to the extent of silver certificates and corresponding silver-bullion reserves which are not already in circulation, amounting to the normal total of $302,858,228. As bank deposits and currency (less silver certificates) amount to $64,000,000,000, the amount of their convertibility into silver is negligible.

If bank deposits, Federal Reserve notes, and Government obligations not owned by banks ($20,000,000,000) were made convertible into gold, each credit dollar would receive 17.6 cents in gold. If deposits and currency only were convertible, each credit dollar would receive 24.5 cents in gold.

(32) FEDERAL RESERVE NOTES AND SILVER CERTIFICATES

[Total outstanding]

	Jan. 1, 1933	Jan. 31, 1940	Increase
Federal Reserve notes	$2,287,014,640	$5,164,941,100	$2,177,926,460
Silver certificates	492,283,529	1,772,211,742	1,279,928,213
Excess Federal Reserve notes	1,794,731,111	3,392,729,358	897,998,247

(33) SILVER OF SPECIFIED CLASSIFICATIONS ACQUIRED BY MINTS AND ASSAY OFFICES

[In millions]

	Newly mined domestic		Nationalized		Foreign		Total
	Ounces	Dollars	Ounces	Dollars	Ounces	Dollars	Ounces	Dollars
1934	21.8	14.1	110.6	55.3	172.5	86.5	304.9	155.9
1935	38.0	27.3	2.0	1.0	494.4	318.2	534.3	346.5
1936	61.1	47.3	.4	.2	271.9	150.3	333.4	197.9
1937	70.6	54.6			241.5	108.7	312.2	163.4
1938	61.6	42.2			355.4	156.9	417.1	199.1
1939	60.7	39.9			282.8	120.5	343.3	160.4
Total	313.8	225.4	113.0	56.5	1,818.5	941.1	2,245.2	1,223.2
Silver in general fund paid for but not monetized							1,211.1	615.3

WORLD PRODUCTION OF GOLD AND SILVER

(34) The relative valuation of gold and silver by weight today is 100 to 1 (gold, $35 per ounce; silver, 35 cents per ounce). This distortion in the relative values of the two metals has been caused (1) by decreasing the price of silver, and (2) by increasing the price of gold.

	Millions of fine ounces
1493–1939:
World production of gold	1,336.0
World production of silver	16,357.0
Ratio, 12.7 to 1.
1901–39:
World production of gold	864.6
World production of silver	8,148.0
Ratio, 9.6 to 1.
1919–39:
World production of gold	503.8
World production of silver	4,773.0
Ratio, 9.4 to 1.
1933–39:
World production of gold	231.8
World production of silver	1,625.1
Ratio, 7 to 1.

(35) UNITED STATES PRODUCTION OF GOLD AND SILVER

	Millions of fine ounces
1792–1939:
United States production of gold	244.7
United States production of silver	3,516.1
Ratio, 14.7 to 1.
1901–39:
United States production of gold	2,250.0
United States production of silver	140.0
Ratio, 16.1 to 1.
1933–39:
United States production of gold	29.0
United States production of silver	354.0
Ratio, 12.5 to 1.

(36) UNITED STATES SILVER AND GOLD STOCKS, JANUARY 1, 1940

United States monetary silver subject to circulation	$2,257,100,000
Silver purchased and paid for, now in Treasury, but not monetized	1,554,800,000
Value of total silver at $1.29 per ounce	3,811,900,000
Monetary gold stock in the Treasury not subject to United States circulation	17,931,000,000
Active gold in stabilization fund	200,000,000
Total gold	18,131,000,000
Gold imports in excess of exports (1934 minus 1939)	9,084,300,000
Gold reserve not subject to export	9,046,700,000

(37) The total silver stock of the United States, held by the Treasury at the end of 1939, was 84 percent of the total silver production of the United States. The monetary gold stock in the Treasury, at the end of 1939, was 316 percent of the total gold production of the United States.

The silver held by the United States, at the end of 1939, consisting of 2,800,000,000 ounces, is 17 percent of the recorded silver production of the world, reported to be 16,357,000,000 ounces. The gold, held by the United States, consisting of five hundred and twelve and two-tenths million ounces, is 38 percent of the recorded gold production of the world, reported to be 1,366,000,000 ounces.

(38) FINE OUNCES OF SILVER CONSUMED AND WITHDRAWN FROM MONETARY USE

[U. S., 1921–39; the rest of the world, 1921–38]

	Ounces consumed	Ounces withdrawn
1921–27	1,253,431,524	427,331,577
1928–36	1,421,745,018	946,560,993
1937	100,333,925	37,288,451
1938	60,702,319	47,189,060
United States 1939	27,912,125
Total	2,864,124,911	1,408,370,081

(39) NET INCREASE SILVER CONSUMPTION BY COINAGE AND BY UNITED STATES CERTIFICATES COVERED BY SILVER BULLION

The world, 1921–38, plus United States coinage 1939	$1,405,754,830
Silver certificates, United States 1934–39	989,384,344
Total net consumption for coinage, 1921–39	2,395,139,174
United States seigniorage silver	1,223,000,000
Grand total	3,618,139,174

(40) MONETARY STOCK OF PRINCIPAL COUNTRIES OF THE WORLD AND OF CALENDAR YEAR 1938; ANNUAL REPORT, DIRECTOR OF THE MINT, 1939

[World population, 2,066,823,000]

		Per capita
Total gold stock	$25,057,247,000	$12.46
Monetary silver stock	7,452,377,000	3.61

Since the above table was compiled, the United States gold stock has increased, by December 31, 1939, $3,474,151; and United States silver monetary stock has increased by $150,000,000, so that the total metallic stocks of the world, up to the end of 1939, may be considered to be:

Total gold stock	$29,231,351,000
Monetary silver stock	7,602,377,000

There are hoards of both gold and silver which are not taken into consideration in the compilation of the above-recognized monetary stocks.

The Federal Reserve Bulletin of March reflects the gold reserves of central banks and governments to have been $25,999,000,000 for 1940, preliminary estimate.

TABLE I.—World production of gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc (1913–39)

	Gold	Silver	Copper	Lead	Zinc	Steel
	Fine ounces	Fine ounces	Tons of 2,000 pounds	Tons of 2,000 pounds	Tons of 2,000 pounds	Tons of 2,400 pounds
1913	22,145,314	225,686,823	1,072,674	1,291,799	1,113,872	75,150,000
1914	21,697,416	178,331,493	1,011,939	1,273,245	968,207	59,490,000
1915	22,593,833	189,626,405	1,188,172	1,220,452	924,977	65,570,000
1916	21,976,437	180,112,525	1,533,294	1,254,627	1,089,980	77,010,000
1917	20,611,049	187,443,658	1,579,675	1,290,334	1,105,826	80,760,000
1918	18,556,920	204,199,399	1,568,677	1,317,700	914,474	75,990,000
1919	17,629,977	181,800,394	1,069,998	976,239	728,927	57,560,000
1920	16,125,697	173,200,618	1,082,652	1,006,629	811,537	71,300,000
1921	15,983,772	171,873,246	601,913	974,056	493,439	43,510,000
1922	15,444,830	210,533,502	996,147	1,179,140	792,777	67,660,000
1923	17,786,472	240,169,264	1,411,980	1,314,001	1,059,821	76,930,000
1924	19,050,134	238,779,157	1,522,394	1,467,265	1,125,188	77,230,000
1925	19,031,137	241,697,187	1,589,717	1,669,854	1,265,714	88,930,000
1926	19,369,364	253,129,548	1,637,489	1,770,278	1,373,212	91,790,000
1927	19,445,612	253,121,265	1,682,361	1,857,998	1,464,091	100,130,000
1928	19,583,153	255,183,512	1,892,350	1,841,012	1,566,919	107,860,000
1929	19,673,022	262,804,711	2,118,209	1,932,520	1,623,451	118,370,000
1930	20,721,981	252,535,958	1,734,745	1,845,672	1,556,857	93,100,000
1931	22,370,718	200,760,352	1,487,992	1,593,723	1,111,450	68,410,000
1932	24,305,683	171,231,441	998,103	1,302,124	870,758	49,900,000
1933	25,493,426	169,680,081	1,146,260	1,322,273	1,106,864	66,760,000
1934	27,318,362	186,488,619	1,401,334	1,493,391	1,305,052	80,600,000
1935	30,054,210	214,534,290	1,617,032	1,567,616	1,487,088	97,700,000
1936	34,230,241	253,667,219	1,848,521	1,641,335	1,641,634	122,000,000
1937	35,732,622	275,148,523	2,503,966	1,895,491	1,838,487	132,300,000
1938	37,942,685	262,932,684	2,184,267	1,879,460	1,751,870	106,000,000
1939	40,200,000	259,913,000	2,356,800	1,904,883	1,877,614	133,298,000

TABLE I–A.—World production, indexes, gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, steel

[1926 (all metals) = 100]

Year	Gold	Silver	Copper	Lead	Zinc	Steel
1913	114.30	89.15	65.50	73.00	81.10	81.84
1914	111.90	70.44	61.77	71.92	70.47	64.78
1915	116.60	74.90	72.59	68.93	67.34	71.41
1916	113.40	71.14	93.67	70.91	79.35	83.86
1917	106.30	74.04	96.48	72.88	80.52	79.95
1918	95.75	80.66	95.86	74.47	66.54	82.75
1919	90.97	71.81	65.37	55.14	53.07	62.68
1920	83.21	68.41	66.17	56.89	59.11	77.64
1921	81.44	67.89	36.78	55.03	35.89	47.38
1922	79.70	83.16	60.85	66.61	57.73	73.68
1923	91.78	94.87	86.27	74.24	77.17	83.78
1924	98.30	94.32	92.99	82.88	81.90	84.10
1925	98.20	95.47	97.15	94.35	92.16	96.84
1926	100.00	100.00	100.00	100.00	100.00	100.00
1927	100.30	99.98	102.80	105.00	106.60	109.00
1928	101.00	100.70	115.60	104.00	114.00	117.50
1929	101.50	103.80	129.40	109.20	118.10	128.90
1930	106.90	99.75	105.90	104.20	113.30	101.40
1931	115.40	79.30	90.92	90.06	80.89	74.50
1932	125.40	67.64	60.98	73.56	63.41	54.34
1933	131.40	67.02	70.02	74.69	80.59	72.70
1934	141.00	73.66	85.60	84.35	95.00	87.96
1935	115.10	84.74	98.80	88.59	108.20	106.40
1936	176.60	100.20	113.00	92.72	119.50	132.70
1937	184.40	108.70	153.00	107.10	133.80	144.30
1938	195.80	103.80	133.40	106.20	127.50	116.50
1939	207.40	102.70	143.90	107.60	136.70	145.22
	Ounces	Ounces	Tons	Tons	Tons	Tons
1926	19,369,364	253,129,548	1,637,489	1,770,278	1,373,212	91,790,000

TABLE II.—Metal prices, annual averages (1913–39)

Year	Gold (dollars per ounce)	Silver (cents per ounce)	Copper (dollars per 2,000 pounds)	Lead (dollars per 2,000 pounds)	Zinc (dollars per 2,000 pounds)	Steel (dollars per 2,240 pounds)
1913	20.67	59.79	305.38	87.40	110.08	37.20
1914	20.67	54.81	272.04	77.64	101.21	32.10
1915	20.67	49.68	345.50	93.46	261.18	34.34
1916	20.67	65.66	544.04	127.16	252.68	59.74
1917	20.67	81.42	543.60	175.74	174.60	109.98
1918	20.67	96.77	493.36	148.26	159.80	79.34
1919	20.67	111.12	373.82	115.18	139.76	69.78
1920	20.67	100.09	349.16	158.14	153.42	83.71
1921	20.67	62.65	250.04	80.90	93.15	54.59
1922	20.67	67.53	267.64	114.68	114.36	47.58
1923	20.67	64.87	288.42	145.34	132.14	60.41
1924	20.67	66.78	260.48	161.94	126.88	56.11
1925	20.67	69.06	280.84	180.40	152.44	52.28
1926	20.67	62.11	275.90	168.34	146.74	51.86
1927	20.67	56.37	258.40	135.10	124.84	49.32
1928	20.67	58.18	291.40	126.10	120.54	48.50
1929	20.67	52.99	361.14	136.66	130.24	49.48
1930	20.67	38.15	259.64	110.34	91.12	45.87
1931	20.67	28.70	162.32	84.86	72.80	48.84
1932	20.67	27.89	111.10	63.60	57.52	42.58
1933	30.00	34.73	140.50	77.38	80.58	42.09
1934	35.00	47.93	168.56	77.20	83.16	45.54
1935	35.00	64.27	172.98	81.35	86.56	46.10
1936	35.00	45.09	189.48	47.10	98.02	46.52
1937	35.00	44.88	263.34	120.18	130.38	55.19
1938	35.00	43.22	200.00	94.78	92.20	53.62
1939	35.00	39.08	219.30	101.06	102.20	50.56

TABLE III.—Metal values, world production (1913–39)

Year	Gold	Silver	Copper	Lead	Zinc	Steel
1913	$450,773,000	$134,955,000	$327,265,000	$112,265,000	$122,540,000	$2,795,580,000
1914	448,447,000	97,725,000	275,264,000	98,784,000	97,768,000	1,109,625,000
1915	467,017,000	94,244,000	411,048,000	114,070,000	241,425,000	2,251,674,000
1916	454,244,000	118,335,000	835,485,000	159,385,000	275,770,000	4,600,577,000
1917	426,029,000	152,579,000	859,520,000	227,040,000	193,500,000	8,875,524,000
1918	383,573,000	197,664,000	773,517,000	195,064,000	146,240,000	6,029,047,000
1919	364,412,000	201,980,000	400,180,000	112,240,000	102,060,000	4,016,537,000
1920	333,324,000	174,932,000	377,967,000	159,106,000	124,848,000	5,968,523,000
1921	330,389,000	107,678,000	150,500,000	78,797,000	45,898,000	2,375,211,000
1922	319,248,000	142,173,000	266,928,000	117,900,000	90,402,000	3,219,263,000
1923	369,166,000	155,870,000	406,656,000	190,530,000	139,920,000	4,647,341,000
1924	393,764,000	159,504,000	395,720,000	237,654,000	142,875,000	4,333,375,000
1925	393,371,000	166,771,000	446,790,000	300,600,000	192,432,000	4,649,260,000
1926	400,357,000	157,193,000	451,812,000	297,360,000	201,831,000	4,760,229,000
1927	401,949,000	142,760,000	433,956,000	250,830,000	183,000,000	4,938,412,000
1928	404,781,000	148,516,000	550,572,000	231,966,000	189,607,000	5,231,210,000
1929	406,641,000	139,287,000	764,598,000	264,821,000	212,216,000	5,856,948,000
1930	428,324,000	96,216,000	451,100,000	203,060,000	141,843,000	4,270,497,000
1931	462,408,000	57,618,000	241,056,000	153,331,000	80,881,000	3,341,144,000
1932	502,405,000	47,773,000	110,778,000	82,807,000	50,082,000	2,124,742,000
1933	764,790,000	58,879,000	161,586,000	102,323,000	89,224,000	2,809,923,000
1934	956,130,000	89,515,000	236,769,000	115,259,000	108,576,000	3,670,524,000
1935	1,051,890,000	137,945,000	279,741,000	127,635,000	128,774,000	4,503,970,000
1936	1,198,050,000	114,404,000	349,461,000	77,291,000	161,080,000	5,675,440,000
1937	1,250,655,000	123,541,000	658,552,000	227,400,000	240,778,000	7,301,637,000
1938	1,328,005,000	113,587,000	436,800,000	178,129,000	161,534,000	5,683,720,000
1939	1,407,000,000	101,578,000	516,890,000	192,519,000	191,892,000	6,739,648,000

Tonnages and prices from American Bureau of Metal Statistics.
Steel values equal tonnage steel ingots and castings, and composite price of finished steel (Iron Age Annual, January 1940).

Silver-production ratios, ounces of world silver production of 1939, per ounce of gold and per ton of copper, lead, zinc, and steel

[1939 silver production=100]

Year	Silver production index	Silver ounces per ounce of gold (1939)	All figures are silver ounces per ton of—
			Copper	Lead	Zinc	Steel
1913	115.2	11.73	242.2	201.2	233.3	3.459
1914	145.7	11.98	156.8	204.2	268.5	4.369
1915	137.1	11.50	218.8	213.0	281.0	3.963
1916	144.3	11.82	169.8	207.1	238.4	3.376
1917	138.7	12.61	164.5	201.5	235.0	3.218
1918	127.3	14.00	165.6	197.2	284.3	3.420
1919	142.9	14.74	242.9	266.4	356.6	4.514
1920	150.1	16.12	240.0	258.1	320.2	3.646
1921	151.2	16.26	431.7	266.9	527.1	5.975
1922	123.5	16.83	260.9	220.4	327.7	3.841
1923	108.2	14.61	184.1	197.8	245.2	3.379
1924	108.3	13.64	170.8	177.2	231.0	3.366
1925	107.5	13.66	163.5	155.6	205.3	2.921
1926	102.7	13.42	158.8	146.8	188.6	2.830
1927	102.7	13.37	154.5	140.0	177.5	2.596
1928	101.8	13.27	137.4	141.2	165.9	2.409
1929	98.9	13.21	122.7	134.4	160.1	2.195
1930	102.9	12.54	150.0	140.8	166.9	2.791
1931	129.5	11.62	174.7	163.1	233.9	3.800

Silver-production ratios, ounces of world silver production of 1939, per ounce of gold and per ton of copper, lead, zinc, and steel—Continued

Year	Silver production index	Silver ounces per ounce of gold (1939)	All figures are silver ounces per ton of—
			Copper	Lead	Zinc	Steel
1932	151.8	10.69	260.4	199.6	298.4	5.208
1933	153.2	10.20	226.8	196.6	234.8	3.893
1934	139.3	9.51	185.5	174.1	199.2	3.225
1935	121.2	8.65	160.7	165.8	174.8	2.661
1936	102.4	7.59	140.6	158.4	158.3	2.130
1937	94.5	7.27	103.8	137.1	141.4	1.965
1938	98.9	6.85	119.0	138.3	148.4	2.452
1939	100.0	6.47	110.3	136.4	138.4	1.969

Gold-production ratios, ounces of world gold production of 1939, per ounce of silver and per ton of copper, lead, zinc, and steel

[1939 gold production=100]

Year	Gold-production index	Gold ounces per ounce of silver	All figures are gold ounces per ton of—
			Copper	Lead	Zinc	Steel
1913	55.10	0.17813	37.47	31.11	36.09	0.5351
1914	53.98	.22544	39.72	31.58	41.53	.6758
1915	56.21	.21201	33.34	32.95	43.46	.6131
1916	54.68	.22319	26.26	32.03	36.88	.5222
1917	51.28	.21451	25.44	31.16	36.35	.4977
1918	46.17	.19686	25.62	30.50	43.98	.5290
1919	43.86	.22110	37.57	41.21	55.15	.6983
1920	40.12	.23211	37.12	39.92	49.53	.5640
1921	39.77	.23384	66.77	41.29	81.53	.9242
1922	38.43	.19099	40.36	34.10	50.69	.5942
1923	44.25	.16735	28.47	30.59	37.92	.5222
1924	47.40	.16835	26.41	27.40	35.73	.5206
1925	47.35	.16631	25.28	24.07	31.75	.4518
1926	48.20	.15883	24.56	22.71	29.28	.4378
1927	48.38	.15883	23.90	21.64	27.46	.4016
1928	48.72	.15750	21.25	21.84	25.66	.3726
1929	48.95	.15300	18.98	20.80	24.77	.3395
1930	61.56	.15919	23.17	21.78	25.82	.4317
1931	55.66	.20031	27.01	25.22	36.18	.5877
1932	60.47	.23481	40.28	30.87	46.15	.8056
1933	63.43	.23690	35.08	30.41	36.31	.6022
1934	47.97	.21555	28.69	26.93	36.81	.4989
1935	74.77	.18741	24.86	25.64	27.03	.4116
1936	85.16	.15847	21.74	24.50	24.48	.3295
1937	88.90	.14613	16.06	21.21	21.87	.3039
1938	94.40	.15292	18.41	21.39	22.95	.3972
1939	100.00	.15469	17.06	21.10	21.41	.3046

TABLE VI.—Dollars per capita, United States, 1873–1939, gold, silver, merchandise, and public debt (domestic) per capita

	Gold monetary stock [1]	Silver monetary stock [1]	Production of—		Excess of—		Merchandise excess of export cumulative	Public debt [1]
			Gold monetary value cumulative	Silver monetary value cumulative	Gold import monetary value cumulative	Silver export monetary value cumulative
	(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)	(6)	(7)	(8)
1873	3.24	0.44	0.863	0.86	0.868	0.648	2.87	51.62
1874	3.44	.49	1.623	1.71	1.180	1.181	2.35	50.47
1875	2.76	.70	2.344	2.38	2.360	1.559	2.73	49.06
1876	2.88	.84	3.164	3.18	2.810	1.903	.90	47.21
1877	3.61	1.09	4.093	3.95	2.750	2.177	2.38	45.47
1878	4.48	1.72	5.060	4.80	2.590	2.290	7.73	45.37
1879	5.03	2.28	5.919	5.50	2.500	2.346	12.90	47.05
1880	7.01	2.84	.063	6.15	.900	2.311	15.90	41.69
1881	9.32	3.30	6.829	6.86	1.010	2.381	20.60	39.35
1882	9.65	3.76	.073	7.59	1.028	2.494	20.60	35.37
1883	10.11	4.23	7.691	8.28	1.119	2.615	22.00	32.07
1884	9.93	4.65	8.083	8.99	.762	2.766	22.90	29.60
1885	10.48	5.05	8.467	9.70	1.070	3.012	25.30	28.11
1886	10.29	5.44	8.893	10.39	.649	3.149	25.40	27.10
1887	11.15	6.02	9.264	11.08	1.202	3.234	25.40	24.97
1888	11.77	6.45	9.616	11.82	1.602	3.371	24.40	23.09
1889	11.10	2.86	9.946	12.62	.758	3.595	23.80	20.39
1890	11.11	7.30	10.250	13.48	.673	3.742	24.40	17.92
1891	10.13	8.09	7.451	14.41	.407	3.740	24.50	15.70
1892	10.21	8.74	7.817	15.40	.406	3.866	27.20	14.80
1893	9.01	9.28	8.211	16.27	1.717	4.058	26.40	14.40
1894	9.28	9.28	8.637	16.91	1.752	4.529	29.40	15.00
1895	9.23	9.06	9.207	17.63	2.156	4.839	29.90	15.90
1896	8.53	8.93	9.791	18.39	3.237	5.198	30.80	17.40
1897	9.73	8.83	11.100	19.00	2.553	5.542	34.30	17.10
1898	11.81	8.74	11.090	19.62	1.067	5.400	42.10	16.90
1899	12.96	8.59	11.840	20.21	3.552	5.642	48.40	19.30
1900	13.56	8.51	12.570	20.66	5.115	5.842	55.70	16.50

[1] Fiscal years.

TABLE VI.—Dollars per capita, United States, 1873–1939, gold, silver, merchandise, and public debt (domestic) per capita—Continued

	Gold monetary stock	Silver monetary stock	Production of—		Excess of—		Merchandise excess of export cumulative	Public debt
			Gold monetary value cumulative	Silver monetary value cumulative	Gold import monetary value cumulative	Silver export monetary value cumulative
	(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)	(6)	(7)	(8)
1901	14.46	8.46	13.350	21.20	4.629	6.060	62.10	15.70
1902	15.07	8.43	15.440	21.73	5.581	6.231	66.00	14.80
1903	15.51	8.39	16.090	22.24	8.084	6.329	70.90	14.40
1904	16.22	8.31	16.800	22.77	3.501	6.516	74.80	13.80
1905	16.31	8.20	17.590	23.27	3.893	6.698	79.00	13.60
1906	17.43	8.11	18.410	23.75	1.665	6.778	83.30	13.50
1907	17.04	8.12	19.150	24.20	2.663	6.852	87.80	13.30
1908	18.49	8.80	19.910	24.57	2.266	6.850	93.60	13.40
1909	18.47	8.80	20.720	24.98	1.230	6.864	94.90	12.90
1910	18.11	8.01	21.450	25.37	1.216	6.881	96.80	12.70
1911	18.65	7.74	21.670	25.24	1.385	6.853	99.00	12.30
1912	19.01	7.73	22.260	25.65	1.560	6.977	103.00	12.50
1913	19.22	7.64	22.790	26.09	1.244	7.133	134.00	12.30
1914	19.09	7.58	22.390	26.58	.444	7.274	119.00	12.00
1915	19.71	7.48	23.040	27.12	3.738	7.445	125.00	11.80
1916	23.87	7.39	23.560	27.61	8.853	7.761	154.00	11.90
1917	30.92	7.36	23.980	28.05	10.440	7.761	183.00	28.60
1918	29.87	6.91	24.220	28.40	10.460	9.345	209.00	115.60
1919	29.33	5.19	24.740	29.04	7.690	10.740	246.00	240.00
1920	26.93	4.96	25.150	29.63	8.560	10.949	273.00	228.30
1921	30.23	5.16	25.150	29.71	14.560	10.640	287.00	221.00
1922	34.44	5.94	25.250	29.97	16.500	10.422	289.00	208.90
1923	36.26	6.81	25.310	30.34	18.890	10.236	288.00	200.10
1924	39.47	6.87	25.320	30.55	20.830	10.372	291.00	184.00
1925	37.79	6.98	23.400	30.81	19.360	10.518	293.00	177.80
1926	37.97	7.02	25.420	31.08	19.020	10.559	292.00	167.70
1927	38.67	7.03	25.490	31.35	19.720	10.599	294.00	156.00
1928	34.24	6.99	25.570	31.61	16.220	10.636	299.00	146.60
1929	35.60	6.95	25.630	31.88	17.460	10.762	302.00	139.40
1930	36.80	6.91	25.660	31.97	19.490	10.602	305.00	131.40
1931	39.94	6.84	25.880	32.06	20.530	10.516	305.00	135.30
1932	31.39	6.77	26.140	32.13	16.830	10.409	306.00	155.90
1933	34.35	6.67	26.130	32.14	15.330	10.008	305.00	179.20
1934	62.07	6.62	27.040	32.24	24.180	9.293	307.00	213.60
1935	71.69	9.21	27.900	32.55	37.700	6.573	307.00	225.00
1936	82.61	12.36	28.830	32.87	46.080	5.197	305.00	261.20
1937	95.24	13.46	29.930	33.38	58.000	4.527	305.00	281.80
1938	99.65	15.05	31.500	33.71	72.800	2.782	311.00	285.40
1939	122.82	16.44	34.400	34.00	98.800	2.207	313.00	308.30

Additional silver stock paid for, but not monetized, February 1940—$12.56 per capita.

TABLE III–A.—Total-value indexes, gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, steel (1913–39)

Year	Gold ($20.67=100)	Silver ($1.293=100)	Copper	Lead (1926=100)	Zinc	Steel
1913	112.60	41.23	72.42	37.96	60.72	58.69
1914	112.02	29.85	60.92	33.21	48.44	23.29
1915	116.66	28.79	90.96	38.35	119.60	47.27
1916	113.47	36.15	184.90	53.58	136.60	96.60
1917	106.42	46.61	190.20	76.33	95.88	180.37
1918	95.82	60.39	171.20	65.58	72.46	126.61
1919	91.03	61.70	88.56	37.73	50.57	84.33
1920	83.26	53.44	83.64	53.49	61.86	125.33
1921	82.53	32.89	33.31	26.49	22.74	49.87
1922	79.75	43.43	59.10	39.64	44.79	67.60
1923	92.22	47.62	90.00	64.06	69.33	97.59
1924	98.36	48.73	87.57	79.90	70.79	90.99
1925	98.26	50.49	98.87	101.10	95.35	97.63
1926	100.00	48.02	100.00	100.00	100.00	100.00
1927	100.41	43.61	96.03	84.33	90.68	103.69
1928	101.11	45.37	121.80	77.99	93.95	109.85
1929	101.58	42.55	169.20	89.03	105.20	123.00
1930	106.99	29.39	99.83	68.27	70.28	89.67
1931	115.51	17.60	53.35	51.55	40.08	70.16
1932	125.51	14.59	24.52	27.83	24.82	44.62
1933	191.04	17.98	35.76	34.40	44.21	59.01
1934	238.84	27.35	52.40	38.75	53.80	77.09
1935	262.76	24.14	61.91	42.91	63.81	94.58
1936	299.27	34.95	77.34	25.98	79.81	119.17
1937	312.41	37.74	145.74	76.45	119.30	153.32
1938	331.75	34.70	96.65	59.89	80.00	119.34
1939	351.00	32.21	114.39	64.72	95.08	141.52
1939=100	100.00	9.12	32.60	18.40	27.10	40.30

TOWNSEND BILL STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL ASPECT

The financial and business conditions of the United States are unsatisfactory to all classes of citizens.

The income of the agricultural division is below parity to such an extent that Government subsidies amounting to $1.5 billions per year are necessary to save them from general bankruptcy.

The interests representing industrial production are contending with an average index of 105 (the average for 1939), whereas this index has to be 195 to produce sufficient income to support a parity income for the present population under existing conditions (if national income is to be in accordance with the findings of the National Resources Committee as set forth in their report, entitled "Patterns of Resource Use").

The transportation industry of the United States, represented chiefly by the railroads, is in a general state of financial collapse.

The leading bankers of the country, as well as members of the advisory council of the Federal Reserve System, have expressed unrestrained dissatisfaction with the present financial practices and policies of the Federal Reserve System.

The banks have become supercharged with investments in Government obligations in assuming the responsibility of financing the administration during its course of deficit spending. The banks have had to depart from their primary function of sustaining general business with commercial loans (in order to sustain abnormal Government credit) to the extent that money is scarce and tight in the United States.

Prices are low, and the volume of business is low.

Exporters are shipping goods out of the country at a unit value index of 66 instead of 100. Importers are bringing goods to the United States at a unit value index of 57 instead of 100. The quantity index of imports is 121, a higher quantity index than that of exports and a lower index unit price. The United States has become a dumping ground for foreign commodities and merchandise.

The index of exports is 119 (below that of imports) notwithstanding the abnormal business created by war. Contrary to popular opinion, imports now exceed exports in quantities, but the reduced level of import prices conceals this fact from the general businessman. This condition explains the dumping process now existing and growing in the United States.

Countries of unstable and unsupported money systems are overriding the producers of the United States. The money of the United States is on a fiduciary and confidence basis notwithstanding the fact that the largest stock of gold of all time reposes inactively in the vaults of the country. This gold is being bought at a premium of 69.3 percent, represented by paying $35 per ounce instead of $20.67.

Foreign silver is being purchased at a discount of 72 percent of its monetary value, represented by a purchasing price of 35 cents per ounce, in contrast to its monetary value of $1.2929 per ounce.

The Government has imported, during the 1934–39 period, 11 times more gold than silver in dollars. (See table, p. 4.) The loss suffered by the purchase of gold dollars amounts to four thousand five hundred and fifty-three billions of dollars, and the profit gained by the net importation of silver (average cost at 50 cents per ounce) is one thousand five hundred and eighty-one billions of dollars. One-third of the losses incurred by gold purchases has been compensated by importation of undervalued silver.

Unfortunately, the profit in silver was taken by the Treasury as seigniorage profit which represents an excise tax against the exporters; and, also, unfortunately, the Treasury has not used this silver profit as money. The Treasury has elected to spend borrowed money, gained by the sale of bonds, rather than use national money which has been not only paid for but actually represents a profit at the expense of foreign customers and American exporters. Hence, the reason for the existence in this country of the surplus stocks of wheat, cotton, and all commodities except war materials.

Congress has reached the extreme limit in permitting this country to suffer under a "managed currency" basis, while gold purchases continue at ever-increasing amounts and far in excess of merchandise surplus of exports. Henceforth, the bank should buy all gold entering the United States and deliver it to the Treasury in exchange for either coin or circulatory convertible gold certificates.

All silver purchased by the Treasury should be limited to payments for commodity exports. All silver so acquired should be monetized and paid out by the Treasury to cover Government subsidies.

Unless, and until, both gold and silver are circulated as national money, deficit expenditures must continue to increase as a desperate and futile recourse to compensate shrinking price levels and receding industrial production.

If the currently incoming gold is not to be monetized, the banks, much to their embarrassment, must continue to finance the Government purchases without having free monetary use of the gold. The present practice of increasing Government debt by two billion of dollars for each one billion dollars of gold imported will continue. Bank deposits will become increasingly dormant and interest rates will continue to diminish, until Government bonds will fall below parity.

The banks, after having accepted noncirculatory gold certificates in exchange for deposit credits to the Treasury in compensation for all imported gold purchases, are now forced to redeposit part of these certificates with the Treasury to secure Federal Reserve notes. If the new gold is monetized, the Federal Reserve banks can discontinue their present forced practice of returning gold certificates to Government agencies to obtain Federal Reserve notes.

After having paid the Treasury $16,378,477,000 (Federal Reserve statement, April 24, 1940) to cover the cost of imported gold, the banks have redeposited with the Treasury $5,373,500,000 of the certificates to have issued to them $5,245,738,000 of the Federal Reserve notes.

If this process of returning gold certificates to the Treasury continues, eventually the Government may have all the outstanding certificates back in their possession and will have delivered to the banks inconvertible Federal Reserve notes of an equal value. By this method the Government will have received $16,000,000,000 of bank credit free and will have repossessed its gold certificates by exchanging for them Federal Reserve notes which can assert no claim against the gold.

The Government will then have taxed bank depositors $16,378,477,000, and will have cleared title to gold of the same value, thus making it available for foreign distribution.

The Congress should immediately monetize all incoming gold, deliver gold certificates in exchange for outstanding Federal Reserve notes, monetize all silver now held inactive, and also the newly acquired silver imported as payment for commodity exports.

The attached table entitled "Foreign Commerce—Gold, Silver, and Merchandise," sets forth for the period 1934–39 the values of excess of imports of gold and silver, excess of merchandise exports, gross gold stocks, gold imports not offset by merchandise exports, and net gold reserves.

The net gold reserve represents the difference between gross gold stock and gold imported which has not been offset by corresponding merchandise exports.

It will be noted that at the end of 1939 the gold stock not offset by merchandise exports amounts to $9,084,337,000. This gold may be considered as subject to export upon the presentation of dollar demand by any foreign central bank but not by any American citizen.

The delivery of gold certificates in exchange for outstanding Federal Reserve notes and the monetizing of currently imported gold, together with the monetization of the inactive silver stocks, will cause immediately the stabilization of the banking system. The banking system is now in an advanced stage of transition into a governmental credit controlled bureau under which money and banking are becoming socialized. This rapidly expanding practice is corroding Government credit and therefore is the direct cause of the loss of business confidence. It is high time for Congress to exercise both its authority and responsibility in reestablishing banking and monetary stability.

Foreign commerce, gold, silver, and merchandise

[In revalued dollars]

Year	(1) Gold excess of imports	(2) Silver excess of imports	(3) Merchandise excess of exports	(4) Gold imports not offset by merchandise exports	(5) Column 4, cumulative	(6) Gross gold stock	(7) Column 6 minus column 5, net gold reserve at end of year	(8) Gross gold stock (annual average by months)	(9) Column 4, cumulative: 100 percent past years, 50 percent current years	(10) Column 8 minus column 9, net gold reserve (annual average)
1934	1,133,912,000	86,174,000	477,745,000	742,341,000	742,341,000	8,237,967,000	7,495,626,000	7,568,000,000	371,170,500	7,196,829,500
1935	1,739,019,000	335,730,000	235,389,000	1,839,360,000	2,581,701,000	10,125,175,000	7,543,474,000	9,135,000,000	1,662,001,000	7,472,999,000
1936	1,116,584,000	170,851,000	33,386,000	1,254,049,000	3,835,750,000	11,257,626,000	7,421,876,000	10,621,000,000	3,208,705,000	7,412,295,000
1937	1,585,503,000	79,835,000	265,499,000	1,399,839,000	5,235,589,000	12,760,000,000	7,524,411,000	12,213,000,000	4,535,669,000	7,677,331,000
1938	1,973,569,000	223,449,000	1,134,012,000	1,063,006,000	6,298,595,000	14,511,225,000	8,212,185,000	13,323,000,000	5,767,314,000	7,555,685,000
1939	3,574,151,000	70,677,000	859,086,000	2,785,742,000	9,084,337,000	17,643,450,000	8,559,113,000	16,194,000,000	7,691,912,000	8,502,083,000
Total	11,122,738,000	966,716,000	3,005,117,000	9,084,337,000

The basis of stability is national currency, all of which must be convertible into gold certificates or coin. A national currency with full metallic cover and of sufficient volume to support bank deposits, bank loans, and investments necessary to support a parity income of one hundred billions of dollars, will require a currency gold reserve of ten billions of dollars, commercial loans of fifty billions of dollars, and total deposits of one hundred billions of dollars. It will be the responsibility of the Federal Reserve System to restrain the velocity of total deposit turn-over to an annual rate of 10 which means a velocity of gold reserve turn-over of 100.

During 1929, the year of greatest national activity, the annual velocity of gold reserves was 245. The total bank debits were nine hundred and eighty-two thousand, five hundred and thirty-one millions of dollars, substantially one thousand millions of dollars. The corresponding velocity of turn-over of total deposits and currency was 17.79. The gold reserve should have been ten billions of dollars in 1929 instead of four billions of dollars. Total deposits and currency should have been one hundred billions of dollars, with a turn-over of 10 instead of fifty-five and twenty-one one-hundredths billions of dollars with a turn-over of 17.79.

Total bank deposits today should be one hundred billions of dollars with a controlled rate of turn-over of 10. This rate would produce bank debits of one thousand billions of dollars without inflation and cause a national income quite adequate to support the country at a parity economic level. The rate of annual Government expenditures would then be only 10 percent of national income.

The bankers until recently have believed that inflation springs from excess deposits caused by the usual practice of pyramiding loans and deposits. They now recognize that inflation comes from excessive rates of money turn-over. The bankers realize that excessive rates of turn-over arise as a result of uncontrolled loans voluntarily advanced by banks in general and that henceforth inflation cannot occur with properly supervised loan regulations.

In 1933 bank debits reached the low level since the creation of the Federal Reserve System. That year the velocity of turn-over of gold reserve was 75, 25 percent below the parity of 100. The gold reserve that year should have been eight billions of dollars instead of four billions of dollars.

Bank debits have not been above five hundred billions of dollars since 1931, and the rate of turn-over of gold reserve to bank debits has not been at 100 since 1931.

Bank debits for the years 1936, 1937, 1938, and 1939, respectively, were four hundred and sixty-one and nine-tenths, four hundred and sixty-nine and four-tenths, and four hundred and ten billions of dollars from 40 to 46 percent of the amount to meet the needs of the country. The rate of turn-over of gold reserve to bank debits for 1938 and 1939, respectively, were 50.54 and 49.51. The monetary transactions for 2 years have been only one-half the volume required to sustain the Government (free from deficit expenditures) and afford a parity scale of living.

The chart following entitled "Ratio of Bank Debits to Gold Reserve, Deposits, Loans, Etc.," sets up the bank credit items and their relationships to gold reserves and total bank debits. The average gold reserve turn-over for the 21-year period under consideration was 106.53. The parity average gold turn-over should be 100.

Ten millions of dollars gold reserve, having an annual rate of turn-over of 100, would produce bank debits of one thousand millions of dollars, and thereby secure a national income of one hundred billions of dollars.

Ratio of bank debits to gold-reserve deposits, loans, etc.

[Millions of dollars]

Call dates	Bank debits (1)	Net gold reserve (2)	Total deposits and currency (3)	Adjusted demand deposits (4)	Total loans (5)	Total investments (6)	Public debt (7)	Column 1 divided by— Column 2 (8)	Column 3 (9)	Column 4 (10)	Column 5 (11)	Column 6 (12)	Column 7 (13)	Column 4 divided by column 2 (14)
June 30—
1919	455,293	2,842	35,520	16,980	24,723	11,847	25,482	160.17	12.82	26.81	18.41	38.44	17.87	5.97
1920	483,026	2,581	39,820	19,080	30,839	10,845	24,297	187.12	12.13	25.32	15.66	44.60	19.88	7.39
1921	399,036	3,002	37,840	17,030	28,988	11,012	23,976	132.91	10.54	23.43	13.77	36.24	16.64	5.67
1922	439,363	3,514	39,140	17,990	27,750	12,206	22,964	125.00	11.22	24.42	15.83	36.01	19.13	5.12
1923	463,726	3,773	42,520	18,860	30,398	13,341	22,349	122.89	10.90	24.59	15.26	34.76	20.76	5.00
1924	491,691	4,251	44,620	19,570	31,541	13,639	21,251	115.75	11.02	25.12	15.59	36.07	23.13	4.60
1925	570,064	4,093	48,030	21,150	33,882	14,948	20,516	139.27	11.87	26.95	16.82	38.15	27.79	5.17
1926	607,956	4,165	50,290	21,610	36,176	15,386	19,643	145.91	12.09	28.13	16.80	39.52	30.95	5.19
1927	673,861	4,277	52,480	22,250	37,378	16,373	18,510	157.55	12.84	30.28	13.03	41.16	36.40	5.20
1928	850,522	3,919	54,750	22,340	39,483	17,782	17,604	216.94	15.53	38.07	21.54	47.83	48.32	5.70
1929	982,531	3,995	55,210	22,620	41,513	16,943	16,931	245.93	17.79	43.43	23.65	58.00	58.03	5.66
1930	702,960	4,184	54,530	21,870	40,638	17,471	16,185	168.01	12.89	32.14	17.30	40.24	43.44	5.23
1931	515,320	4,416	52,940	19,910	35,384	19,637	16,801	116.67	9.73	25.88	14.56	26.25	30.67	4.51
1932	347,246	3,952	45,470	15,670	27,834	18,237	19,457	87.85	7.64	22.16	12.48	19.05	17.82	3.96
1933	303,215	4,060	41,720	14,450	22,203	17,872	22,538	74.68	7.27	20.98	13.77	16.96	13.46	3.56

Ratio of bank debits to gold-reserve deposits, loans, etc.—Continued

[Millions of dollars]

Call dates	Bank debits (1)	Net gold reserve (2)	Total deposits and currency (3)	Adjusted demand deposits (4)	Total loans (5)	Total investments (6)	Public debt (7)	Column 1 divided by— Column 2 (8)	Column 3 (9)	Column 4 (10)	Column 5 (11)	Column 6 (12)	Column 7 (13)	Column 4 divided by column 2 (14)
June 30—
1934	356,612	6,770	45,890	16,650	21,278	21,224	27,053	52.67	7.77	21.42	16.76	16.80	13.18	2.46
1935	402,718	6,554	49,970	20,540	20,272	24,145	28,701	61.41	8.06	19.60	19.87	16.68	14.03	3.13
1936	461,889	6,920	55,170	23,860	20,679	27,779	33,545	66.74	8.37	19.36	22.34	16.63	13.77	3.45
1937	469,463	7,778	57,420	25,260	22,514	27,182	36,427	60.33	8.17	18.58	20.85	17.27	12.89	3.25
1938	405,929	8,031	56,740	24,390	21,130	26,252	37,167	50.54	7.15	16.64	19.21	15.46	10.92	3.04
March 1939	410,000	8,270	59,160	26,140	21,154	27,775	39,982	49.57	6.93	15.68	19.38	14.76	10.25	3.16
21-year average	513,925	4,826	48,535	29,322	29,322	18,186	24,353	106.53	10.59	25.20	17.53	28.27	21.10	4.23
100-billion annual income	1,000,000	10,000	100,000	50,000	56,000	25,000	25,000	100.00	10.00	20.00	20.00	40.00	40.00	5.00

Indexes of purchasing power of the import dollar by economic classes, by quarters, 1929–39

[1923–25=100]

Year and quarter	Total imports: Purchasing power of the import dollar	Total imports: Purchasing power = price of silver	Crude materials: Purchasing power of the crude-materials dollar	Crude materials: Purchasing power = price of silver	Crude foodstuffs: Purchasing power of the crude-foodstuffs dollar	Crude foodstuffs: Purchasing power = price of silver	Manufactured foodstuffs: Purchasing power of the manufactured-foodstuffs dollar	Manufactured foodstuffs: Purchasing power = price of silver	Semi-manufactures: Purchasing power of the semi-manufactures dollar	Semi-manufactures: Purchasing power = price of silver	Finished manufactures: Purchasing power of the finished manufactures dollar	Finished manufactures: Purchasing power = price of silver
1929
First quarter	113.6	64.2	125.0	70.7	86.2	48.7	158.7	89.7	103.1	58.3	103.1	58.3
Second quarter	112.4	60.8	123.5	66.8	84.7	45.8	161.3	87.2	99.0	53.5	106.4	57.5
Third quarter	116.3	60.5	128.2	66.7	88.5	46.1	161.3	84.0	102.0	53.1	107.5	56.0
Fourth quarter	116.3	57.4	126.6	62.5	94.3	46.5	153.8	75.9	102.0	50.3	108.7	53.6
1930
First quarter	126.6	54.8	138.9	60.1	111.1	48.1	163.9	70.9	106.4	46.0	114.9	49.7
Second quarter	133.3	52.3	149.3	58.6	112.4	44.1	181.8	71.4	116.3	45.6	119.0	46.7
Third quarter	144.9	51.1	169.5	59.8	111.1	39.2	212.8	75.1	126.6	44.7	117.6	41.5
Fourth quarter	158.7	55.2	196.1	68.2	135.1	47.0	217.4	75.7	133.3	46.4	123.5	43.0
1931
First quarter	166.7	47.4	208.3	59.3	142.9	40.7	212.8	60.6	137.0	39.0	133.3	37.9
Second quarter	175.4	48.6	227.3	63.0	147.1	40.8	217.4	60.3	144.9	40.2	138.9	38.5
Third quarter	185.2	51.8	250.0	70.0	153.8	43.0	208.3	58.3	153.8	43.0	144.9	40.5
Fourth quarter	196.1	60.1	270.3	82.8	166.7	51.1	217.4	66.6	163.9	50.2	149.3	45.7
1932
First quarter	217.4	65.0	285.7	85.5	178.6	53.4	263.2	78.7	178.6	53.4	172.4	51.6
Second quarter	222.2	61.9	322.6	89.8	172.4	48.0	263.2	73.3	185.2	51.6	172.4	48.0
Third quarter	243.9	67.1	384.6	105.8	181.8	50.0	263.2	72.4	196.1	54.0	178.6	49.2
Fourth quarter	243.9	64.1	357.1	93.9	185.2	48.7	250.0	65.8	196.1	51.6	188.7	49.6
1933
Firt quarter	256.4	67.9	370.4	98.0	196.1	51.9	277.8	73.5	204.1	54.0	204.1	54.0
Second quarter	256.4	85.9	384.6	128.8	204.1	68.4	270.3	90.5	196.1	65.7	204.1	68.4
Third quarter	217.4	81.3	294.1	109.9	181.8	68.0	227.3	85.0	163.9	61.3	178.6	66.8
Fourth quarter	208.3	86.6	270.3	112.4	185.2	77.0	227.3	94.5	156.2	64.9	175.4	72.9
1934
First quarter	208.3	93.9	270.3	121.9	188.7	85.1	232.6	104.9	151.5	68.3	175.4	79.1
Second quarter	200.0	89.7	256.4	115.0	166.7	74.8	232.6	104.3	149.3	67.0	175.4	78.7
Third quarter	200.0	96.5	256.4	123.7	166.7	80.4	232.6	112.3	147.1	71.0	175.4	84.6
Fourth quarter	196.1	105.3	256.4	137.6	166.7	89.5	204.1	109.6	151.5	81.3	181.8	97.6
1935
First quarter	200.0	112.0	256.4	143.6	169.5	95.0	208.3	116.7	151.5	84.9	181.8	101.8
Second quarter	200.0	142.7	263.2	187.8	181.8	129.7	204.1	145.6	151.5	108.1	181.8	129.7
Third quarter	196.1	130.7	250.0	166.6	192.3	128.2	196.1	130.7	147.1	98.1	178.6	119.1
Fourth quarter	200.0	125.0	238.1	148.8	196.1	122.5	208.3	130.1	147.1	91.9	181.8	113.6
1936
First quarter	188.7	86.0	222.2	101.3	188.7	86.0	192.3	87.7	147.1	67.0	185.2	84.4
Second quarter	185.2	83.0	217.4	97.5	181.8	81.5	185.2	83.0	149.3	66.9	185.2	83.0
Third quarter	185.2	82.9	212.8	95.2	178.6	79.9	185.2	82.9	147.1	65.8	185.2	82.9
Fourth quarter	181.8	82.1	204.1	92.2	166.7	75.3	188.7	85.3	147.1	66.5	188.7	85.3
1937
First quarter	169.5	76.2	185.2	83.2	153.8	69.1	178.6	80.2	140.8	63.3	185.2	83.2
Second quarter	161.3	72.7	172.4	77.8	144.9	65.3	178.6	80.5	129.9	58.6	178.6	80.5
Third quarter	163.9	73.3	175.4	78.5	144.9	64.8	188.7	84.4	128.2	57.4	175.4	78.5
Fourth quarter	169.5	75.3	185.2	82.3	158.7	70.5	196.1	87.1	125.0	55.6	172.4	76.6

Indexes of purchasing power of the import dollar by economic classes, by quarters, 1929–39—Continued

Year and quarter	Total imports: Purchasing power of the import dollar	Total imports: Purchasing power = price of silver	Crude materials: Purchasing power of the crude-materials dollar	Crude materials: Purchasing power = price of silver	Crude foodstuffs: Purchasing power of the crude-foodstuffs dollar	Crude foodstuffs: Purchasing power = price of silver	Manufactured foodstuffs: Purchasing power of the manufactured-foodstuffs dollar	Manufactured foodstuffs: Purchasing power = price of silver	Semi-manufactures: Purchasing power of the semi-manufactures dollar	Semi-manufactures: Purchasing power = price of silver	Finished manufactures: Purchasing power of the finished manufactures dollar	Finished manufactures: Purchasing power = price of silver
1938
First quarter	178.6	79.4	204.1	90.8	175.4	78.0	200.0	89.0	138.9	61.8	163.9	72.9
Second quarter	181.8	77.7	217.4	92.9	181.8	77.7	204.1	87.3	142.9	61.1	163.9	70.1
Third quarter	188.7	81.9	222.2	96.5	181.8	78.9	222.2	96.5	147.1	63.9	166.7	72.4
Fourth quarter	185.2	79.2	208.3	89.0	185.2	79.2	222.2	95.0	147.1	62.9	169.5	72.5
1939
First quarter	185.2	79.2	208.3	89.0	185.2	79.2	217.4	92.9	144.9	61.9	172.4	73.7
Second quarter	181.8	77.2	200.0	85.0	185.2	78.7	212.8	90.4	144.9	61.6	166.7	70.8
Third quarter	181.8	65.4	192.3	69.1	185.2	66.6	217.4	78.2	147.1	52.9	166.7	59.9
Fourth quarter	175.4	61.6	181.8	63.9	188.6	66.3	208.3	73.2	138.9	48.8	166.7	58.6

Source: Purchasing power indexes computed from official statistics of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

Indexes of purchasing power of the export dollar by economic classes, by quarters, 1929–39

[1923–25=100]

Year and quarter	Total exports: Purchasing power of the export dollar	Total exports: Purchasing power = price of silver	Crude materials: Purchasing power of the crude materials dollar	Crude materials: Purchasing power = price of silver	Crude foodstuffs: Purchasing power of the crude foodstuffs dollar	Crude foodstuffs: Purchasing power = price of silver	Manufactured foodstuffs: Purchasing power of the manufactured foodstuffs dollar	Manufactured foodstuffs: Purchasing power = price of silver	Semi-manufactures: Purchasing power of the semi-manufactures dollar	Semi-manufactures: Purchasing power = price of silver	Finished manufactures: Purchasing power of the finished manufactures dollar	Finished manufactures: Purchasing power = price of silver
1929
First quarter	114.9	65.0	128.2	72.5	109.9	62.1	106.4	60.1	100.0	56.5	113.6	64.2
Second quarter	114.9	62.1	131.6	71.2	122.0	66.0	105.3	56.9	98.0	53.0	111.1	60.1
Third quarter	114.9	59.8	131.6	68.5	111.1	57.8	103.1	53.7	101.0	52.6	113.6	59.1
Fourth quarter	114.9	56.7	133.3	65.8	107.5	53.0	103.1	50.9	101.0	49.8	113.6	56.0
1930
First quarter	117.6	50.9	140.8	60.9	111.1	48.1	107.5	46.5	102.0	44.1	114.9	49.7
Second quarter	123.5	48.5	151.5	59.5	117.6	46.2	111.1	43.6	111.1	43.6	117.6	46.2
Third quarter	131.6	46.4	178.6	63.0	129.9	45.8	117.6	41.5	120.5	42.5	119.0	42.0
Fourth quarter	142.9	49.7	200.0	69.6	138.9	48.3	122.0	42.5	129.9	45.2	126.6	44.1
1931
First quarter	149.3	42.5	208.3	59.3	153.8	43.8	133.3	37.9	135.1	38.4	131.6	37.5
Second quarter	158.7	44.0	222.2	61.6	166.7	46.2	144.9	40.2	137.0	38.0	142.9	39.6

Indexes of purchasing power of the export dollar by economic classes, by quarters, 1929–32—Continued

Year and quarter	Total exports		Crude materials		Crude foodstuffs		Manufactured foodstuffs		Semimanufactures		Finished manufactures
	Purchasing power of the export dollar	Purchasing power = price of silver	Purchasing power of the crude materials dollar	Purchasing power = price of silver	Purchasing power of the crude foodstuffs dollar	Purchasing power = price of silver	Purchasing power of the manufactured foodstuffs dollar	Purchasing power = price of silver	Purchasing power of the semimanufactures dollar	Purchasing power = price of silver	Purchasing power of the finished manufactures dollar	Purchasing power = price of silver
1931
Third quarter	175.4	49.1	263.2	73.6	192.3	53.8	149.3	41.8	147.1	41.2	156.2	43.7
Fourth quarter	188.7	57.8	294.1	90.1	192.3	58.9	158.7	48.6	153.8	47.1	163.9	50.2
1932
First quarter	188.7	56.4	294.1	88.0	204.1	61.0	178.6	53.4	163.9	49.0	158.7	47.5
Second quarter	192.3	53.5	303.0	84.4	200.0	55.7	192.3	53.5	169.5	47.2	161.3	44.9
Third quarter	192.3	52.9	285.7	78.6	217.4	59.8	192.3	52.9	175.4	48.3	158.7	43.7
Fourth quarter	200.0	52.6	303.0	79.7	232.6	61.2	196.1	51.6	175.4	46.1	161.3	42.4
1933
First quarter	208.3	55.1	312.5	82.7	243.9	64.6	212.8	56.3	185.2	49.0	175.4	46.4
Second quarter	200.0	67.0	277.8	93.0	238.1	79.7	192.3	64.4	175.4	58.7	175.4	58.7
Third quarter	178.6	66.8	238.1	89.0	172.4	64.4	172.4	64.4	158.7	59.3	169.5	63.4
Fourth quarter	169.5	70.5	227.3	94.5	185.2	77.0	169.5	70.5	149.3	62.1	156.2	64.9
1934
First quarter	161.3	72.7	204.1	92.0	196.1	88.4	169.5	76.4	144.9	65.3	153.8	69.4
Second quarter	161.3	72.4	200.0	89.7	185.2	83.1	169.5	76.0	138.9	62.3	153.8	69.0
Third quarter	153.8	74.2	185.2	89.4	169.5	81.8	156.2	75.4	142.9	69.0	153.8	74.2
Fourth quarter	153.8	82.6	181.8	97.6	166.7	89.5	144.9	77.8	151.5	81.3	158.7	85.2
1935
First quarter	153.8	86.2	181.8	101.8	178.6	100.1	137.0	76.7	151.5	84.9	153.8	86.2
Second quarter	153.8	109.8	188.7	134.7	163.9	117.0	138.9	99.1	144.9	103.4	153.8	109.8
Third quarter	153.8	102.5	188.7	125.8	169.5	113.0	131.6	87.7	144.9	96.6	151.5	101.0
Fourth quarter	156.2	97.6	196.1	122.5	175.4	109.6	135.1	84.4	140.8	88.0	153.8	96.1
1936
First quarter	151.5	69.1	188.7	86.0	178.6	81.4	137.0	62.4	138.9	63.3	151.5	69.1
Second quarter	153.8	69.0	188.7	84.6	175.4	78.6	138.9	62.3	138.9	62.3	153.8	69.0
Third quarter	149.3	66.8	185.2	82.9	153.8	68.8	133.3	59.7	137.0	61.3	151.5	67.8
Fourth quarter	147.1	66.5	181.8	82.1	158.7	71.7	126.6	57.2	133.3	60.2	149.3	67.5
1937
First quarter	142.9	64.2	175.4	78.8	144.9	65.1	126.6	56.9	119.0	53.5	149.3	67.1
Second quarter	137.0	61.8	169.5	76.4	131.6	59.4	123.5	55.7	109.9	49.6	147.1	66.3
Third quarter	138.9	62.2	181.8	81.4	140.8	63.0	122.0	54.6	109.9	49.2	142.9	63.9
Fourth quarter	147.1	65.4	212.8	94.6	166.7	74.1	129.9	57.7	116.3	51.7	140.8	62.6
1938
First quarter	147.1	65.4	212.8	94.7	169.5	75.4	138.9	61.8	120.5	53.6	144.9	64.5
Second quarter	153.8	65.7	208.3	89.0	185.2	79.2	144.9	61.9	131.6	56.3	147.1	62.9
Third quarter	156.2	67.8	212.8	92.9	204.1	88.6	147.1	63.9	133.3	57.9	149.3	64.8
Fourth quarter	156.2	66.8	217.4	92.9	227.3	97.2	153.8	65.7	129.9	55.5	149.3	63.8
1939
First quarter	158.7	67.8	222.2	95.0	232.6	99.4	161.3	69.0	131.6	56.3	151.5	64.8
Second quarter	161.3	68.5	222.2	94.4	238.1	101.1	163.9	69.6	135.1	57.4	151.5	64.4
Third quarter	158.7	57.1	217.4	78.2	232.6	83.6	163.9	58.9	133.3	47.9	149.3	53.7
Fourth quarter	151.5	53.2	212.8	74.8	204.1	71.7	144.9	50.9	117.6	41.3	142.9	50.2

Source: Purchasing power indexes computed from official statistics of the U. S. Department of Commerce.
U. S. Tariff Commission, March 1940.

DISCUSSION OF THE HISTORY OF SILVER AND SILVER LEGISLATION

There are no conscientious objectors to the utilization of silver as money.

There are two general classes of people in the United States who are opposed to using silver as money both within the country and internationally. One class of silver objectors wish silver to be reduced to an industrial metal for commercial purposes only. These people deliberately attempt to destroy the monetary value of one of the world's traditional monetary metals. They feel no responsibility whatever as to the resulting distress and impoverishment of a large part of the world's population.

For each and every cent they reduce the price of an ounce of silver a loss is caused in the bullion value of the monetary silver of $50,000,000, and for silver bullion not monetized another $50,000,000. There are many new uses for silver. In 1939 there were 35,000,000 ounces of silver consumed in the United States for purposes other than coinage. The saving to industry by reducing this commercially used silver 1 cent per ounce would be $350,000. The greatest loss in diverting silver from monetary to commercial uses occurs as a result of contracting the world's metallic money supply. The proposition of reducing the price of silver to a fractional part of its monetary value for the selfish purpose of increasing commercial consumption is not worthy of debate.

The other group consists of the "managed currency" advocates, who, like the first class of objectors, wish to destroy silver as a monetary metal. They are a more dangerous group than the first, because they wish also to destroy gold as money except for monetary settlements between nations. There have been so many failures of monetary structures among the important nations of the world due to the application of managed-currency principles that sound-thinking people should banish from their minds all consideration of the contraction of gold and silver. The need for both metals for monetary purposes has been tremendously enlarged because of the many monetary failures in the past 20 years and because of the burdens placed upon the monetary metals by increased national debt throughout the world due to war.

The second group consists of the contemporary economists who have been taught to deprecate silver as a competitive money with gold. These economists were educated in colleges and universities which largely were endowed by individuals who had been opposed to silver since the passage of the first National Bank Act on June 3, 1864. These economists now have decided that both gold and silver are unnecessary as money under their plans of managing everybody's money.

Senator John Sherman first planned to abolish silver as primary money, in cooperation with Samuel G. Ruggles, United States Commissioner to the Paris Exposition in 1867; at which time Senator Sherman also collaborated with Prime Minister Gladstone of England. Senator Sherman and Mr. Ruggles attempted to interest the French Government—and all other European countries—in establishing an international gold-monetary system under which silver was to have been reduced to subsidiary money. The plan was rejected by the United States Congress when submitted for their consideration.

The next attack on silver was dropping the silver dollar from the list of American coins in the act of February 12, 1873, section 15:

"That the silver coins of the United States shall be a trade dollar, a half dollar or 50-cent piece, a quarter dollar or 25-cent piece, a dime or 10-cent piece; and the weight of the trade dollar shall be 420 grains troy, the weight of the half dollar shall be 12 grams and one-half of a gram; the quarter dollar and the dime shall be, respectively, one-half and one-fifth of the weight of the said half dollar; and said coins shall be legal tender at their nominal value for any amount not exceeding $5 in any one payment."

It will be noted that silver was demonetized by the unfortunate and questionable method of failing to give it mention as a silver coin of legal-tender value.

This method of demonetizing silver was accomplished at the final Senate and House conferences on the bill, in spite of the fact that neither the House nor the Senate bills, which were presented to conference report, had any provision whatsoever contemplaing the dropping of the standard silver dollar and thereby demonetizing silver.

President Grant did not realize that silver had been demonetized by the act of February 12, 1873. The members of the Senate and Congress did not realize that silver had been demonetized until after the act of 1873 had been incorporated into the Revised Statutes of 1874.

As a matter of fact, it was not until the latter part of 1875, when the mints of the Latin Unions were closed to the coinage of silver, that American demonetization was realized. This realization lead to an intense interest in the United States during 1876 when, for the first time, the people realized that silver had been demonetized without one word of publicity about the matter either during the time the bill was pending in Congress, or after it had become an act. The newspaper literature of the time did not reveal one single announcement of the demonetization of silver for a period of 2 years following the passage of the act in 1873. Then, in 1876, the leading journals of the country demanded the restoration of the silver dollar to the place it occupied as a legal-tender coin previous to 1873.

Section 254 (March 3, 1863—5) of the Revised Statutes of the United States of 1874 contains the following opening sentence:

"The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to receive deposits of gold, coin, and bullion, with the Treasurer or any Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in sums not less than $20, and to issue certificates therefore in denominations of not less than $20 each, corresponding with the denominations of the United States notes. * * *."

"The coin and silver bullion deposit for or representing the certificates of deposits shall be retained in the Treasury for the payment of same on demand. * * *."

It will be noted that silver is not mentioned in this section.

Section 3513 of the Revised Statutes of 1874 confirmed the silent dropping of the standard silver dollar in section 15 of the act of February 12, 1873, as follows:

Section 3513 (1873—15):

"The silver coins of the United States shall be a trade dollar, a half dollar or a 50-cent piece, a quarter dollar or a 25-cent piece, a dime or 10-cent piece; and the weight of the trade dollar shall be 420 grains troy, the weight of the half dollar shall be 12 grammes and a one-half of a gramme; the quarter dollar and the dime shall be, respectively, one-half and one-fifth of the weight of said half dollar."

The trade dollars were intended for export use only and had a legal tender at their nominal values for any amount not exceeding $5 in any one payment. The trade dollars could not be paid out at the mints in exchange for gold coins at par on the same basis as all other silver coins which could be secured in sums not less than $100 in exchange for gold.

The following is the first sentence from section 3527 (1873—28) of Revised Statutes:

"Silver coins other than the trade dollar shall be paid out at the several mints and at the assay office in New York City in exchange for gold coins at par, in sums not less than $100. * * *."

"But for 2 years after the 12th day of February, 1873, silver coins shall be paid at the mint in Philadelphia, in the assay office at New York City, for silver bullion purchased for coinage, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Director of the Mint and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury."

It will be noted by this provision that the Mint would no longer accept silver for coinage. The Secretary of the Treasury authorized the purchase of same at the market price only, as, if, and when the Treasury wanted silver bullion.

The tremendous clamor for the restoration of the silver dollar, conducted by the press of the United States during 1876, led Senator Sherman, of Ohio, to remark in a speech made at Marietta, Ohio, August 12, 1876, reported by the Cincinnati Gazette of August 14, 1876, as follows:

"I do not now, fellow citizens, enter fully upon the great question of the restoration of the old silver dollar, as the money of account, for it has not yet assumed a party aspect. I have given the subject the most careful consideration, and was the first to propose the recoining of the old silver dollar."

In the same speech, Senator Sherman is quoted as follows:

"I was a member of the conference committee of the two Houses on the silver bill. I am not at liberty to state what occurred except as shown by the action of the two Houses. Both Houses were in favor of issuing the old dollar—the dollar in legal existence since 1792, containing 412.8 grains and only demonetized in 1873, when it was worth 2 percent more than the gold dollar. It was then, and for 20 years had been, only issued for export and was not circulating; still, it was a legal standard, as well as gold; always had been, and it was the right of any debtor to pay in silver dollars as well as gold dollars. It was his legal option.

"The relative value of the two metals had often varied before, and still the right remained to the debtor to pay in either dollar, and, therefore, in a cheaper dollar. The mere disuse of the coinage of the silver dollar could not, and ought not, to affect preexisting contracts. And now, when all our domestic contracts have been based upon depreciated paper money, made a legal tender for all debts, public and private, except customs and duties and interest of the public debt, it would seem not only legal, but right, in the broadest sense of the term, that we should avail ourselves of the rapid and remarkable fall of silver bullion to recoin the old silver coins, including the old silver dollar, the oldest of our coins, and with them pay our depreciated notes, and thus restore the old coin standard."

The Senator was talking to his home constituents in Ohio. Previously, he had taken positions against silver in his report on a bill in 1868, entitled "A Bill in Relation to the Coinage of Gold and Silver." He said:

"The single standard of gold as an American idea, yielded reluctantly by France and other countries, where silver is the first standard of value."

This report will be found in the Senate Report of Committee, No. 117, Fortieth Congress, second session, page 4.

The business conditions in the United States in February 1873, when silver was demonetized, were at such a low ebb that it will be positive proof to legislators and businessmen of the year 1940, that, in 1873, the legislators were completely ignorant of the fact of silver demonetization as part of the act of 1873. Certainly no sane person would have had anything to do with the demonetization either of gold or silver under the then existing circumstances of complete noncirculation of either metal. The total monetary stock of silver in 1873 amounted to 44 cents per person, not one cent of which was in circulation. The total monetary stock of gold in 1873 was $3.24 per person, not one cent of which was in circulation.

The United States, fortunately, had become a most important producer of both gold and silver. In 1848, gold was discovered in California, and in that year $10,000,000 was produced. In 1849, $40,000,000 was produced, and by the end of 1872, $1,204,750,000 of gold had been produced which represented $29 per person (in contrast to circulation of $3.24).

The first silver mines in the United States, at Virginia City, Nev., were discovered in 1851, and the total production of silver by the end of 1872 was $157,750,000, which amounted to $3.80 per person (in contrast to circulation of 44 cents).

The United States did not separate the export figures of gold and silver until 1864. For the period 1864–72, the United States had an excess of export of gold amounting to $434,113,000, which amounted to $10.38 per person.

The excess of silver exports for the period 1864–72 amounted to $122,107,000, or $2.93 per person.

The United States had an unfavorable balance of merchandise trade since 1849, with three exceptions, to wit, 1858, when the favorable balance of merchandise trade was $8,672,000, 1862, when the favorable balance of merchandise trade was $1,313,000, and 1866, when the favorable balance of merchandise trade was $85,953,000. The unfavorable balance of merchandise trade for the period 1848–72 was $1,259,635,000, or $30.21 per person.

During this period there was an excess of exports of gold and silver amounting to $1,011,673,000, equal to $24.16 per person.

In 1873, the purchasing power of the gold and silver dollars was equal, at $1.25, so that the general wholesale price level of the day was at 80 (parity being the 1926 level at 100).

The most severe panic of the United States occurred in 1873 because of monetary shortage in the United States, and the contraction of the high price levels of the Civil War period.

In 1873, the United States was dependent upon the circulation of greenbacks and the so-called "shinplasters" (paper fractional currency). In 1873, greenbacks had a gold value of about 90 cents, which prevailed throughout the year 1874, and a value of about 87 cents during 1875.

During the period 1867–76, it was the habit of the Treasury Department to sell gold at auction, accepting greenbacks in payment, which were recirculated by the Treasury, and recycled by the bankers and bullion brokers in payment for additional gold purchases. The selling of gold to the highest bidder by the Treasury Department was a device to circumvent the inconvertibility of greenbacks. With neither gold nor silver in circulation in the United States, the Treasury Department sold five hundred and fourteen and three-tenths millions of dollars of gold during the period 1867–76, during which period the excess of exports of gold was five hundred and sixty-one and four-tenths millions of dollars. The gold production in the United States for that period was four hundred and twenty-one and six-tenths millions of dollars. Eighteen hundred and seventy-three—the year in which silver was demonetized—was the middle of the 10-year period when the country was being stripped of its total gold production with no reserves withheld to cover greenbacks or to build up a metallic currency. The accumulated silver production for that period was two hundred and forty-five and five-tenths millions of dollars of which one hundred and eighty-six and four-tenths millions of dollars was exported regardless of the desperate need for same to enhance the monetary stock.

Both the Government and the people of the United States were hopelessly in debt and their metallic currency was only a fraction of all other countries, including India. On the other hand, the country had become the most prolific producer of both gold and silver, practically all of which was being exported because of the brokerage and commission profits available to the New York bullion brokers. The principal exporters were the various banks of New York, who represented the central banks of Europe.

The first turn toward prosperity came in 1875 as a result of the act of January 14, 1875, entitled "An act to provide for the resumption of specie payments," but the prosperity was not due primarily to the future possibilities of redeeming greenbacks with gold. The immediate prosperity was due to the enacting clause of this act:

"Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and required, as rapidly as practicable, to cause to be coined, at the mints of the United States, silver coins of the denominations of 10, 25, and 50 cents, of standard value, and to issue them in redemption of an equal number and amount of fractional currency of similar denominations, or, at his discretion, immediately issue such silver coins through the mints, the subtreasuries, public depositaries, and post offices of the United States; and upon such issue is hereby authorized and required to redeem an equal amount of such fractional currency until the whole amount of such fractional currency outstanding shall be redeemed * * *."

This act resumed the redemption of greenbacks for the bankers, with certain limitations, immediately upon its enactment, but the public waited 4 years longer for the period of resumption.

The subsequent act of May 31, 1878, forbade further retirement of legal-tender notes and fixed the amount then outstanding at $346,681,016. This repeal of the right of banks to retire greenbacks was in response to objections of the people of the United States to contraction of national currency.

The act of March 3, 1875, authorized the coinage of a 20-cent silver piece of 5 grams weight, legal tender for an amount not exceeding $5.

The act of April 17, 1876, specifically directed the Secretary of the Treasury to issue silver coin in place of fractional currency, under section 2, as follows:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue silver coins of the United States of the denominations of 10, 20, 25, and 50 cents of standard value in redemption of an equal amount of fractional currency, whether the same be now in the Treasury waiting redemption or whenever it may be presented for redemption; and the Secretary of the Treasury may, under regulations of the Treasury Department, provide for such redemption and issue by substitution at the regular subtreasuries and public depositaries of the United States until the whole amount of fractional currency outstanding shall be redeemed. And the fractional currency redeemed under this act shall be held to be part of the sinking fund provided for by existing law at interest to be computed thereon as in the case of bonds redeemed under the act relating to the sinking fund."

The joint resolution of July 22, 1876, provided:

"For the issue of silver coin at any time in the Treasury to an amount not exceeding $10,000,000 in exchange for an equal amount of legal-tender notes; and the notes so received in exchange shall be kept as a special fund, separate and apart from all other money in the Treasury, and be reissued only upon retirement and destruction of a like amount of fractional currency received at the Treasury in payment of duties to the United States; and said fractional currency, when so substituted, shall be destroyed and held as part of the sinking fund, as provided in the act approved April 17, 1876."

It is most interesting to note that these legal-tender notes redeemed in the above-described act were reissued in payment of arrearages of pensions under section 3 of the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of June 21, 1879. In effect, $10,000,000 silver money was coined and paid out to cover pension arrearages.

The joint resolution of July 22, 1876, further fortified the earlier legislation as to the replacement of "shinplasters" with silver coin as provided in section 3, as follows:

"That in addition to the amount of subsidiary coin authorized by law to be issued in redemption of the fractional currency, it shall be lawful to manufacture at the several mints, and issue through the Treasury and its several offices, such coin to an amount that, including the amount of subsidiary coin and all fractional currency outstanding, which, in the aggregate, not exceed at any time $50,000,000."

The public have not realized that, immediately after demonetization of silver in 1873, these several acts mentioned providing for the coinage and circulation of silver were the direct means of ending the panic of 1873 and starting the country toward a return to substantial recovery.

The benefits of this minor silver legislation had become so apparent that a country-wide demand exerted itself for the remonetization of silver which culminated in the act of February 28, 1878, known as the Bland-Allison Act.

The Bland-Allison Act of February 28, 1878, was the culmination of silver legislation. On July 17, 1876, Mr. W. D. Kelley introduced in the House a bill to coin the standard silver dollar and to restore its legal-tender character. This was the original of the final Bland-Allison Act.

Mr. Bland introduced House bill 3635 July 25, 1876, providing for the issuance of bullion certificates. This bill was reported from the Committee on Mines and Mining December 12, 1876, sections 1 and 4, as follows:

Section 1:

"That coin notes of the denomination of $50, and multiples thereof up to $10,000, may, in the mode hereinafter provided, be paid by the several mints and assay offices * * * for the net value of gold and silver bullion deposited thereat; and of the bullion thus received not less than 75 percent in coin or fine bars shall at all times be kept on hand for redemption of the coin notes, gold for gold and silver for silver. The gold deposited shall be computed at its coining value and silver at the rate of 412.8 grains standard silver to the dollar."

Section 4:

"That the coin notes issued under the provisions of this act shall be receivable without limit for all dues to the United States; and the coin mentioned in this act shall be legal tender for all debts of the United States, public and private, not specified to be paid in gold coin."

Mr. Bland also proposed a substitute bill, H. R. 4189, which was the same as the Kelley bill of the former session. The enacting clause follows:

"Be it enacted, etc., That there shall be from time to time coined at the mints of the United States silver dollars of the weight of 412½ grains standard silver to the dollar, as provided for in the act of January 18, 1837, and that said dollar shall be a legal tender for all debts, public and private, except where payment of gold coin is required by law."

The substitute bill was passed on December 13, 1876, by a vote of 167 to 53. The bill was not acted upon by the Senate that session. Mr. Bland reintroduced his bill, H. R. 1093, and, under a suspension of rules, was passed without debate November 5, 1877, by a vote of 163 to 34. The bill as passed and sent to the House was as follows:

"Be it enacted, etc., That there shall be coined at the several mints of the United States silver dollars of the weight of 412½ grains troy of standard silver, as provided in the act of January 18, 1937, on which shall be the devices and superscriptions provided by said act; which coins, together with all silver dollars heretofore coined by the United States of like weight and fineness, shall be a legal tender, at their nominal value, for all debts and dues, public and private, except where otherwise provided by contract; and any owner of silver bullion may deposit the same at any United States coinage mint or assay office to be coined into such dollars, for his benefit, upon the same terms and conditions as gold bullion is deposited for coinage under existing laws.

"SEC. 2. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed."

The bill reached the Senate on December 6, 1877, and was made the special order for December 11, 1877. The bill was in charge of Mr. Allison of the Committee on Finance, who reported the bill with an amendment which eliminated from the House bill the provision of free coinage. The amendment was adopted by a vote of 49 to 22 with Senate silver advocates Beck, Davis of Illinois, Garland, Jones of Nevada, Thurman, and Voorhees.

Another amendment was offered by Mr. Booth of California, as follows:

SEC. 3. "That any holder of the coin authorized by this act may deposit same with the Treasurer or any Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in sums not less than $10, and receive therefor certificates of not less than $10 each, corresponding with the denominations of the United States notes. The coins deposited for, or representing, the certificates shall be retained in the Treasury for the payment of the same on demand. Said certificates shall be receivable for customs, taxes, and all public dues, and, when so received, may be reissued."

This amendment was adopted by a vote of 49 to 15, and the whole bill as amended passed the Senate February 15, 1878, by a vote of 48 to 21. The House passed the bill, as amended by the Senate, by a vote of 203 to 72, February 21, 1878. President Hayes vetoed the bill on the 28th, but it was promptly passed over the veto on the same day by the House with a vote of 196 to 72, and by the Senate with a vote of 46 to 19.

Among the Republicans voting the override of the veto were Representatives Butler, Charles Foster, William McKinley, and Kelley; and Senators Allison, Matthews, and Windom (later Secretary of the Treasury in 1881). Supporting Hayes were Representatives Hale, Reed, Garfield, and Frye; and Senators Blaine, Conkling, Dawes, Hoar, and Morrill of Vermont.

The bill, as it became law on February 28, 1878, passed each House by a two-third vote over the veto of the President, was as follows:

"Act of February 28, 1878: An act to authorize the coinage of the standard silver dollar and to restore its legal-tender character

"Be it enacted, etc., That there shall be coined, at the several mints of the United States, silver dollars of the weight of four hundred and twelve and a half grains troy of standard silver, as provided in the act of January 18, 1837, on which shall be the devices and superscriptions provided by said act; which coins, together with all silver dollars heretofore coined by the United States, of like weight and fineness, shall be a legal tender at their nominal value, for all debts and dues, public and private, except where otherwise expressly stipulated in the contract. And the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase, from time to time, silver bullion, at the market price thereof, not less than $2,000,000 worth per month, nor more than $4,000,000 worth per month, and cause the same to be coined monthly, as fast as so purchased, into such dollars; and a sum sufficient to carry out the foregoing provision of this act is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. And any gain or seigniorage arising from this coinage shall be accounted for and paid into the Treasury, as provided, under existing laws relative to the subsidiary coinage: Provided, That the amount of money at any one time invested in such silver bullion, exclusive of such resulting coin, shall not exceed $5,000,000: And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to authorize the payment in silver of certificates of deposit issued under the provisions of section 254 of the Revised Statutes.

"SEC. 2. That immediately after the passage of this act, the President shall invite the governments of the countries composing the Latin Union, so-called, and of such other European nations as he may deem advisable, to join the United States in a conference to adopt a common ratio between gold and silver, for the purpose of establishing, internationally, the use of bimetallic money, and securing fixity of relative value between those metals; at such time, within 6 months, as may be mutually agreed upon by the executives of the governments joining in the same, whenever the governments so invited, or any three of them, shall have signified their willingness to unite in the same.

"The President shall, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint three Commissioners, who shall attend such conference on behalf of the United States, and shall report the doings thereof to the President, who shall transmit the same to Congress.

"Said Commissioners shall each receive the sum of $2,500 and their reasonable expenses, to be approved by the Secretary of State; and the amount necessary to pay such compensation and expenses is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

"SEC. 3. That any holder of the coin authorized by this act may deposit same with the Treasurer or any Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in sums not less than $10, and receive therefor certificates, of not less than $10 each, corresponding with the denominations of the United States notes. The coin deposited for or representing the certificates shall be retained in the Treasury for the payment of the same on demand. Said certificates shall be receivable for customs, taxes, and all public dues, and when so received may be reissued.

"SEC. 4. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed."

The defect in this bill was the failure to provide for a coinage at least equal to the annual production of silver in the United States, and the failure to authorize one-, two-, and five-dollar silver certificates which later proved to be a great embarrassment in the circulation of the silver certificates, but was corrected by the act of August 4, 1886, "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887, and for other purposes":

"Be it enacted, etc., * * * And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and required to issue silver certificates in denominations of one, two, and five dollars, and the silver certificates herein authorized shall be receivable, redeemable, and payable in like manner and for like purposes as is provided for silver certificates by the act of February 28, 1878, entitled 'An act to authorize the coinage of the standard silver dollar, and to restore its legal-tender character,' and denominations of one, two, and five dollars may be issued in lieu of silver certificates of larger denominations in the Treasury or in exchange therefor upon presentation by the holders, and to that extent said certificates of larger denominations shall be concealed and destroyed. * * *

"Transportation of silver coin: For transportation of silver coin, including fractional silver coin, by registered mail or otherwise, $75,000; and in expending this sum the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to transport from the Treasury or subtreasuries, free of charge, silver coin when so requested to do so: Provided, That an equal amount of coin or currency shall have been deposited in the Treasury or such subtreasuries by the applicant or applicants. And the Secretary of the Treasury shall report to Congress the cost arising under this appropriation * * *."

(Similar provisions are contained in succeeding sundry civil appropriation laws.)

It will be noted that the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized and directed to purchase silver bullion at the market price, not less than $2,000,000 worth per month, nor more than $4,000,000 worth per month; but none of the Secretaries of the Treasury, who had charge of the administration of this bill, ever exceeded the minimum amount; therefore, there was a large surplus of silver exported from the country during the life of the act, at decreasing prices which were fixed in London. The actual amount of silver coined under this act, was as follows:

AMOUNT, COST, AND AVERAGE PRICE OF SILVER PURCHASED UNDER THE ACT OF FEB. 28, 1878, AND COINAGE OF SILVER DOLLARS THEREFROM

1878–91:
Fine ounces	$291,272,018.56
Cost	308,279,260.71
Average price per fine ounce	1.0583
Coinage of silver dollars	378,166,793.00

The average rate of coinage for this period was about $2,200,000 per month. The United States production of silver for the 1878–91 period was 569,896,300 ounces, having a value of $598,526,900, and the excess of exports for the same period amounted to 130,000,000 ounces, having a value of $137,914,347.

The seigniorage profit to the Government for the silver bought under the Bland-Allison Act amounted to $56,939,730.87.

The clearing houses of the United States offered obstacles to the success of the operation of the Bland-Allison Act by refusing to accept silver in settlements.

Rules printed in the Comptroller's report of 1878 disclosed that the clearing houses prohibited the payment of bills (of more than $10 change) in silver or silver certificates.

In the act of August 7, 1882, Congress enacted a provision that no national bank could be a member of a clearing house at which silver certificates were not receivable in payment of balances.

"But the practice continued as before; the Congress could compel a national bank to receive silver, but not to offer it" (The Silver Situation in the United States—Taussig).

Section 12 of this act follows:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to receive deposits of gold coin with the Treasurer or Assistant Treasurers of the United States, in sums not less than $20, and to issue certificates therefor in denominations of not less than $20 each, corresponding with the denominations of United States notes. The coin deposited for or representing the certificates of deposits shall be retained in the Treasury for the payment of the same on demand. Said certificates shall be receivable for customs, taxes, and all public duties, and when so received may be reissued; and such certificates, as also silver certificates, when held by any national banking association, shall be counted as part of its lawful reserve; and no national banking association shall be a member of any clearing house in which such certificates shall not be receivable in the settlement of clearing-house balances: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall suspend the issue of such gold certificates whenever the amount of gold coin and gold bullion in the Treasury reserved for the redemption of United States notes falls below $100,000,000; and the provisions of section 5207 of the Revised Statutes shall be applicable to the certificates herein authorized and directed to be issued."

The monetary stock of the United States practically doubled during the period 1873–78. Silver increased from 44 cents per person to $1.72, and gold increased from $2.24 to $4.48, making a total monetary stock of $6.20 per capita. Tremendous benefits were felt immediately from silver coinage under the Bland-Allison Act. There was a constant increase in silver money, which amounted to $8.09 at the end of 1891. Gold had increased to $10.13, making a total of $18.22 per capita, gold and silver, a 300-percent increase during the life of the Bland-Allison Act.

The per capita debt dropped from $51.62 to $15.37, for the period 1873–78; and to $15.70 in 1891. This was slightly in excess of $1,000,000,000 debt reduction, and at the time was the most rapid rate of debt reduction of this or of any other country in the world.

Individual bank deposits increased from $620,000,000 in 1878 to $1,560,000,000 in 1890. Loans and discounts increased from $840,000,000 in 1878 to $1,990,000,000 in 1890. Bank capital, surpluses, and profits increased from $620,000,000 in 1878 to $96,000,000 in 1890. During the period 1878–91, the excess of gold import was $86,144,000, but the excess of merchandise export was $1,350,357,000.

During this period (1878–91) the foreign countries of Europe and Asia were clamoring for American silver, and the United States dumped the metal at constantly falling prices, which were fixed by the London brokers. The excess of export of silver during 1878–91 had a commercial value of $137,915,000, and a coinage value of $168,478,000. These shipments afforded a seigniorage profit to the foreign buyers of $30,563,000. If this silver had been coined in the United States, the monetary stock would have been increased $2.60 per person, which increase the country very much needed.

The selling of this uncoined silver on the foreign markets at prices controlled outside of the United States caused its world price to drop from $1.15 per ounce in 1878 to 99 cents during 1891.

Because of failure to utilize full American production and the fact that the world price was permitted by the United States Treasury to be fixed in London at the buyers' prices, the bankers were dissatisfied with the Bland-Allison Act because the country was building up a national currency whereas the banks at the time, and ever since, have followed the policy of building credit-bank currencies at the expense of national currency.

On July 15, 1890, the Bland-Allison Act was superseded by the Sherman Act, which contained a clause authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase monthly four and five-tenths million ounces of silver bullion to be paid for with Treasury notes redeemable in coin (gold or silver). But a "joker" was introduced which limited actual coinage of silver to $2 per month for a limited period of less than 1 year, terminating July 1, 1891. After that date, coinage was to be limited to the amount required to redeem notes.

Sherman's objective in changing from the Bland-Allison to the Sherman Act was to introduce Treasury notes into circulation, representing the silver purchased, instead of issuing silver certificates.

The silver certificates were not legal tender, and not convertible, and not redeemable in gold. The greenbacks were not redeemable in gold; but the Treasury notes of 1890, as defined by the Sherman Act, were legal tender, legal bank reserves, and redeemable in either gold or silver Therefore, the Treasury notes offered a means of siphoning gold out of the Treasury without the retirement of the notes. These notes were recirculated by the Treasury, and then used again to draw gold from the Treasury.

There was a profitable market for gold in Europe during the period; therefore, the yellow metal was shipped by the bullion brokers for profit even when the balance of merchandise shipments was much in favor of the United States. Europe needed gold so badly during their panic that American securities and stocks were liquidated at buyers' prices in order to secure for export the United States gold production, as well as the gold in the Treasury.

The concession to the silver advocates, in raising the silver purchases to four and five-tenths million ounces per month instead of a minimum of $2,000,000 per month, made the change from the Bland-Allison Act to the Sherman Act agreeable because the broad provisions of the latter act, in respect to the Treasury notes, was not realized by them. Neither did they realize that the Secretaries of the Treasury would treat these Treasury notes as redeemable in gold at the election of their owners.

The withdrawal of gold from the Treasury by redeeming Treasury certificates resulted in an accumulation of silver in the Treasury against which no currency was in circulation. This was intended to develop a situation which would cause the repeal of the Sherman Act because of excessive nonactive stocks of silver constantly growing in the Treasury.

The increase in the monetary stock of the United States, which had made such splendid headway under the Bland-Allison Act, was interrupted. The monetary silver stock per capita increased only from $8.09 in 1891, to $9.23 in 1894, after which there was a rapid reduction of silver money to the low point of $4.96 per capita in 1920.

The gold circulation per capita, which was $10.13 in 1891, was reduced to $9.28 in 1894. This was due to gold withdrawals against delivery of Treasury notes, which were issued against silver purchases. The excess of exports of gold for the 1891–94 period was $160,662,000, and the excess of exports of silver for the same period was $72,428,000. The excess of merchandise exports for the period 1891–94 was $460,851,000.

Sherman's idea in reducing both gold and silver monetary stocks was to create a vacuum for national-bank notes. This has always been and continues to be the objective of both the central and large commercial bankers.

The silver purchased under the Sherman Act was not adding to the monetary stock, because the Treasury notes were being cashed for gold and the gold shipped abroad. Silver bullion was being shipped in tremendous quantities.

On March 31, 1940, there was $5,224,000,000 of Federal Reserve notes outside the Treasury and $4,896,000,000 in circulation, representing a $37.12 per capita in contrast to silver certificates in circulation amounting to $11.43 per capita, and no gold in circulation at all.

The Baring Bros. bank failure in London was the direct cause of the panic of 1890, both in Europe and America. The Baring failure was unexpected, but it dovetailed with the premeditated contraction of bank loans in the United States, which was inaugurated as a means of repealing the silver-purchase clause of the Sherman Act.

Gold and silver were withdrawn from the United States by Europe in enormous amounts to counteract the broad panic which developed from the Baring failure, but the gold and silver withdrawals in the United States resulted in stock-exchange panics and a general depression in business throughout the United States, which was the principal cause of the panic of 1893.

During the fiscal-year period of 1891–94, the Treasury Department purchased, under the Sherman Act, 168,674,682.13 ounces of silver at a cost of $155,931,002.25, the average price per fine ounce being 92.44 cents.

During this same period, Treasury notes of 1890 were issued in the amount of $155,931,002. The silver dollars coined during that period amounted to only $36,000,000, and by the end of 1898 the total silver coinage under the Sherman Act was only $72,572,857.

The amount of Treasury notes redeemed in silver and canceled for the period 1891–94 was only $3,346,585, leaving $152,584,417 outstanding at the end of 1894, which were being used to siphon gold from the Treasury with the Treasury notes being reissued. At the end of 1898, $49,582,922 of Treasury notes had been redeemed in silver and canceled, and $106,384,280 in Treasury notes were outstanding, almost entirely held as bank reserves, because they were exchangeable for gold.

President Cleveland kept a campaign promise by calling a special session of Congress for August 7, 1893, to repeal the purchase clause of the act of 1890. The act passed the House by a vote of 239 to 108. Public sentiment had been created against silver because of false charges that silver money had caused the panic. This was ridiculous in view of the fact that both gold and silver were being exported at an enormous rate by the dumping of securities from Europe to meet the panic existing abroad with which the United States had nothing to do. On October 30 the bill passed the Senate by a vote of 42 to 32.

November 1, 1893, the bill became a law. The silver-purchase clause of the Sherman Act was repealed. It is curious to note the tremendous utilization and coinage of silver which followed after the repeal of the purchase clause of the Sherman Act.

In 1893 the total stock of silver coin and bullion was $615,716,000, amounting to $9.28 per capita. In the year 1917 the total silver coin and bullion was $766,545,000, representing only $7.36 per capita. In 1920, owing to the shipment of 208,000,000 ounces of silver to India, under the Pittman Act, the silver money stock fell from $527,712,000, representing $4.96 per capita. The Pittman Act silver was replaced by coinage during the period 1921–27.

As final evidence that silver had nothing to do with the panic in the United States, which was entirely sympathetic, with that of Britain and other European countries, after the Sherman Act was repealed, gold exports continued during 1895 and 1896 in the net amount of $103,968,000. Excess of silver exports increased. For the period 1895–1917 there was an annual excess of export of silver for the period amounting to $536,972,000. During 1918 and 1919 the Government shipped 208,000,000 ounces to India under the Pittman Act.

UTILIZATION OF TREASURY BULLION

Upon every occasion, when the United States Treasury has accumulated silver which was not in monetary use, most valuable uses have been found for same in emergencies. Under the sponsorship of President McKinley the revenue act of June 13, 1898, was enacted to provide funds for the financing of the Spanish-American War. This act had two main provisions: (a) Bonds in the amount of $200,000,000, and (b) coinage of all seigniorage silver held by the Treasury.

Coinage of silver bullion—Section 34:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to coin into standard silver dollars as rapidly as the public interests may require, to an amount, however, of not less than one and one-half millions of dollars in each month, all of the silver bullion now in the Treasury purchased in accordance with the provisions of the act approved July 14, 1890, entitled 'An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes,' and said dollars, when coined, shall be used and applied in the manner and for the purposes named in said act."

"It was, in fact, with difficulty that the silver majority in the Senate was restrained from forcing a free-silver amendment to this measure so imperatively demanded by the exigencies of war" (Contest for Sound Money, by Hepburn, p. 401).

This act resulted in the coinage of $108,800,888 of seigniorage silver accumulated under the Sherman Act of July 1891; in fact, for the period 1898–1918, leading up to the Pittman Act, the silver coinage amounted to $301,760,000. All of this silver coinage was authorized by McKinley and his Republican administration, who contemporaneously sponsored the Gold Standard Act of 1900.

THE GOLD STANDARD ACT OF MARCH 14, 1900

Section 5 of this act directed that, as fast as silver dollars were coined from silver obtained under the Sherman Act, that the Secretary of the Treasury was to retire and cancel an equal amount of Treasury notes, whenever received into the Treasury, and to issue silver certificates against the silver dollars so coined. Thus it will be seen that the Republican gold-standard administration reverted from the Treasury notes of the Sherman Act to the silver certificates of the Bland-Allison Act; thus, undoing the damage that had been created in the United States by these "special privilege" Treasury notes issued against and redeemed by the cycle method in gold.

Section 5:

"That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, as fast as standard silver dollars are coined under the provisions of the acts of July 14, 1890, and June 13, 1898, from bullion purchased under the act of July 14, 1890, to retire and cancel an equal amount of Treasury notes whenever received into the Treasury, either by exchange in accordance with the provisions of this act or in the ordinary course of business, and upon the cancelation of Treasury notes, silver certificates shall be issued against the silver dollars so coined."

The following table shows the silver coinage of the United States for the period 1933–39. The rate of silver coinage has been increased to approximately $5,000,000 per month. It will be noted that the coinage in January 1939 was only $466,663. There was a constant increase throughout the year to the high average of more than $5,000,000 for the month of December:

Calendar years:

1933	$895,625.00
1934	22,091,840.00
1935	31,237,223.50
1936	34,656,954.75
1937	22,035,561.60
1938	8,998,493.05

Coinage by months, 1939:

January	466,663.00
February	464,000.00
March	536,814.45
April	318,150.75
May	2,285,855.10
June	2,497,181.55
July	1,577,000.00
August	1,810,301.80
September	3,781,427.55
October	3,737,127.55
November	5,152,855.10
December	5,286,121.00
	27,913,497.85

In his statement on March 18, 1940, before the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, Senator PITTMAN outlined clearly and definitely the relationship between gold and silver, and the necessity of both metals to regulate purchasing power of the dollar. Senator PITTMAN's statement follows:

"When the price of silver is depressed below parity (coinage value), it has the direct effect of raising export prices of cotton, wheat, and other commodities above the parity price levels to such an extent that foreigners, who wish to purchase American goods by converting silver into dollar exchange, find the prices prohibitive.

"When a silver market exists free from barriers and embargoes, (a) price levels of all international commodities in gold-standard countries, as well as silver-using ones, change with changes in the world price of silver, (b) silver is so universally distributed amongst one-half of the people of the world that changes in its prices react immediately on the price of commodities, and, (c) gold is concentrated to such an extent that price levels of international commodities respond very slowly to changes in the gold price."

Senator PITTMAN has defined the monetary relationship of gold and silver as follows:

"The true measure of the value of silver as monetary metal resides in the fact that, whenever its world price is lowered, the purchasing power of the gold dollar is increased by the same amount; and, conversely, when the world price of silver is raised, the purchasing power of the gold dollar correspondingly is reduced."

The British have understood this simple law thoroughly since silver was demonetized, and for this reason their consistent policy has been to depress the price of silver in order to raise the purchasing power of gold. It has been an Empire policy to invest in gold deposits throughout the world and, after two generations, this policy has resulted in the British Empire producing and marketing 80 percent of the world's gold production in contrast to their 5 percent (less Canada) of the world's silver production.

Markets continuously have to be developed throughout the world by the British for their constantly increasing gold production. The most effective method they have found is to depress the price of silver so that gold, and currencies based on gold, will perform the functions of silver as well as gold.

Until the Great War started in 1914 the British policy, along with the gold-standard groups of the United States, was to keep silver depressed to a ratio of 32 to 1, at about 64.50 cents per ounce. After the Great War, the British policy became ultra-avaricious because of their inability to meet foreign obligations which were created as a result of the war. Their antisilver policy was extended to the point, virtually, of exterminating silver as a monetary metal. Britain was particularly desirous of weaning British India away from silver by replacing it with paper rupees, backed by gold reserves supposedly held in London as British-India reserve.

The Royal Mint Act of 1920 reduced the silver content of British coins from 925 fine to 500 fine. This act raised their coinage rate of silver to its present level of $2.56 per ounce, but resulted in reducing the bullion price of silver to 35 cents per ounce. By this incongruous procedure, monetary silver became worth seven times more as British coin than it was worth as bullion. This process resulted in raising the price of gold from 85 shillings to its present level of 168 shillings per ounce.

The British India Government is now proceeding with a debasement of the fractional rupee coin (4-anna) to 500 fine and, if no serious objections are encountered throughout India, the silver rupees and half rupees will be debased to the same extent. In the meantime, Britain found the exigencies of war so great that both her gold reserves and currently produced gold had to be shipped to the United States to make secure dollar credits with which to acquire necessary materials for the conduct of war.

The raising of the ounce price of gold is an obvious method of increasing the purchasing power of gold, but the most effective method of raising the purchasing power of gold is by the simple art of depressing the world price of silver. This operation is more difficult for the general public to understand, but nevertheless it is their favorite and most effective method. By this means, commodity prices in the United States are kept at "hard time" levels.

When it is said that the purchasing power of gold has been raised, it is just another way of saying that the world price level of commodities has been reduced: as the purchasing power of gold goes up price levels have a corresponding decrease. Price levels decrease as the world price of silver is decreased.

This is plainly observable by studying the price levels of the United States in comparison to the price levels of world silver since 1870. The lines are substantially parallel. When silver drops in value, the general price level drops; and when silver increases in value, the general price level increases.

This is a natural phenomenon for the simple reason that silver (owing to the fact that its ounce price is much lower than that of gold) became metallic money of the great masses of the world's population; and gold, being the more valuable by weight of the two monetary metals, became the reserve metal for banks and governments. Both metals were necessery to a world monetary structure and complement one another when their natural relationship of values is not being tampered with.

Because of many conditions, both natural and artificial, which tend to change the ratio of value between gold and silver, it is quite necessary to have gold fixed as the basis of value (in terms of a fixed number of dollars per ounce of gold) and to let the world price of silver bullion undergo a natural price fluctuation to the extent that such changes regulate and maintain equal purchasing powers of both the gold and silver dollars.

To amplify this statement, it must be recalled, when the price of silver goes up the purchasing power of silver is increased and the purchasing power of the gold dollar is decreased; and when the price of silver bullion goes down the purchasing power of the gold dollar goes up correspondingly; therefore the only positive control that exists over the regulation of the purchasing power of the gold dollar is the existence of a free world market for silver.

If the monetary structure of the world were based upon gold alone, which is largely true today, gold would become concentrated into hoards by governments and central bankers. As a direct result of such hoarding the purchasing power of gold rises to higher and higher levels, without interference, for whatever length of time the natural world price of silver is being artificially depressed. The depression of the silver price is a result of concerted action in the form of various restrictions and import embargoes on the part of those countries who seek to enhance the purchasing power of gold at the expense of the silver-producing countries and those countries which for generations have used silver as their basic medium of exchange.

By permitting the world price of silver to rise above its present manipulated low level, the purchasing power of gold will decline correspondingly (without changing the ounce price) until the purchasing powers of gold and silver meet at a common and natural level of parity. The people of the world, including gold-owning countries, as well as those of silver, will be relieved from the yoke of both monetary and price-level manipulation under which many of the leading nations of the world have been plunged into wars of extermination.

The price of silver bullion, necessary to restore parity-price levels, will be between $1 per ounce and a maximum of $1.29 per ounce, which is the United States coinage rate for silver. As Great Britain seeks to maintain a lower price level than the United States, because of the distinct advantages which accrue to her from a lower price level in world trade, the United States arbitrarily will have to protect its own interests by liberating the artificially imposed world-price level of silver so that internationally used commodities and general merchandise price levels will become relatively uniform between the two great countries. Such a condition would be of as much benefit to Britain as it would to the United States because the volume of world trade increases directly with an increase in price levels. All countries enjoy periods of maximum foreign trade, both imports and exports, when world commodities are at or near parity levels.

The unit values and volumes of United States international commerce change directly with the world price of silver. As an example: In 1919 the value of exports was 12.6 percent of national income, with a unit value index of 144; and the value of imports was 6.36 percent of national income, with a unit value index of 125; whereas, for the year 1939, the value of exports was 4.56 percent of national income, with a unit value index of 64; and imports were 3.2 percent of national income, with a unit-value index of 55.

The average price of silver during 1919 was 111.1 cents per ounce, and for 1939 was 39.1 cents per ounce. Because of low-value indexes during 1939, it required 2.25 times the quantity of exports to yield a return of $1, and 2.27 times the quantity of imports to yield a return of $1, as it did in 1919.

When the price level commences to fall in terms of gold and rise in terms of silver, gold will come out of hoarding and enter circulation, just as it concentrated because of a rising purchasing power for gold and a falling one for silver. There is no other method known that will release hoarded gold into circulation than by the operation of raising price levels. If the movement is a forceful one and directed only toward abolishing excess purchasing power, the gold gets back into circulation at a faster rate than it went into hoarding.

The following table, for the period 1913–19, sets for each year the amount of national income, the value of exports and imports as a percentage of national income, the unit-value indexes annually for both exports and imports:

Values of United States exports and imports, in terms of national income, vary directly with the New York price of silver

Year	National income	Exports (percent of national income)	Export unit-value index	New York price of silver (cents per ounce)	Imports (percent of national income)	Import unit-value index
1913	----------	----------	65	59.8	----------	70
1914	$33,100,000,000	7.03	----------	54.8	5.72	----------
1915	34,500,000,000	7.87	----------	49.7	4.82	----------
1916	40,100,000,000	13.50	----------	65.7	5.95	----------
1917	47,200,000,000	13.00	----------	81.4	6.26	----------
1918	55,100,000,000	10.90	----------	96.8	5.49	----------
1919	61,500,000,000	12.60	144	111.1	6.36	125
1920	67,800,000,000	11.80	156	100.9	7.76	155
1921	55,500,000,000	7.88	102	62.6	4.51	88
1922	58,100,000,000	6.27	94	67.5	5.35	84
1923	66,500,000,000	6.13	101	64.9	5.69	99
1924	67,800,000,000	6.61	99	66.8	5.31	96
1925	71,500,000,000	6.84	100	69.0	6.00	105
1926	74,000,000,000	6.35	92	62.1	5.71	102
1927	74,500,000,000	6.37	86	56.4	5.61	95
1928	77,100,000,000	6.53	88	58.2	5.14	92
1929	80,200,000,000	6.44	87	53.0	5.46	87
1930	74,400,000,000	5.06	78	38.1	4.10	71
1931	62,800,000,000	3.78	60	28.7	3.32	55
1932	49,300,000,000	3.19	51	27.9	2.68	43
1933	49,600,000,000	3.32	54	34.7	2.93	43
1934	52,100,000,000	4.03	63	48.0	2.93	50
1935	55,800,000,000	4.29	65	64.3	3.18	50
1936	64,200,000,000	3.77	66	45.1	3.42	54
1937	70,700,000,000	4.74	70	44.9	4.63	60
1938	65,000,000,000	4.77	65	43.2	3.00	54
1939	69,000,000,000	4.56	64	39.1	3.20	55

The export and import values as reported are illusory for the purposes of comparison to similar values for other years unless they are adjusted to the unit-value indexes of exports and imports of the 1923–25 parities as established by the Department of Commerce. Such an adjustment portrays the parity values of the same quantities reported to have been exported and imported for any given year.

The following example portrays the adjustment of the 1939 exports and imports to the parity unit-price indexes when based on the same quantities exported and imported, as reported:

United States merchandise exports and imports, unadjusted and adjusted to parity indexes (1923–25=100), for the year 1939

	Exports	Imports	Excess of exports
Parity values of quantities shipped	$4,964,000,000	$4,215,015,000	$749,585,000
Values as reported	3,177,344,000	2,318,258,000	859,086,000
Losses to exporters and gains to importers	1,787,256,000	1,896,757,000	----------

By adjusting United States foreign commerce quantities to parity values of 1923–25, the exporters of the United States had to ship an excess of merchandise, representing $1,787,256,000, to realize exports as reported, amounting to $3,177,344,000.

The importers had to ship an excess of merchandise worth $1,896,757,000, in order to receive the value of imports reported at $2,318,258,000. This import figure portrays the enormous amount of dumping that is going on in the United States at the present time under the extremely low unit-value index of 55. The figures also show the tremendous tax on the exporters of the United States in having to ship without compensation practically 50 percent more merchandise to obtain the same dollar yield with the export unit-value index of 64. The value of these extra shipments not paid for, based on parity unit-value indexes, was $1,787,256,000.

The United States has been bled white in its foreign-trade transactions as fully depicted by the fact that excess of merchandise shipments, for one reason and another, have not been settled for either in merchandise, gold, or silver.

The following figures are startling but illuminating:

Since 1873 to the end of 1939, the excess of merchandise exports from the United States have amounted to $313 per person. The excess of silver exports for the same period, including imports under the Silver Purchase Act of 1934, is $1.88 per person. Combining excess of merchandise exports with exports of silver, the amount is $314.88 per person.

To offset these excesses of exports of merchandise and silver amounting to $314.88 per person, there has been an excess of imports of gold for the same period (1873–1939) of $98.88 per person, just 32 percent of the amount due to balance the foreign trade.

The people of the United States have not been paid for merchandise exports amounting to $216 per person, equal to twenty-eight and five-tenths billion dollars. The cost of foreign war, unpaid foreign loans and investments, and multitudinous other conditions have caused this staggering loss to the people of the United States.

Conditions in the United States, broadly represented by a public debt of $308.20 per person (substantially equal to losses in foreign trade), clearly indicate that the time has arrived when foreign commerce must be based on a standard monetary system utilizing the metallic moneys, gold and silver, as the bases of settlement.

The President recommended in 1934 that monetary silver should constitute one-fourth of the United States monetary supply, and gold three-fourths; and this ratio was enacted into law by the Silver Purchase Act of 1934.

This act should be amended to the effect that all foreign countries, when settling trade balances favorable to the United States, should pay with gold and silver at the ratio of 3 to 1, the gold value being based on $35 per ounce, and silver based on a free New York price for silver, with an upper limit price of $1.293 per ounce.

The President should revalue silver from $1.293 per ounce to $2.13, the same rate of revaluation which he established for gold, when the change was made from $20.67 per ounce to $35 per ounce. The silver revaluation profit should be placed in the stabilization fund to augment the gold profit which now constitutes the fund.

The settlement of favorable trade balances of the United States with gold and silver at the 3-to-1 ratio, gold to silver, does not apply to any gold or silver which may be shipped to the United States in excess of the amounts due to settle for the excess of merchandise shipments.

All gold in excess of merchandise export settlement should be purchased by the banks for their own accounts, and they should have legislative authority to deliver such gold to the Treasury and to receive for same circulatory, convertible gold certificates in payment thereof.

Henceforth, the Government should issue circulatory gold certificates for all gold deposited.

Any foreign silver bullion entering the United States over and above one-fourth of the excess of merchandise exports should not be purchased by the Government. Such bullion should be available to all private purchasers of the United States, and all other purchasers of the world.

There should be no transactions taxes on silver in the future. The New York market for world silver should be free and unrestricted so that silver may find its true natural price level, entirely without devices either to raise or lower its natural value as determined by buyers and sellers.

Under this plan of operation, all foreign countries would enter the New York silver market to secure silver bullion which would constitute a free world market for silver, and its bullion value would be determined by all the buyers and sellers of silver throughout every country of the world.

STATEMENT BY SENATOR KEY PITTMAN BEFORE SILVER COMMITTEE

Mr. PITTMAN. I believe that it has been conclusively demonstrated that our domestic industry and our domestic and foreign commerce are more directly affected by our monetary system and the monetary systems of foreign countries and the administration of such systems than from any other cause. We can have no persuasive influence with regard to the monetary systems of other governments or the manner in which such systems are administered. We can, however, through the formulation and administration of our own monetary system, force to a certain extent the modification of the monetary systems of foreign countries to accord with our own.

If we return to the gold standard in the United States it will encourage, at least, if not force, other great commercial countries to return to some form of gold standard.

I know of no sound reason why our Government should not coin and circulate its free gold. I believe that it would be of great advantage to our Government in the purchase of gold bullion to pay for the same with our gold coins. I believe that the time has arrived when our Government should convert its nonnegotiable gold certificates held by the Federal Reserve banks into gold coin or negotiable nonretirable gold notes. This, of course, is intended to result in a free gold market both foreign and domestic.

Mr. Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of Chase National Bank, on January 10, 1940, in an address to the stockholders of that bank, urged (1) resumption of gold coinage and circulation of such coins and (2) reestablishment of a free gold market. In that address he said:

"As I see it, our immediate function is to reestablish a free gold market permitting free movement of gold bars and gold currency both inward and outward, so that the price of gold as here established shall constitute a firm and certain base line from which the values of the diverse currencies of the world can be confidently figured.

* * * * * * *

"However much we may deplore the raising of the price of gold in dollars in the first place, time has run too far to permit us to return to the former price. We must keep the price where it now is. But I do not propose that we do nothing. On the contrary, it seems to me that we should proceed to take measures of so firm a nature that we will be able to retain for ourselves and for the world a stable monetary value for gold.

"The wise course seems to me to be the following: We should remove as promptly as possible the present prohibitions and restrictions on the private possession of gold. We should resume specie payments, coining gold again and putting gold coins back into circulation. At the same time gold certificates should be reinstated for the convenience of those who do not wish to use or hold sizable amounts of gold coin. New imports of gold should be paid for in gold coin or negotiable gold certificates and the circulation of gold and gold certificates should be encouraged.

"It is altogether probable that if gold were to be put back in circulation in the manner suggested, much would go out of sight in the private holdings of the people. To the extent that gold, in the form of coin or gold certificates, went out of sight or remained in general circulation, it would form a ready emergency reserve for future use. There have been many instances in monetary history where a gold circulation has proved its usefulness in times of national crisis. And at this time such gold as stayed out of circulation in private possession would reduce proportionately the menace of excess reserves.

"But it cannot be maintained that the procedure outlined above would relieve the American economic system entirely from the impact of further gold imports or from the expansive power of excess reserves. To deal with that danger it may be necessary to take further steps. When we shall have had time to see the effects of our gold stock of revived specie payments, Congress might well consider granting power to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System to raise reserve requirements beyond the limits now authorized by law. But any power so granted should not be susceptible of use to an extent greater than that needed to reduce excess reserves to manageable proportions.

"We must all look forward to the day—and prepare for it—when the world will again find itself at peace. It is too soon to attempt a forecast of the influences which will determine the nature of that peace. But one thing is certain if peace, when it comes, is to have any real permanency, and that is that the multitudinous barriers which at the time of the outbreak of the war prohibited or unduly hampered trade between the nations of the world must be removed, and that a situation must be created in which goods may move freely and in volume over international boundaries.

"We are already the possessors of 60 percent of the world's monetary gold stock. Before peace can be achieved this share may have risen further. In a large sense, we are and will be the conservators of the world's monetary system. It is for this reason, as well as for ample reasons of our own, that we must take action now to preserve the monetary character of gold. As I see it, our immediate function is to reestablish a free gold market permitting free movement of gold bars and gold currency both inward and outward, so that the price of gold as here established shall constitute a firm and certain base line from which the values of the diverse currencies of the world can be confidently figured."

In a letter that I wrote to Hon. Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, under date of January 6, 1940, I stated:

"I contend that a sound monetary system requires a nonretirable national currency equal at least to 10 percent of deposits and national income based upon 100-percent metallic reserves. The Federal Reserve notes should be superimposed upon this nonretirable national currency subject to expansion and contraction as conditions may require. Certainly a 10-percent nonretirable currency is not too much when we realize that such currency in the ultimate is the only thing with which to settle all deposits and other indebtedness. Our entire monetary system is based upon confidence. Confidence by the depositor that he can get money for his deposits when he demands it. Confidence by the bondholder that he can get money for his bonds when they are due. And the only money to meet these demands and sustain that confidence is the $7,598,000,000 of 'circulating' money of the United States. Whenever a depositor thinks he cannot get money for his deposits, there is a run on the banks. There may be runs again in the future. It depends upon confidence. There is a limit to which you can try the confidence even of American people.

"It sometimes occurs to me that bank credits may be developed to the point of danger. We realize, of course, that 95 percent of our business and commercial transactions are carried on through checks, and drafts, and so forth. When banks close, this form of money ceases to circulate. When banks close, a large portion of this form of money ceases to exist. When banks close, credit contracts, and even the flow of national currency, is retarded. During the bank panic of 1907 national currency was locked up, and all forms of substitutes, such as scrip, and so forth, were adopted. During our great monetary panic of 1929 probably three-fourths of our currency, and all of our credit money, was temporarily out of existence, resulting in a tremendous depression in industry, trade, and commerce. Our citizens were compelled to carry on transactions essential to life through the rapid turn-over of the small portion of the national currency and coins that they fortunately had in their safes, tills, and pockets. Their suffering would have been far less if they had had a larger quantity of national currency and coins in their possession."

I am very pleased to note that Mr. Aldrich in his address to the stockholders of his bank approves of the hoarding of a reasonable amount of gold coin by the citizens of our country. The language that he uses is definite and unequivocal when he says:

"It is altogether probable that if gold were to be put back in circulation in the manner suggested, much would go out of sight in the private holdings of the people. To the extent that gold, in the form of coin or gold certificates, went out of sight or remained in general circulation, it would form a ready emergency reserve for future use. There have been many instances in monetary history where a gold circulation has proved its usefulness in times of national crisis. And at this time such gold having stayed out of circulation in private possession would reduce proportionately the menace of excess reserves."

At the hearings of the special Committee on the Investigation of Silver, United States Senate, Seventy-sixth Congress, April 4, 1939, I raised this question when Mr. Percy H. Johnston, chairman, Chemical Bank & Trust Co., was on the stand. After discussion of the subject I asked Mr. Johnson this question:

"It raises a question as to whether or not you cannot get the credit dollar too high and have too little of the actual things that people keep in their safes, in their pockets, as they do now. Is there something in that?"

To which Mr. Johnston replied:

"I think there is. I think there is, distinctly."

I asked him this question:

"We look back now to the Franco-Prussian War when the German soldiers were in Paris and Germany did not intend that they should leave but said they would leave if France would pay Germany 5,000,000,000 gold francs. There wasn't 5,000,000,000 gold francs in any of the banks nor in the treasury. France did not have one-tenth of it anywhere, in fact much less than that, but the credit system had not arrived at the perfection it has in the United States, and the peasant of France kept gold in the ground and in the walls of adobe houses, and under the manure, and when France called on its peasants to bring in 5,000,000,000 in gold and take their Government notes for it they did. That was one very happy thing for the independence of France. That has been repeated in more or less the same form a number of times, so I just simply suggest if there is not a question of our depending too much on credit dollars and maybe going too far, isn't that true?"

To which Mr. Johnston replied:

"It is. I would say this: I am afraid of 'financial engineers.' They usually ditch their machine somewhere."

In my letter to the Secretary of Agriculture I asked him these questions:

"What, in your opinion, would be the result if the Government today coined dollars, dimes, quarters, and half dollars out of the billion and a half dollars' worth of silver bullion that it has in the Treasury as a profit that it has made out of the purchase of silver, and circulated such coins in actual payment for labor engaged in relief work? And what would be the result if in addition to the circulation of these silver coins, the Government would coin $5 gold pieces to the extent of a billion and a half dollars out of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, and pay these $5 gold pieces out to relief workers? Again, what would be the effect if these things were done and 10 percent of these coins were hid in socks to meet emergency needs instead of being placed in country banks throughout the United States? And would not this process delay at least the concentration of national currency in the speculative centers of the United States? Would not an increase in cash transactions make for a greater monetary security? For one thing Congress would not be called upon to increase the limit of the indebtedness of the United States for some time, if ever. For another thing, possibly people would commence to realize that there is a potential metallic reserve behind our paper currency, behind our bonds, and behind the deposits in the banks of the United States.

"Is the Government to continue endlessly the vicious cycle of selling to the banks of the country interest-bearing bonds which are paid for by the depositors' money and upon which the depositors must pay taxes to pay such interest? Does the expenditure of such credits by the Government upon the great majority of projects result in the creation of enterprises that constitute expansion of industry which is essential to increase in employment and national income?"

Over a year ago with others interested in monetary matters particularly related to gold and silver coinage and reserves, we induced Mr. Walter E. Trent, a distinguished economist, to open in Washington an office for the study of these questions. I have during that period of time sought statistical information from Mr. Trent. He has had access to information of various departments and his statistics are based upon our Government records. I now ask leave to have published as a part of my remarks two letters that I have received from Mr. Trent in reply to information that I have sought. The information contained in these letters bears directly upon the subject under discussion and will be of great value to any person or committee studying these questions. I ask unanimous consent that these remarks together with the data and statistics included be referred to the Banking and Currency Committee of the United States Senate who are now undertaking a study of these questions.

WORLD PRODUCTION OF GOLD, SILVER, COPPER, LEAD, ZINC, STEEL

On pages 10 to 19 tables are given consisting of production, prices, and values, together with corresponding indexes of the world production of gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, and steel, for the period 1913–39. This period corresponds to the life of the Federal Reserve System and commencing 1 year before the start of the Great War.

These figures portray the wide variations in the production and value relationships between gold and silver on one hand and between gold and silver as monetary metals in relationship to the industrial metals of copper, lead, zinc, and steel; the increase in industrial production normally should keep apace with the increase of monetary metal production. But, of course, this condition can exist only when there are free markets for both gold and silver so that the metals may be utilized at their full monetary values and at a normal rate of turn-over.

It will be observed by inspecting the following tables that gold has increased faster, both in quantity and value, than all other metals. Silver production has remained relatively constant in production, but has decreased more than all other metals in unit value and total value. Lead, which is more closely associated with silver (in natural occurrence) than any other metal, parallels quite closely with silver in tonnage production. But copper, zinc, and steel have increased in quantity production midway between the production of gold and silver. Copper, lead, zinc, and steel all have increased tremendously in unit values and total values in comparison to silver.

Steel production has remained constant with that of silver, except for the boom years of 1928 and 1929 and emergency war-preparation orders of the years 1937, 1938, and 1939. Surprising as it may appear, normally both steel prices and production are closely interlocked with values of world silver production.

Referring to the table entitled "World Production Indexes," page 11, in which the year 1926 is used as the production index of 100, it will be observed that gold production in ounces increased from 100 to 207.4 for 1939. Silver production has remained relatively stationary. Copper production has increased to 143.9, lead to 107.6, zinc to 136.7, and steel to 145.16.

Without reference to the disastrous price disequilibrium variations which occurred between the metals, it is obvious that the abnormal quantity increase in gold has not been paralleled by any of the industrial metals. The hoarding of gold has curtailed its normal monetary efficiency and consequently has retarded industrial production.

The stationary rate of production of silver is equivalent to a 50-percent lag in terms of gold production. The lag in the production of silver, without a commensurate increase in unit price, has caused an increase in the price of gold. This condition has promoted the hoarding of the yellow metal.

The lag in the production and value of industrial metals—which is intermediate between the production and value of gold and silver—clearly indicates the dire results of dropping the world price of silver. The direct result of increasing the price of gold caused its sequestration, and, as a consequence, indirectly caused the present lag in the normal increase of world industrial production.

Referring to the two tables entitled "Metal Values—World Production" and "Total Value Indexes," on pages 14 and 15, it is observable that the value of gold production from 1926 to 1939 was from $400,000,000 to $1,400,000,000, an increase of 368 percent in 13 years. In the case of silver the total values dropped for the same period from $157,200,000 to $101,600,000, a drop of 35.4 percent.

The value of the total silver production of 1926, at an average price of 62.11 cents per ounce, was 48.02 percent of the United States monetary value of silver. In 1939 the production value of silver, at an average price of 39.08 cents per ounce, was only 32.21 percent of the United States coinage value of the silver produced.

The value of copper produced in 1939 was 114.39 percent of the production value of 1926. The value of lead produced in 1939 was 64.72 percent of the production value of 1926. The value of zinc produced in 1939 was 95.08 percent of the production value of 1936. The value of steel produced in 1939 was 141.52 percent of the production value of 1926.

It should be noted that, in the case of steel values, the boom years of 1928 and 1929 were abnormally high, as were the foreign war preparation years of 1937, 1938, and 1939. Neither the business increase of the boom years nor the increase during the war-preparation years, were permanent increases. The business reaction, after the years 1928 and 1929, leveled off the abnormal production profits by losses. With the ending of the European war activities, the reaction will cancel profits of such temporary and uneconomic business unless gold and silver values are brought to a normal monetary ratio. If they are established at a normal ratio, postwar prices and productions will ascend to normal levels in response to the requirements of world rehabilitation and natural advance in raising world standards of living which have been interrupted with monetary tampering and its inevitable companionship condition—war for subsistence requirements.

Assuming the value of 1939 gold production to have an index of 100, the index value of silver was 7.23 percent, of copper 3.67 percent, of lead 13.7 percent, of zinc 13.6 percent, and of steel 479.

The following table shows the tremendous drop in the index values of silver, copper, lead, zinc, and steel, in terms of the value of gold production, for the years 1920, 1930, and 1939:

Production-value indexes of gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, steel

[In terms of gold]

Year	Gold	Silver	Copper	Lead	Zinc	Steel
1920	100	50.40	113.4	47.7	37.4	1,790.6
1930	100	22.4	105.3	47.6	33.1	995.7
1939	100	7.23	36.7	13.7	13.6	479.0

It should be noted—that with gold indexes at 100 in 1920, 1930, and 1939—silver indexes, respectively, were 50.4, 22.4, and 7.23; copper indexes were 113.4, 105.3, and 36.7. The index drops in lead, zinc, and steel were in line, steel dropping from 1790.6 percent to 995.7 percent and 479 percent, respectively.

Obviously, the increased value of gold has not performed its monetary functions and its failure to have performed as money is measured by the difference in the above tables of indexes.

The following table shows the drop in index production of gold, copper, lead, zinc, and steel, in terms of silver:

Production-value indexes of gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, steel

[In terms of silver]

Year	Silver	Gold	Copper	Lead	Zinc	Steel
1920	100	190.4	193.1	90.9	71.3	3,410
1930	100	445.2	468.9	211.0	147.4	4,440
1939	100	1,385.0	508.7	189.5	187.9	6,333

Taking the index value of silver production at 100 for the years 1920, 1930, and 1939, the gold index increases for these 3 years, respectively, were 190.44, 445.2, and 1,385. The respective indexes of copper were 193.1, 468.9, and 508.7. The indexes of lead and steel did not increase as rapidly as gold and copper, but lead showed more than a 100-percent increase, and the steel index almost doubled, increasing from 3,410 in 1920 to 6,333 in 1939.

Again, obviously, silver-production indexes for 1939 are, manifestly, critically low in terms of those of gold, copper, lead, zinc, and steel. The gold index has increased nearly 1,400 percent over silver and industrial metals from 200 to 250 percent.

Taking the two tables together, the failure of world industrial production (represented by industrial metals) in not keeping apace with gold production is due to the fact that since 1920 the silver production has dropped from 50.4 percent of the gold to 7.23 percent in 1939. This calamitous shrinkage of world industrial production was directly caused by the artificial barriers and embargoes which have been created to destroy a national silver bullion market. This forcing down of the price of silver naturally forced up the price of gold and, as long as the price of gold is rising, or, as long as a further rise in the dollar price of gold is considered imminent, it will be increasingly hoarded by governments and central banks.

The value of the world silver production has had a downward trend over a long period of time. Before normal international business can return, silver-production values will have to undergo a constant increase under a long-term policy which is of sufficient solidarity to establish confidence with international businessmen. Gold will continue to go into hoarding and thereby depress world trade unless the silver-production value is increased, and by no other means can gold be brought out of hoarding.

The metal production and value tables numbered from I to IV–a are made up from world figures.

Some United States production figures are given in the table covering gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, and steel, including projected production figures taken from the report, entitled, "Patterns of Resource Use," a technical report prepared under the direction of Gardiner C. Means, of the industrial committee of the National Resources Committee.

In this table it will be observed that Dr. Means projects United States productions of copper, lead, zinc, and steel to tonnages required to sustain a national income of $100,000,000,000 per year, which amount is now recognized as being necessary to produce a normal scale of living in the United States, and necessary to reduce unemployment to the irreducible minimum:

United States metal production required to sustain and increase national income

Year	Thousands of ounces		Thousands of tons				Annual national income [3]	Corresponding industrial production [3]
	Gold	Silver	Copper [1]	Lead [1]	Zinc [1]	Steel [2]
1926	2,335	60,918	878	696	639	48,294	58.3	87
1929	2,208	60,180	1,026	688	632	56,433	65.3	92
1933	2,537	20,955	234	293	325	23,232	48.0	68
1939	5,580	57,808	745	462	506	46,750
			Consumption tonnages [3]
For $100,000,000,000 national income			2,252	1,585	1,479	108,200	100.0	195

[1] 2,000 pounds.
[2] 2,240 pounds.
[3] Patterns of Resource Use, National Resources Committee.

It will be noted that the industrial consumption of copper, lead, and zinc, in order to support a national income of $100,000,000,000, will have to exceed the 1929 United States production of those metals by an increase of more than 100 percent.

These extraordinary tonnage requirements of copper, lead, and zinc will compel the raising of the production and value parities of silver. The increased production levels of copper, lead, and zinc will have to be preceded by a substantial raise in the price of silver; and, before any $100,000,000,000 national income can be attempted with any possibility of success, gold will have to be brought into circulation to the extent at least of all future gold deliveries to the Treasury.

It definitely has been demonstrated that any sound increase in national income, which inherently must be free from an increase of public debt, cannot occur with the banking and monetary structure operating on a "managed currency" basis, and restrictions which preclude citizen-ownership of gold and the general circulation of monetary certificates convertible into gold.

Silver cannot be raised in value as long as artificial restraints are in force. The United States should remove the silver transactions tax of 50 percent created by the Silver Purchase Act of 1934. This is the most deterrent legislation existing which blockades the world's return to balanced monetary and economic parity.

Great Britain and India should remove import taxes and import restrictions which now retard the importation, possession, and use of the white metal in those countries.

A free world market for silver bullion should be established. It must be established before the true value of silver bullion definitely can be determined. Unless and until there is a world market for silver established by world-wide buyers and sellers of silver, there can be no possible return to normal economic conditions throughout the world. As long as there is an artificial market price for silver, the purchasing power of gold will be correspondingly above parity; and, unfortunately, gold will continue to be hoarded and the world economic stalemate will continue to exist.

The price of gold (per ounce) will not be affected by a rise in the world value of silver production. This price can be $35 per ounce or $41.34 per ounce, provided gold is placed in circulation. The fixing of the price of gold (at any dollar rate per ounce) without returning gold to circulation, will not change the present world depressed state of economy.

The bullion and coinage value of gold must be the same. The bullion price of silver must be a floating price susceptible to price change and adjustment; it must be the result of the transactions of the world-wide buyers and sellers of the metal. The bullion price of silver should be the resultant of open and unrestricted transactions, regardless of coinage rate. The coinage price of silver must remain constant at some point above a normal world price for silver bullion.

With gold at $35 per ounce the coinage price of silver should be adjusted to the average rate of the world's 10 leading countries, at $2.58 per ounce. At this level silver coinages are secure against rises in the price of silver bullion to levels to which it may ascend at any time in the near future when the people of the world realize that gold has been, and may continue to be, removed as a free circulating monetary metal.

People ask, "If gold is not the money, what else?" The answer is, "Silver will become the world's exclusive metallic money until it, too, is hoarded." But hoarding of silver will embrace populations of millions in competition with government treasuries and central banks. After that there can be no basic money until both gold and silver are again monetized and afforded free circulation.

If gold is to be given a free world market, it could be revalued to the limit of present authority, $41.34 per ounce. The price would confer to business otherwise unattainable benefits in contrast to a gold price of $35 per ounce with no gold circulation.

Thirty-five dollars an ounce for gold, or any other price, without circulation is an abortion. Any price for gold without gold circulation is suffocating the world business, peace, and normality.

"The purchasing power of gold varies inversely as the world price of silver, and the purchasing power of silver is its world price multiplied by the rate of purchasing power of the gold dollar" (PITTMAN).

Tables IV and IV–a, entitled "Silver Production Ratios" and "Gold Production Ratios," are tables which give the ounces of silver and gold in terms of the other metals for each year since 1913.

For instance, the silver ounces per ounce of gold for the period 1913–39 are given in terms of silver production of 1939, and the gold ounces per ounce of silver for the period 1913–39 are given in terms of the silver production of 1939.

The silver production has dropped from 13.2 ounces in 1926 to 6.47 ounces in 1939 per ounce of gold. The value of silver, instead of increasing under such circumstances, actually has decreased to the lowest level of all recorded history.

The monetary value of silver relative to gold is 1 to 16. The price ratio today between the two precious metals is 1 to 100. Silver is 35 cents per ounce and gold $35 per ounce.

The United States producers of industrial metals, and all products manufactured therefrom, can observe the growing shortage of silver in terms of its shrinking production compared to copper, lead, zinc, and steel.

Industrial metal producers and manufacturers must naturally understand, when the facts are brought to their attention, that foreign purchasers whose primary money is silver, or when the ultimate customers are silver users, that goods cannot be purchased in the United States because of the abnormally high merchandise prices in terms of devalued silver.

No foreign nation can afford to make external purchases of gold. Britain, France, Russia, Canada, and Australia are now buying externally for gold because of war emergency, but they must suffer later when the time arrives to pay their own mounting internal obligations.

Seventy percent of the world's population have no gold with which to buy. Their silver hoards have been reduced to a starvation level of value. What buying these destitute people are doing is out of pure and unadulterated desperation.

Table VI, entitled "United States Exports and Imports Portrayed as Percentages of National Income," clearly indicates that the value of United States exports varies directly with the world price of silver.

The percentage of exports in 1939 was only 4.56 percent of national income in spite of the large emergency war orders. When silver was at high prices between 1916 and 1920, exports exceeded 10 percent of national income. Because of the production capacity of the United States, its exports now should be of a value at least 15 percent of national income.

A few of the world's most prosperous nations have trafficked in money profits as well as merchandise profits with the result that their international customers were eventually ruined financially. The profits of the exchange profiteers then disappeared because of having been invested abroad in the countries which had become victims of distorted monetary exchanges.

Germany, who inaugurated the plan of devaluing the world's monetary silver, now has neither gold nor silver. She has no financial, social, or political conditions of peace and tranquillity.

Germany and Britain are now victims of a world-wide monetary collapse which was originated by them under theories of national advantage at the expense of other nations. Neither Germany nor Britain, or for that matter no other country, can reestablish itself as a prosperous and self-respecting nation until money is recreated with an international standard of value. The nations of the world have been ruined both financially and politically by those who used their superior positions to force exchange profits on the relatively weaker nations in addition to normal commercial profits.

Table VI, entitled, "Dollars Per Capita—United States," indicates that the United States has $122.82 per capita of gold, all of it being withheld from the use of its citizens. The country has $16.44 per capita in silver money in use and $12.56 per capita withheld from use.

The United States has produced $34.40 per capita of gold and $34 of silver. The United States has an excess of imports of gold of $98.80, but still an excess of export of silver amounting to $2.20. The excess of merchandise exports are $313.06 per person since 1873. The gold imports represent less than 30 percent payment for same. Considering the drain of merchandise the people of the United States should realize the necessity of getting all of its gold and silver money into circulation. The public debt is now $308.30 per capita, and still growing with intensity.

RE PITTMAN ACT OF APRIL 23, 1918

The bill, after being prepared by Senator PITTMAN, in collaboration with the Federal Reserve System and the Treasury Department, was introduced in the Senate by him April 9, 1918. The bill was passed by the Senate on April 18, by the House without change on April 22, and was signed by President Wilson on April 23, 1918.

The price of $1 per fine ounce was fixed as the repurchase price of the silver, and the sales price was fixed at $1.015 per fine ounce, the $1.015 including the allowance for expenses of melting and recoining. The selling price was arrived at after giving consideration to what this reserve silver had cost the Government.

The silver stock consisted of metal purchased under the Bland-Allison Act of 1878, and the Sherman Act of 1890. The net cost, reported by the Director of the Mint, 1894, page 17, was $464,210,262.96 for 459,946,701.09 ounces of silver, the average price being $1.0093. The average price of the bullion value of a silver dollar was $1.07806.

April 1, 1918, was a holiday, but the New York price of silver, 999 fine, was 96.05 cents, bid, and the selling offer was 97.05. On April 2 the buying bid was 96.25 cents, and the selling offer was 97.25 cents, with sales between the two figures.

On April 2 the London price for 925 silver was 45.625 pence, equivalent to 98.6 cents per ounce with the sterling and dollar at parity.

On April 9 the New York silver market for 999 fine silver was 95 cents, and the selling offer was 96 cents. The London price of 925 fine silver was 45.25 pence, equivalent to 97.8 cents per ounce with the sterling and dollar at parity.

On April 24, 1918, the day after President Wilson signed the Pittman Act, silver sold in New York at $1 per ounce for the first time during the period, and the market offer at the close was $1.0075.

The New York market price for silver averaged $1 an ounce for the months of May, June, July, and August. The average price for September was $1.014. The average price in New York during September, October, and November and December 1918 was $1.015. The same figure prevailed for January, February, March, and April of 1919. During May the price averaged $1.08 per ounce. The price then gradually rose to $1.33 for the month of December 1919.

Silver reached its highest average monthly price for the period during January 1920, at $1.338, after which there was a rapid decline to an average of $1.034 for the month of May, with a further steady decline to an average of 65.5 cents per ounce during December 1920.

Prior to January 1918, when legislation was under consideration to fix the price of newly mined silver in the United States at $1 per ounce, the proposal was submitted to the silver producers in the West for their consideration and was formally approved at the January 1918 convention of the Colorado Chapter of the American Mining Congress.

The following is an editorial which appeared in the Mining Congress Journal of April 18, volume 4, page 120:

"Senator PITTMAN'S bill proposes that the silver thus released shall be replaced by the Government by contract for future delivery of silver at $1 per ounce, a tacit agreement having been secured from the silver producers to contract on this basis. Silver producers generally believe that the law of supply and demand will stimulate the price to a point largely in excess of $1 per ounce, but as a patriotic duty under present conditions have been willing to consent to a fixed price in order that the Government's needs may be cared for.

"This plan was endorsed by a resolution adopted by the conference of delegates from various countries in attendance at the January 1918 convention of the Colorado Chapter of the American Mining Congress and also was approved by the Wyoming chapter at a later convention held at Casper. It seems very important that this legislation shall receive prompt consideration, and it is believed that the bill will be favorably considered."

Let it be remembered that the miner got the world price while silver was above $1 an ounce.

NOMINATION OF SENATOR SCHWELLENBACH TO BE UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I purpose, with the indulgence of the Senate, to ask that the Senate as in executive session consider a nomination. The President has honored the Senate by nominating one of its Members, Senator LEWIS B. SCHWELLENBACH, of Washington, to be United States district judge for the eastern district of Washington, vice J. Stanley Webster, retired.

If I may secure unanimous consent, as in executive session, to have the nomination laid before the Senate, I wish then to speak for a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MURRAY in the chair). The Chair will lay the nomination before the Senate.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, that can be done only by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. McNARY. I do not intend to interpose an objection. The courtesy requested is usually extended to members of this body. However, it is an unusual privilege to be granted. In cases other than one such as is now before us, I always favor reference to a committee of a nomination as the best practice to follow. But in view of the service of the distinguished Senator from Washington, and the position to which he has been appointed, I shall interpose no objection, nor will any Member of the Senate on the Republican side, to immediate consideration of the nomination as in executive session.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, language would easily run to superlatives in endeavoring to describe the services Senator CHARLES MCNARY, of Oregon, has rendered to his country, but amongst the greatest has been his steadfast insistence that all nominations should go to the appropriate committees. I am indebted to him for the observance of that rule. But, he chivalrously says, he knows this nominee well, and I am sure he feels with me and others that a reference to the Committee on the Judiciary would disclose no new facts regarding Senator SCHWELLENBACH. I therefore ask that the nomination be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the nomination.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of LEWIS B. SCHWELLENBACH, of Washington, to be United States district judge for the eastern district of Washington.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the Senate of the United States judges recruits fairly but critically. From the judgment of the Senate as to its Members there is no review and no appeal, and usually that judgment is correct.

Senator SCHWELLENBACH came to the Senate 5½ years ago. We knew, by report, that he was a good soldier, a sound lawyer. He has proved himself to be industrious and fair, of high character, patriotic, and worthy to sit on the district bench of the United States, and I shall ask the confirmation of his nomination.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield the floor to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, I am one of those Members of this body whose opinion it has been that there is great merit in the rule of having reference made to the appropriate committee in all cases of this kind, and on some occasions in the past I have been glad to join with others in refusing to give unanimous consent to such requests. It happens in this case, however, that, so far as I am concerned, I am perfectly willing to make an exception.

I have known the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH] very intimately, as Senators all have, during the past 5 years. We have served on committees together. I think his appointment is one which should have, as I am very sure it will have, the unanimous approval of this body. I am certain that it would be a mere matter of formality if we referred the nomination to the Committee on the Judiciary. For that reason I join with the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary and urge that action may be taken by the Senate at this time without the customary reference.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, if I may be indulged another word? I have been seeking for some proper opportunity to say what I am now going to say. The last attitude I wish to occupy is that of suggesting to any State what it ought to do. I do not know who may succeed the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE], but, after associating with him on the Senate Committee on the Judiciary for 5½ years, I do know that I have learned to depend upon his sagacity and judgment. Again, without the slightest reference to anyone who may succeed him, I assure my colleagues that the Senate is losing an able and patriotic Member when Senator BURKE passes out of these doors.

If there be nothing further to be said, I ask that the Senate now take action on the nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the nomination as in executive session?

The Chair hears none. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, there is another rule of the Senate, a good rule; and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] and the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE] along with others have insisted upon its observance. I believe for the public good, and that is that the President shall not be notified on the same day that a judicial nomination is confirmed. I am going to presume further upon the graciousness of Senators and ask that that rule be waived, and that the President be immediately notified of the confirmation of this nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the President will be notified of the confirmation of the nomination.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY AND AIR SAFETY BOARD

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, air-line pilots and their employers have demonstrated the great possibilities of collective bargaining. Their ability to get around the council table and iron out their differences peaceably without loss of worktime has been a matter of public record and praise. They have shown along with many other notable industrial groups that collective bargaining is here to stay. Both pilots and air-line operators believe in the Civil Aeronautics Authority and believe that it should be continued in the way it has carried on so well. The no-accident record of the last 18 months compared with the many disasters previously sustained has upheld this point of view.

I believe we should heartily encourage this triumvirate of economic advancement, the cooperation of labor, management, and the Government in the development of safe air travel. We should rejoice that lives have been saved, that flying has for the first time in this country made an enviable record of efficiency and safety, that millions of dollars have been saved because of the acceptance of the principles of collective bargaining in the aviation industry, and that new fields of manufacturing have been stimulated because of peaceful negotiations that have been established.

I have prepared an article for the Trades Union News on the Civil Aeronautics Authority, published May 3, 1940. I ask unanimous consent to have this brief article, which sets forth my views, printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

(By Senator James J. Davis)

The President's fourth reorganization plan is before Congress. It contains a proposal to abolish the new Civil Aeronautics Authority and Air Safety Board. Their air regulatory and investigation duties would be put back under the Department of Commerce.

After much confusion and loss of life the Civil Aeronautics was instituted in 1938. Its work has been highly efficient. There have been no air passenger fatalities in this country for 12 months, and no pilots killed for 16 months. In a little more than a year and one-half the record shows that the Board has investigated 2,947 air crashes, the large majority of which occurred in so-called miscellaneous flying not on the air lines. As a result of these investigations, the Air Safety Board has transmitted 115 air-safety recommendations to the Authority pointing out what should be done to prevent recurrences.

The Authority, under the Civil Aeronautics Act, is a quasi-judicial, quasi-legislative agency of Congress vested with functions covering economic and safety regulation. The Administrator is an independent executive official responsible to the President. He exercises no quasi-judicial or quasi-legislative powers. His functions are the purely executive powers involved in the construction, maintenance, and operation of air-navigational facilities, and in the conduct of developmental and promotional work. The Air Safety Board is an independent accident investigatory body specifically charged with definite duties. Both the Administrator and the Air Safety Board appoint and control their own officers and employees, and in the exercise of their statutory powers act independently of the Authority. Both, however, are specifically required by the act to cooperate with the Authority in the administration of the act.

During the period that the Department of Commerce regulated the country's air-transportation network, 473 persons lost their lives in air crashes, of whom 146 were air-line pilots. The ranks of the pilots were being thinned at the startling rate averaging one every 28 days. Passengers were meeting death averaging one every 15 days. The crash-scared public was afraid to ride. This resulted in large losses of revenue to the industry. Progress was halted.

Safety is the axis around which everything vital to the success of air travel revolves. To get people to rely on air travel requires the development of public confidence in all that relates to safety. The question of safety must be answered conclusively and permanently if air travel is to succeed.

When Congress created the Air Safety Board and the new Air Authority it had a twofold effect. First, it destroyed the psychology of fear of air travel on the part of the public. It also replaced this fear with confidence in the safety of air travel.

Real air safety has been established by the Air Safety Board with the cooperation of the new Authority. This combination is paying dividends in lives saved and millions of dollars saved because the no-fatality safety record has built up patronage.

In view of these facts I am opposed to the proposal to abolish the Air Safety Board and to strip the new Air Authority of its identity and independence.

The air-safety record must be increased. The real measures taken to increase safety in private flying have not yet even begun to be felt. This is the time to take a step forward for air safety. The blow at the Civil Aeronautics Authority would be a step backward.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, the Trade Union News is one of labor's newspapers. Its purpose is to promote industrial prosperity through the principle of cooperation between employer and employee, which has been so well demonstrated in the aviation industry. I do not know any Member of the Senate who is opposed to the philosophy of cooperation which this paper seeks to encourage. Now is the time to talk about the good which has already been established and to rejoice in the benefits which have come to labor, management, and the public through the spirit of cooperation shown in the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Mr. McCARRAN obtained the floor.

Mr. McNARY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMATHERS in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	La Follette	Russell
Ashurst	Davis	Lee	Schwartz
Austin	Donahey	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Downey	Lucas	Sheppard
Bankhead	Ellender	Lundeen	Shipstead
Barbour	Frazier	McCarran	Smathers
Barkley	Gerry	McKellar	Smith
Bilbo	Gillette	McNary	Stewart
Bone	Guffey	Maloney	Taft
Brown	Gurney	Mead	Thomas, Idaho
Bulow	Hale	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Harrison	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Byrd	Hatch	Murray	Townsend
Byrnes	Hayden	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Herring	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Caraway	Holman	Overton	Wagner
Chavez	Hughes	Pepper	Walsh
Clark, Idaho	Johnson, Calif.	Pittman	Wheeler
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Reed	White
Connally	King	Reynolds	Wiley

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, the Reorganization Act provides that the President of the United States may prepare and submit to the Congress for its action plans to reorganize certain agencies.

On April 3 the President submitted plan III, section 7 of which proposes a redistribution of functions under the Civil Aeronautics Act as between the Authority and the Administrator. On April 11 the President submitted plan IV, section 7 of which contains a further redistribution of functions, and transfers the Authority and Administrator and their respective functions to the Department of Commerce.

These plans met with instant protest and criticism. The criticism was based both upon the principles followed and upon the language used. In principle, the plans were wrong because they destroyed the Air Safety Board, and fundamentally impaired the independence of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The language used was wrong because it was vague and ambiguous, created an artificial division of powers, and would promote friction.

As these plans were more closely studied, the evils in them became more apparent.

Finally the President issued a statement, accompanying it with a heated attack upon his critics, in which he announced that the independence of the Authority would not be impaired by his reorganization.

Nonetheless, the criticism of his proposals continued to grow.

Then the President called to the White House members of the House Committee on Government Organization, and after that conference it was announced that the reorganization was based on the fact that the Authority supervises the expenditure of $108,000,000 a year, and that such functions should be in an executive department.

Still the criticism grew. Indeed, fuel was added to the fire, since the Authority's budget, including that of the Administrator, is considerably less than one-third of this fantastic $108,000,000 figure. The $108,000,000 was computed by adding more than $40,000,000 spent by the Work Projects Administration for airports, more than $3,000,000 spent by the Weather Bureau under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture, and the millions spent by the Post Office Department as payments for transporting the mail.

As the next move, Mr. J. Monroe Johnson, an Assistant Secretary of Commerce and formerly the Assistant Secretary charged with responsibility for the Bureau of Air Commerce, was promoted to membership on the Interstate Commerce Commission. In view of the notorious record of the old Bureau of Air Commerce, and of the general feeling that Mr. J. Monroe Johnson could not escape responsibility for the record of the old Bureau, his removal from the Department of Commerce was widely interpreted as a bid for the support of the reorganization plan.

Still the criticism grew. The shift of Mr. J. Monroe Johnson emphasized the fact that the real issue in the case was one not of personalities but of principle.

Finally another White House conference was held, this time with the Chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. After that conference, inspired stories appeared in the press to the effect that certain questions had been submitted to the Attorney General regarding the meaning of the proposed reorganization.

It was obvious that a hastily worded plan, full of ambiguous phrases and based upon the advice of persons unfamiliar with the Civil Aeronautics Act and its operation, was not satisfactory on its face, and was in dire need of a gloss.

The next maneuver was the issuance in mimeographed form on Friday afternoon of a copy of a letter from the Bureau of the Budget to the Chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority setting forth at great length "interpretative statements" regarding the proposed reorganization. This euphemism cloaks an elaborate revision of the entire plan, and is over the name of the Director of the Budget.

Released with the letter of the Budget Director was a copy of a letter over the signature of the Attorney General addressed to the Director which in one sentence cryptically states that he agrees with the conclusions reached by the Director.

At the same time there appeared stories to the effect that the Chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority would be appointed to the post vacated by Mr. J. Monroe Johnson but would at the same time retain his position as Chairman of the Authority.

We have always regarded Mr. Hinckley, the Chairman of the Authority, as an honorable man, and it would be inconceivable that he could lend himself to any such move.

These stories do not, however, diminish in importance the position which Mr. J. Monroe Johnson is about to vacate. They confirm the significance which an Assistant Secretary of Commerce will have in the future regulation and development of civil aeronautics if the proposed reorganization is permitted by Congress.

This series of maneuvers, with the Director of the Budget presenting an entirely revised plan, confirms every doubt entertained concerning the ill-conceived character of the plans which have been presented to Congress.

While the Director's letter is, of course, not before the Congress, and while the President is the only person vested with power under the Reorganization Act to prepare a reorganization plan, this letter from the Director merits analysis and comparison with the terms of the plans before Congress, because it clearly shows how seriously defective are the terms of the plan which Congress must act upon.

The letter itself begins with a self-conscious statement of the reasons for sending it. It is stated that it has been sent in order to establish a basis for the disposition of the available appropriation balances of the Authority in the event Congress takes no adverse action on the reorganization plan. But the contents of the letter show that it goes far beyond an effort to establish a basis for distributing available appropriation balances. What, for example, does paragraph 6 of the letter, explaining that the new Board and the Administrator will be called "the Authority," have to do with a basis for distributing appropriation balances?

Actually, the letter is a desperate effort to set forth another plan of reorganization, a gloss upon the plans pending before Congress, and to draw a red herring across the path of Congress in an effort to distract attention from the faults and ambiguities of the confused plans pending for action.

The letter consists of 16 numbered paragraphs, each dealing with a separate phase of the reorganization problem.

The first paragraph states that under plan III the Administrator will have those functions which are "essentially of an administrative character" as distinguished from the functions of economic regulations, of providing safety rules, and of suspending and revoking certificates after a hearing. Under plan III it was provided that the Administrator would have the functions of aircraft registration and of safety regulation in titles 5 and 6 of the act, except for the function of providing safety rules and of suspending and revoking certificates after hearing.

We now find that the Director of the Budget proposes to give to the Administrator not only the power of handling aircraft registration under section 501 of the act but also the power of handling the recording of conveyances under section 503 of the act, a matter not mentioned in plan III. Likewise unmentioned in plan III, and again overlooked by the Director of the Budget, is the function of registering engines, propellers, and appliances under section 502 of the act, a function different from that of registering aircraft under section 501. This function will go, it seems, to the new Civil Aeronautics Board, although there is obviously no reason why one agency should handle registration of aircraft and another agency should handle registration of engines, propellers, and appliances. This anomaly is due to the fact that even after further study the Director of the Budget is unfamiliar with the details of the Civil Aeronautics Act.

The Director likewise states in his letter that the Administrator will have charge of the enforcement of safety rules. What this means is not clear.

One of the powers of enforcement granted by the act to the administrative agency is found in section 1002C, which gives the present Authority the power, after notice and hearing, to enter orders requiring compliance with the act or any requirement thereunder. Apparently the Director means that the Administrator will now enter such orders with respect to safety rules. But in paragraph 3 of his letter he quite definitely states that the functions vested in the Authority by section 205A of the act, which gives the general power to enter orders, and by title 10 of the act, in which appears section 1002C, just referred to, will remain in the Civil Aeronautics Board and are not conferred upon the Administrator.

Another function conferred by the act which may possibly be construed as that of enforcement of safety rules is the function specified in section 605B, giving to the present Authority power to employ inspectors who shall make inspections of aircraft and equipment. Under plan III it was stated that the Administrator would receive the functions of safety regulation set forth in title 6. The power of inspection would appear to be the power not of regulation but of investigation; but now we find another general term used in the Director's letter; that is the function of "enforcement," which the Administrator is to exercise. So in determining who is to exercise the power of inspection, we are still left in doubt.

If in the reorganization plan the President had come out clearly and stated what he meant, Congress might know what will happen. But even the letter of the Director of the Budget Bureau, despite its greater pains to spell out his conception of what should be done in a reorganization, leaves uncertain very vital functions.

We also find in the Director's letter that the Administrator is to be charged with the issuance and amendment of airmen, aircraft, and air-carrier certificates. Apparently the Director concludes that this will be true because of his statement that functions of an "administrative character" are to be transferred to the Administrator.

Before an air carrier may operate to any particular point, it must secure a safety operating certificate as well as a certificate of convenience and necessity. Under the reorganization, the new Board will issue certificates of convenience and necessity, but the Administrator will issue safety operating certificates. This will mean that both the new Board and the Administrator will have to pass upon the fitness of an air carrier to operate, and the possibility of conflict between them is obvious. The granting of an operating certificate is a vitally important function, quasi-legislative in nature. The Director of the Bureau of the Budget, by calling it a mere administrative function, seeks to disguise the importance of the power conferred upon this single official.

Paragraph 2 of the Director's letter states that plan III divests the Authority of all control over the personnel and expenditures of the Administrator. This is true. Under section 204A of the present act, the present Authority is empowered to make such expenditures as may be necessary in the exercise of its powers as well as the powers of the Administrator. By thus centering in the Authority control over all expenditures, the present act assures coherence of administration and furnishes a check upon the Administrator. Plan III, as the Director's letter points out, will completely divorce the Administrator from the new Board. Hereafter, if the Administrator desires to erect air-navigation facilities at points where the new Board finds it unsafe to use such facilities, it will have no power to veto the expenditure. It will only be able, by regulation, to prevent those operating aircraft from using such facilities.

Paragraph 3 of the Director's letter states that under plan III the new Board will have such of those functions described in title 5 of the act as relate to the prescribing of safety rules and the suspension and revocation of certificates after hearing. It contains the gratuitous statement that a waiver of a hearing would not operate to deprive the new Board of its jurisdiction. This is a helpful explanation, not included in the terms of the plan, and it is to be hoped, if the plan shall be adopted, that the Director is correct. But it is a poor plan which leaves to the gratuitous explanation of a Director of the Bureau of the Budget a point of such importance.

This paragraph of the Director's letter likewise states that plan III leaves the Authority with all the functions vested in it by section 205A and title 10. Included in title 10 are the functions of issuing subpenas, taking evidence through examiners and through depositions, requesting district attorneys to institute proceedings to enforce the act, participating in proceedings under the act upon request of the Attorney General, applying to the courts for process to compel obedience to the act or any of its provisions, and numerous other functions and provisions relating to the administration of the law. The plans presented to Congress by the President leave the status of title 10 entirely uncertain. However, we are now informed in the letter of the Director of the Budget Bureau that all these matters will be vested in the new Board.

Thus we find, according to the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, that although the Administrator will have very important powers to hold hearings concerning the granting of airman, aircraft, and air-carrier certificates, the Board will have the various powers under title 10 to compel testimony, hear cases through examiners, and so forth. Likewise, although paragraph 1 of the letter of the Director of the Bureau states that the Administrator will have the power of enforcing safety rules, paragraph 3 of the letter states that all functions under title 10 will be in the new Board, including the power of applying to a court for mandatory process to compel compliance with the act.

Thus, in his gloss upon the reorganization plan submitted to Congress, the Director of the Bureau still has not cleared up an absolutely fundamental question. He has created a further division of power. Under paragraph 1 of his letter he gives the Administrator the power to enforce the safety rules adopted by the new Board. But we find under paragraph 3 of his letter that the numerous powers of enforcement conferred by title 10 of the act will be possessed by the new Board. Of the several possible interpretations of this confusing treatment, one of the more reasonable is that the Administrator will have the power to enforce the safety rules promulgated by the Board, but that the Board will have the power to enforce compliance with the certificates issued by the Administrator.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Does it not follow, from the very confused letter of the Director of the Budget, that in all probability we would have such a situation that the enforcement of the safety rules for aviation would be in the hands of the Administrator, without the Administrator having any process, or any legal method whatever, by which to enforce his own decisions?

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator is entirely correct; but even worse than that, the Administrator would find himself with rules promulgated by a different body and a different board, without power to enforce what they had promulgated. Thus bad begins and worse remains behind, and thus confusion follows confusion. That is all we can find in this set-up.

Mr. President, coming to paragraph 4 of the Director's letter we find a most amazing statement. It is that in performing his air-safety work the Administrator will be bound by the rules of the Authority—or the new Board—and the extent of his administrative discretion will be entirely dependent upon these rules. Again what we have is a very interesting gloss by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget upon the plans submitted to Congress. Does the Director mean that the Administrator will be subordinate to the new Board, and will have to perform all his air-safety work in accordance with any directions which the Board may issue in the form of rules? If so, neither plan III nor plan IV means what it says.

In the first place, plan III states that the Administrator shall exercise all functions of safety regulation except those of making rules and suspending and revoking certificates after a hearing. Included in these functions are those of granting safety certificates and prescribing terms and conditions therein. If the Administrator has this power, then obviously he can prescribe terms inconsistent with rules adopted by the new Board. But the Director informs us that his discretion will be limited by these rules.

Then, turning to plan IV, we find that the Administrator is to be subject to the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce with respect to all his functions. This means, according to the interpretation of this language given by the Supreme Court of the United States, that the Secretary of Commerce has the power to annul or revise or review all action which he takes. Knight v. United States Land Association (142 U. S. 161, 178). But we are now told by the Director that the Administrator will be subordinate, not to the Secretary of Commerce, but to the Authority, in performing his safety work.

In addition, the power to prescribe procedures, the very general power conferred in section 205A of the act upon the present Authority, is said by the Director in paragraph 3 of his letter to be retained by the new Board, although the reorganization plan itself does not mention the subject. This statement of the Director, coupled with his statement in paragraph 4 that the Administrator will be entirely dependent upon the Authority, is open to the possible interpretation that the Administrator, even in the procedure he follows in his own hearings, will have to follow the directions of the Board, despite the provision in plan IV that the Administrator will be subject to the direction of the Secretary of Commerce.

In any case, if we are to believe the director, the Administrator will be serving two masters, and if we are to believe the terms of the plan itself, he will simply be serving the Secretary of Commerce. If the reorganization plan itself were less confusing, perhaps the Director of the Budget Bureau could make his own plan clearer.

Paragraph 5 of the Director's letter gives us a hint of what we may expect under the reorganization. It starts out by recognizing that the Administrator will submit recommendations to the Board as to safety rules. It then hastily adds that it is anticipated that the Board will have adequate technical facilities for arriving at its own determination as to the soundness of the Administrator's recommendations, and also for developing "such material" upon its own initiative. It will be recalled that the Brownlow report recommended that regulatory agencies be divided into two sections, one a judicial section and one an administrative section. The administrative section was to have responsibility for preparing records and also for submitting findings, and the committee recommended that the judicial section would simply sit in judgment upon matters presented by the administrative section. Of the two sections only the judicial section would be independent.

The fundamental danger in this recommendation of the Brownlow committee was that the administrative section, by controlling the records made up and recommendations made, is, in effect, to be able to guide decisions reached by the allegedly independent judicial section.

The Director's letter in the paragraph just referred to indicates that he anticipates that plan III will in effect make of the Administrator what the Brownlow committee called an administrative section, and will leave the Board in a position corresponding to the judicial section. This impression is confirmed by the statement in the first paragraph of the Director's letter that the Administrator will have all functions of an administrative character.

In his letter the Director states that it is anticipated that the Board will have adequate facilities for arriving at its own determinations and for developing material on its own initiative. The Administrator is likewise to have the functions of submitting and supporting recommendations for action by the Board. And there is nothing either in the reorganization plan or in the Director's gloss to prevent budgetary control over the Board from being so exercised as to limit its personnel and technical facilities in a manner which will prevent it from being more than the Brownlow Committee's judicial section. It will be remembered that the study of independent regulatory agencies made for the Brownlow Committee suggested that a judicial section need have no attorneys or examiners of its own.

If this reorganization is permitted we may expect that a President impressed with the recommendation of the Brownlow report, and those exercising direct budgetary control over the Board will soon be paring the Board's appropriations on the plea that the Administrator, with his extensive duties of an administrative character, is able quite adequately to handle the function of gathering and presenting the data necessary for the Board to determine what regulatory action it should take and when that day arrives the Administrator, under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce, will be in the driver's seat.

Under the present act any such eventuality is out of the question because under section 204A the Authority has the ultimate power to make expenditures. Under the reorganization, both as set forth by the President and as glossed by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, such an eventuality would be virtually upon us.

In paragraph 6 of the Director's letter he explains that the present Authority shall be known as Board, and the term Authority shall be employed to designate both the Administrator and the Board. This contribution to reorganization is explained on the ground that there is an existing confusion in terminology.

Paragraph 7 simply states that the Board will receive the functions of the present Air Safety Board, which means of course that we are once more to have a system of accident investigation where the investigator investigates himself.

Paragraphs 8, 9, and 10 of the letter argue that the Board will be independent of the Department of Commerce and of the Secretary of Commerce. The Director states that plan IV will make available to the Board departmental services in connection with budgeting, personnel, and other functions. This is an ingenuous explanation of the provision of plan IV, which states that budgeting and personnel functions must be performed under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce, through facilities he designates. In other words, not only is it true that these departmental facilities will be available to the Board, but it is also true under the terms of the plan that they must be used for all budgeting and personnel functions, and that those functions must be performed under the direction and supervision of the Secretary.

The Director seeks to explain away these plain terms of the plan by stating that the Board will have the power to appoint and control all its personnel. Doubtless it will, but this power must, under the plan, be exercised under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce. The Director does not have the temerity to say that the power to appoint and control personnel will be independent of the Secretary of Commerce or of the Department of Commerce. The Director merely states, after discussing the various regulatory functions which the Board will have, that these functions will be independent of the Secretary and the Department. But when the Director proceeds to discuss the power to appoint and control personnel his letter carefully refrains from a statement that that power is to be exercised independently of the Secretary and the Department. Obviously he can make no such statement because the very words of plan IV preclude him. The Board must exercise its function of appointment and control of personnel, subject to the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce.

The same conclusion must be reached with regard to authorization of expenditures.

As to the budgetary matters, the Director states that the Board will have authority to determine and support Budget estimates that are submitted to the Bureau, but once more the terms of the plan are clear that budgeting functions are to be exercised under the direction and supervision of the Secretary, and the Director carefully refrains from making the statement in his letter that in exercising its power respecting Budget estimates the Board is to be independent of the Secretary.

Paragraph 10 of the letter states that the Board's personnel will be relatively small in number. Again the recommendation of the Brownlow committee must be borne in mind. The Director is preparing the way for making of this new Civil Aeronautics Board a judicial section of the Civil Aeronautics Authority without the personnel adequate to perform an independent and aggressive regulatory job. If the reorganization succeeds the next step will be simple enough. It will be the determination by the Secretary of Commerce, the President, and the Bureau of the Budget, that the Board's personnel can be cut to a minimum, and that the personnel of the Administrator who, according to the Director, is to exercise functions of an administrative character, can be availed of for the purpose of doing all the work which the Brownlow committee recommended should be vested in an administrative section.

Paragraph 11 states that the Board shall have full authority to make contracts with other agencies of the Government and with State governments and foreign governments. Again, however, there is a significant foreshadowing of events to come, for the Director states that it is reasonable to assume that the Board will make the necessary arrangements with the Secretary of Commerce so as to coordinate its contacts with those made by the Administrator, and thereby minimize duplication of effort. Euphemism once more is employed in a broad hint that the Board will be expected to remain passive, humbly to work through the Secretary of Commerce and facilities designated by him, to secure clearances and approvals from Assistant Secretaries and other functionaries, and to leave to the Administrator, admittedly an officer completely subordinate to the Secretary of Commerce, the performance of more and more of the duties of the Authority.

In paragraph 12 the Director states that the maintenance of dockets and the keeping of minutes cannot be regarded as routine management functions, and will therefore remain under the Board. Otherwise it seems the Secretary of the present Authority will have no functions whatever.

Of course a future Director of the Bureau of the Budget may take the view that the keeping of minutes likewise is a routine management function.

Paragraph 13 states that the Board will have its own legal and other technical facilities and that any other interpretation would directly conflict with the asserted independence of the Board's power to reach determinations. Since the Board in exercising its budgetary and personnel functions will be under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce, this power to assemble and to continue to maintain an adequate staff will be entirely dependent upon him. The Director admits that without a staff the Board could not independently exercise its regulatory functions, which means simply that the Secretary of Commerce will have the power to direct and supervise the function which is basic to the Board's regulatory work.

Paragraph 14 provides that in connection with accident investigation the Board will furnish the Administrator with copies of any reports or recommendations relating to the Administrator's functions. Again the impression is confirmed that the Administrator and not the Board is to become the important agency in the new Civil Aeronautics Authority.

In paragraph 15 there is a further confirmation of the Director's view of the importance of the Administrator because here he states that the Administrator will have the power to compromise civil penalties involving violations of safety rules adopted by the Board, or violations of certificates issued by the Administrator. This is a matter covered by title 9 of the act concerning which there is no mention whatever in the plan submitted to Congress. The Director's contribution is another illustration of the inadequacy of the plans themselves. Those plans say nothing whatsoever about the function of enforcement of safety regulations, yet the Director by main force has conferred another function upon the Administrator, that of safety enforcement, and then reaches into a portion of the act not even mentioned in the President's plans, in order to find that still further functions have been conferred upon the Administrator.

Paragraph 16 of the letter states that the Administrator will be under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce.

Mr. President, I have brought this entire matter in a detailed form to the attention of the Senate, not so much with the thought that the Senate is to consider these small matters of detail, but to show that after a symmetrical and uniform system has been worked out by the Congress, after 5 years of study, we now find about to be torn down and destroyed that entire system which brought about greater safety in air transportation than was ever brought about in any form of transportation known to humanity, whereby 86,000,000 plane-miles and 821,000,000 passenger-miles were flown during the past year without a single fatality of any nature, either to pilots or to the traveling public. After a uniform system has brought about a record such as that, we are now confronted with a plan submitted to Congress whereby that symmetrical working system is to be torn down and destroyed, and not only does the President fail to find a reason for the new system suggested, but the Bureau of the Budget itself cannot find a reason for it, and cannot explain it. So we find confusion piling upon confusion.

I ask the Senate of the United States, after its study extending over 5 years, involving a most important matter of government, and after providing a system which is workable and effective, which is economical, and which the country reveres and respects, after having accomplished that result, are we now going to tear it down for a system that cannot even be explained by those who advocate it?

When did the Bureau of the Budget become the legislative agent of this Government? When did the Bureau of the Budget attain the authority to say what the law is, and make the law by its own dictates? If the Bureau of the Budget is to create the law of the land, would it not be more economical and better to abolish the constitutional provision for making law, set Congress aside once and forever, and let the Bureau of the Budget make the law? Such a plan would be much cheaper. It would not be as plain. It would not speak as much for the will of the people; but it would speak for a dictatorial form of government, which is rapidly approaching. I hope some Congress in the not far distant future will so repudiate such a suggestion that it will never again be offered to a free people.

Mr. McCARRAN subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the body of the RECORD in connection with and immediately following the remarks which I made earlier this afternoon an editorial from the Washington Post of May 3 in reference to the transfer of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The editorial is entitled "A Weak Defense."

I also ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a very able comment on the proposed transfer of the Civil Aeronautics Authority by Mr. Frank C. Waldrop, published in the Washington Times-Herald of May 6, 1940.

I further ask to have inserted in the RECORD a statement of the National Aeronautic Association, as expressed through its executive committee in session at Tulsa, Okla., April 25, 1940. In this connection I desire to say that the National Aeronautic Association is the largest and most far-reaching group of American citizens who are interested in the welfare of civil aviation.

I also ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD—all these matters to be placed in the body of the RECORD, to follow my remarks—an editorial from the Washington Star of May 2, 1940, entitled "A Poor Solution."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the several unanimous-consent requests submitted by the Senator from Nevada?

There being no objection, the matters referred to were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Editorial from the Washington Post of May 3, 1940]

A WEAK DEFENSE

President Roosevelt's defense of his plan to abolish the Air Safety Board and shift the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Department of Commerce is exceedingly weak. He does not strengthen his case by intimating that opposition to this proposal comes either from uninformed sources or from persons selfishly interested in preservation of the status quo.

Since the air-line pilots and air-line managements are leading the fight against the reorganization order, the opposition is certainly not ignorant. But, it undoubtedly has a very immediate interest in the maintenance of a regulatory system that has made an admirable record for prevention of air accidents.

Senator McCARRAN, who is leading the fight in the Senate for rejection of the proposed changes, effectually demolishes the President's argument that it is essential to give the Civil Aeronautics Authority representation at the Cabinet table. Mr. McCARRAN points out that the old Bureau of Air Commerce had more than enough of such direct representation. It had so much, indeed, that Congress passed legislation establishing an independent agency which would no longer be "noticed only at the pleasure of a busy Secretary of Commerce."

The President's suggestion that the C. A. A. needs to be brought into closer relationship with the Weather Bureau and the Coast and Geodetic Survey is hardly a valid excuse for making that agency a subordinate unit of the Department of Commerce. There are many agencies outside of Secretary Hopkins' domain with which the C. A. A. needs close contacts.

It is true that the C. A. A. would continue to exercise its functions of rule making, adjudication, and investigation independently of the Secretary of Commerce. But, otherwise it would be subject to his control. For the reorganization order states that "the budgeting, accounting, personnel, procurement, and related routine management functions of the Civil Aeronautics Board shall be performed under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce through such facilities as he shall designate or establish." It seems impossible to reconcile the terms of the order with the President's assurance that the Board would continue to appoint and control its own personnel and submit its own budget.

The strongest objection to merging the functions of the C. A. A. and the Air Safety Board has been entirely ignored in the President's formal statement. That is the danger of making the agency which promulgates rules for air safety the official investigator of the causes of air accidents. The new set-up, instead of preserving the present independence of accident investigation, would restore the conditions that prevailed under the old Bureau of Air Commerce.

It is reported that one of the major reasons for the proposed changes was a Budget Bureau indictment of "structural inadequacies of the C. A. A." Rumored friction and jealousy among Board members may call for some sort of remedial action. But, it certainly would not warrant abandoning an arrangement which has produced excellent results from the viewpoint of the public.

[From Washington Times-Herald of May 6, 1940]

THE PRESIDENT FOXES HIMSELF—WHY SHIFT HINCKLEY FROM C. A. A. IF AVIATION CONTROL IS TO STAY INDEPENDENT?

(By Frank C. Waldrop)

Mr. Roosevelt is undoubtedly the artful algazel in any encounter on public issues. He delights to leap and cavort before his plodding adversaries, confuse them, make them accuse him falsely, and finally fox them into batting their heads against the wall of truth so hard they let him lead them into his corral while they catch their breath.

But sometimes, as in the Supreme Court fight, he has shown that he can be too artful for his own good.

He becomes so foxy he outfoxes himself because he overestimates the foxiness of his foxing and underestimates the solid common sense of the foxed.

Consider, for instance, this matter of his proposal to abolish the Air Safety Board, put the personnel of the Civil Aeronautics Authority back under control of the Secretary of Commerce, and convert the C. A. A. into a Civil Aeronautics Board to execute functions of the C. A. A. and A. S. B.

The C. A. A. and A. S. B. were established in 1938 by Congress as independent agencies responsible solely to it and the President, who had authority to appoint the members.

The reason for all this independence was that sad experience had shown aviation to be a complex, dangerous, expensive system of travel needing complete freedom from political termites, yet needing also a strict hand of government.

And it was shown that the only way to get government that would be strict, sound, and free of termites was to make a regulatory agency, the C. A. A., utterly free to hire its own personnel, make and enforce its own rules. And as a counterbalance another independent agency, the A. S. B., was authorized to investigate any airplane crashes to see whether the pilots, plane makers, plane operators, or the C. A. A. were to blame.

This system has proved itself by the end product of 12 months' air-line flying on the heaviest schedules in the country's history absolutely free of fatalities. That had never happened before.

And the public wants the system which has proved itself to stand. But Mr. Roosevelt, in his plans III and IV for reorganization of the executive, proposed to abolish the Air Safety Board, telescope its duties with those of the Authority, and put the whole personnel for executing and reporting on the Authority's regulations under the Secretary of Commerce.

When challenged on the ground that this was reversion to the old system of the Bureau of Air Commerce which was so deadly and disgraceful, Mr. Roosevelt began to fox.

First, he said the criticism was all "spinach." But that didn't work. So he denounced the critics as ignorant, political, or gullible, or all three. But that didn't work, either.

So he trotted his tame Budget Director, Harold D. Smith, out with a letter to Chairman Hinckley, of the C. A. A., purporting to show there is no loss of independence to the C. A. A. in this change. He had his Attorney General, Robert H. Jackson, to say that whatever Mr. Smith said in the letter was so.

Then he shifted Assistant Secretary of Commerce, "Rowboat" Johnson, over to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and let it be known that he intended to put Chairman Hinckley into the Department of Commerce in his place just as soon as Congress realizes the changes in the Aeronautics Authority are all to the good.

This appointment, he intimated, ought to quiet all fears, for Hinckley has been going a good job on the C. A. A., and obviously will continue the same way as an Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

And there, ladies and gentlemen, our distinguished fox foxed himself. By his own strategy he has shown his critics to have read him right the first time. He does want to subjugate the C. A. A.

For the criticism all this time has been that the changes proposed in plans III and IV would destroy the independent character of the C. A. A. and put it under the Department of Commerce, where it has been shown that the control of aviation should not be.

And all the arguments the President and supporters have offered, up to the point of proposing Hinckley for Assistant Secretary of Commerce, have been that the independence would not be lost.

But at last the Presidential argument has come out to read not that the independence will be preserved but that with Hinckley in charge everything will be all right, regardless.

It won't be all right at all, Mr. President. Those who oppose the change do not believe the present system has worked just because

Mr. Hinckley is a good man but because the system is a good system.

Mr. Eugene Vidal, the former Chief of the Bureau of Air Commerce, was a good man. He tried hard. But his administration failed because the system was bad.

Under the system you propose, Mr. President, it is true the members of the rule-making Civil Aeronautics Board would be independent of the Assistant Secretary of Commerce. But personnel and finances would all be under an administrator, and the letter your Budget Director wrote to Mr. Hinckley plainly says:

"As contrasted with the Civil Aeronautics Board, the Administrator will be under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce."

So that the Board would be a mere dependency, unable to investigate to see whether its rules were countermanded elsewhere or its personnel up to a standard satisfactory for efficient enforcement of the rules.

Would the regulation of aviation continue its present independence and high standard in such a case?

Surely, Mr. President, you don't think people are going to believe that? This proposal to shift Hinckley gives the whole play away. This reorganization plan would wreck an independent system of aviation control built on experience and wisdom. Let's have none of it.

STATEMENT OF THE NATIONAL AERONAUTIC ASSOCIATION AS EXPRESSED THROUGH ITS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE IN SESSION IN TULSA, OKLA., APRIL 25, 1940

The formation of the Civil Aeronautics Authority came as a result of deep study by the Congress of the United States in an effort to correct past weaknesses in the governmental aid to aeronautical development and to foster and develop civil aeronautics. It is the belief of the National Aeronautic Association that the Congress evolved legislation which provided adequate ways and means of correcting past deficiencies and providing for efficient future development of aviation in this country. The National Aeronautic Association further believes that the Civil Aeronautics Authority has gone far, during its short existence, to justify the faith placed in it by the people of the United States through its representatives in Congress. Therefore, the National Aeronautic Association, in reiteration of its historic position in support of an independent agency to handle all civil aeronautical matters, regards the proposed Reorganization Order No. 4 as detrimental to the continued safe and efficient development of aviation in the United States.

[Editorial from the Washington Star of May 2, 1940]

A POOR SOLUTION

President Roosevelt has stated that one of the purposes of his reorganization plan shifting the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Commerce Department was to cut down the burden of work laid upon his shoulders.

The proposed transfer would result in the C. A. A. submitting its reports through the Secretary of Commerce rather than directly to the President, he pointed out. Mr. Roosevelt said that he already receives reports from about 45 Federal agencies and that a reduction of this burden was one of the motivating reasons behind the C. A. A. transfer.

An inspection of the Aeronautics Act of 1938, creating the Authority, however, reveals that the agency is required by law to make an annual report "to the Congress" and, in addition, that it also may transmit recommendations as to legislation to the Congress—not to the President. In accordance with the law, the Authority does submit its reports directly to Congress and they constitute no burden on the President.

There are certain types of reports, however, which the C. A. A. does make to the President. These reports deal with such matters as international air-line service, national defense, or the need for coordination of work of two or more Government departments—matters which inevitably would go to the President or his Cabinet regardless of whether the C. A. A. is an independent agency or a dependency of the Commerce Department.

It does not appear, therefore, that the proposed transfer of the C. A. A. to the Commerce Department would in any way lessen the amount of work required of the President. In fact, it would increase his work, since under the new set-up the annual and special legislative reports of the Authority no longer would go directly to Congress but would go to the Secretary of Commerce and from him to the White House for transmittal by the President to Congress. In this connection there is a further consideration.

If the President is overburdened and it should become necessary to lighten his load, it would not seem sensible or necessary to sacrifice the independence of so essential an agency as the Civil Aeronautics Authority merely to save the handling of reports. Certainly some other means can be found to lessen the President's paper work. Reorganization Plan No. IV is not a good solution for this problem. And if economy was the primary reason for proposing the change, the $22,500 which it is said would be saved by the plan, as Senator McCARRAN stated in the Senate yesterday, is a "paltry sum" to weigh against the possible risks to air safety and progress involved in the shift.

PROHIBITION OF FOREIGN-SILVER PURCHASES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 785) to repeal the Silver Purchase Act of 1934, to provide for the sale of silver, and for other purposes.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks an editorial from the Baltimore Sun of May 3, 1940, entitled "Time To Halt the Absurdity of the Silver-Purchase Plan."

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Baltimore Sun of May 3, 1940]

TIME TO HALT THE ABSURDITY OF THE SILVER-PURCHASE PLAN

The report of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on the Townsend bill to suspend purchases of foreign silver was devastating in its analysis of the purchase program. It gave the Senate a chance to take the first long step toward the suspension of that program, and the chance is still available, despite the expostulations of the silver-bloc Senators.

For, as the committee suggested, it is easier now for Members of Congress to see the flaws in the silver arguments. During the original debate on the bill which became the Silver Purchase Act of 1934 these arguments achieved plausibility in the minds of the men who passed the act.

Led, as usual, by the representatives of domestic silver producers, the silver blocs were able to mask their direct and commercial stake in silver programs behind a variety of more theoretical propositions. On general principles, they argued that a little inflation wouldn't do any harm. It was easy to persuade those who hold that high prices in themselves are a panacea, regardless of the economic relationships which those prices represent.

Nor were the silver cohorts insensitive to the possibilities of topical variation on their basic theme. China was still on the silver standard; they argued that a great new market for American goods could be opened if China's money standard could be increased in value. China's money standard was increased in value, true enough. But the increase was so great and so explosive that China straightway went off the silver standard. In other countries where silver was used heavily in the coinage it became profitable to melt the coins down for sale to the United States as bullion.

These damaging impacts of the silver-purchase policy led to immediate shifts in the strategy of those who want the Treasury to buy silver. It next became fashionable to argue that the silver purchased abroad gave foreign peoples producing silver (as against foreign peoples using the silver standard) buying power with which to enter American markets. The foreign-purchase program was nourished on this argument through an almost successful attempt to suspend it a year ago; and that is the argument now being offered in opposition to the Townsend bill.

The Senate committee makes the obvious response to this argument when it suggests that, if the argument is good, then we ought to increase such foreign purchasing power still further by increasing our price for foreign silver, say 5 or 10 times. The friends of silver do not make such a suggestion; they do not dare to, more than 2,200,000,000 ounces of silver having been purchased since 1934 without appreciable benefit to the American taxpayers who ultimately pay the bill. What the case for the silver purchases now boils down to is the bald assertion that Americans ought to supply money to foreigners to buy American goods.

It is now obvious, in brief, that the silver-purchase plan hasn't a reasonable leg to stand on. Senator THOMAS' threat that a complete suspension might precipitate a revolution in Mexico is countered by the Banking Committee's reminder that our silver purchases in Mexico have brought us little good-neighborliness to date. Domestic producers are against the suspension of foreign purchases because they fear (a) that such suspension might further widen the gap between the market price and the arbitrary price of 71.11 cents an ounce which the Treasury now pays for silver; and (b) that it would thus wedge open the path toward suspension of the domestic purchase program as well. But most observers will feel that these are arguments, not against, but in favor of the Townsend bill.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I call attention to one sentence in the editorial:

What the case for the silver purchases now boils down to is the bald assertion that Americans ought to supply money to foreigners to buy American goods.

I ask also that an editorial from the Reno Evening Gazette of May 2, 1940, entitled "The Townsend Silver Bill," and an editorial from the Wilmington Morning News of May 2, 1940, entitled "The Silver Folly," be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Reno (Nev.) Evening Gazette of May 2, 1940]

THE TOWNSEND SILVER BILL

Now the supporters of the Foreign Silver Purchase Act, principally Senators PITTMAN, THOMAS of Utah, and THOMAS of Oklahoma, want the farmers of the country to come to its rescue. Through an amendment requiring foreign nations to spend for American agricultural products the money which we pay them for foreign silver, which we do not need, they would have the country's agricultural interests save the act, and thus continue to have this Nation subsidize foreign countries and foreign silver traders and producers at the expense of the American people.

This is far from the reason which the advocates of such foreign purchases first put forward. Then they represented to the country and to the silver-purchasing States that if this country would go into the world markets and buy up virtually all of their silver, its price in the world markets would take a very high level and remain there. Nothing of the kind has happened. Instead this country has bought 1,000,000,000 ounces of the foreign metal, and still the world price is but 38 to 39 cents an ounce. And in this absurd enterprise this country has piled up in its vaults almost 2,000,000 ounces of this foreign silver, which will stand for years as a menace to the silver produced in this country.

The Nation and the silver producers of the West have nothing to gain from the purchases of foreign silver, which would be stopped by the Townsend bill. The price of domestic silver is fixed by act of Congress, and the pending Townsend bill does not propose to change it. Not a single domestic producer would be injured by its enactment. Instead they would be helped by stopping the accumulation of this vast hoard of foreign silver in this country.

Nor have the farmers of America anything to gain in the long run from subsidizing alien purchases of American farm products. If these alien peoples want our farm products, they will buy them. And even if this foreign silver buying should stimulate for a time the purchase of American farm products, this country cannot forever keep up this stimulation by the unsound method of taking in exchange a commodity which it does not need and which eventually will injure its own silver-producing industry.

[From the Wilmington (Del.) Morning News of May 2, 1940]

THE SILVER FOLLY

There is every reason in the world why the Senate should approve promptly and decisively the bill which Senator TOWNSEND, of Delaware, has placed before it to end the foreign silver buying farce.

As Senator TOWNSEND reiterated in the opening debate, the 7-year-old program has been a costly mistake without a shadow of excuse. It is wasteful and unnecessary; it pours American dollars into foreign pockets without any appreciable return to us. We have no conceivable use for the vast stock of monetary silver the Government already owns, let alone the new supplies of the white metal which are constantly flowing in.

The provisions of the measure are perfectly simple and absolutely clear. It was approved by the Senate once before last June and it requires no extended debate. It has the endorsement of the great majority of financial experts, of the general public, and, finally, of the Federal Advisory Council of the Federal Reserve Board, representing all 12 Federal Reserve districts.

If the foreign silver buying powers are repealed as they should be, the largest share of the credit for this highly constructive action will belong to the Senator from Delaware. He has fought, in season and out, to put an end to this financial folly. Year after year he has battled in committee, on the Senate floor, and in public speeches against the program. His one-man crusade has been more responsible than anything else for bringing the matter to public attention and in arousing public sentiment against a senseless and costly procedure. Congressional approval of his bill will be a personal triumph for Senator TOWNSEND and one that he richly deserves.

Mr. TOWNSEND subsequently said: Mr. President, this morning it was stated on the floor of the Senate that there was gold back of the pound sterling. I wish to say that the pound sterling actually has no gold behind it today. The Bank of England has turned over all its gold to the equalization fund, and Canada has done the same thing.

FOREIGN INSULAR POSSESSIONS

Mr. REYNOLDS obtained the floor.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. On May 2, 1940, the Senator who now occupies the floor had inserted in the RECORD—and it appears at page 5407 of the RECORD—what purported to be a dispatch from Amsterdam, Holland, which included, among other things, the following:

AMSTERDAM, April 22.—A high Government official has completely punctured for me the bubble of possible Japanese intervention in the Dutch East Indies.

"We are victims of our own busybody friends," he told me. "England would like nothing better than to drag America into war through the back door."

Again:

With astonishing candor this important official also restated the Netherlands' determination to run her own affairs. He said:

"Even if we are invaded by Germany, and Britain and France were to become our allies, we would not permit them to have anything to do with our islands."

At another point—

Then he slyly added:

"Of course, if the situation regarding Japan should be dangerous—which we do not look for at present—then America by a total two-way embargo alone could bring tremendous pressure against Japan.

"We are not telling America her business. She is quite able to take care of herself, but she must understand how much the Allies would like to involve her in a Japanese war and thus into the European war by way of the back door."

That is the end of what I intend to quote. I should like to add that I am entirely satisfied that the distinguished Senator from North Carolina knew nothing about the facts respecting the source of that information.

As an evidence of good will toward a treaty power which is a friend of the United States, and with which the United States is on peaceful terms, and as an evidence of our confidence in that great country, the Netherlands, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article published in the Washington Post of April 25, 1940, entitled "Holland Denies Story of British Agitation on Indies."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post of April 25, 1940]

HOLLAND DENIES STORY OF BRITISH AGITATION ON INDIES

Dr. A. Loudon, Minister from the Netherlands, last night issued the following statement in connection with a story by Frazier Hunt which appeared in Monday's issue of the Washington Post:

"The Netherlands Minister has been authorized to state that Mr. Frazier Hunt had no interview with any high responsible Netherlands official, and that his statement to the effect that the Netherlands blamed the Indies issue on the British and called the agitation over Japan an attempt to get the United States into war in no way represents the views of the Netherlands Government."

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I am very happy indeed to have the opportunity of yielding to my distinguished friend and colleague. I assume that he has reference to an article which was printed in the RECORD several days ago, from a newspaper correspondent in Amsterdam, Holland.

M. AUSTIN. Yes. I thank the Senator for his courtesy.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I may add that the clipping was supplied to me, and after having read it I had it inserted in the RECORD at the point mentioned by my colleague.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for the purpose of suggesting the absence of a quorum?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Delaware for the purpose of suggesting the absence of a quorum?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	La Follette	Russell
Ashurst	Davis	Lee	Schwartz
Austin	Donahey	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Downey	Lucas	Sheppard
Bankhead	Ellender	Lundeen	Shipstead
Barbour	Frazier	McCarran	Smathers
Barkley	Gerry	McKellar	Smith
Bilbo	Gillette	McNary	Stewart
Bone	Guffey	Maloney	Taft
Brown	Gurney	Mead	Thomas, Idaho
Bulow	Hale	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Harrison	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Byrd	Hatch	Murray	Townsend
Byrnes	Hayden	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Herring	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Caraway	Holman	Overton	Wagner
Chavez	Hughes	Pepper	Walsh
Clark, Idaho	Johnson, Calif.	Pittman	Wheeler
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Reed	White
Connally	King	Reynolds	Wiley

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BARBOUR in the chair) Eighty Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

At this point Mr. REYNOLDS yielded to Mr. BONE, who asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Appendix of the RECORD an article by the Carnegie Peace Library on the cost of war in general, which article appears in the Appendix.

COST OF WAR

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I am particularly happy to have had the opportunity of yielding to my distinguished colleague the senior Senator from the State of Washington [Mr. BONE] to enable him to ask unanimous consent—which was given—to have published in the Appendix of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an article in reference to the cost of war, for I am of the opinion that the more thoroughly the American people are advised and convinced of the cost of war, and particularly of their participation in the last World War, in which we unfortunately had a part, the less will be our chances of entering the present world war. I feel it the duty of every American citizen, when the opportunity is presented, to take advantage of that opportunity to advise his listeners, or to advise his constituents if he happens to be a Member of the Congress of the United States, relative to the enormous cost of war.

In that connection I may add that we all recall that a number of years ago, when Mr. Calvin Coolidge was in the White House, he predicted that before we should have finally liquidated the obligations resulting from our brief participation in the World War from April 6, 1917, to November 11, 1918, we should have paid out $100,000,000,000. I understand that to date the taxpayers of this country have been occasioned to pay the sum of approximately $68,000,000,000 as a result of that participation, and no doubt before we shall have liquidated all the debts incurred by us in the last war we shall have paid out not less than $100,000,000,000. I may add that at this time, 22 years after the end of the last war, we have not sufficient hospitals to provide hospitalization for the veterants of that war who are entitled to hospitalization. As the distinguished senior Senator from the State of Washington knows, right now—at least, that has been my experience after handling many veterans' claims, as I have done in the past and do now daily—it is almost impossible, in many instances, to find facilities sufficient to provide treatment, care, and hospitalization for the men who are entitled to it even 22 years after the end of the World War.

As I said, I believe that the more thoroughly we can impress upon our respective constituents—the American people—the cost of war, the less likelihood there is that we shall become involved in it; and when I speak of cost I have in mind not only the cost in dollars and cents, the destruction wrought, but I have particularly in mind—and this observation I direct to my colleague from Washington, who is here—the fact that the real cost of American participation in a war is paid by the mothers of America. They pay in misery, in unhappiness, and in tears.

So I say I am very happy indeed to have been provided the opportunity of yielding to my colleague from Washington, who has always evinced a great interest in the mothers of America and in their flesh and blood, their sons, who would be called upon to serve in case we should unfortunately be sucked into the present wars that are raging in Europe and in Asia.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 258) to amend section 8 (f) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6264) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 9381) to provide for the alteration of certain bridges over navigable waters of the United States, for the apportionment of the cost of such alterations between the United States and the owners of such bridges, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 62) to provide for printing additional copies of hearings held by the Committee on Appropriations, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED

The following bills were each read twice by their titles and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 8475. An act to limit the interpretation of the term "products of American fisheries"; to the Committee on Commerce.

H. R. 9381. An act to provide for the alteration of certain bridges over navigable waters of the United States, for the apportionment of the cost of such alterations between the United States and the owners of such bridges, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

PRINTING ADDITONAL COPIES OF HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS HEARINGS ON WORK RELIEF AND RELIEF

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, by direction of the Committe on Printing, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate consider and concur in House Concurrent Resolution 62, just messaged over from the House of Representatives.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 62) was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act approved March 1, 1907, the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives is hereby authorized and empowered to have printed, with illustrations, for its use 2,000 additional copies of each part of the hearings held before a subcommittee of such committee, during the current session, pursuant to the resolution (H. Res. 130) directing the Committee on Appropriations to make an investigation and study of the Work Projects Administration as a basis for legislation, and 1,000 additional copies of the hearing held before a subcommittee of such committee during the current session on the estimates of appropriations for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941.

PROHIBITION OF FOREIGN SILVER PURCHASES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 785) to repeal the Silver Purchase Act of 1934, to provide for the sale of silver, and for other purposes.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I turn to the pending subject, which interests itself in Mexico and silver, which interests itself in the purchase of silver throughout the silver-producing countries of the world, but I believe particularly in our sister Republic to the south of us, Mexico, for it is my recollection that this country annually purchases approximately $30,000,000 worth of silver from Mexico. My recollection further is that we are buying annually about $70,000,000 worth of silver from Mexico and Peru and China and Canada and other silver-producting sections of the hemisphere. Frankly, I cannot understand why we are desirous of continuing to buy silver from other countries of the world, in view of the fact that I am informed that we have now 1,000,000,000 ounces of silver buried near West Point in the State of New York.

In this connection, I understand that we have issued certificates upon about 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver, making a total of 3,000,000,000 ounces. The first billion ounces I mentioned is sterile, according to my information. Therefore, when we have silver mines and facilities for mining and unemployed miners in this country looking for work, I cannot understand why we do not mine our own silver in quantities sufficient to meet our demands, instead of providing employment for the nationals of other countries of the world. I think we should utilize every possible opportunity and means to give work to the unemployed in this country, and, in addition thereto, to make use of the available silver mines in this country, rather than buy silver from Mexico, Peru, China, Canada, and other silver-producing countries.

Mr. KING and Mr. LUNDEEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield, and if so to whom?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield first to the Senator from Utah, then I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. KING. If the Senator will visit the Western States, where minerals are found—gold, silver, copper, lead, and other precious and semiprecious minerals—he will find that there is the utmost earnestness upon the part of the citizens of the Western States to discover the minerals hidden in the ground. There is no lack of interest or zeal in mining silver. The only difficulty is that we cannot find as much as we would like.

I may say further that it is important to mine silver because, to use a common expression, it "sweetens" other minerals which are mined, and which, standing alone, perhaps would not pay for the cost of extracting and processing them. So I assure the Senator that if he can find any way by which we can get more silver out of the mines in the West, we shall be very happy to discover the method to be employed. We are employing all the men in the mines who are justified by the situation, and we are extracting all the mineral we can get at the prices which are paid at the present time.

The Senator will recall that a number of years ago the price of copper fell to 4 cents a pound. It is impossible to mine it at that price. I was the one who cast the deciding vote in the effort to impose an excise tax on copper, which enabled us to continue the operation of some of the copper mines, as well as the silver mines, which "sweeten" the cost in the development of the copper mines.

I assure the Senator that we are very anxious to get all the silver we can; yet some of us are not averse to getting silver from other countries. I am one who has never abandoned his belief in bimetallism. I have believed, and history has demonstrated that I was correct in my belief, that nature planted in the ground gold and silver in about the proportion of approximately 16 to 1, and whenever gold and silver have been employed as the monetary base in the countries of the world, there has been a measurable degree of prosperity. When silver was demonetized there was a very great injury done the American people, as well as the people in other sections of the world. I hope that the day will come when we will have a dual base, if I may use that expression, gold and silver, upon which will rest our paper money, and our whole financial system.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Does not the Senator think that first we should mine to the limit those available spaces of the United States subject to the production of silver, with its alloyed metals?

Mr. KING. If I interpret the Senator's interrogatory correctly, I answer "yes." We are doing all we can to develop copper, lead, zinc, and silver to meet the monetary and industrial demands of the people of the United States. We have not, of course, reached the limit of production, but mines do not last forever. If the Senator should visit the West, he would find many ghost cities, many places where the minerals have been exhausted in various mines, and the miners have moved away, trying to find other places where they could extract from the ground minerals for the benefit of the people.

Mr. REYNOLDS. In reference to the Senator's employment of the words "limit of production," I am very happy indeed to find that we are in accord with one another on that point, and I hope that we may go to the full limit of production not only of silver but of copper and other metals, some of which we find in abundance in the United States, before we make purchases from other countries of the world.

Mr. President, I may add at this juncture that I know that the people of the Senator's great State of Utah are daily busily engaged in the operation of some of their great mines. The Senator a moment ago spoke of the development of the copper mines in his State. I recall that on several occasions when I have had the pleasure to visit the beautiful capital city of Salt Lake, in his Commonwealth, I have gone out to one of the large mines near the city and viewed the great amphitheaters that have been established by the hands of men in the side of the mountains there.

What I am interested in is to see that all our resources, from the standpoint of the production of metals, precious metals and otherwise, in whose utilization we in the United States are interested, shall be developed to the limit before we go to foreign fields to make purchases of minerals of any description, because by so doing we shall provide employment for our own people, whereas now we are neglecting our own laborers in the United States. We recall in that connection that unfortunately we have more unemployed employables than are to be found elsewhere throughout the entire world.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I gladly yield to my colleague from Minnesota.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I have been very much interested in the remarks of the able Senator from North Carolina, and I wish to say that it is generally understood that we are paying a premium of $12 or $13 an ounce on the gold that is being purchased. I am wondering if there is not a similar premium on silver, and how much that premium is? I am also wondering how much of a total premium on each metal has been paid to foreign countries, and what the total of both gold and silver premiums might be? I wonder if the able Senator from North Carolina has information on that subject?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I am exceedingly regretful that I cannot answer the Senator's question. I have understood that we are now paying about $38 an ounce for gold, and I know that we are buying a great deal of gold from countries outside of the United States, and that a great portion of those purchases are made from the Soviet Union. From time to time when visiting in various portions of Russia, I have been told by those who live there, and who are conversant with this particular subject, that the Russians can mine gold at a cost of from $3.50 to $10 an ounce. I have understood that the profit upon gold mining in Soviet Russia is so tremendous that the present Soviet Government has encouraged many of those from the western portion of the Soviet Union to proceed westward to the gold fields, and in order to encourage such movement, the Stalin Government has been providing its miners with a premium.

As to the profits derived by the various countries or their nationals from the production of silver or gold, I will very frankly and without hesitation state that I am not an expert upon that subject or thoroughly familiar with it. But I see on his feet now my distinguished colleague, the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], whom I consider the finest authority upon those matters in the Senate, without casting reflections upon my other colleagues, and in order that he may be provided with the opportunity to answer the inquiry directed by the Senator from Minnesota. I am delighted to yield to the Senator from Oklahoma, because I should like to have that information myself.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I desire to ask a question, but first I wish to suggest that the price of gold is $35 per ounce. The reason the price of gold is $35 per ounce is as follows: By law we have fixed the gold content of the dollar at $15\frac{5}{21}$ grains of gold nine-tenths fine. The weight of an ounce of gold is divided by $15\frac{5}{21}$, nine-tenths fine, which means it is necessary to add 10 points of alloy to the ounce to get the total. When the amount of gold in the ounce is divided by the amount that is in the dollar we get a quotient of 35. That is how we find the price of gold to be $35 per ounce, because an ounce of gold will coin 35 gold dollars. So we are not paying $35 an ounce for gold. We have fixed the content of the dollar at such a weight that an ounce of gold will make $35 in coin.

It is obvious to all who try to understand this question that gold is worth just as much by weight as it is by being stamped. The stamp adds nothing to the value of the gold coin. The only thing the stamp does add is to certify that a certain sized coin contains so much gold, and that the gold is 0.9 fine. So we are not paying $35 an ounce for gold. We are exchanging our commodities for gold on the basis of its weight.

Mr. President, if the Senator will yield still further, I will say that gold is the one thing that is the basic primary money of the world. Until a few years ago the moneys of all nations were based upon gold and redeemed in gold. Of course, that is not true today, for the reason that other nations do not have the gold on which to base and with which to redeem their money. We have ample gold upon which to base our money, and our money is based on so much gold to the dollar.

When we come to discussing gold, it would be well if those who want to pay a less price for gold than $35 per ounce, understood what that meant. It would mean that their constituents back home would receive less money for the things they produce. The Senator from a farm State who wants to pay less for gold than we are paying would be asking his farmers to produce wheat for less than they are getting for it today. He would want his farmers to produce cattle and hogs for less money than they are getting for those products today. The same thing is true of all domestic production, especially of raw materials. If you cheapen the price of gold it means that you put more gold in the dollar, you make the dollar larger, and as the dollar becomes larger in gold content it is worth more, and it buys more as prices fall.

I am sorry that this question is not understood by Senators. If it were, we would do nothing until we had solved the money problem. But the money of America, along with the money of the world, is in a chaotic condition today. Yet we are doing nothing about it. A year ago the Senate authorized the Committee on Banking and Currency to make a study of the question and, after a year, all I can learn that has been done is that a questionnaire has been submitted, and to whom I do not know. It occurs to me that the importance of this question is such that the committee, after having been granted the authority to do so should have made the study. No doubt good reasons exist for not having made it to date. I hope the study will be made and that we shall have a report submitted to the Senate for our consideration at the earliest possible date.

Mr. REYNOLDS. In other words, as I understand the Senator's explanation, when we pay, so to speak, $35 or $36 or $37 or $38 per ounce for gold we are giving that much for commodities that we exchange, and if the price were reduced our producers in this country would receive less for their labors?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. There is no doubt about that. On the suggestion made by one Senator that some nations are producing gold at a lower price, so-called, than $35 per ounce, let me say that that may be true in some places, but one must take into consideration the place where the gold is being produced. In Russia there is no standard. The Russians do not work for wages. They work as they are directed. In Russia there is a sort of prescribed economy. Even the officials of Russia do not receive very much. I cannot say how much they receive today, but a few years ago, I think they received only 250 rubles a month. At that time the ruble was worth 51 cents. So, 10 years ago, the highest officials in Russia received only about $125 a month, in terms of our money, or in terms of gold.

Mr. REYNOLDS. In that connection, I may say that I have read, and have likewise been told, that when the present Government of Russia decided to endeavor to mine more gold, it put on a campaign to send miners into the gold-producing regions of Russia, and the miners were offered premiums, which, of course, is a very rare thing in that country.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. If the Senator will further yield, under the Russian system it would be possible for the Russian dictator to send an army of men into the gold fields and have them produce gold. If they were given a place to live and subsistence, that would be about all they could expect to receive. Under those circumstances it might be true that they could produce gold for a fraction of the price which we pay for it.

However, the price of gold, throughout the world, is not determined by the cost of mining the gold in some areas, because in some new fields a vast amount of gold might be found, and possibly it could be produced with a small amount of labor. In other sections gold is very expensive to produce. I can illustrate that point in a sentence or two. In my section of the country when oil fields are first discovered, sometimes the wells produce 10,000, 20,000, or even 40,000 barrels a day. That is called flush production. With such wells the owners could produce oil at 3, 5, or 10 cents a barrel, and make money. However, that is not the rule. Sooner or later the flush wells cease to be flush, which means they cease to flow, and they have to be pumped. After the production of the well goes down to a very few barrels per day, the oil is very expensive to produce. So the history of gold production is like that of oil. More money has been spent in trying to produce gold than the value of the gold produced.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I have frequently heard that statement.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Flush production of gold here and there should not be taken as a criterion of the value of the yellow metal.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I wish merely to correct what seems to be a misunderstanding with respect to the purchase of silver and gold. Many persons use the term "buying gold" or the term "buying silver" on the part of the United States, under the impression that the United States goes over the world in search of gold to buy, and pays money for it. That is not what happens. What is true of gold is also true of silver. Take silver as an example. The silver comes to us in payment for goods. It first goes to an assay office or to a mint, and finally reaches the Treasury. The Treasury does not pay for the silver in tax money, or money which has gone into the Treasury as the result of tax laws, except that in some instances the Treasury may give a check on a deposit which the Government has in some Federal Reserve bank. The amount is reimbursed by the issue of silver certificates, so the silver which our Government takes over in this process is paid for, not in money, not in Treasury receipts, not in revenues of the Government, but by the exchange of a silver certificate for each dollar's worth of silver. The silver certificate becomes a part of the money used by the people.

With respect to gold, the Government does not own all the gold it holds. It does not own even the larger portion of it. Most of the $18,000,000,000 in gold at Fort Knox belongs to the Federal Reserve banks. Some of it is earmarked as the property of foreign governments and foreign interests. I am not sure what that amount is. It fluctuates. The great bulk of the gold has come in in exchange for our goods. The gold has likewise found its way into the Federal Reserve banks; and under the law the Federal Reserve banks turn it over to the Government, and the Treasury issues gold certificates, or certificates of ownership on the part of the Federal Reserve banks. Those gold certificates, or certificates of ownership, unlike the silver certificates, do not become a part of the circulating medium. The paper money issued on the basis of a dollar's worth of silver becomes a part of the circulating money of the country; but the certificates of ownership on the part of the Federal Reserve banks in the gold do not. They go back to the Federal Reserve banks and are held by the Federal Reserve banks as evidence of their ownership in the gold which is being held by the Government. In some circumstances the gold may be used interchangeably among the Federal Reserve banks, but it does not get out among the people to circulate as money.

There is much misinformation about the process through which the Government obtains possession of silver and gold. It is not true, as many persons believe, that the Government buys gold and silver as we buy groceries or clothes, or something of that sort. The gold comes to us in exchange for trade, and if either silver or gold were cut off so that it could not come into the United States, to that extent not only our trade, but the economy of the entire world, would be crippled.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. BONE. By what process does the Government acquire ownership in gold which comes into the United States? I am referring to a case in which the Government itself takes the gold.

Mr. BARKLEY. Under the law the Government may, and does, purchase a certain amount. Of the $18,000,000,000 worth of gold held in the United States at Fort Knox, I think a little more than $2,000,000,000 is owned by the Government. I may be mistaken; if so, the Senator from Oklahoma can correct me. The rest of it is owned principally by the Federal Reserve banks, and some of it by foreign interests. The Senator from Oklahoma can correct the figures if I have not stated them accurately.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Practically every day a sheet entitled "Daily Statement of the United States Treasury" is laid on our desks. I have the one for April 30, 1940, which is the latest one I find on my desk. This sheet shows that on that day we had in this country monetary gold to the value of $18,769,874,616.49. That is the amount of gold in the country. The ownership of this gold is prorated as follows:

Gold certificates outstanding, outside the Treasury, $2,000,000,000 plus. That means that when we called in the gold 7 or 8 years ago it did not all come in. Many certificates are still in circulation somewhere. Some are in foreign countries; some have been hoarded; some have been lost; and some have been destroyed. Certificates in the amount stated have not been delivered to the Treasury.

The next item is "Gold certificates fund, Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System," which is the gold about which the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] was speaking. It is the gold which has been delivered to the Federal Reserve banks and by them sent to the Treasury, and for which the Treasury has issued gold certificates. The gold certificates are held as evidence that, under the law, the Federal Reserve banks may obtain that gold if they need it. The amount of the gold thus held is $13,602,000,000 plus. That is the gold which the Federal Reserve System claims it owns; and as evidence of its alleged ownership it has gold certificates delivered to it by the Treasury Department.

The next item is "Redemption fund, Federal Reserve notes," in the sum of $9,640,951.14.

The gold reserve item is $156,000,000 plus. That is the gold reserve back of the United States notes. We have in circulation some $346,000,000 United States notes, and both gold and silver are back of those notes. There is $156,000,000 plus of gold directly back of those notes.

The exchange stabilization fund is $1,800,000,000. Originally that fund was $2,000,000,000, but $200,000,000 has been taken from the fund and set over as an active working account for the Treasury Department, leaving $1,800,000,000 intact in the fund.

Then we have the gold in the general fund, which belongs without obligation to the United States. Gold comes in from day to day. Some gold is sold, and gold goes out from day to day. The fund is a general revolving fund. The total amount on the date mentioned was $318,000,000 plus.

All these sums to which I have referred make up the total to which I referred in the first instance.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I am still not advised how the United States, if it acquires gold, pays for it. Has the United States gone into debt to pay for it? If not, how has it acquired the gold?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, years ago some people paid their taxes in gold, and the Government acquired a considerable amount of gold through that means. We had something like $5,000,000,000 in gold when we went off the gold standard in 1933. Since that time we have acquired $2,800,000,000 through devaluation; and, as I said, we still have a good part of that in the stabilization fund. The only way the Government can acquire gold is through the purchase of gold in the open market with funds in the General Treasury, or through the delivery of gold to the Treasury in payment for taxes. The gold would then be set aside in the Treasury as unobligated United States property.

Mr. BONE. My question was asked primarily because I was curious to know whether or not we purchased the gold with tax funds, funds of the Treasury created through taxation, or whether in any instance we went into debt and issued bonds to acquire the gold.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. If the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] will further yield, let me say it is not now the policy of the Government to spend a single dollar of its money for gold. All the gold which comes to the United States comes in settlement of balances or is sent here for safety. When the gold arrives it is turned over to the Treasury, and in turn the Treasury gives gold certificates to the Federal Reserve banks to the value of the gold.

Mr. REYNOLDS. How much gold is there in the United States which unquestionably belongs to the Treasury of the United States, and upon which certificates have not been issued?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I can furnish the Senator with that figure.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I should like to know approximately. I know that the Senator is thoroughly familiar with the subject, and I wanted merely an approximate idea, upon which to base a statement.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. We own the stabilization fund. That is $2,000,000,000 in gold. There are no certificates against that gold. It is unquestionably the property of the United States, and no certificates are issued against it.

Mr. REYNOLDS. How much gold is buried in Kentucky upon which the Treasury of the United States is not issuing any certificates?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is a financial secret. I was in Kentucky and had the privilege of going through the vault, but I saw no gold. I believe there is gold there, but I did not see it. With guards on all sides one can go down into the ground and walk around a corridor, in which there is a large square or vault, and it is presumed that the vault inside the corridor underground contains the gold. How much I cannot say. The authorities know, but that is not information that the public should have.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Then we do not know whether we have a billion dollars or $10,000,000,000.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I do not know.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, the Senator stated that the gold that unquestionably belongs to the United States is $1,800,000,000 in the stabilization fund. Is that in gold bullion?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes; it is in gold bullion. All our gold is in bullion form.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Where does that go?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Treasury Department could tell where it is located. Information about the location of our gold is not given to the public. Obviously a large percentage of it is in Kentucky; other gold is in the mint in Philadelphia; still additional gold is in the Federal Reserve bank at New York; more gold is in the mint at Denver; and still other gold is in the mint at San Francisco; but the mints and the Federal Reserve banks are merely depositories of our Treasury.

Mr. BANKHEAD. How did the United States acquire that $2,000,000,000 of gold?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I thought I had heretofore made that plain.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I understand about the reserve certificates, but I assume that this was a different kind of gold.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. When we devalued the gold dollar in 1933–34 the effect of the revaluation was like this: The President called in all the gold, and, in effect, under the law, he took 40 percent of the weight of each gold dollar from the gold dollar.

The President called in the gold before he devalued it, but after he got the gold in the possession of the Treasury, then the President's order was issued, which had the effect of taking each gold dollar and chipping out of that dollar 40 percent of its weight.

Mr. BANKHEAD. When that gold came in, did the Treasury issue certificates?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It issued only paper money to the value of the gold under the old order.

Mr. BANKHEAD. And not gold certificates?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No; they called in the gold certificates and new money was issued, namely, Federal Reserve notes. Then, when the gold was in the strong box of the Treasury, we, in effect, took 40 percent of the weight of each gold dollar, leaving 60 percent which was to be the weight of the new dollar. The 40 percent chipped out of the dollar was then placed in the profit pile, and when this profit pile came to be valued the 40 percent taken from the old dollar became 69 percent of the new dollar, because, under the new valuation, 40 percent of the old dollar became 69 cents of the new dollar. In other words, the 40 percent chipped out of the old gold dollar became, under revaluation, sixty-nine one-hundredths by weight of the new smaller dollar. So these chips, taken from the clipping of each gold dollar in the profit pile, when revalued on that basis made a profit of $2,800,000,000 for the Federal Treasury; and that, unquestionably, is the property of the United States.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Carolina yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I should like to ask the Senator from Oklahoma whether any of the gold that was turned in by the private banks to the Federal Reserve System of this country and thereafter devalued as indicated in the Senator's statement, resulted in the profit accruing to the Federal Government or did it reflect itself in a profit to the banks? Did they keep it or did the Federal Government get it?

Let us take a definite amount of money value and follow it through. Here is a bank in New York which turns in, let us say, $1,000,000 in gold. What is the status of that bank? It has gold certificates. I turned in some gold—I had a little of it—but I did not get gold certificates. The New York bank got certificates. Nothing happened to the small amount of gold which I, as a private citizen, turned in; it was not worth sufficient to talk about it. Nevertheless I got some paper bills for it, and was satisfied. The New York bank, we will say, has a million dollars in gold; an order comes to turn it in. How was the New York bank treated? That being merely a corporate entity and I a citizen of the Republic, what was the difference between the treatment of the two?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The matter is very simple. If the Senator from Washington turned in, say, for illustration, a thousand dollars of gold, he got a thousand dollars in credit or checks or a thousand dollars in paper money. That is what he received. If a bank, not a Reserve bank, in New York or any other place turned into a thousand dollars, such bank received the same kind of payment. Federal Reserve banks, however, received gold certificates for their gold, but on the same basis as to value. The Senator received money that he could spend with his friends or in the market place, but the Federal Reserve banks that turned in gold, received gold certificates which are nothing more nor less than receipts for the gold delivered.

Mr. BONE. What I am getting at is, if there was any increased value accruing, the Federal Government, then, was the beneficiary of that?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Federal Government was the only beneficiary.

Mr. BONE. That is what I want to know. If we make plain that the Federal Government was the only beneficiary, then, in effect, every citizen and every corporation was placed in the same status. That has been so shrouded in obscurity because of the legal principle involved, as all my brethren will agree, that many questions have been asked—if I remember correctly they were asked in the last session—indicating an absence of knowledge by the Senate as to how much gold there was in Kentucky, and I believe that millions of Americans think the United States Government owns all this gold; they are not aware that it is privately owned. They think the gold in Kentucky is owned by the United States Government.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is unfortunate that this matter is not better understood. The facts are that under the law the Federal Government owns every ounce of this gold. The law is plain and under it the title of all this gold is vested in the Government of the United States, but, as a practical proposition, the Government has issued gold certificates, which are a sort of receipt. The banks can only get this gold by making application to the Treasury and showing that they have a demand for the gold to settle international balances, and that they must get gold or else the public credit might suffer. That is the exact situation.

One further statement, if I may make it. No one has profited by this gold policy save the Government of the United States unless it be persons or corporations that took their gold, melted such gold into bullion, and later surreptitiously brought the gold into the United States as melted gold or as newly mined gold and exchanged it on the new basis of $15\frac{5}{21}$ grains to the dollar. If people have been honest and turned in their gold as provided by the law, then no one has profited save the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. BONE. I should like to ask one more question, if I may. When this transaction occurred in 1933 the United States Government was not possessed of a great amount of gold. Therefore, we may assume that the present ownership of approximately $2,000,000,000 of gold, free of encumbrance, which is vested in the United States Government, is the result of financial operations under the Gold Act. Am I correct in that assumption?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. HOLMAN. If the Senator will permit me, I desire to put into the RECORD a few very elementary questions on the subject of buying gold and silver. I am asking the questions in good faith, because I do not know the answers. I have an idea that perhaps I am not the only man in the Congress who does not know the answers to these questions. If that be so, I think there are 129,999,570 people in the United States who do not know the answers to these very elementary questions. I wish some of the authorities on the money question would prepare answers so simple that he who runs may read.

The first question is: What is the justification for the present policy of buying the gold and silver of the world at the prices now fixed, as advanced by its proponents?

Second. Why do we buy both or either from foreign nations?

Third. Why is the present price paid for each metal?

Fourth. Why do we bury both metals after we have obtained possession of either or both of them?

Fifth. Are we going to leave either or both metals buried forever?

Sixth. Are we going to use part or any of our hoards of either gold or silver for coin or for any other purpose?

Seventh. What is the planned ultimate disposition of the buried metals?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I am indebted to the Senator from Oregon for having propounded those questions. I, too, shall be very much interested in reading the written answers thereto.

Mr. TOWNSEND. President——

Mr. REYNOLDS. I will yield to the Senator from Delaware in a moment. It is my understanding that we have buried in the State of New York, near West Point, about 1,000,000,000 ounces of silver upon which certificates have not been issued. I also understand that the Treasury of the United States has buried in Kentucky several billion dollars worth of gold upon which certificates have not been issued. I have been told this afternoon that we do not buy any silver; that we do not buy any gold; but that we merely make an exchange of our manufactured goods and other products for the minerals of the other countries.

In other words, when we pay so many cents per ounce for silver we do not purchase the silver in the direct sense of exchanging for it the money of our country, but we give to the country producing the silver and shipping it here an equal value of the goods and the products of the United States. Likewise, when we get gold, which is valued at $35 an ounce, the present rate at which we are making payment therefor, we do not purchase the gold in the direct sense of exchanging for it the money of the country, but we give to the country producing the gold and shipping it here $35 worth of our goods. In other words, we in this country are giving to the countries of the world from which we are buying their gold and silver our products in exchange therefor, and the gold and the silver which we get from them we are burying in Kentucky and New York.

If that process continues, I argue that it will not be long before we shall have all the gold and all the silver of the world buried in New York and in Kentucky, and the peoples of the world will have all the results of the labors of our people in the form of manufactured products.

I now yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I thank the Senator; and I agree with him that that is just exactly what will happen if we continue to buy silver with our goods.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I desire to say to the Senator from Delaware that, so far as I am concerned, I would it were possible that all the goods we are sending to Mexico and Peru and China and Canada we might be able to keep here and distribute to the millions of undernourished and needy and those in want in this country. I would rather have the stomachs of American citizens filled with food, and their backs covered with raiment, than to have the bowels of the earth filled with the gold and the silver we are purchasing from foreign countries.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator suggests that if this process is kept up we shall have all the gold in the world, and all the rest of the world will have everything else we produce. The Senator hardly meant that. Of course, we are selling to other nations only what we ourselves do not use or need. We are selling them our surplus products.

It is all very well to say that we wish all the hungry could be fed and all the naked could be clothed; but the Government of the United States does not own the goods which we are exchanging for gold and silver. The only way in which it could own them would be to pay money for them and then distribute them among the people, which is not being done. Besides that, the exchange of gold and silver for our products is not taking away from us anything that the people have the means to purchase unless the Government itself is going into the business of taking money out of its Treasury to buy these things and distribute them among the people. In that case, of course, we might be able to absorb all our surplus products, although we could not absorb all the cotton we produce. We might absorb more wheat. We could not absorb all the tobacco we produce, certainly of the types which find their market in other nations.

So it is impossible to bring about a situation in which our surplus products would be used in the United States unless the Government itself is going into the business of buying up the surplus products and distributing them free among the people, or at less than their cost. Therefore, when we talk about the importation of gold and silver in exchange for our surplus products resulting in hoarding in this country all the gold and silver in the world, with the consequent result of all that we need to eat and wear and use going out of the country and leaving us naked and starving it simply cannot happen. It just cannot be true.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I will say that something is wrong when we are burying silver and gold in the bowels of the earth here in our portion of the Western Hemisphere, when there are millions of men and women in America who are undernourished and are not properly clothed.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MINTON in the chair). Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I gladly yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I am wondering if the Senator will not agree with me that the proposition is not quite so naked as he states it. At a time when we manifestly do not have employment for large numbers of our people, to the extent that we employ the otherwise unemployed to manufacture goods that are sent abroad, we are doing some good to them, are we not? And is it not also true that while the silver we are acquiring may not at all times be worth what we pay for it, still it is a commodity which has always had value and now has some value, and that possibly by reason of furnishing employment at this time, when we are not yet able to learn how we can do it otherwise, to the extent that we employ people to manufacture the goods which we send away and thereby make consumers out of them, and to the extent that the metals we get in exchange have value, to that extent the present program is not wholly unwise?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Not wholly.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The gold problem was not included in the silver bill which the Committee on Banking and Currency reported. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. LUNDEEN] asked how much silver we had bought from foreign countries. We have bought from foreign countries over a billion dollars' worth. We have paid out, in our good money, a billion dollars for it.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Within what period of time?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Since 1934, since the law was passed. We have exchanged for that silver our goods.

The question is a very simple one. We have exchanged our goods to the extent of $1,000,000,000 for silver for which we have no use, and which is largely buried up at West Point; and, at the present rate of $23,000,000 a year, that silver would have paid the cost of Congress for 44 years. Just think of the extravagance of wasting our substance on silver when with the same amount we could pay the expenses of Congress for 44 years!

Mr. REYNOLDS. The Senator will agree that we could very well get along for a while without purchasing any more silver.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I certainly do; and I fully agree with the Senator that if we are going to waste our goods in buying foreign silver I should much prefer to give the goods to our own needy people at home.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. The process referred to by the Senator from Delaware would require that we pass a law doing what we are not now doing—take money out of the Treasury of the United States, put there by the taxes of the people, in order to buy these goods and give them to the people—or else quit manufacturing.

The Senator states that we have bought a billion dollars' worth of foreign silver since 1934. It is not quite that much. It is about $900,000,000 worth. If it had not been for the importation into this country of that $900,000,000 worth of silver the manufactured products which were exchanged for it would not have been produced, and thousands of American workingmen would have been unemployed, because they would not have had any opportunity to dispose of the $900,000,000 worth of goods that we sent abroad in exchange for silver.

It may be all well and good to say that we ought to have gone down into the Treasury of the United States for $900,000,000 to buy those goods in order to keep our workers employed and then to have given them to the people; but we did not do so, we are not doing so, and nobody now proposes to do so. There is no law that requires it or permits it.

The question that I seem to be bothered about frequently and perpetually is this: Senators talk about this silver not being needed. Of course, we can get along without it for the time being. It is not all being coined into money. There are a number of things that we can do without temporarily that may be useful to us sometime in the future. We shall either have to keep on producing these goods and selling them to other nations and taking silver in payment or we shall have to quit producing; and if we quit producing these goods we shall throw out of employment hundreds of thousands of our employees who will become a burden on the Government of the United States or on local government.

In all the history of the world silver has been regarded as a valuable metal; and as the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr.

THOMAS] and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] have already explained, more countries are now using silver as money than are using gold as money. But if it be true that for the time being this silver is not needed, and we have to decide which is the more useless—silver, which has always been recognized as a valuable and precious metal, which throughout the world is a medium of exchange, or the surplus products which we are turning out in our factories, which we cannot sell—I think silver will be more useful to us in the future than the unsalable surplus products that are to be turned out, unless we are to close our factories and throw out of employment other thousands of employees.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, as I understand the Senator from Kentucky, he agrees that we have a billion ounces of silver in this country buried in New York, against which certificates have not been issued at the present time.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not sure of the amount.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Approximately that.

Mr. BARKLEY. That does not all represent foreign silver. Every time anyone produces silver in the United States and takes it to the Government, he gets back about 60 percent of it in coin, and the Government keeps about 40 percent.

Mr. REYNOLDS. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. And that 40 percent also goes into the accumulation of the silver bullion. Some of it may be used in the coining of money and some of it may not be. So, when we talk about a billion ounces of silver being buried at West Point, we are not talking about silver which comes here from other countries; we are talking about silver a part of which at least has been produced in the United States and has been brought to the mint and been coined; or a part of it has been coined and the Government keeps a certain percentage as a toll, or, as it is called, seigniorage, for the privilege of having it coined into money.

Mr. REYNOLDS. To use the argument which the Senator employed a moment ago, we have in this country at the present time both silver and gold for which we have no immediate use.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is, we have no immediate need to have it coined into money.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Quite so.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not say it is of no use. The gold is a basis for our circulating medium, of course, or a part of it is.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I understood the Senator to say in his argument that our supply of silver and gold at the present time is sufficient for us to get along on if we did not make any immediate purchase of gold or silver.

Mr. BARKLEY. Probably so.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I therefore assume, from the Senator's argument, that, in order for us to continue to give employment to our working people, those who turn out the manufactured goods which are exchanged for the silver and gold, we must continue to buy silver and gold from foreign countries.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator uses the term "buy." I say we have to continue to exchange our goods for gold and silver, and the contention is that the gold and silver are more useful, even now, than warehouses full of unsalable tobacco, warehouses full of unsalable cotton, warehouses full of unsalable automobiles and machinery of various kinds, as well as textiles, which we cannot sell unless we can take this medium of exchange.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Then, I ask the Senator, what will happen when the day arrives when we have the silver and the gold of the world? What will then become of our workingmen, what will become of our factories?

Mr. BARKLEY. The problem of what we will do with that silver and gold, when the time comes to settle that question, is one about which great economists are now writing pamphlets and books. I am not posing as an expert on money, I am not posing as an economist, and I hope that my pose will be accepted at face value, but if the time ever comes when we have all the silver and gold—and we cannot ever have all the silver, though we may get most of the gold, and we have most of it now—when the war is over, and the world finds itself in economic chaos, the possession of that gold and silver on the part of the United States may be a very powerful lever of influence in the settlement of the economic conditions of mankind, and in settling the terms of peace upon which men may be permitted to transact business throughout the world.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Will we not always keep this gold and always keep this silver?

Mr. BARKLEY. Not necessarily.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Then how will other countries of the world ever get the gold and silver which we have? Today we have seven-tenths of all the gold in the world. Will not the first method they will have to employ in order to get it be by sending us goods?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is the only way.

Mr. REYNOLDS. And will not that put our laboring men out of employment in this country?

Mr. BARKLEY. Not necessarily.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Or at least it will furnish competition for them?

Mr. BARKLEY. There are services nations can render us for which that gold will be used as payment.

Mr. REYNOLDS. What services?

Mr. BARKLEY. Shipping is one service upon which we have always relied. We never have had a sufficient number of merchant vessels to carry our commerce to the world. We have from time to time subsidized shipping, or provided subventions.

Mr. REYNOLDS. If we continue to sell our merchant marine to the foreign nations of the world——

Mr. BARKLEY. We are not selling to the foreign nations of the world any merchant marine that we have been using.

Mr. REYNOLDS. A great many of our companies have transferred title.

Mr. BARKLEY. There have been many old ships tied up in port from the time of the World War, which before the present war were selling for $5 a ton, but are now bringing $35, $40, or as high as $60 a ton because of the scarcity of ships. But they were not ships we were using; they were not ships which were in trade. Some of our active ships have been transferred to other lines, because we have prohibited them going to belligerent ports carrying American commerce or American passengers. Some of them have gone to the Mediterranean. They may be driven out of the Mediterranean if the war extends to that area. This is a subject about which no one can be dogmatic or prophetic. No one knows what the future will bring in the way of economic rearrangement of the commerce and financial situation of the world.

So far as I am personally concerned, I am not afraid that the possession of this gold and silver will be a disadvantage to us when the time comes for the reestablishment of economic and trade relationships among the nations of the world.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Carolina yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. The situation is not so dark as many people seem to think. We are increasing our manufactures; we are increasing our national income. Only last year practically a million men went off W. P. A. on their own volition in order to accept private employment. I think conditions will work out so that in a little while we will not have the present great mass of unemployed. While I am not an economist or scientist, I think the situation is working out, and will work out satisfactorily, and I believe that in the end we will come to a time when we will contribute less of our national income and earnings to the value of machinery and more to the value of labor, and thereby add to the shortening of hours of labor, and thereby give permanent work to more of our citizens.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I am very happy to have had that observation from the distinguished Senator from Wyoming, because the subject of unemployment is one in which I am now very much interested.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It has been admitted by all that we have paid approximately $900,000,000 for silver during the past 6 years, let us say.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Since 1934.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is in the neighborhood of $200,000,000 a year. It is admitted that this money has been paid for American goods, raw products of the field and farm and factory.

Mr. REYNOLDS. That is, this silver has been paid for by American goods.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. We have exchanged cotton and wheat and manufactured products for this silver. If that be true, it means that each year $200,000,000 worth of goods have been exchanged for silver, which means that our people have been relieved to the extent of $200,000,000 in labor and in productive enterprise. If I understand the situation, it is the same as if we had appropriated that amount of money from the Federal Treasury and put it out among the people to tide them over. As it is, the people have had the benefit of $200,000,000 and we have the $200,000,000, in silver, in the Treasury. To me, that is a satisfactory method of affording relief. We have the silver in the Treasury. It is admitted that we have approximately 3,000,000,000 ounces of silver. We have issued certificates against that silver on the basis of its cost, and not on the basis of its monetary value. The monetary value of silver is $1.29 an ounce. I will state how that figure is arrived at. We can take an ounce of pure silver and coin one silver dollar and have 29 cents worth of silver left over. So an ounce of silver may be coined into a silver dollar of the kind which I exhibit to the Senator. Then we have 29 cents of silver to go toward the coining of a new dollar. So that if the 3,000,000,000 ounces of silver were coined into silver dollars, they would make 3,870,000,000 silver dollars. The monetary value of that silver is $1.29 an ounce, which would make 3,870,000,000 silver dollars, and we have issued against that silver only $1,800,000,000 in silver certificates, which means that if we need to do so, we can coin silver dollars, or we can issue certificates against the silver at its monetary rate, and put in circulation $2,000,000,000 more of silver certificates, which would be based on silver dollars of the kind I hold in my hand. So that if times should get hard, or if the Government should find itself in need of money, it could issue against the surplus silver approximately $2,000,000,000 in new silver certificates, and have behind each of those new dollars a silver dollar of the kind I now exhibit to the Senator.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, after having listened to these gentlemen I am more optimistic than I have been for many years. I admit in perfect candor that these gentlemen are entirely persuasive, and particularly with their very delightful personalities it is almost impossible for one not to listen.

My distinguished friend the Senator from Kentucky tells us that we are burying this gold in Kentucky, that for it we are giving a lot of goods, and that without it the goods manufactured would have to be put in storehouses and warehouses here and would not be of a particle of use.

Mr. President, I am persuaded by the argument of my beloved and distinguished colleague the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] that if we continue to do as we have been doing it will result in our getting all the gold and all the silver of the world, and we will not be getting a thing in the world for it. If that can be continued to our advantage, of course, I am in favor of it.

But looking at this matter from a layman's standpoint I see it in this way: We are buying gold, we are buying silver, and it is admitted that billions of dollars of that gold and silver are buried in the bowels of the earth, for which no certificates have been issued, and billions of dollars' worth that we have buried in the United States we do not now need, and have no use for. Perhaps we may never have use for it. What are we doing with it? We are burying the gold and the silver of the world here, and we are giving to those countries from which we buy the gold and the silver that which they are desirous of, and which millions of persons in the United States are desirous of. In other words, we are favoring other countries by the continuous purchase of gold and silver. For the life of me I cannot see how we are favoring ourselves by continuing to buy metals for which it has been admitted in this Chamber we now have no earthly use.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. As a matter of fact, through these purchases we are helping pay for all the wars of the world. Did not Russia, a month of two ago, send over here a ship, the Kim, which carried to San Francisco nothing except $5,000,000 in gold?

Mr. REYNOLDS. And the ship was in the harbor at San Francisco.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes. Immediately after unloading the gold the ship was sent down the coast of Mexico and southern California and loaded with copper and other minerals to be taken back to Russia. And what was to be done with it? Presumably it was used in whipping Finland or in helping Germany.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, as a matter of fact, we are not only in part maintaining Russia's war supplies, but right at our own back door we are maintaining the Government of Mexico, which, according to the press, is entirely unfriendly to our country. Why should we continue—I am not going to say "purchase"—but why should we continue to ship $30,000,000 worth of goods to Mexico, which Government is now entirely unfriendly to the United States of America?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Does the Senator not recognize that if we should become involved in an emergency in the nature of war that this gold and silver would constitute a fine war chest?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, it would be difficult for me to answer the Senator now because I cannot possibly envision in my mind this country becoming involved in any war across the Atlantic or the Pacific.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, does not the Senator suppose that Finland and Norway and Sweden 6 months ago held the same opinion?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Finland and Norway and Sweden do not occupy the enviable geographical location which we occupy.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield, certainly.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator has just stated that we are buying gold and silver that we do not now need. Is it not a fact that we are spending a billion dollars a year for an army, and a billion dollars a year for a navy, a total of two billion dollars for an army and a navy that we do not need now?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I shall be perfectly frank. Do I understand the Senator to infer that he does not believe that we should spend a billion dollars a year for our Army, and that he does not believe that we should spend a billion dollars a year for our Navy?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Most certainly not, Mr. President.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I want to answer a question predicated upon the Senator's opinion relative to national defense, as it embodies our Army and Navy.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. If for no other reason I would put the gold and the silver we have here in the same category as a war chest. I am in favor of spending sufficient money for our Army and for our Navy to protect our interests. But while we are doing that, I also hope we can increase our own production and pay our own people proper wages for producing and manufacturing. To my mind gold and silver in a war chest is not a bad thing to have.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I wish to say to the Senator that I do not see how we can continue to purchase gold and silver when it is admitted that we have billions of dollars' worth of both precious metals in this country for which we have no immediate use, and I see no immediate emergency requiring its use.

Mr. President, a while ago I made mention of our neighbor, Mexico. I repeat that I am not going to use the word "purchase." As our distinguished leader said, we are not purchasing gold, we are not purchasing silver; we are merely giving to those countries manufactured goods and products developed in this country in exchange for their gold and silver. If we are giving them goods, and all they are giving us is gold and silver, we are favoring them. If we should quit the purchase of gold and silver today in the United States, the world price of both metals no doubt would drop, and when the price dropped we would be disfavoring the nations from which we are buying these precious metals, silver and gold. It has been stated that we are delivering to Mexico $30,000,000 worth of goods every year for the silver they are sending to us, and which we have buried, and for a large portion of which it is stated and admitted we have no immediate use.

Mr. President, I am of the opinion that the continued purchase of these metals should cease. If we were in a sense obligated to buy from the world, the question would be a different proposition; but I cannot envision in my mind any obligation on our part to buy silver from Mexico, to buy silver from Peru, to buy silver from Canada, or to buy silver from China. No country in the world ever contributes anything to us unless such contribution means a favor to them. In other words, they are looking out for their own interests, and the United States never gets a favor from any country unless the country granting the favor is doubly favoring itself.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Following the suggestion made by the able Senator from Oklahoma and the leader, the Senator from Kentucky, that we build up a war chest of silver and gold, did the war chest of silver and gold help Norway or Finland? They had gold and silver, but war supplies would have been much more helpful to them. If the Senators would instead agree to building up a war chest of strategic and essential foreign war matériels, I would certainly agree.

Mr. REYNOLDS. It does not seem to have aided them materially. I understand that some of the Scandinavian countries were in very much of a hurry to get out their precious metals, and that they sent them immediately to this country for protection and for the sake of safety.

Mr. President, Mexico is very unfriendly to us, as we know. She has treated us very badly. We have endeavored, as best we can, to continue the good-neighbor policy, and Mexico has not a better friend on the face of the earth than we have proved ourselves to be. Despite that fact, Mexico is treating our nationals very badly. She is confiscating farm lands, ranches, mines, and oil fields owned by Americans. For more than 20 years Mexico has carried on as she is carrying on now in the confiscation of our property, and up to this time—20 years since the commission of the first offenses—we have never been able to get a clean, full money settlement from Mexico. So why continue to aid that country in operating its Government for the benefit of the Mexicans at the expense of the people of the United States of America?

I said we have been very friendly to Mexico. Let us see whether we have. First, we buy $30,000,000 worth of silver from Mexico annually. Secondly, we send millions upon millions of American dollars into Mexico annually through the seaports of Tampico and Veracruz and other ports on the east coast, while on the west we send a great many dollars through Acapulco and other seaports similar to those on the Atlantic. Across the border from Laredo, Tex., to Mexico City, on that great highway last year there motored about 400,000 American citizens bent upon visiting the colorful country of Mexico.

In addition, many thousands fly there annually from Cuba, from Florida, from California, and from Texas. Thousands go there by train from the United States. The result is that annually we are sending to our sister republic millions upon millions of American dollars, thereby very pleasingly aiding the Government of Mexico itself.

We were largely responsible for the development of the highway from Laredo, Tex., to Mexico City, a distance of about 700 miles. It will be one of the links in the chain which will constitute the Pan American Highway leading from Seattle, Wash., southward through Mexico, Guatemala, Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, and Panama, and down the western coast of South America through the Republics of Colombia, Equador, and Peru, turning leftward just north of Chile into Argentina to Buenos Aires.

If we have not been friendly to Mexico, no country in the world has ever been friendly. What do we get as a result thereof? We get a "kick in the pants," and have 1,000,000 Mexicans in the United States to be employed by American industry and individuals in preference to American workingmen. We receive hundreds of thousands of Mexicans to be supported by the citizens of the United States.

That leads me to the subject of stopping Mexican immigration into this country, and stopping it now.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. We have spent approximately $80,000,000 for Mexican silver.

Mr. REYNOLDS. In what period of time?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Since the law was passed in 1934. That amount would have supported 135,000 Americans on relief.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I did not intend to enter into a lengthy argument or debate in regard to this matter. As a matter of fact, to be perfectly honest, I was merely using the subjects of silver and Mexico to discuss the subject of immigration. I have now arrived at that point.

A moment ago I stated that it has been said that there are 1,000,000 Mexicans in this country. They are usurping the jobs of American citizens. Many thousands of them are being supported by the taxpayers of this country.

Only a few days ago I introduced in this body a joint resolution providing that the number of Mexicans gainfully employed in the United States shall not be in excess of the number of Americans likewise employed in Mexico. As a result of introducing the joint resolution I have received innumerable letters from many States of the Union, a large number from the Southwest, from Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, California, Louisiana, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, and Oklahoma. I have selected from my files one letter which I should like to read in reference to the joint resolution which has to do with deportation and immigration. This letter is dated April 11, 1940. It comes from a gentleman who lives in San Antonio, Tex. In view of the fact that I have not his consent to use the letter I shall not reveal his name. I read:

> DEAR SENATOR REYNOLDS: I am writing you to let you know that a large group of representative citizens of this city are greatly interested in the news dispatches of recent date stating that you proposed legislation toward restriction of the number of Mexicans resident in this country to the number of Americans living in Mexico.
>
> Do you know, Senator REYNOLDS, that there are more alien Mexicans working, on relief, and in business in this city of San Antonio, Tex., than there are Americans in the whole Republic of Mexico? If you doubt this, make arrangements for an honest, impartial census in this district, and it may surprise you at what the Mexicans are getting by with. * * *
>
> Do you know that no American can enter Mexico to work for a salary, even for an American company?

I did not know that Americans could not enter Mexico to work for a salary, even for an American company; but I have heard that Mexican laws prohibit the employment by any individual, association, company, or corporation of more than 10 percent of Americans. In other words, Mexico takes care of her nationals. She takes care of Mexican citizens. If 10 men are employed, 9 of them must be Mexican citizens. If a corporation employs 100 men, 90 of them must be citizens of Mexico. I am sorry indeed that we have not a law of that sort in this country. If we had such a law, the American laboring man would not now be so unfortunate. I fear that many hotels in the country would have to go out of business if we had a law prohibiting the employment of more than a certain percentage of foreigners in the United States.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. That would never do, because we must save the world.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I thank the Senator.

Continuing to read from the letter from the gentleman in San Antonio, Tex.:

Do you know that in order to engage in business in that country he must prove an investment of from 20,000 pesos outside of the federal district to 100,000 pesos anywhere within the federal district, and that at no time can he draw a salary nor engage in any other business activity, only that specified by his original investment, and that it must be a strictly Mexican company, compelling the investor to waive any and all rights to diplomatic intervention in his behalf?

Yet thousands of Mexicans are all over this country, enjoying all our benefits, while Americans are discriminated against in Mexico, their properties confiscated, and nothing done about it. * * *

Just why the administration is all excited about American interests in China, 5,000 miles away, and at the same time sits around twiddling its thumbs and writing note after note of protest to the Mexican Government, but at the same time gives them the go-ahead signal to continue mistreatment of American resident investors in that country, no one here can understand.

The so-called "good neighbor" policy is all in favor of Mexico. * * * This "good neighbor" is right now trying to organize all Latin-American countries against "Yankee imperialism." They are holding mass meetings all over the country to show their displeasure because Cordell Hull politely begs them to do something about paying for the hundreds of millions of dollars in confiscated American property.

Yet we are buying their silver, paying them a bonus to work up sentiment in Latin-American countries against us. It is indeed a sorry state of affairs.

There are less than 10,000 American citizens resident in Mexico. An American citizen can no longer go into Mexico to work for a salary, in spite of the fact that they would work for American firms and not Mexican.

Yet Mexico allowed over 6,000 Spanish Communists to enter Mexico during the past year, gave them residence status, permitted them to join Mexican labor unions on an equal basis with Mexicans, and even went so far as to obtain employment for them. These facts can easily be verified.

Won't you try and do something about helping American residents in Mexico so they will no longer be considered as men without a country?

I sincerely trust your secretary will permit you to read this letter personally, as the "good neighbor" situation is serious and demands attention.

Mr. President, in reference to the situation in Mexico, I happen to have before me a clipping from the New York Times, dated Washington, April 13, 1940. The headlines are:

DIES SAYS MEXICO IS RED-NAZI TARGET—GERMANY AND RUSSIA PLOT REVOLUTION TO SET UP PUPPET REGIME, HE DECLARES—WARNS OF AID STEPS HERE—CALLS FOR BAN ON RECRUITING AND SUGGESTS REVISION OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Chairman DIES, of the House Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities, stated today that he had received information that Germany and Russia were conspiring to set up, by means of revolution, a puppet government in Mexico.

So I say, let us not contribute to that revolution by continuing to aid them financially by the purchase of $30,000,000 annually of silver from Mexico.

The article continues:

He said that he would ask the State Department to interrogate the Mexican Government regarding Nazi and Communist activities in Mexico and he called on the Department of Justice to prevent "any attempt to recruit for this Mexican campaign."

Asserting that his informants included Mexican elective officers and several United States Senators, Mr. DIES said he had been told that 10,000 Communists had already moved into Mexico from France and Spain.

Communists' organizations in the United States, he added, were preparing to organize for a Mexican coup a force here similar to the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, which fought for the loyalist cause in Spain.

SAYS MOVE HINGES ON VOTE

If they failed to win the national election in Mexico this summer, he declared, Nazi and Communist plotters would move to overthrow President Lazaro Cardenas by force and set up a puppet regime. They wanted Mexico, he said, because it had gold, oil, silver, and other resources and still more because they wanted to build up a force next door to the United States as a threat in case this country should ever contemplate entering the European war.

The situation, Mr. DIES asserted, seemed to call for revision of the Monroe Doctrine, because when that doctrine "was formulated the modern Nazi plan of setting up puppet regimes by means of revolutions was never conceived."

"We may have to inform the world," he added, "that the United States will not tolerate such schemes of circumvention and penetration."

He proposed to ask his committee to approve a resolution requesting Secretary of State Cordell Hull to ask the Mexican Government for detailed information concerning persons who had entered Mexico in the past 6 months. He would also consult the Secretary regarding the possibility of obtaining witnesses from Mexico to testify regarding the alleged plot. Arms and amunition were being smuggled into Mexico from the United States, Germany, and other nations, he charged.

The problem confronting the United States in Mexico, he declared, confronted her potentially in all South America.

Communists to the south of us, Communists in the midst of us, Communists everywhere here. The "reds" are making tremendous headway in the United States. One witness before the Dies committee asserted that so thoroughly organized are the Communists in New York City—with their men in key positions—that the "reds" could control all transportation facilities, black out the metropolis, and wreck other public utilities. The traitors are not merely on their way; they are already here.

That is the end of the article from the New York Times pertaining to the observations made by Hon. MARTIN DIES, chairman of the committee in the House delegated to investigate un-American subversive activities.

Mr. President, in reference to communistic activities in Mexico, we see from the headlines in virtually every newspaper almost daily what is taking place in that country. We learn of the plots and the difficulties in various States of the Mexican Republic; and we have recently heard of many American tourists who have recently returned from that country who, I understand, have advised their neighbors and friends not to venture into Mexico on account of the fact that it is unsafe. It has even been suggested that warning be given to American tourists not to venture into that country at the present time on account of bandits and on account of the ill feeling existing south of the Rio Grande, within the confines of America, against the United States, although this country has proved itself to be the best friend Mexico ever had.

Here is a very interesting article by the United Press, which comes from Santa Barbara, Calif. It is headlined:

California sheriffs warned of border "reds."

The "reds" are not coming; they are already here; but I say that more "reds" from Mexico are bound northward into the United States.

The article is dated April 26, 1940, and reads:

SANTA BARBARA, April 26.—California sheriffs were advised today to be alert to prevent trouble from a "definite Communist-front organization" working assertedly along the Mexican border.

Sheriff Chris Fox, of El Paso County, Tex., told the Forty-sixth Annual California State Sheriffs' Association convention that a "serious condition" exists along the border between Texas and Mexico. He warned California officers to be on the watch.

The organization has paid organizers who are working with Mexican nationals on both sides of the border, Sheriff Fox said.

"Recognize this as a Communist movement of the most vicious kind," he said.

"I am uninformed as to whether the movement has extended to California, but I advise you sheriffs to keep your eyes open. Alertness on your part may save a great deal of trouble, not only for Americans, but for Mexicans who have settled in this country and wish to remain here."

Sheriff Grat Hogin, of Stanislaus County, Calif., president of the association, also spoke on subversive practices. He said "we must recognize that there are groups who have accepted the hospitality of California, yet deliberately are trying to overthrow American ideals and American form of government."

He said the alleged subversive groups were able to work unmolested because of the liberal nature of American laws.

That is what the sheriffs of Texas and California had to say at the sheriffs' convention, Mr. President.

I happened to notice a very timely little letter addressed by Mr. Peter Venos to the New York Daily News public forum column, entitled "Bolster the Border?" which I clipped for the purpose of bringing it here and reading it to the Members of the Senate. It reads:

Manhattan: How about building a Maginot Line on our Mexican border as a measure of sanity and to round out the good-neighbor policy?

PETER VENOS

Mr. President, thousands of Mexicans, many of whom are Communists, are annually crossing the border from Mexico into the United States; and, as the sheriffs were advised at their convention, they are doing everything they possibly can to destroy the American form of government. We not only should guard the great "melting pot" of the world at its port in New York, where thousands upon thousands of aliens are entering our ports annually, but we must guard every port of the Atlantic and every port of the Pacific; and, in addition thereto, we should particularly give our attention to the Mexican and Canadian borders, and above all to the Mexican border now, because, as the sheriffs of California were told in their annual convention, aliens are pouring into this country, and are preaching un-American doctrines.

The time has come when we should stop by legislative enactment the influx of those who reside in the countries to the south. The time has arrived when we should bring about the enactment of laws applying the quota system to the republics to the south of us. At the present time the quota system has not been applied to the Western Hemisphere. Now, of all times, it should be applied to the West Indies and to the countries of Central and South America. Why? Because the aliens of the world are emigrating from the countries of the world, and particularly Central Europe, to South America, where they can become citizens without great difficulty, and after having obtained their citizenship they can thereafter enter this country without being restrained as a result of the quotas which apply to the countries of Europe.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator has any information as to how many aliens from various countries there are in this country at the present time. How many are coming in year by year? I have been inquiring about that matter for some time. I have never received any reliable statistics on that subject.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I only wish I were able to answer the question. No one can answer it.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Why not?

Mr. REYNOLDS. For the reason that in this country we have not a registration and fingerprinting law. We are the only country in all the world which does not know where to find the aliens within its borders. Every other country in the world keeps close track of foreigners who come across its borders, but we do not. We have the weakest and poorest immigration and deportation laws among all the countries upon the face of the earth.

I contend that we should enact legislation which would apply the quota system to the countries of South America, because many foreigners are coming into Mexico. Six thousand aliens from Loyalist Spain, the great majority of whom, I understand, are Communists, have entered Mexico within a very short period. Already we have too many Communists in this country to have added the Communists who come from Spain and Russia and Mexico and all the other parts of the earth. It is an extremely difficult matter to impress that on the American people. The Communists in this country, according to the reports of the investigations of the Dies committee, are getting into key positions.

Speaking of Mexican and American Communists, let me read something which to me seems appalling. I have here an article dated April 23, under the Associated Press byline, which reads as follows:

DIES WITNESS SAYS "REDS" COULD TIE UP NEW YORK TRANSPORTATION

WASHINGTON.—Thomas Humphrey O'Shea, former New York city subway worker, told the Dies committee today that Communists had power at the present time to paralyze the city's transport system. He added that members of the transport union, "dominated" by Communists, had organized gun clubs for target practice.

O'Shea, now a W. P. A. worker, was asked whether the Communists could paralyze the city's transport system under present conditions.

He replied "yes."

"The Communist leadership with its control in the union," he added, "could stampede the men into a strike."

"They have the absolute power, if they see fit to exercise it."

In replying to questions by J. B. Matthews, committee aide, concerning "revolutionary activities in the transport workers' union," O'Shea asserted that gun clubs had been organized by union members for regular target practice.

Here is another newspaper clipping regarding testimony before the Dies committee as to what Communists are planning to do in the United States:

DIES HEARS COMMUNISTS AIM AT GENERAL STRIKE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Ezra Chase, former Los Angeles Communist organizer, told the Dies committee that the Communist Party is seeking to organize basic industries in the United States so it can start a general strike.

"It is easy to convert a general strike into civil war, and that is but a step to revolution," Mr. Chase testified. "The Communist Party is an organization with revolutionary intent; with the purpose of changing this form of government. If through labor organization they can take over the basic industries at will, they will be in a position to call a general strike throughout the Nation."

A slight bespectacled man, Mr. Chase said that in California, Communists "especially are interested" in aircraft plants and that aircraft workers are a fertile field for Communist activity, because they are not so highly paid as popularly believed.

The C. I. O. gave the Communists a "foothold in the basic industries," Mr. Chase testified. Communists' control of labor groups began to "take hold in a big way" in 1935 when the C. I. O. was opening its organizing campaign, he said without elaborating.

Mr. Chase said the Communist Party urged its members to steal utility services after they were cut off for nonpayment. He said that because he acted under party directions in this respect he spent 6 months in jail in Los Angeles.

"Our purpose was to show that the utilities were the property of the people," he explained.

Mr. President, that information was revealed before the Dies committee here in the Capital of our country. It is appalling to me to learn that the Communists are so thoroughly organized in the largest city in the United States as to have absolute control, at their will, of our transportation facilities. If that be true of transportation, it is true of other public utilities, of the distribution of water through the water works, and of the distribution of light through the wires into the city.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I am not quite so alarmed as is the writer of this article about our transportation system. I believe that the railroad brotherhoods are good American Federation of Labor people, and I do not think anyone can interfere with our transportation system to any great degree.

Mr. REYNOLDS. This article refers to the transportation facilities in the city of New York.

Mr. LUNDEEN. It may be true as to that particular locality. However, the question occurs to me, How many "reds" or Communists would we have in the United States if we gave jobs to our citizens? I believe they would disappear overnight, with the exception of a few paid agents, and I understand we have them card-indexed; we know who and where they are. Their number is not great. The cry about the "reds" and the Communists would disappear if we would furnish jobs and employment to our people. I believe the able Senator agrees with me.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I thank the Senator for his suggestion.

Communism is produced by hardship and disease and sickness and unemployment and lack of educational facilities, and that kind of thing. Wipe those things out, and we will not have any Communists in the country.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8319) making appropriations for the Departments of State, Commerce, and Justice, and for the Judiciary, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes, and that the House receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 28 and 29 to the bill, and concurred therein, each with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

RIVER AND HARBOR AUTHORIZATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BAILEY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6264) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 17, 51, and 100;

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1 to 16, inclusive; 18 to 50, inclusive; 52 to 63, inclusive; 65 to 77, inclusive; 79 to 184, inclusive; 186 to 201, inclusive; and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the language inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

Guadalupe River, Texas: The construction of the 9-foot navigation channel from the Intracoastal Waterway to a point about 3 miles above Victoria as recommended in subparagraph (a) of paragraph 2, page 2, in House Document Numbered 247, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session.

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 78, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

After the word "Harbor", insert the word "California;"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 185, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

Strike out the word "Michigan" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Wisconsin"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 202, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

In lieu of the figures "$144,754,450" insert the figures "$109,985,450", and after the word "herein", strike out the words "over the seven-year period beginning July 1, 1941" and insert in lieu thereof the word "adopted"; and the Senate agree to the same.

JOSIAH W. BAILEY,
MORRIS SHEPPARD,
CHAS. L. MCNARY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. J. MANSFIELD,
JOSEPH A. GAVAGAN,
RENÉ L. DEROUEN,
GEORGE N. SEGER,
ALBERT E. CARTER,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

PROPOSED CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR PATENTS

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, on the calendar is a bill which was sent to the calendar some time ago, and has been there for a number of months. It is No. 810 on the calendar, Senate bill 2687, to establish a circuit court of appeals for patents. It is one of the conceptions of the patent law which was under discussion by the committee upon which this body had two or three representatives, including the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING].

There has been some discussion among Senators who were interested regarding the desirability of having the Judiciary Committee of the Senate examine the bill. Personally, I have no objection to that course. The bill came to the Committee on Patents, of which I am chairman, and was favorably reported by that committee; but since it involves the creation of a new court, I found in my heart no legitimate objection to having the matter referred to the Judiciary Committee, so that the bill might there be examined. I am going to ask—I hope I shall not embarrass the able chairman of the Judiciary Committee by the request—that the bill be given prompt consideration by his committee, and, in that connection, that a subcommittee be appointed to examine it.

I desire to say to my brethren of the Senate that the bill provides for virtually an orthodox circuit court of appeals. Many features which were originally suggested for the bill, such as a committee of experts to advise with the court, have been deleted from the bill. It differs from the orthodox circuit court of appeals only in two respects: First, the court is ambulatory, and it was regarded as being desirable to make it somewhat ambulatory. Second, it has exclusive appellate jurisdiction in patent cases, because so many cases involving the same patent have resulted differently in different circuits.

Every well-informed lawyer knows that the courts are not to blame for that condition. Perhaps a case is well presented in one court, and goes off on a different state of facts in another; but, nevertheless, we have here the incongruous and inept picture of a man having a patent, or a claim to a patent, and getting three or four conflicting decisions in the United States. So some very able lawyers conceived this bill as one legitimate approach to a solution of the problem.

I do not say that the bill possesses all the virtues which have been claimed for it, but I am also convinced that it does not possess all the evils which a few folks have attributed to it; but I think it is the part of wisdom to have my brethren on the Judiciary Committee examine the bill, and I hope they will be generous enough to dispose of it by making either a favorable or an unfavorable report or giving to all of us of the Senate their best judgment on what should be done.

The patent situation in the country is an unfortunate one. It is horribly complicated by a number of conflicting decisions which I think unjustly have been regarded as a reproach to the courts; and yet every Member of this body knows that the courts are not responsible for some of the mess created by the inability of lawyers to see through the same spectacles regarding the problem.

Mr. KING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BONE. I yield.

Mr. KING. Let me say to my able friend from Washington that this question has received much attention at the hands of the so-called Economy Committee, of which I am a member. The testimony before the committee was not by any means unanimous in favor of the establishment of a court of patent appeals. Personally I have not favored the establishment of such a court, and when the bill came up for consideration, when Senator McAdoo was chairman of that committee, I objected to its consideration. Many persons, lawyers as well as others, interested in obtaining patents, who have spoken to me, have indicated that they were quite satisfied with the present system, and the volume of differences of opinion on the part of the courts is not so great as many think. Some time ago I had my secretary examine the decisions of the circuit courts of appeal to ascertain the frequency with which diverse opinions were brought to the attention of the respective courts, and, in view of the complaints which had come to me, I was amazed to find that such a limited number of appeals had been taken to the circuit courts of appeals based upon different interpretations of the same case or the same facts by various courts of appeal.

However, as a member of the Committee on the Judiciary—and I am sure the chairman of the committee, who is present, will join me—I assure the Senator that the matter will receive very prompt consideration.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I should like to add one other statement. It may be that those who favor the approach to this problem sought to be relieved by the bill have been too ardent in their support of the principles embodied in it, but as to that there probably may be a genuine difference of opinion. In the hearings we tried to have presented as complete a presentation of the viewpoints of the various interested parties as possible. A great many lawyers are sympathetic with the proposal, and, as the Senator from Utah has so well pointed out, a great many lawyers are not only doubtful about it but object to it generally. However, it is something which I think we might well consider, and I believe it is entirely proper to have the Committee on the Judiciary consider the bill. It is a simple bill.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, though I listened closely to what the able Senator from Washington stated, my attention was diverted at the beginning of his remarks. I assume he is speaking regarding Senate bill 7424.

Mr. BONE. No; I refer to Senate bill 2687, No. 810 on the calendar, a bill to establish a Circuit Court of Appeals for Patents.

Mr. ASHURST. What was the request of the Senator?

Mr. BONE. I am asking now that the bill, which is on the calendar, be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. My particular request was that the chairman of the committee and his colleagues give the bill as prompt attention as I hope they will find it in their hearts to do, so that we may have the best judgment of the committee on the bill. It has interested a great many people, and I have had much correspondence about it. My personal thought is that it is a wise piece of legislation, although many have differed with me in that respect.

Mr. ASHURST. While it is true that we have before the Committee on the Judiciary nearly 300 bills, some of which require us to make very fine distinctions and search many pages of the lawbooks, if the bill to which the Senator from Washington refers should be sent to the Committee on the Judiciary the chairman will name a subcommittee to consider it and will take pleasure in conferring with the able Senator from Washington as to whom he would prefer to have on the subcommittee. I shall be very glad to do that. While we are driving ahead with many other bills, I assure the Senator that any request he may make will not be disregarded.

Mr. BONE. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington asks unanimous consent that Senate bill 2687 be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TELEVISION IN THE UNITED STATES

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, I should like to protest, in a very few words, against the delay in the matter of the F. C. C. decision on television. We have read much in the press in these last days on that subject. There is much unemployment in the television industry and much idle capital. I do not see why there should be long extensions of time for filing briefs, and why officials who have the power to decide should be absent. Great Britain is progressing after nearly 4 years of television. Germany is in the front ranks of television. We have made considerable progress in this country, and I think we should go ahead with it.

Mr. President, may I at this time draw attention of the Senate and the people of the United States to the apparent unconcern of certain people to the deplorable unemployment situation in this country today. I know there is considerable controversy over just how many unemployed people we have, but the fact that the President asks a tremendous sum for relief is ample evidence that the situation is deplorable. You cannot laugh off 12,000,000 unemployed.

Late in March I was astounded to read that the Federal Communications Commission had far exceeded its authority in arbitrarily stopping the development of the television industry, because some members of the Commission did not like certain advertising copy placed in New York newspapers. I thought it was a very flimsy excuse, and when I read a score or more of editorials condemning this bureaucratic seizure of power, I thought the best way to secure intelligent action was to have the Senate look into the matter. Accordingly, I introduced a resolution April 1 asking that the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce investigate the actions of the Federal Communications Commission in connection with the development of television and, in particular, to ascertain whether the Commission exceeded its authority and whether it had interfered with the freedom of the public and of private enterprise.

CHAIRMAN FLY AND COMMISSIONER CRAVEN

That same day I learned in the press that the Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, James Lawrence Fly, was to deliver an address the next night over the National Broadcasting Co. red network and the Mutual Broadcasting System. I listened to that address and, frankly, it did not give me adequate reason for this unusual action by the Commission. I had read in the newspapers where one of the commissioners, the Honorable T. A. M. Craven, had dissented from this action by the Commission, and so I addressed a letter to him and asked him if he would give me his reasons. I considered it an official communication from a United States Senator to a member of a commission the Congress had created.

Commissioner Craven replied to me, and from his communication I was more than ever convinced that the action of the Commission, in stopping the development of television was entirely unjustified.

LUNDEEN RESOLUTION ON TELEVISION AND HEARING

On Monday, April 8, the Interstate Commerce Committee met and spent an entire day considering the resolution. At that hearing the president of one of the manufacturers of television sets said that television would surpass sound broadcasting with a billion-dollar turn-over, as compared to $600,000,000 in present-day radio. He said that television would pave the way for more than 500,000 jobs. A small manufacturer approached me after the hearing and told me that in his case he would put 60 men to work at once if the Commission lifted its ban.

The hearing was adjourned the next day when Commissioner Craven was unable to attend because the Commission had reopened hearings on the television situation, and that afternoon President Roosevelt stated in a press conference, according to the newspapers, that the situation would be adjusted later this spring, or this summer. I have since learned that when the hearings before the Federal Communications Commission were adjourned on Friday, April 12, some of the interested parties asked permission to file briefs and the Commission granted them 2 weeks for this purpose.

HALF A MILLION JOBS IN TELEVISION

Now, here was the situation in brief—

Thousands of men could be taken into private employment at once and eventually a half million men could be given jobs if a bureau here in Washington would abandon an entirely illegal and arbitrary position. So far as legality is concerned, the F. T. C. has the authority to supervise advertising and not the F. C. C. The chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee said publicly that the various factions involved could get together and give this promising industry the green light.

Now, everyone at all connected with television was here in Washington. They could have prepared their briefs in 48 hours and had intelligent action by the Commission immediately. Instead of that, so as to accommodate a few attorneys and perhaps because the chairman of the Commission was leaving on a vacation trip, all these jobs in private industry were held up for weeks. I think it was ridiculous, for I believe Chairman Fly should have stayed on the job, ordered the attorneys to get their briefs in by the following Monday morning, and have a decision out of the Commission that very day.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION REGULATES ADVERTISING, NOT THE F. C. C.

I know that in trying to get away from the barrage of criticism for its arbitrary action, the administration dragged in a red herring by talking about the delay being necessary to prevent monopoly. I just want to read to you an editorial from the last edition of Broadcasting, the national radio magazine published here in Washington, which is entitled "Locks and Keys, Railroad Tracks and Television." Here it is:

[From Broadcasting, the national radio magazine]

Behind the hue and cry over television, which, despite President Roosevelt's information, cannot possibly become a monopoly unless the Government wills it so, lies a gnawing fear in the broadcasting industry that the F. C. C., far from cooperating with radio progress, is being impelled by a crack-down if not a giant-killer complex. The whole television uproar, the expense of needless hearings, the frayed nerves might have been avoided had the F. C. C. majority shown a keener sense of public as well as industry relations.

Going far out of bounds in basing their suspension order in R. C. A.'s promotional activities, properly a subject for Trade Commission scrutiny, if misleading, they more easily might have called in the principals and, across the table, employed the powers of amicable persuasion. Or they might simply have issued a statement warning the public that television standards are not yet established and that buyers should beware lest sets become obsolete or require later radical changes.

To us the argument falls flat that a few thousand sets, sold in one restricted area between now and the time the F. C. C. might get around to establishing standards, might freeze standards at the R. C. A. (and R. M. A.) levels. R. C. A. was frankly straining at the leash to get started. It had $10,000,000 invested in television; it had the transmitting equipment, the production facilities, and the men. Through R. M. A. some of the best brains in the art had agreed to certain scanning and framing methods, subject to later change at relatively small expense. It quite properly did not want to wait for others not yet ready or not yet authorized to broadcast their own systems before its New York television pictures were made available to a wider audience.

R. C. A. finds itself on the popular side of its issue with the F. C. C. in the preponderant editorial opinion of the press and among subtantial bipartisan congressional elements. Mr. Roosevelt need have no fear of monopoly so long as the F. C. C. has the authority to license competing telecasting stations and systems and exercises the authority to fix standards, which no one disputes. The fact remains, however, that only one system was ready for public introduction; that few other stations are operating; that no standards have been fixed, and the F. C. C. report itself stated they should remain flexible; and that no date for official standards had even been hinted until all this uproar.

The fact also remains that R. C. A.-N. B. C., not to forget C. B. S., Don Lee, Farnsworth, and other responsible elements were willing to go ahead (we think wrongly) with limited commercial operation, whereby the sponsor might pay only program costs, implying the right of the F. C. C. to check income records and perhaps indirectly control rates. The television interests, as did the F. M. advocates, should have demanded full commercial privileges or none.

The whole episode seems to have been born of pique and nurtured by truculence. Yet out of it all we have every hope that good will come. The Commission has disclaimed any authority over marketing and promotion, which is none of its affairs; it has deftly avoided an issue over attempts to exert program control; it has been shown that the industry, though fearful of its very life because of the vast reprisal powers residing in the Commission, can get up on its hind legs and command public and official attention when aroused.

Nevertheless, it is apparent that some sort of check and balance over commissions and commissioners with prejudices and predilections is needed—perhaps the administrative court sitting over independent agencies envisioned in the Logan-Walter bill, slated for action in Congress this session.

I want to tell the Senate that I agree particularly with that observation by the editor of Broadcasting when he said:

The whole episode seems to have been born of pique and nurtured by truculence.

LET TELEVISION ADVANCE

I take the time of the Senate today to demonstrate such tactics, and I do so in behalf of the unemployed men and women who could be working at jobs in private industry today if Chairman Fly had stayed on the job and the wishes of a few attorneys were not respected when it comes to the matter of filing briefs. I am frank to confess that it is very confusing to me that this administration can ask for such a tremendous relief appropriation, while at the same time bureaucrats keep people out of work. I think the unemployed throughout the land should know this, and I am sure that I am speaking for the men and women of America who want jobs, not charity, when I demonstrate it and demand that President Roosevelt communicate with Chairman Fly, get him back on the job where he belongs in this crucial period, and insist that the throttling burden of bureaucratic pettiness be lifted from the back of private industry. Half a million jobs are involved, and it is time for action.

There is a summary of the February 29 order, as well as the March 22 and March 23 orders, which I should like to have placed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the matters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REPORT OF THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION OF FEBRUARY 29, 1940

By the Commission:

As a result of study of the general problems involved, and after consideration of the record made during the hearing in the above matter, the attached rules governing the television service have been determined upon for substitution in place of the present sections 4.71–4.76 of the Commission's rules and regulations.

It will be noted that the rules being promulgated do not contemplate the issuance at this time of any standards of engineering performance. That research should not halt and that scientific methods should not be frozen in the present state of the art is fairly to be deduced from the engineering testimony of representatives of the companies represented at the hearing. Actual demonstrations to members of the Commission indicate the need for further improvement in the technical quality of television. The evidence before the Commission reveals a substantial possibility that the art may be on the threshold of significant advances.

Research in fact does and should continue in significant phases of the field. Some of this experimentation involves changes in both the number of lines and the number of frames per second. In connection with this work consideration is being given to developing the retentive quality of screens. Other research involves improvements in the mechanics of scanning, as well as various methods of propagation and reception. It is certain that improvement in the quality of television will result from these experiments and from other developments. In addition there is considerable experimentation directed toward the possibility of various screen sizes, including some much larger than exist at present. The Commission is of the opinion that the public should have available various sizes of screens. There is an admitted need to increase the size of screens, a goal which will be aided as a greater definition of image is attained and which the Commission regards as essential before widespread public endorsement of television will be realized.

Studies are being made of polarization and the related question of antennas. Various methods of synchronization are likewise being given attention. A generally accepted scheme of adequate synchronization seems essential. At present no system is generally regarded as completely acceptable; further effort is indicated. The hearing also brought into the spotlight the meagerness of data on the usefulness in this field of the higher frequencies. Research in this matter is certainly essential before embarking on any comprehensive television broadcast service. Television consumes broad bands in the ether and there is every reason why research in this field should continually climb into the higher frequencies to make adequate room for itself and to avoid further crowding of the lower-frequency channels. Opinion is quite uniform also that continued experiments in the staging and studio aspects of television performances are necessary.

Enough has been said to indicate the present state of flux of television and the fact that its progress still continues. The issuance or acceptance of transmission standards by the Commission, especially in combination with the more expensive experimental program service which will in all probability develop under these rules, would have a tendency to stimulate activity on the part both of manufacturers and the public in the sale and purchase of receivers for home use. It is inescapable that this commercial activity inspired and then reinforced by the existence of Commission standards would cause an abatement of research. To a greater or less extent the art would tend to be frozen at that point. Even more important, nothing should be done which will encourage a large public investment in receivers which, by reason of technical advances when ultimately introduced, may become obsolete in a relatively short time. The Commission has not overlooked the significant sums invested by pioneers in making possible our present knowledge of television, and it is not unsympathetic with their desire to recoup their investment in the process of bringing television's benefits to the public. It will be realized, however, that the loss to the public by premature purchase in a rapidly advancing field might in a relatively short period exceed many times the present total cost of research. Such an economic loss in the long run can rebound only to the harm of the industry. In view of the apparent proximity of improvements and of the resolution of disputed technical questions, these risks should not be taken. The Commission is, therefore, reserving the matter of issuing standards for consideration at some future time.

The same considerations which demonstrate the unwisdom of the Commission's promulgating standards at this time dictate the undesirability of the industry itself attempting to impose such a code on all points. The Commission therefore recommends that no attempt be made by the industry or its members to issue standards in this field for the time being. In view of the possibilities for research, the objectives to be attained, and the dangers involved, it is the judgment of the Commission that the effects of such an industry agreement should be scrupulously avoided for the time being. Agreement upon standards is presently less important than the scientific development of the highest standards within reach of the industry's experts.

Under the rules now being issued class II stations (those authorized to engage in a regularly scheduled program service) will be licensed only upon a showing that the equipment proposed to be employed will be technically adequate to render a service satisfactory for public reception and will conform with good engineering practice in regard to the suppression of spurious emissions, carrier noise, etc. It is recognized as essential that standards of engineering performance ultimately be issued, for without such a foundation of stability the conversion of the art to the public service will most certainly be hindered. At the appropriate time the Commission will endeavor to issue standards promptly. In the interim it is hoped that the members of the industry will make every effort to maintain among themselves a free exchange of ideas and scientific information so that their now proven valuable assistance may be available to the Commission in serviceable form. In this connection the Commission hopes that attention may be directed toward designing, building, and distributing receivers capable, insofar as is consistent with reasonable cost, of receiving or of being adjusted to receive any reasonable change in methods of synchronization or changes in number of frames or lines which may be found to be practical and licensed in the future in the operation of class II transmitting stations. Such a practice will keep to a minimum the economic loss to those acquiring receivers at this stage of the art and for that reason alone would seem to be required by the public interest. Even more important, however, this method will enable the Commission in ultimately laying down television-transmission standards to have the benefit of an adequate public trial of a variety of technical methods.

It is important that nothing said by the Commission herein be construed as an expression of a lack of confidence in the future of television. It is a mighty achievement. The pioneers in the field have made great advances. We feel that potentially television is of tremendous value to the public generally. Even now, there is no reason apparent why those members of the public to whom regular television programs are available, who are conscious of the fluid state of the art, and who are willing to assume the financial risks involved for the obvious benefits of current programs, should not acquire receivers. Nor is it suggested that television broadcasters should be barred from going forward in program production and sponsorship. The progress made by the industry is worthy of recognition, and the present state of the art renders appropriate the further steps permitted by the rules being established.

In view of the fact that certain groups in the industry wish to stress technical research and others program experimentation, one class of experimental stations is created for each of these problems, being designated as class I and class II stations, respectively. Class I stations will carry forward technical investigations and may be assigned more than one channel, while each class II station is to be designed to experiment in program production and technique and will be permitted to operate on one channel only. A license may incorporate provision for both class I and class II operations in appropriate cases upon a proper showing, particularly where the technical research proposed is to be conducted on the higher frequencies allotted to the television service.

The rules further require that there be added to each station identification announcement the following statement:

"This is a special television broadcast made by authority of the Federal Communications Commission for experimental purposes."

Beginning September 1, 1940, class II stations may begin limited commercial operations under which advertising will be permitted in connection with programs, the cost of which is borne by sponsors. The rules stress, however, that emphasis on the commercial aspects of the operation at the expense of program research is to be avoided.

At this time no change is being made in the channels assigned to television by the present rules and regulations. This general question is being held open until after consideration of the evidence adduced at the hearing on aural broadcasting on frequencies above 25,000 kilocycles.

In other respects the new rules are based substantially on those proposed by the Television Committee but some revisions have been made. Recommendations of the Television Committee which are not reflected in the rules or report now being issued have not been acted upon by the Commission.

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION,
T. J. SLOWIE, Secretary.

PART 4. RULES GOVERING BROADCAST SERVICES OTHER THAN STANDARD BROADCAST—VISUAL BROADCAST SERVICE

TELEVISION BROADCAST STATIONS

Sec. 4.71. Defined: The term "television broadcast station" means a station licensed for the transmission of transient visual images of moving or fixed objects for simultaneous reception and reproduction by the general public. The transmission of synchronized sound (aural broadcast) is considered an essential phase of television broadcast and one license will authorize both visual and aural broadcast as herein set forth.

(a) There shall be two types of experimental television stations, namely, "Experimental research stations" and "Experimental program stations," which shall be known as class I and class II stations, respectively.

Sec. 4.72. Licensing requirements, necessary showing:

(a) A license for a television class I station will be issued only after a satisfactory showing has been made in regard to the following, among others:

1. That the applicant has a program of research and experimentation in the technical phases of television broadcasting, which indicates reasonable promise of substantial contribution to the development of the television art.

2. That the transmission of signals by radio is essential to the proposed program of research and experimentation.

3. That the program of research and experimentation will be conducted by qualified personnel.

4. That the applicant is legally, financially, technically, and otherwise qualified to carry forward the program.

5. That public interest, convenience, or necessity will be served through the operation of the proposed station.

(b) A license for a class II station will be issued only after a satisfactory showing has been made in regard to the following, among others:

1. That the applicant has a definite plan of experimentation in the television broadcast program service which indicates reasonable promise of substantial contribution to the advancement of television broadcasting as a service to the public.

2. That the program of experimentation will be conducted by qualified personnel.

3. That program material is available and will be utilized by the applicant in rendering broadcast service to the public.

4. That a minimum scheduled program service of 10 hours per week will be maintained throughout the license period.[1]

5. That the applicant will install and operate transmitting and studio equipment technically adequate to render a service suitable for reception by the public.

6. That the operation with respect to the suppression of spurious emissions and carrier noise, safety provisions, and so forth, will be in accordance with good engineering practice.

7. That the applicant's technical facilities will be adequate to serve an area appropriate for the program of experimentation.

8. That a competent engineering study has been made of the nature, extent, and effect of interference which may result from the simultaneous operation of the proposed station and other class II television stations.

9. That the applicant is legally, financially, and otherwise qualified to render a satisfactory service to the public.

10. That public interest, conveniences, or necessity will be served through the operation of the proposed station.

SEC. 4.73. Charges:

(a) No charges, either direct or indirect, shall be made by the licensee of a television station for the production or transmission of either aural or visual programs transmitted by such station, except as provided in subsection (b).

(b) Beginning September 1, 1940, class II television licensees may make charges against program sponsors to cover the cost of programs produced for the respective sponsors; and such sponsored programs, including advertising material, may be transmitted as part of the station's experimental program service but without charge for such transmission.

(c) The limited commercialization permitted under subsection (b) above shall not take precedence over the experimental service, but shall be subordinated to it.

SEC. 4.74. Reports by class II stations:

Quarterly reports on forms prescribed by the Commission shall be made by class II television broadcast stations of their charges and costs as well as of other pertinent information which may be of assistance to the Commission in evaluating the economic feasibility of television broadcasting as a regular service to the public on a commercial basis.

SEC. 4.75. Announcements:

At the time station identification announcements are made, there shall be added the following:

"This is a special television broadcast made by authority of the Federal Communications Commission for experimental purposes."

SEC. 4.76. Scope of experimentation, limitations, and restrictions:

(a) Class I stations shall operate to conduct research and experimentation for the development of the television broadcast art in its technical phases but shall not operate to render a regularly scheduled television broadcast service to the public.

(b) No class I station shall operate when objectionable interference would be caused by such operation to the regularly scheduled broadcast service of a class II station.

(c) Class II stations shall operate to conduct television broadcast research and experimentation for the development of the art in its program phases and in connection therewith may carry out experiments with respect to power and antenna requirements for a satisfactory service to the public.

(d) Class II stations shall make all equipment changes necessary for rendering such external transmitter performance as the Commission may at any time require.

(e) Class II stations shall maintain a minimum scheduled program service of 10 hours per week throughout the license period.

SEC. 4.77. Frequency assignment:

(a) The following groups of channels are allocated for assignment to television-broadcast stations licensed experimentally:

Group A: Channel No. 1, 44,000–50,000 kilocycles; channel No. 2, 50,000–56,000 kilocycles; channel No. 3, 66,000–72,000 kilocycles; channel No. 4, 78,000–84,000 kilocycles; channel No. 5, 84,000–90,000 kilocycles; channel No. 6, 96,000–102,000 kilocycles; channel No. 7, 102,000–108,000 kilocycles.

Group B: Channel No. 8, 156,000–162,000 kilocycles; channel No. 9, 162,000–168,000 kilocycles; channel No. 10, 180,000–186,000 kilocycles; channel No. 11, 186,000–192,000 kilocycles; channel No. 12, 204,000–210,000 kilocycles; channel No. 13, 210,000–216,000 kilocycles; channel No. 14, 234,000–240,000 kilocycles; channel No. 15, 240,000–246,000 kilocycles; channel No. 16, 258,000–264,000 kilocycles; channel No. 17, 264,000–270,000 kilocycles; channel No. 18, 282,000–288,000 kilocycles; channel No. 19, 288,000–294,000 kilocycles.

[1] This provision modifies section 4.4 (d) insofar as that section applies to class II television broadcast stations.

Group C: Any 6,000-kilocycle band above 300,000 kilocycles excluding band 400,000 to 410,000 kilocycles.

(b) Each class II television-broadcast station will be assigned only one channel. Class I television stations may be assigned one or more channels as the program of experimentation requires. Both aural and visual carriers with side bands for modulation are authorized for both class I and class II stations but no emission shall result outside the authorized channel. The assignment of a channel to a class II television-broadcast station does not preclude the assignment of that channel for use by class I stations, but such a class II television station shall have priority for the use of the channel for its scheduled program service. Licenses for both a class I and a class II station may be issued to a single licensee only upon a showing that the development of the television art will be assisted thereby, particularly where authority to operate on channels in Group B or C is requested for the class I operations.

(c) Channels in groups B and C may be assigned to television stations to serve auxiliary purposes such as television relay stations. No mobile or portable station will be licensed for the purpose of transmitting television programs to the public directly.

(d) For the present no class II television broadcast station will be assigned a channel for time-sharing operation.[2]

SEC. 4.78. Power: The operating power of a class I station shall not be in excess of that necessary to carry forward the program of research, and in no case in excess of the power specified in its license.

SEC. 4.79. Supplemental report with renewal application: A supplemental report shall be filed with and made a part of each application for renewal of license and shall include comprehensive reports on the following:

(a) For class I television broadcast stations:

1. Number of hours operated.
2. Full data on research and experimentation conducted, including the power employed.
3. Conclusions, tentative and final.
4. Program for further developments of the television broadcast service.
5. All developments and major changes in equipment.
6. Any other pertinent developments.

(b) For class II television broadcast stations:

1. Number of hours operated during which programs were transmitted classified as studio performances, special events (with appropriate description), films, etc.
2. Studio equipment used and any developments made during the license period.
3. Progress made in the advancement of television broadcasting as a service to the public.
4. Financial data on cost of operation during the license period.
5. Power employed, field intensity measurements and visual and aural observations to determine the service area of the station.

ORDER NO. 65 OF MARCH 23, 1940

Whereas the Commission on January 15 to 23, 1940, held extensive public hearings preliminary to the promulgation of rules and regulations governing television-broadcast stations; and

Whereas on February 29, 1940, as a result of study of the general problems involved and after consideration of the record made during said public hearings, the Commission issued a report regarding the present state of the art of television; and

Whereas in said report, the Commission found as follows:

"Actual demonstrations to members of the Commission indicate the need for further improvement in the technical quality of television. The evidence before the Commission reveals a substantial possibility that the art may be on the threshold of significant advances. Research in fact does and should continue in significant phases of the field. * * * The issuance or acceptance of transmission standards by the Commission, especially in combination with the more extensive experimental program service which will in all probability develop under these rules, would have a tendency to stimulate activity on the part both of manufacturers and the public in the sale and purchase of receivers for home use. It is inescapable that this commercial activity inspired and then reinforced by the existence of Commission standards would cause an abatement of research. To a greater or less extent the art would tend to be frozen at that point. Even more important, nothing should be done which will encourage a large public investment in receivers which, by reason of technical advances when ultimately introduced, may become obsolete in a relatively short time. * * * It will be realized, * * * that the loss to the public by premature purchase in a rapidly advancing field might in a relatively short period exceed many times the present total cost of research."

Whereas on February 29, 1940, accompanying said report, the Commission also issued rules governing television broadcast stations, providing for two types of experimental television stations; and

Whereas since the issuance of said report and rules, certain promotional activities in connection with the sale of television transmission and receiving equipment have been engaged in by the Radio Corporation of America in collaboration with, for, or on behalf of a subsidiary or subsidiaries of said corporation which are licensees of experimental television broadcast stations; and

Whereas said promotional activities may be detrimental to the public interest by unduly retarding research and experimentation and the achievement of higher standards for television transmission; and

Whereas additional rules and regulations or revision or amendments of the rules adopted February 29, 1940, may be necessary in order to promote experimental uses of frequencies for television service and to encourage the larger and more efficient use of radio for television service in the public interest; now, therefore,

It is ordered that a further hearing be held beginning April 8, 1940, to determine whether research and experimentation and the achievement of higher standards for television transmission are being unduly retarded by the action of the Radio Corporation of America or its subsidiaries, or any other licensee, requiring any additions, modifications, revisions, or amendments of the rules adopted February 29, 1940, governing television broadcast stations, or other action by the Commission; and whether the effective date for the beginning of limited commercial operations set forth in section 4.73, subsection (b), of the Commission's Rules and Regulations should be changed from September 1, 1940, to some subsequent date.

It is further ordered that section 4.73, subsection (b), of the Commission's Rules and Regulations be suspended pending further order of the Commission.

Dated March 22, 1940.

By the Commission.

T. J. SLOWIE, Secretary.

TELEVISION HEARING REOPENED

Television promotional activities on the part of the Radio Corporation of America has prompted the Federal Communications Commission to order a further hearing, beginning April 8, to determine whether research and experimentation and the achievement of higher standards of television transmission are being unduly retarded by this company, its subsidiaries, or other licensees, and whether the effective date for the beginning of limited commercial operation should be changed from September 1 to some subsequent date. Meanwhile, that section of the new rules permitting restricted commercialization is suspended pending further order.

The current marketing campaign of the Radio Corporation of America is held to be at variance with the intent of the Commission's television report of February 29. Such action is construed as a disregard of the Commission's findings and recommendations for further improvement in the technique and quality of television transmission before sets are widely sold to the public.

The question of the present status of television transmission and the feasibility of its general reception by the public was the subject of the recent extensive hearings before this Commission. Because of the fluid state of the art and the continuance of research and experimentation, the Commission declined, for the time being, to establish television-transmission standards. Authority to issue such standards is of course vested only in the Commission. Recommendations to insure that the standards, when issued, would be based upon a sufficiently advanced technical state of the art were incorporated in the report of February 29.

"Actual demonstration to members of the Commission," the report pointed out, "indicates the need for further improvement in the technical quality of television." The Commission stressed the need of continued research in various significant phases of the field involving the number of lines and the number of frames per second, the retentive quality of screens, the mechanics of scanning, the problem of various screen sizes with particular reference to larger screens, the problem of polarization and the related question of the type of antennas, and various alternative methods of synchronization. Inherently this research and experimentation has potentialities of great value to the public.

The intent of the Commission was to give the industry further opportunity to move forward in an orderly manner and upon a sound scientific basis without causing injury to the public and resultant injury to the new industry itself, particularly to other manufacturers cooperating in seeking to bring about video improvements through experimentation rather than crowding the market with present-day receivers which may soon become obsolete. Economic loss to the public, the report warned, would be occasioned by "premature purchase in a rapidly advancing field."

Not all types of television transmission can be received by any receiver. In the present state of the art it is impossible to decide what type of transmitter will be made standard. More research and experimentation will be necessary, and is being conducted, before any such standardization can be achieved. Receiving sets constructed or on the market today may not be capable of receiving television programs from standardized television transmitters when the art has sufficiently advanced to permit such standardization. Public participation in television experimentation at this time is desirable only if the public understands that it is experimenting in reception and not necessarily investing in receiving equipment with a guaranty of its continued usefulness. Television is here to stay, but conceivably present-day receivers may for practical purposes be gone tomorrow.

---

[2] This provision modifies section 4.4 (a) insofar as it applies to television broadcast stations.

Promotional activities directed to the sale of receivers not only intensify the danger of these instruments being left on the hands of the public, but may react in the crystallizing of transmission standards at present levels. Moreover, the possibility of one manufacturer gaining an unfair advantage over competitors may cause them to abandon the further research and experimentation which is in the public interest and may result in crowding them into the market with apparatus at present efficiency levels. Rapid advance is desirable—but television is of great and permanent significance to the public. It is therefore of greater importance that the task be done thoroughly and with an eye to television's potential usefulness to the public. These are the goals which the Commission deems the public interest to require.

[Editorial from Broadcasting of April 15, 1940]

THIRD DEGREE

The F. C. C. has just written a new chapter to a running story that might well be titled "Bureaucracy in Action." Its new application form for standard broadcast stations (covering also modifications of licenses of existing stations) marks a new high in what is viewed in some quarters as an all-front crusade to crack business.

We cannot fathom the F. C. C.'s object in propounding 42 pages of questions, some of which border on the impossible, ridiculous—and possibly unlawful in the light of the Supreme Court opinion in the Sanders case, which seems to have stripped it of authority over business and program operations. Right now we hazard the prediction that the new form requirements, if enforced, will discourage new capital from entering radio and perhaps have the effect of deadlocking development.

No one will protest the right of the licensing authority to ascertain the citizenship, financial responsibility, character, and standing of new station applicants. The law requires that the F. C. C. satisfy itself on these scores. Similarly, the F. C. C.'s apparent aim of eliminating unnecessary hearings is all to the good. But when it essays to eliminate all hearings, which appears its intent, and grant licenses or modifications on a sort of correspondence-school basis (provided the applicant can pass the new I. Q. test), there is room for question.

To answer its multifarious questions would require a composite of Philadelphia lawyer, clairvoyant, genealogist, certified public accountant, and engineer. Some of the questions are literally impossible to answer. Others are utterly improper on their face. All in all, it would take months for a group of men to get together and provide the requested data covering financial and personal matters only. Totally aside from questions relating to earnings of applicants during preceding years, litigation from traffic violations to divorce cases in which they may have been involved, relatives who may have been in radio, conversations they may have had about the radio project, and future arrangements they might make if they get the station—aside from all these, the application form is depressing.

In the Sanders case the Supreme Court said flatly that Congress gives the F. C. C. no supervisory control of programs, business management, or station policy. Yet the new form requests a complete break-down of proposed service, both commercial and sustaining, together with percentages to be devoted to each. And beyond that it wants the names and full particulars about the citizenship, experience, salaries, and duties of each of the station's personnel. It wants to know about all conversations concerning network affiliations, and about recorded programs to be broadcast.

How the F. C. C. can reconcile this all-inclusive fishing spree with the Supreme Court opinion, or with its avowed policy of encouraging competition in broadcasting is beyond us. We thought the F. C. C., in the light of the Sanders case, would really become a supertraffic cop of the ether. Instead, the first shot out of the box following that ruling, it seems to strike at every phase of private industry operation which the Court held was forbidden to it.

[From Radio Week of April 3, 1940]

F. C. C. BUNGLING

The television industry was dealt a severe blow by the drastic order of the Federal Communications Commission suspending its previous decision authorizing the limited sponsorship of television programs after September 1, and announcing that hearings on the video art will be reopened next week. The F. C. C. took this action because it did not approve of a television-set merchandising campaign inaugurated by the Radio Corporation of America, "since television is in a fluid state and present-day receivers might soon become obsolete."

The brief history of radio itself, from the crystal-set days to the present, has been a period of rapid scientific advancement with resultant obsolescence. The crystal set was replaced by the battery model, which, in turn, made way for the $500 deluxe radios with B eliminators. Then followed all-electric receivers, completely housed console radios with dynamic speakers, superheterodyne sets, and now the all-in-one instruments offering complete home entertainment. Still, there has never been a public cry of obsolescence. Both the automobile industry and aviation have passed through similar periods of rapid development, and scientific improvements in these and other fields will continue as long as engineering ingenuity and the desire for new and better things exist.

There will always be obsolescence as long as enterprising pioneers continue their research and as long as the public retains its desire for the latest in engineering development. The wireless machine that Marconi developed and the incandescent lamp invented by Edison are obsolete.

In launching its television campaign, R. C. A. stated that:

"It is now possible for the R. C. A. to announce the extension of its plans, to provide, first, a regular television program service in the New York area; second, the offering to the public of receiving sets at moderate prices within the reach of the average American family; and third, the initial step in the construction of a television radio relay system as a means of inter-connecting television transmitters for simultaneous service to and from other communities."

Not only is the F. C. C. decision unsound, in our opinion, but more important still, it is an abuse of its powers. The F. C. C. was established by Congress to allocate wave lengths for radio and television transmission so as to prevent interference that the public interest might be served. The United States Supreme Court, in an opinion rendered only last week by Justice Owen Roberts, defined clearly the powers of the Commission. The Supreme Court held in discussing the issuance of licenses for broadcasting that:

"The act (Communications Act) does not essay to regulate the business of the licensee. The Commission is given no supervisory control of the programs, of business management, or of policy. In short, the broadcasting field is open to any one provided there is an available frequency over which he can broadcast without interference to others, if he shows his competency, the adequacy of his equipment and financial ability to make good use of the assigned channel."

This certainly does not give the F. C. C. the authority to regulate the merchandising of television receivers, radio sets, frequency modulation sets or what have you. Nor does it give the Commission the right to decide whether some sets will become obsolete. Last week's Supreme Court ruling further stated that "the Communications Act recognizes that broadcasters are not common carriers and are not to be dealt with as such. Thus the act recognizes that the field of broadcasting is one of free competition."

This usurpation of power has directly affected the jobs of thousands of workers engaged in manufacturing and merchandising television, and has upset the immediate plans of at least a half-dozen producers of television receivers for the home.

The few thousand owners of television receivers have been more than satisfied with the quality of the pictures available with their sets and with the type of visual programs presented by the New York station. Reports from set owners reveal this. At the reduced prices announced 2 weeks ago, the F. C. C., even if merchandising methods were within the scope of its authority—and it certainly is not—would not have been justified in acting as it did. The average purchaser would be glad to pay a couple of hundred dollars, or perhaps less, even if he knew it might become obsolete later on. One program, such as the Baer-Nova fight, might be worth the price of a set for some owners.

Not only have television manufacturers voiced their protests over the Commission's act, but metropolitan New York dealers who have acquired stocks of merchandise and were beginning to move sets at an excellent pace have denounced the ruling. "The F. C. C. not only wrecked our television campaign but is likely to cut deeply into radio-set sales, which were expected to boom along with television," was the criticism made by the head of the dealers' group of the Electrical & Gas Association of New York, while the comment of an executive of a leading chain of retail stores was that "it killed a good business."

It should not be overlooked that the F. C. C. decision on television issued on February 29, authorizing limited sponsorship of programs but refusing to "freeze" standards, met with the approval of both factions in the television controversy. Advocates of 441-line pictures and proponents of other systems both hailed the February 29 decision as "a forward step in the development of television." This ruling was a compromise decision which met with approval of all sides.

If the F. C. C. is to serve the public welfare, it should first of all rescind its latest order and restrict its activities to its delegated powers.

RESOLUTION INTRODUCED BY SENATOR LUNDEEN APRIL 1, 1940, AND REFERRED TO THE COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Whereas the Federal Communications Commission on February 29, 1940, issued an order permitting limited commercial sponsorship of television beginning September 1, 1940; and

Whereas television interests immediately launched a manufacturing, advertising, and sales-promotion campaign; and

Whereas the Federal Communications Commission on March 22, 1940, rescinded its order of February 29, 1940, with resultant confusion in the minds of the public and causing abandonment of manufacturing, advertising, and sales programs which had, in effect, been authorized by the Commission's earlier ruling: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce is hereby requested to investigate the actions of the Federal Communications Commission in connection with the development of television and, in particular, to ascertain whether the Commission has exceeded its authority, and whether it has interfered with the freedom of the public and private enterprise.

TELEVISION IN GREAT BRITAIN AND GERMANY

Source: Whitaker's Almanac, London, 1940.

While it has undoubtedly been marking time in the important aspect of its development as a public service, television in Britain has made big strides technically during the past year. So far, only one British Broadcasting Corporation television transmitter has been in operation. The vast proportion of our population have never seen a moving image on the television screen. Only for a relatively small proportion of that population have regular transmissions so far been provided. All the provincial areas of Britain are still patiently expectant, awaiting the long-promised official announcement which will indicate the method of approach to the great task of spreading a television network over Britain when peace comes.

For the past 2 years it has been the proud boast that Britain has led the world in television. At the moment that lead is still maintained. In no other country could one see an exhibition of television receivers, all available for purchase by the public, such as that which created so much interest at Radiolympia in August. This remarkable display of what British manufacturers are already doing in the sphere of television was sufficient proof that they at least are giving a lead to the world. The number of radio manufacturers selling television receivers at Radiolympia in 1939 was at least 50 percent greater than in the previous year. Many of them showed a much wider range of television apparatus. The cheapest television receiver was priced at about 26 guineas. A receiver capable of reproducing the ordinary wireless program on three wave bands, as well as the television program from Alexandra Palace, can now be bought for about 35 pounds. Luxury instruments, incorporating an auto-radio receiver and a television unit, are offered at prices in the region of 130 pounds. Probably it will not be long before an enterprising manufacturer of this type of instrument also incorporates in it means for showing home movies on the television screen, thus embracing in one instrument the four main facilities for home entertainment.

The British radio manufacturers have made considerable efforts during the past year to speed up the development of the British Broadcasting Corporation television service. Realizing the technical and economic problems standing in the way they signed to provide a second transmitter to cover a considerable area in the midlands and the north. A rapid extension to cover these and other thickly populated areas would stimulate the television boom for which the manufacturers were waiting and for which they were obviously well prepared. It is equally clear, on the other hand, that those who control the development of the service have been weighing their decisions well.

Both the theatrical managers and the cinema magnates are divided in their views on what the future of television may mean to them. While the executives of some cinema companies express fear of television, others have announced their intention to adapt themselves to the changing circumstances it will introduce. For instance, Mr. Isidore Ostrer, of the Gaumont British Corporation, has announced that his company will install television receiving apparatus and screens in a large number of cinemas in their extensive circuit. This announcement was a recognition of the success of the first public occasion on which television was actually demonstrated on a cinema screen, when all the details of an important boxing contest were clearly seen by an astonished audience.

In the United States of America television is rapidly being developed with extensive experimental work, in which the results of the pioneer work in British have played a useful part. Public demonstrations have caused much interest.

In Germany it had been planned to begin regular television transmissions similar to those of the British Broadcasting Corporation next year. It had been expected that the first transmitters would be erected in Berlin and on the Brocken. The German wireless industry had been invited to design a standard receiver, which would sell at something over £30. As in Britain, however, the war has put a temporary end to television development in the Reich.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations (and withdrawing the nomination of Eli R. Diller, to be postmaster at Paradise, Pa.), which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. MILLER, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Herbert F. Goodrich, of Pennsylvania, to be a judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, vice Francis Biddle, resigned.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the nominations of sundry officers for transfer or promotion in the Regular Army.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the Calendar.

POSTMASTERS (NOMINATION REPORTED ADVERSELY)

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Frank K. Barnhart, to be postmaster at Linwood, Pa., which had been reported adversely.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that that nomination be rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is rejected.

POSTMASTERS (NOMINATIONS FAVORABLY REPORTED)

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters which had been favorably reported.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that the nominations of postmasters which have been favorably reported be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE MARINE CORPS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Marine Corps.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask that the nominations in the Marine Corps be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the Calendar.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Tuesday, May 7, 1940, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received May 6 (legislative day of April 24), 1940

WORK PROJECTS ADMINISTRATION

Carl W. Smith, of Washington, to be Work Projects Administrator for Washington.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

Hon. LEWIS B. SCHWELLENBACH, of Washington, to be United States district judge for the eastern district of Washington, vice Hon. J. Stanley Webster, retired.

JUDGE OF THE JUVENILE COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Hon. Fay L. Bentley, of the District of Columbia, to be judge of the Juvenile Court for the District of Columbia. Judge Bentley is now serving in this post under an appointment which expired February 23, 1940.

UNITED STATES MARSHALS

Mr. Bernard Fitch to be United States marshal for the district of Connecticut. Mr. Fitch is now serving in this post under an appointment which expired February 12, 1940.

Wayne Bezona, of Washington, to be United States marshal for the eastern district of Washington. Mr. Bezona is now serving in this office under an appointment which expired February 20, 1938.

Artis J. Chitty, of Washington, to be United States marshal for the western district of Washington. Mr. Chitty is now serving in this office under an appointment which expired June 16, 1938.

COAST GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES

The following-named officers in the Coast Guard of the United States:

TO BE LIEUTENANT COMMANDERS, TO RANK AS SUCH FROM MAY 25, 1939

Lt. Philip E. Shaw
Lt. Earle G. Brooks
Lt. Henry T. Jewell
Lt. Gordon A. Littlefield
Lt. Frank Tomkiel

TO BE LIEUTENANTS, TO RANK AS SUCH FROM MAY 25, 1939

Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Reinhold R. Johnson
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Garland W. Collins
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) John R. Henthorn
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Emil A. Pearson
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Hollis M. Warner
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Walter B. Millington
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Walter W. Collins
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) John P. German
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Oscar C. Rohnke
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Karl O. A. Zittel
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Gilbert I. Lynch
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) George R. Leslie
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Joseph A. Bresnan
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Carl R. Stober
Lt. (Jr. Gr.) John R. Kurcheski

TO BE A LIEUTENANT, TO RANK AS SUCH FROM JULY 1, 1939

Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Frederick C. Wild

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO BE COLONELS, WITH RANK FROM APRIL 30, 1940

Lt. Col. John Griffeth Booton, Ordnance Department.
Lt. Col. Frederick Gilbreath, Cavalry.
Lt. Col. George Richmond Hicks, Infantry.
Lt. Col. James Blanchard Crawford, Coast Artillery Corps.
Lt. Col. Haig Shekerjian, Chemical Warfare Service.

TO BE COLONELS, WITH RANK FROM MAY 1, 1940

Lt. Col. Benjamin Curtis Lockwood, Jr., Infantry.
Lt. Col. Harrison Henry Cocke Richards, Air Corps (temporary colonel, Air Corps).
Lt. Col. Carroll Armstrong Bagby, Infantry.
Lt. Col. Arthur Bayard Conard, Cavalry.
Lt. Col. Gregory Hoisington, Infantry.
Lt. Col. Jesse Amos Ladd, Infantry.
Lt. Col. Paul William Baade, Infantry.

TO BE LIEUTENANT COLONEL, WITH RANK FROM APRIL 26, 1940

Maj. Frank Curtis Mellon, Field Artillery.

TO BE LIEUTENANT COLONELS, WITH RANK FROM APRIL 30, 1940

Maj. Donald Wilson, Air Corps (temporary lieutenant colonel, Air Corps).
Maj. John Derby Hood, Cavalry.
Maj. Claude Greene Hammond, Infantry.
Maj. James Patrick Moore, Infantry.
Maj. Dorris Aby Hanes, Quartermaster Corps.
Maj. Frank Austin Heywood, Quartermaster Corps.
Maj. John Jacob Bethurum Williams, Field Artillery.
Maj. William Henry Halstead, Infantry.
Maj. Randolph Gordon, Infantry.
Maj. Charles McDonald Parkin, Infantry.
Maj. Philip Coleman Clayton, Cavalry.
Maj. William Hays Hammond, Infantry.
Maj. Theodore Russell Maul, Quartermaster Corps.

TO BE LIEUTENANT COLONELS, WITH RANK FROM MAY 1, 1940

Maj. John Amos Nelson, Quartermaster Corps.
Maj. Joseph Leonard Tupper, Infantry.
Maj. William Francis Heavey, Corps of Engineers.
Maj. Robert Marks Bathurst, Field Artillery.
Maj. Daniel Noce, Corps of Engineers.
Maj. Willis Edward Teale, Corps of Engineers.
Maj. Clark Kittrell, Corps of Engineers.

TO BE MAJOR, WITH RANK FROM APRIL 26, 1940

Capt. Clarence Page Townsley, Field Artillery.

TO BE MAJORS, WITH RANK FROM APRIL 30, 1940

Capt. Robert Hilton Offley, Infantry.
Capt. John Mesick, Field Artillery.
Capt. Francis Parker Tompkins, Cavalry.
Capt. John Arthur Weeks, Quartermaster Corps.
Capt. Frederick William Gerhard, Chemical Warfare service.
Capt. Cornelius Comegys Jadwin, Cavalry.
Capt. Jacob Gunn Sucher, Ordnance Department.
Capt. Howard Harvey Newman, Coast Artillery Corps.
Capt. Richard Gray McKee, Infantry.
Capt. William Lillard Barriger, Cavalry.
Capt. Frederick Williams Fenn, Cavalry.
Capt. Joseph Charles Kovarik, Infantry.
Capt. Jonathan Lane Holman, Ordnance Department.
Capt. Wynot Rush Irish, Infantry.
Capt. Francis Earle Rundell, Quartermaster Corps.
Capt. Royal Adam Machle, Infantry.
Capt. Leonard Randall Nachman, Infantry.
Capt. Clark Hazen Mitchell, Field Artillery.
Capt. William Maynadier Miley, Infantry.
Capt. George Baird Hudson, Cavalry.
Capt. Harry Clay Mewshaw, Cavalry.
Capt. Alfred Armstrong McNamee, Infantry.
Capt. Francis Joseph Achatz, Field Artillery.
Capt. Leon Calhoun Boineau, Infantry.
Capt. Harold Wilbert Gould, Infantry.
Capt. George Bittmann Barth, Field Artillery.
Capt. Harry Benham Sherman, Infantry.
Capt. Frank Thorpe Turner, Cavalry.
Capt. Thomas Quinton Donaldson, Jr., Cavalry.
Capt. Philip Edward Gallagher, Infantry.
Capt. Carroll Kimball Leeper, Infantry.
Capt. Charlie Quillian Lifsey, Quartermaster Corps.
Capt. Hugh McCalla Wilson, Jr., Quartermaster Corps.
Capt. Robert Trueheart Foster, Infantry.

TO BE MAJORS, WITH RANK FROM MAY 1, 1940

Capt. Frederick von Harten Kimble, Air Corps (temporary Major, Air Corps).
Capt. William Jones Hanlon, Air Corps (temporary Major, Air Corps).
Capt. John Harold McFall, Finance Department.
Capt. Howard Arnold Craig, Air Corps (temporary Major, Air Corps).
Capt. Barney Leland Meeden, Quartermaster Corps.
Capt. David Robert Stinson, Air Corps (temporary Major, Air Corps).
Capt. Joseph Theodore Morris, Air Corps (temporary Major, Air Corps).
Capt. George Wald, Quartermaster Corps.
Capt. Don Elwood Lowry, Quartermaster Corps.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate May 6 (legislative day of April 24), 1940

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

LEWIS B. SCHWELLENBACH to be United States district judge for the eastern district of Washington.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

MARINE CORPS

George T. Hall to be lieutenant colonel.
Howard N. Stent to be lieutenant colonel.
Perry K. Smith to be major.
Walter I. Jordan to be major.
Andy C. Ramsey to be chief quartermaster clerk.

POSTMASTERS

MISSISSIPPI

Joseph L. Brown, Hattiesburg.
Mrs. Willie M. Windham, Lena.
Nannie Stuart, Morton.
Myra P. Varnado, Osyka.

NORTH CAROLINA

Carl V. Bundy, Jamestown.
Woodrow McKay, Lexington.
Fred H. Holcombe, Mars Hill.

James H. McKenzie, Salisbury.
Charles O. Cooper, Saluda.
William H. Shannon, Spencer.

PENNSYLVANIA

Frank K. Myers, Alexandria.
Earl T. Zerby, Bernville.
William C. Storer, Brownsville.
Albert Van Horn, Dawson.
John C. Ellenberger, Dayton.
Frank J. Barrett, Jersey Shore.
Cecil E. Bell, Mapleton Depot.
George C. Dietz, Mechanicsburg.
Howard J. McIntyre, New Cumberland.
Stafford W. Parker, Wallingford.

RHODE ISLAND

Edgar J. Peloquin, Manville.
Ina M. Gwynn, Warwick Neck.

TEXAS

Homer Dewey Thompson, Devine.
Nellie G. Magowan, Mathis.
Frank P. McCabe, Rio Hondo.
John W. Ledbetter, Round Rock.
Grover C. Stephens, Sierra Blanca.
Robert O. Rockwood, Wharton.

VERMONT

Richard Harlie Standish, Montpelier.

WITHDRAWAL

Executive nomination withdrawn from the Senate May 6 (legislative day of April 24), 1940

POSTMASTER

PENNSYLVANIA

Eli R. Diller to be postmaster at Paradise, in the State of Pennsylvania.

REJECTION

Executive nomination rejected by the Senate May 6 (legislative day of April 24), 1940

POSTMASTER

PENNSYLVANIA

Frank K. Barnhart to be postmaster at Linwood in the State of Pennsylvania.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, MAY 6, 1940

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, Father of our spirits, we come to Thee in the name of Him who unites our hopes and seals our love; judge us not in Thy displeasure; look upon our infirmities and remember us in mercy. Bear with us in the pity of Thy heart and in the strength of Thy grace. Truly Thou art a sun and a shield, and no good thing dost Thou withhold from Thy children; be pleased to accept the grateful offerings of our hearts. Enable us always, in every situation, to honor ourselves by keeping our tongues from evil and our lips from speaking guile. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you?" Thou hast revealed Thyself in light and riches of grace; may we listen to the teaching of Thy word: "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service, and be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." We praise Thee, gracious Father, that Thy merciful providence has returned to us our beloved Speaker in good health and increased strength. In the holy name of Jesus. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, May 3, 1940, was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include four brief addresses I made on agriculture over WMBS.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

KIND TO DUMB ANIMALS WEEK

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by including two brief letters.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I hope that this will be Kind to Dumb Animals Week in the Congress of the United States.

I hope that the joint congressional committee created to investigate the Barlow liquid-oxygen bomb will be touched by the spirit of kindliness and humaneness and will not permit the week to end without rescinding its decision to use live animals in testing that terrible bomb which is heralded as the most deadly instrument of death and destruction ever invented.

Goats, which have been specially singled out for this cruel test, are friends of the human race, just as are horses and dogs. Many a person has been helped through a period of invalidism and convalescence to perfect health on a diet of goat's milk. Why should these poor, dumb creatures be made to suffer the unspeakable agony of being blown to bits or frightfully mangled when such a sacrifice is not at all necessary or desirable, in the opinion of the ordnance experts?

In a letter to Maj. Gen. C. M. Wesson, Chief of Ordnance of the War Department, dated May 1, I told him that, in my opinion, this sort of test would be highly revolting to the people of our country, and I invited him to express his opinion in regard to it. I have just received his reply, which is as follows:

Hon. LOUIS LUDLOW,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. LUDLOW: I wish to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 1, 1940, relative to the use of live animals in connection with the proposed test of the Barlow liquid-oxygen bomb. This procedure was directed by the joint congressional committee created to investigate the bomb, if and when the demonstration is conducted.

Neither the War Department nor the Navy Department considers the use of animals either desirable or necessary, as both of these services feel that the required information can be obtained from instruments which have been developed for the measurement of explosive effect.

Sincerely yours,

C. M. WESSON,
Major General, Chief of Ordnance.

I also wish to make public a letter from Maj. Nevil Monroe Hopkins, an officer on the Reserve list of the United States Ordnance Bureau and an internationally known authority on the use of high explosives. It is addressed to President Coleman, of the American Humane Association, and is as follows:

Mr. SYDNEY H. COLEMAN,
President, American Humane Association, New York, N. Y.

DEAR MR. COLEMAN: I have your letter of April 29, and I am very glad to comply with your request for a statement at this time for use in your campaign for the prevention of cruelty to animals in connection with high-explosive tests.

I am of the opinion, as a result of 35 years' work in both industrial and military explosives, together with all known ways and means of testing them, that the use of live goats or other living animals is wholly unnecessary and scientifically worthless for the purpose.

I was for 20 years assistant and later professional associate of the late Dr. Charles E. Munroe, explosive expert for the United States Bureau of Mines and the Newport Torpedo Station, United States Navy, and I have also been engaged in high-explosive development for the United States Army, Ordnance Department, and have never seen or resorted to, throughout a long term of service, the use of live animals to test or measure the force of explosive blasts.

The United States Bureau of Mines, as well as the United States Army and United States Navy, are all, to my definite knowledge, well equipped to measure and compare high explosives upon a scientific and therefore accurately set quantitative basis.

Blast meters, ballistic mortars, pressure gages, and detonation wave-velocity recorders are all standardized upon an international basis at our proving grounds and arsenals, and I can see no application of live animals to the testing of explosives, old or new, of any class, except for staging a sensational show, without the least scientific value.

Yours sincerely,

NEVIL MONROE HOPKINS.

In the light of these expert opinions, it seems to me the joint congressional committee should give up its intention to use live animals for this experiment. I hope that Senator SHEPPARD, chairman of the joint committee, will reconvene his associates and make this really and truly a Be Kind to Dumb Animals Week. I am sure the entire Nation would applaud the rescinding of this decision. [Applause.]

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, the program for this week was announced to the House on last Friday, but in making up the printed program there was a mistake made by somebody, probably by me, in giving it to the clerk to the whip.

It was announced that the Consent Calendar would be called today and would be followed by the conference report on the river and harbor bill. I notice by this memorandum that the conference report will be taken up on Tuesday. On Tuesday rules for the consideration of the continuation of appropriations for the New York World's Fair and the San Francisco World's Fair, which those people say they must have by the 11th or the Federal buildings will not open. On Wednesday there will be taken up the Department of Agriculture conference report. That is left off of this printed memorandum entirely. On Thursday the conference report on the transportation bill will be taken up. If the conference report on the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill is not completed on Wednesday, it would go over until Friday and be taken up then.

That is the program that was announced, but there was some mistake made in translating it to the sheet.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Then the rivers and harbors conference report will be taken up today?

Mr. RAYBURN. Immediately after the call of the Consent Calendar; yes.

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include a report and a letter written by the Director of the Budget.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the question of sugar refining.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow, after the disposition of the business of the day, I may be privileged to address the House for 1 hour.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow, after the completion of the special orders heretofore made, I may have permission to address the House for 45 minutes on the subject of unemployment.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by me as chairman of the Democratic State convention at Omaha on May 2, 1940.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include therein a radio address delivered by myself.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include therein an editorial from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mrs. O'DAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include an address by the Postmaster General, Mr. Farley, to the Democratic Women's Club.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include certain telegrams received in connection with the transportation bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, are we going to permit the RECORD to contain all the requests that Members of Congress receive in reference to any particular bill? It seems to me if we did, we would have the RECORD full of matter which may be vital to the welfare of individual Members, but I question very much whether we ought to include all such requests.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman object?

Mr. RICH. How many letters are we going to have?

Mr. HARRINGTON. These are my own remarks and there are two brief telegrams, not over five or six lines, which I am including in the body of my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include an address made by Mrs. Emma Louise Warren in Washington on May 1.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEARHART. I also ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to extend my remarks and include an address delivered by Hon. Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, delivered at Pittsburgh on the same day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the Thomas Jefferson Memorial and to include therein a brief newspaper article descriptive of the monument.

I also request permission to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the bill S. 3509, and to include a brief statement by the Farmers' Union.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

Mr. SECCOMBE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SECCOMBE. Mr. Speaker, according to the press, after a White House conference, it was stated that the Civil Aeronautics Authority should be placed in an executive department because it supervises the expenditure of $108,000,000 annually.

In itemizing this sum it was disclosed that it included airport appropriations, Weather Bureau appropriations, and Post Office appropriations.

The W. P. A. controls all airport expenditures. The Department of Agriculture controls all Weather Bureau expenditures. In the case of airports, the Administrator of the Authority has only the power to veto a project which is not needed. In the case of the Weather Bureau the Administrator can only make recommendations to the Secretary of Agriculture.

As to payments for the mail, the Post Office Department has full control over the mail service. The Authority only sets the rate of compensation just as the I. C. C. does in the case of the railroads.

And as everyone in the House knows, for 3 years postage revenue and payments to the domestic air lines have approximately balanced.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks on the subject of the refunding of invalidated taxes and to include therein a summary of payments that have been made under decisions of the United States Supreme Court.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a radio speech made by Fred Brinkman, the Washington representative of the National Grange, on the subject of our farm credit system.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on two subjects: First, the Bonneville project, and to include therein a short editorial; the other on the subject of loans and payments on selected Federal agencies and to include therein a short table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PRINTING ADDITIONAL COPIES OF W. P. A. HEARINGS

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, from the Committee on Printing, I report back favorably a privileged resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Concurrent Resolution 62

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That, in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act approved March 1, 1907, the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives is hereby authorized and empowered to have printed, with illustrations, for its use 2,000 additional copies of each part of the hearings held before a subcommittee of such committee during the current session pursuant to the resolution (H. Res. 130) directing the Committee on Appropriations to make an investigation and study of the Work Projects Administration as a basis for legislation, and 1,000 additional copies of the hearing held before a subcommittee of such committee during the current session on the estimates of appropriations for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, that request was made by the chairman of the Appropriations Committee?

Mr. CONNERY. By the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. TAYLOR].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THE DEMOCRATIC SCHOOL FOR WOMEN

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, last week 4,000 women attended the Democratic School for Women. The net result of their operations was that, after listening to Mrs. Roosevelt tell why we should not have peace or why we might not have peace, they all declared in favor of peace. After observing the absolute failure of the New Deal administration to recommend getting rid of any of those obstructive measures that have prevented the people of this country from being reemployed for the last 7 years, they all decided that the most important thing in the world that they could have was jobs in private industry. These accomplishments of that school make a criterion for the campaign that is coming. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

FARM TENANCY

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table House Joint Resolution 258, to amend section 8 (f) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, with a Senate amendment and agree to the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 2, line 8, strike out "reduction" and insert "reduction. Such action of local committees shall be subject to approval or disapproval by State committees."

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the amendment?

Mr. JONES of Texas. The gentleman from Kansas understands that the bill itself is intended to protect tenants in connection with the farm program in this way. If the landlord or owner reduces the number of tenants below the average of the last 3-year period, or reduces the number of acres that he operates through tenants, he shall not be entitled to any increase in benefit payments. There was a provision put in the House bill that the reduction should be automatic, that is the prohibition against increased payment should be automatic unless the county committee affirmatively found that the change was justified, such as not being able to secure tenants or for some reason satisfactory to the county committee.

The Senate makes this simple change, that the action of the county committee if taken shall be appealable to the State committee. That is the only change from the House provision; and I will state to the gentleman, and I believe he will agree, that this measure will go far toward protecting the tenants in their rights.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. Does this include the landlord although he may not be a landowner the same as if he were?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Yes. This was worded so as to include any landlord whether he is the owner of the property or not.

I used the word "landowner," but the term "landlord" is used and under the interpretation that would include anyone who is operating the land.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman is familiar with the evasion of the law that has been going on?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I understand that and we have tried to word this in such a way that it will take care of the situation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES]?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. CREAL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CREAL]?

There was no objection.

Mr. CREAL. Mr. Speaker, it is the privilege of any Member to sign a petition to take a bill from a committee. I presume it is unnecessary even to say that a Member in fairness to himself and in fairness to the other Members of the House and to the committee should first read the bill, which is only a small requirement, before they vote to discharge a committee. After having read the bill and learning what is in it, instead of by hearsay, they might perhaps find something in there to change their opinion.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS]?

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I would like to reply in 1 minute to what the gentleman from New York said about the meeting of the 4,500 Democratic women which took place in Washington recently. Of course it is true that those women found that what they wanted more than anything else to accomplish in this country was jobs, but I would like to say that in contrast to some of those who oppose their work they at least got down to business and considered and faced the real problem which confronts the country today. It is a difficult problem and it is not going to be set aside by the wave of a hand. For my part, it seems to me from what I know of the deliberations of this group that they were very much worth while, they were very vital, and a great deal was accomplished by those women. Their work will bear fruit and it will be good fruit, too. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HENNINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch on the wage-hour question.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HENNINGS]?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein the opinion of United States District Court Judge George A. Welch, of the eastern district of Pennsylvania, with regard to the activities of the Dies committee.

Th SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO]?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a resolution of the Massachusetts Schoolship Club of Washington, D. C.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech made by J. Francis Smith, chairman of the Democratic Committee of the State of Connecticut.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHANLEY]?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include a resolution on the Social Security Act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. HARTER]?

There was no objection.

CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. This is Consent Calendar day. The Clerk will call the first bill on the Consent Calendar.

FUNDS FOR COOPERATION WITH WAPATO SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 54, YAKIMA COUNTY, WASH.

The Clerk called the first bill on the Consent Calendar, H. R. 3824, to provide funds for cooperation with Wapato School District No. 54, Yakima County, Wash., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children of the Yakima Reservation.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT]?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the Consent Calendar is becoming cluttered up with bills that have been passed over without prejudice day after day. I am going to suggest to the gentleman from Michigan if he is going to ask that this bill be passed over without prejudice that it ought to go to the foot of the calendar and not just have it passed over without prejudice from one week to another. If it is passed over without prejudice, it will retain its place on the calendar and take up the time of the House in the future. These bills that have been passed over without prejudice again ought by all means to go to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. WOLCOTT. So far as I am concerned they may be removed from the calendar altogether. The reason I made the request I did was to enable the legislative committee to bring the bill out on the floor again without the stigma of objection being attached to it. The gentleman may object, and I may say that the bill necessarily goes to the foot of the calendar anyway.

Mr. RANKIN. No; I shall not object.

Mr. WOLCOTT. What is at the head of the calendar now will be at the foot of the calendar when we complete it today, because we expect there will be something like 50 or 60 bills passed on the calendar today.

It just so happens that all through this session we have called every bill on the Consent Calendar every time the Consent Calendar has been called, so it would not make much difference.

Mr. RANKIN. All right; then I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request?

There was no objection.

PASSAMAQUODDY BAY

The Clerk called the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 57) authorizing the Secretary of War to cause a completion of surveys, test borings, and foundation investigations to be made to determine the advisability and cost of putting in a small experimental plant for development of tidal power in the waters in and about Passamaquoddy Bay, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for such examinations.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

OSAGE TRIBE OF INDIANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6314, authorizing an appropriation for payment to the Osage Tribe of Indians on account of their lands sold by the United States.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL MISSISSIPPI RIVER PARKWAY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3759, to authorize a National Mississippi River Parkway and matters relating thereto.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL LAND POLICY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 1675, to establish a national land policy, and to provide homesteads free of debt for actual farm families.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

CLAIMS OF THE KIOWA, COMANCHE, AND APACHE TRIBES OF INDIANS IN OKLAHOMA

The Clerk called the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 290) referring the claims of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Tribes of Indians in Oklahoma to the Court of Claims for finding of fact and report to Congress.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI RIVER, OMAHA, NEBR.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7069, authorizing Douglas County, Nebr., to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Missouri River at or near Florence Station, in the city of Omaha, Nebr.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT OF CROP LOAN LAW

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7878, to amend the crop loan law relating to the lien imposed thereunder, and for other purposes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

DELAWARE TRIBE OF INDIANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6536, authorizing an appropriation for payment to the Delaware Tribe of Indians on account of permanent annuities under treaty provision.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

PRICES AND GRADES OF COTTONSEED AND COTTONSEED PRODUCTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8642, to establish and promote the use of standard methods of grading cottonseed, to provide for the collection and dissemination of information on prices and grades of cottonseed and cottonseed products, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I frankly do not know enough about the bill to object to it or let it go over. I do not believe any of the Members of the House know what the bill is about. This is a bill which establishes an entirely new policy. There is an indeterminate amount authorized under the bill. For the reason that so few Members seem to know what the bill is about, I ask unanimous consent that it be passed over without prejudice in the hope that the Committee on Agriculture will bring it in on a calendar Wednesday, if they have the call, or by a rule, so that we may at least find out what the bill is about.

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his request

Mr. WOLCOTT. I withhold the request, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. DOXEY. I may say that, of course, we reported this bill out of the Committee on Agriculture and our committee is in favor of it. I appreciate the fact that what the gentleman from Michigan is objecting to is a general authorization of appropriation. I am prepared to say to the gentleman that we feel this plan will not cost anything and will be self-sustaining. If that is the only objection the gentleman has to the bill, I should be perfectly willing to strike out that section authorizing the appropriation. If the gentleman insists that the Committee on Agriculture bring it up, there is no way to bring it up now except by a rule or under suspension, and that time has not arrived. The Committee on Agriculture has already been called under the calendar. I introduced this bill and reported it to the House.

There is another bill similar to this on the calendar, and I want to see if the gentleman will object to it—putting soybeans under the Standard Grading Act, which I believe is eminently proper. Soybeans and cottonseed are two products that do not have the benefit of a standard grading act. We feel that these two commodities should have the benefit of such an act. I want the best bill possible in the interest of these two commodities.

As far as an explanation is concerned, I should be delighted to make one in detail, but I do not care at this time to take up the time of the House in doing so, because I will agree to strike out the section making the general authorization in my bill, if the gentleman will let the bill pass.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I may say to the gentleman I would not insist upon that because, undoubtedly, there is much merit in the bill and, of course, the situation is controlled by the Appropriations Committee and I have confidence in the Appropriations Committee to check the situation when the proper time comes. My principal reason for reserving the right to object was to call attention to the fact that the Members did not understand this bill any more, perhaps, than I did, and to suggest that some time should be given for its consideration. It is a long bill of 14 pages and establishes a new policy. I notice there is no minority report and there does not seem to be any objection in committee to it and I do not want to assume the responsibility of stopping it because, frankly, I see some merit in it. If the gentleman thinks that the bill is all right and the committee thinks it is all right I certainly am not going to stop it. It is a House bill and must go to the Senate and it is one of those cases where, perhaps, we will let the Senate work on it and I therefore withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. DOXEY. I appreciate that and I am sure it can be worked out satisfactorily. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] has shown a fine spirit regarding his attitude on this bill. I thank him.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the Cottonseed Grading Act.

SEC. 2. (a) As used in this act—.

(1) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Agriculture.

(2) The term "cottonseed" means the seed of the cotton plant, untreated by either chemical or mechanical process other than the ordinary processes of cleaning, drying, or ginning, or such sterilization as may be required by the Secretary for quarantine purposes.

(3) The term "cottonseed products" means the primary products processed from cottonseed, namely, crude cottonseed oil, cottonseed cake, cottonseed meal, linters, and hulls.

(4) The term "market" means any place or establishment at which cottonseed or cottonseed products are bought or sold.

(5) The term "person" includes partnerships, associations, and corporations, as well as individuals.

(6) The term "interstate commerce" means commerce between any place in a State, Territory, or possession of the United States, or the District of Columbia, and any place outside thereof; or between points within the same State, Territory, or possession of the United States, or the District of Columbia, but through any place outside thereof, or within any Territory or possession of the United States, or the District of Columbia.

(b) For the purposes of this act, but not in anywise limiting the foregoing definition of interstate commerce, a transaction in respect to cottonseed or cottonseed products shall be considered to be in interstate commerce if such cottonseed or cottonseed products are part of that current of commerce usual in the cottonseed industry whereby cottonseed or cottonseed products are sent from one State with the expectation that they will end their transit, after purchase, in another, including, in addition to cases within the above general description, all cases where purchase or sale is either for shipment to another State or for manufacture within the State and shipment outside the State of any of the products resulting from such manufacture. Cottonseed normally in such current of commerce shall not be considered out of such commerce through resort being had to any means or device intended to remove such transactions in respect thereto from the provisions of this act. For the purposes of this subsection, the term "State" includes a Territory or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, or a foreign nation.

SEC. 3. It is hereby declared that transactions in cottonseed and cottonseed products involving the purchase and sale thereof as commonly conducted on markets are affected with a national public interest; that the analyzing, evaluating, and grading of cottonseed according to its physical condition, the amount of the products which can be manufactured therefrom, and other characteristics affect the prices received therefor by producers; that without uniform standards of classification and the widespread dissemination of market prices, market information, and grade information, the transactions in and prices of cottonseed and cottonseed products are susceptible to speculation, manipulation, and control, and unreasonable fluctuations and variations in prices and in quality determinations occur which are detrimental to producers and consumers generally and to persons engaged in the business of ginning, buying, selling, and processing cottonseed and cottonseed products in interstate commerce; and that such fluctuations and variations constitute a burden upon interstate commerce and make imperative the use of uniform standards of classification and the widespread dissemination of market prices, market information, and grade information for the protection of producers, consumers, and persons engaged in interstate commerce in cottonseed and cottonseed products and the public interest therein.

SEC. 4. The Secretary is hereby authorized and directed to investigate the handling, transportation, and grading of cottonseed; to establish standard specifications or methods for the sampling and grading of cottonseed; and to alter or modify any such standard specifications or methods whenever in his opinion experience indicates the need for such action. The standard specifications or methods so established, and any such alterations and modifications thereof, shall be known as the Official Cottonseed Standards of the United States and shall become effective on a date specified in the order of the Secretary establishing, altering, or modifying the same, but the date so specified shall be not less than 90 days after the date of such order.

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary is further authorized to issue to competent persons licenses to sample and certify samples of cottonseed, to grade and certify the grades of cottonseed, and he may designate officers and employees of the Department of Agriculture to perform any of such services: Provided, That persons licensed under this provision shall not be connected with or employed by cottonseed crushing mills, buyers or sellers of cottonseed.

(b) Any such license may be suspended or revoked by the Secretary whenever he is satisfied that the licensee is incompetent; that he has knowingly or carelessly sampled or graded cottonseed improperly; that he has violated any provisions of this act or of any regulation prescribed thereunder; or that he has used his license or allowed it to be used for any improper purposes; but no such license shall be revoked until the licensee shall have been informed of the charges against him and afforded an opportunity to be heard.

(c) The Secretary may prescribe by regulation the conditions under which such licenses shall be issued and may require any licensee to give bond for the faithful performance of his duties and for the protection of persons affected thereby.

SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is further authorized to establish sampling and marketing areas within the cotton-growing States.

(b) The Secretary may prescribe by regulation the conditions, standards, and methods under which cottonseed shall be sampled and graded by such licensees and by the officers and employees of the Department of Agriculture designated to perform such services.

(c) Any person who has custody of or a financial interest in any cottonseed may submit the same or samples thereof, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, to any such licensee or to any officer or employee of the Department of Agriculture designated for the purpose, for the determination of the true grades of such cottonseed or samples.

(d) The Secretary is further authorized to fix and collect such fees or charges in connection with the issuance of licenses and the sampling and grading of cottonseed pursuant to this section as he may deem reasonable, and all moneys collected from such fees and charges shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(e) Any owner of cottonseed may appeal from any certification made under this section in accordance with such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe.

(f) The Secretary shall provide by regulation for such resampling or regrading of cottonseed as he may deem necessary for the confirmation or invalidation of any certification made by a licensee or an officer or employee of the Department of Agriculture under this section. Any certification which supersedes any certifiation invalidated pursuant to this subsection shall be final.

(g) Each certification made pursuant to this section shall be binding on all officers and employees of the United States and shall be accepted in all courts of the United States as prima facie evidence of the truth of the statements contained therein.

SEC. 7. (a) The Secretary is authorized and directed to collect, authenticate, publish, and distribute, by telegraph, radio, mail, or otherwise, such timely information, including statistical information and summary reports as he deems necessary with respect to the market prices of cottonseed and cottonseed products, the volume of trading in cottonseed and cottonseed products, and the market supply and demand, location, movement, condition, and other factors affecting the prices of cottonseed and cottonseed products, and with respect to the qualities and grades of cottonseed: Provided, That in the collection and dissemination of such information, duplication of the activities of other agencies of the Government shall be avoided so far as possible.

(b) For the purpose of collecting and disseminating accurate information with respect to the qualities and grades of cottonseed, the Secretary is authorized to designate cottonseed-producing areas according to the qualities or grades of cottonseed sold or produced therein and is authorized and directed to provide for collecting and grading samples of cottonseed sold or produced therein.

(c) The Secretary is further authorized to collect and disseminate such quality of grade information as he may deem necessary with respect to individual lots of cottonseed showing point of origin.

SEC. 8. (a) Any information furnished to the Secretary by any person under the provisions of this act, except of section 6 with respect to individual lots of cottonseed quality or grade information furnished under subsection (c) showing point of origin, shall be considered as strictly confidential and shall be used only for the purpose for which it is supplied.

(b) Any officer or employee of the Department of Agriculture who without written authority of the Secretary shall publish or communicate any confidential information given into his possession by reason of his employment under the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both.

SEC. 9. (a) It shall be the duty of every individual and of every owner, operator, director, officer, or agent of any corporation, association, or partnership, operating any cottonseed-crushing mill, cotton gin, or other place or establishment where cottonseed or cottonseed products are bought or sold or held in storage, when requested by the Secretary or by any agent or employee of the Department of Agriculture acting under the instructions of the Secretary, to furnish completely and correctly, to the best of his knowledge, information concerning the prices and the grades of cottonseed and the prices of cottonseed products, owned, held, bought, or sold by such person in connection with transactions in interstate commerce or directly affecting interstate commerce, and, when so requested, to permit such agent or employee of the Department of Agriculture to examine the purchase and sales records of such transactions and to examine, sample, or grade any cottonseed involved in any such transactions.

(b) The request of the Secretary for any such information may be made in writing or by personal call by an agent of the Secretary designated by him and, if made in writing and forwarded by registered mail, the registry receipt of the Post Office Department shall be accepted as evidence of such demand.

(c) Any person who shall refuse or willfully neglect to furnish any information requested under this section, or who shall refuse to permit the examinations of purchase and sales records or the examination, sampling, weighing, or grading of cottonseed, requested under this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $1,000.

SEC. 10. (a) It shall be unlawful—

(1) For any person, in or in connection with any transaction or shipment in interstate commerce made on and after the effective date of the Official Cottonseed Standards of the United States promulgated under this act, or in any grading for the purposes of or in connection with a transaction or shipment in interstate commerce, to indicate for any cottonseed a grade which is of or within the Official Cottonseed Standards of the United States in effect under this act, by any name, description, or designation not used in said standards; or to issue any report or invoice, showing the grade of cottonseed except according to an official certificate issued by a grader of cottonseed employed or licensed as such under this act.

(2) For any person falsely to make, issue, alter, forge or counterfeit, or aid, cause, procure, or assist in or be a party to the false making, issuing, altering, forging, or counterfeiting of any certificate, stamp, tag, seal, label, or other writing issued under the authority of this act.

(3) For any person licensed by the Secretary as a sampler or grader of cottonseed under this act knowingly to sample or grade cottonseed improperly, or to make any false certification under this act, or to accept money or other consideration, directly or indirectly, for any neglect or improper performance of his duty as a sampler or grader.

(4) For any person improperly to influence, or to attempt improperly to influence, or to forcibly assault, resist, impede, or interfere with, any person licensed by the Secretary as a sampler or grader in the execution of his duties under this act.

(5) For any person falsely to represent or otherwise indicate that he is authorized by the Secretary to sample, weigh, or grade cottonseed under this act.

(6) For any person to substitute or attempt to substitute other cottonseed for cottonseed actually sampled or graded under this act.

(7) For any person falsely to represent that cottonseed has been sampled or graded under this act, or knowingly to make or cause to be made any false representation concerning cottonseed sampled or graded under this act, or knowing that cottonseed is to be offered for sampling or grading under this act, to load, pack, or arrange such cottonseed in such manner as knowingly to conceal foreign matter, or cottonseed of inferior grade, quality, or condition, or, knowing that such cottonseed has been so loaded, packed, or arranged, to offer it for sampling or grading without disclosing such knowledge to the sampler or grader before the sampling or grading takes place.

(b) Whoever violates any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both.

SEC. 11. The Secretary is authorized to publish the facts regarding any violation of this act.

SEC. 12. In construing and enforcing the provisions of this act, the act, omission, or failure of any agent, officer, or other person acting for or employed by an association, partnership, or corporation, within the scope of his employment, shall be deemed to be the act, omission, or failure of the association, partnership, or corporation as well as that of such officer, agent, or other person.

SEC. 13. The Secretary shall have access to the records of the Bureau of the Census hereafter compiled to the extent necessary to obtain the names and addresses of cotton gins and cottonseed-crushing mills.

SEC. 14. (a) The Secretary is authorized to make such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary to effectuate the purposes of this act and for such purposes may cooperate with any other department or agency of the Government, with any State, Territory, or possession of the United States, or any department, agency, or political subdivision thereof.

(b) The Secretary is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such officers and employees as may be necessary to carry out this act, but samplers and graders employed under this act on a seasonal basis and working for periods of 6 months or less during any 12-month period may be appointed without regard to the provisions of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

(c) The Secretary is authorized to make such expenditures for rent, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, and for printing, binding, telegrams, telephones, books of reference, publications, furniture, stationery, office and laboratory equipment, travel, passenger automobiles, cottonseed or cottonseed products for use in preparing methods and standards, and other supplies and expenses, including reporting services, as may be necessary for the administration of this act and as may be appropriated for by Congress.

SEC. 15. (a) In carrying out this act the Secretary, or any officer or employee designated by him for such purpose, is authorized to hold hearings, administer oaths, sign and issue subpenas, and examine witnesses. Upon the refusal by any person to appear and testify in response to a subpena so issued, the proper United States district court shall have power to compel obedience thereto.

(b) Any of the powers and duties of the Secretary under this act may be delegated to and executed by any officer, agent, or employee of the Department of Agriculture designated by the Secretary for the purpose.

SEC. 16. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary for the administration of this act.

SEC. 17. If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ADMISSION TO CITIZENSHIP OF CERTAIN ALIENS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6381, for the admission to citizenship of aliens who came into this country prior to February 5, 1917.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. LESINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TABER, Mr. MOTT, and Mr. KEEFE objected.

AMENDMENT OF MOUNT RUSHMORE MEMORIAL ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8357, to amend the Mount Rushmore Memorial Act of 1938.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4 of the Mount Rushmore Memorial Act of 1938, approved June 15, 1938, is amended as follows:

Strike out the words "fifteen hundred acres" and insert in lieu thereof the words "eighteen hundred acres."

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, at the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH], I offer an amendment, which is at the desk. The amendment was drawn to meet problems created by objections to Rushmore legislation previously expressed by the gentleman, was submitted to him today, and by him was gone over with a member of the committee of objectors on this side, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. KEAN], and the author of the bill, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER], to whom and to me he stated that the amendment was satisfactory, and with its adoption he would have no objection to the passage of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASE of South Dakota: Strike out the period and quotation marks and insert the following: "Provided, That while appropriations necessary to complete the memorial as authorized by law may be made, no part of any funds appropriated to the Rushmore Memorial Commission may be used for the development of the 300 acres herein proposed to be added to the memorial reserve, and no part of any funds appropriated under any act may be used to pay a royalty or percentage to the sculptor for any work other than that necessarily incident to the sculpturing project."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMISSION FOR THE CELEBRATION OF THE TWO HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF THOMAS JEFFERSON

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 445, to establish a Commission for the Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of Thomas Jeffereson.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby established a Commission to be known as the United States Commission for the Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of Thomas Jefferson (hereinafter referred to as the Commission), and to be composed of 19 commissioners, as follows:

The President of the United States; presiding officer of the Senate; and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, ex officio; eight persons to be appointed by the President of the United States; four Senators by the President pro tempore of the Senate; and four Representatives by the Speaker of the House of Representatives. The Commissioners shall serve without compensation and shall select a chairman from among their number.

SEC. 2. That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,000 to be expended by the Commission in accordance with the provisions of this joint resolution.

SEC. 3. That it shall be the duty of the Commissioners, after promulgating to the American people an address relative to the reason of its creation and of its purpose, to prepare a plan or plans and a program for the signalizing of the event, to commemorate which they are brought into being; and to give due and proper consideration to any plan or plans which may be submitted to them; and to take such steps as may be necessary in the coordination and correlation of plans prepared by State commissioners, or by bodies created under appointment by the Governors of the respective States and by representative civic bodies; and if the participation of other nations in the commemoration be deemed advisable, to communicate with governments of such nations.

SEC. 4. That when the Commission shall have approved of a plan of celebration, then it shall submit for their consideration and approval such plan or plans, insofar as it or they may relate to the fine arts, to the Commission of Fine Arts in Washington, for their approval, and in accordance with statutory requirements.

SEC. 5. That the Commission, after selecting a chairman and a vice chairman from among their members, may employ a secretary and such other assistants as may be needed for clerical work connected with the duties of the Commission and may also engage the services of expert advisers; and may fix their respective compensations within the amount appropriated for such purposes.

SEC. 6. The Commissioners shall receive no compensation for their services, but shall be paid their actual and necessary traveling, hotel, and other expenses incurred in the discharge of their duties, out of the amount appropriated.

SEC. 7. The Commission shall, on or before the 1st of January 1941, make a report to the Congress in order that enabling legislation may be enacted.

SEC. 8. That the Commission hereby created shall expire within 2 years after the expiration of the celebration, April 13, 1945.

SEC. 9. This joint resolution shall take effect immediately.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 8, strike out "$10,000" and insert "$5,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WOLCOTT: Page 3, line 20, after the word "expire", strike out the remainder of the paragraph and insert in lieu thereof the following: "upon the completion of its duties, but not later than April 13, 1945."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMANENT TENURE FOR STAR-ROUTE CARRIERS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1214) to provide for a more permanent tenure for persons carrying the mail on star routes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BURCH. This is the third time, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman has asked that the bill be passed over without prejudice. This bill comes before the House with the unanimous report and recommendation of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. It is a bill that has been agreed on by the star-route mail carriers and the Post Office Department and there is no contention about it. I hope that the gentleman will not ask that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. SECCOMBE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURCH. Yes.

Mr. SECCOMBE. Being a member of the subcommittee, I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that this bill does not increase the appropriation and there is no expenditure of money.

Mr. BURCH. That is correct.

Mr. TABER. But it gives an opportunity for the Post Office Department to do a lot of manipulating in connection with these contracts.

Mr. BURCH. Oh, I think the gentleman is mistaken there.

Mr. TABER. I shall be obliged to insist upon my objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BURCH. I object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. TABER. I object.

ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION TO SPECIAL ASSISTANTS TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4366) to authorize the payment of additional compensation to special assistants to the Attorney General in the case of United States against Doheny Executors.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

UNIFORM ADMINISTRATION OF VETERANS' LAWS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8930) to amend section 202 (3), World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, to provide more adequate and uniform administrative provisions in veterans' laws, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, approved June 28, 1934, as amended, is hereby amended by adding a new section thereto numbered 6, to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. There shall be no recovery of payments heretofore or hereafter made under the provisions of this act from any person who, in the judgment of the Administrator, is without fault on his part, and where, in the judgment of the Administrator, such recovery would defeat the purpose of benefits otherwise authorized or would be against equity and good conscience. No disbursing officer and no certifying officer shall be held liable for any amount paid to any person where the recovery of such amount from the payee is waived under the provisions of this section. This section shall be deemed to be in effect as of June 28, 1934."

SEC. 2. (a) That paragraphs II, III, and IV of Veterans Regulation No. 9 (a), as amended, be further amended to read as follows:

"II. Where an honorably discharged veteran of any war, or a veteran of any war in receipt of pension or compensation dies after discharge, the Administrator, in his discretion and with due regard to the circumstances in each case, shall pay, for burial and funeral expenses and transportation of the body (including preparation of the body) to the place of burial, a sum not exceeding $100 to cover such items and to be paid to such person or persons as may be prescribed by the Administrator. The Administrator may, in his discretion, make contracts for burial and funeral services within the limits of the amount herein allowed without regard to the laws prescribing advertisement for proposals for supplies and services for the Veterans' Administration. No deduction shall be made from the burial allowance because of any contribution from any source toward the burial and funeral (including transportation) unless the amount of expenses incurred is covered by the amount actually paid for burial and funeral (including transportation) purposes by a State, county, or other political subdivision, workmen's compensation commission, State industrial accident board, employer, burial association, or Federal agency: Provided, That no claim shall be allowed for more than the difference between the entire amount of the expenses incurred, and the amount paid by any or all of the foregoing agencies or organizations: Provided further, That nothing herein shall be construed to cause the denial of or a reduction in the amount of the burial allowance otherwise payable because of a cash contribution made by a burial association to any person other than the person rendering burial and funeral services: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed so as to cause payment of the burial allowance or any part thereof in any case where specific provision is otherwise made for payment of expenses of funeral, transportation, and interment under any other act.

"III. Where death occurs in a Veterans' Administration facility within the continental limits of the United States, the Veterans' Administration will (a) assume the actual cost (not to exceed $100) of burial and funeral, and (b) transport the body to the place of burial within the continental limits of the United States or to the place of burial in Alaska if the veteran was a resident of Alaska and had been brought to the United States as beneficiary of the Veterans' Administration for hospital or domiciliary care. Where a veteran dies while hospitalized under authority of the Veterans' Administration in a Territory or possession of the United States the Veterans' Administration will (a) assume the actual cost (not to exceed $100) of burial and funeral, and (b) transport the body to the place of burial within the Territory or possession.

"IV. Claims for reimbursement must be filed within 2 years subsequent to the date of burial of the veteran. In the event the claimant's application is not complete at the time of original submission, the Veterans' Administration will notify the claimant of the evidence necessary to complete the application and if such evidence is not received within 1 year from the date of the request therefor no allowance may be paid: Provided, That the Administrator is authorized and directed to adjudicate any unpaid claim filed within 2 years after the enactment of this act where death occurred on or after March 20, 1933, and claim was not filed within the regulatory period, and to grant burial allowance under the laws and regulations in effect on the date of adjudication after the enactment of this act, if all other requirements are met."

(b) That paragraph III of Veterans Regulation No. 6 (a), as amended, be further amended to read as follows:

"III. To persons unable to defray the cost thereof, transportation and other necessary expenses incidental thereto will be supplied to cover travel to a Veterans' Administration facility for domiciliary or hospital care; to cover return travel to the place from which the person proceeded to the facility, when he is regularly discharged upon completion of such care; and to cover travel involved in a transfer, deemed necessary, from one Veterans' Administration facility to another. All such travel will be subject to grant of prior authorization therefor. In the event of death of any such person within the continental limits of the United States prior to his discharge from such care, transportation expenses (including preparation of the body) for the return of the body to the place of burial within the continental limits of the United States, or to the place of burial in Alaska if the veteran was a resident of Alaska and had been brought to the United States as a beneficiary of the Veterans' Administration for hospital or domiciliary care, may be paid in the discretion of the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, when deemed necessary and as an administrative necessity. In the event of death of any such person in a Territory or possession of the United States transportation expenses (including preparation of the body) for the return of the body to place of burial within the Territory or possession may be paid."

(c) This section shall be applied to any claim for burial benefits pending in the Veterans' Administration on the date of its enactment.

SEC. 3. Where a disabled person, entitled to pension, compensation, or emergency officers' retirement pay under laws or regulations administered by the Veterans' Administration, and his wife are not living together, or where the child or children are not in the custody of the disabled person; or where, in death cases, the child or children are not in the custody of the widow, the amount of the pension, compensation, or emergency officers' retirement pay may be apportioned as may be prescribed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs.

The act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1379, ch. 460; U. S. C., title 38, secs. 45, 46, 47, and 49), with the exception of the last proviso (U. S. C., title 38, sec. 192), paragraph VII of the Veterans Regulation No. 6 series (U. S. C., title 38, ch. 12, appendix), and all other provisions of law or regulation in conflict with the foregoing are repealed or modified to conform with the provisions of this section.

SEC. 4. That paragraph IV, Veterans Regulation No. 6 (a), as amended (U. S. C., title 38, ch. 12, appendix), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"IV. No person shall be entitled to receive domiciliary, medical, or hospital care, including treatment, who resides outside of the continental limits of the United States or its Territories or possessions: Provided, That in the discretion of the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs necessary hospital care, including medical treatment, may be furnished to veterans who are citizens of the United States and who are temporarily sojourning or residing abroad, for disabilities due to war service in the armed forces of the United States."

SEC. 5. That section 3 of Public Law No. 262, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 12, 1935, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentence: "From and after the date of approval of this amendatory act this section shall be construed to prohibit the collection by set-off or otherwise out of any benefits payable pursuant to any law administered by the Veterans' Administration and relating to veterans, their estates, or their dependents, of any claim of the United States or any agency thereof against (a) any person other than the indebted beneficiary or his estate; or (b) any beneficiary or his estate except amounts due the United States by such beneficiary or his estate by reason of overpayments or illegal payments made under such laws relating to veterans, to such beneficiary or his estate or to his dependents as such: Provided, however, That if the benefits be insurance payable by reason of yearly renewable term or of United States Government life (converted) insurance issued by the United States, the exemption herein provided shall be inapplicable to liens existing against the particular insurance contract on the maturity of which the claim is based, to secure unpaid premiums or loans on such contract or interest on such premiums or loans: Provided further, That nothing in this amendatory act shall be construed to modify or repeal section 7 of Public Law No. 425, Seventy-fourth Congress, enacted January 27, 1936 (38 U. S. C. 687–b; 49 Stat. 1101)."

SEC. 6. That on and after the date of enactment of this act, World War veterans otherwise entitled to the statutory award under the provisions of the last paragraph of section 202 (3), World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, for the loss of the use of one or more feet or hands, shall be paid $35 per month additional compensation in lieu of $25 per month previously authorized.

SEC. 7. Section 1 of Public Law No. 196, Seventy-sixth Congress, July 19, 1939, is hereby amended by striking therefrom the words "and who was in receipt of compensation therefor on March 19, 1933" and by substituting for the second proviso thereof the following: "Provided further, That where a World War veteran dies or has died, and service connection for any of the foregoing conditions is or would have been established under the provisions of this amendment, the surviving widow, child, or children, if otherwise eligible thereto, shall be awarded death compensation under Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, as amended".

SEC. 8. Public Law No. 196, Seventy-sixth Congress, July 19, 1939, is further amended by adding thereto a new section to be known as section 3, as follows:

"SEC. 3. Payments to veterans and their dependents under the provisions of this amendment shall be effective the date of application for benefits thereunder."

SEC. 9. That when disability compensation or pension based upon service-connected disability has been forfeited by a veteran under section 504 of the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended (43 Stat. 1312; U. S. C., title 38, sec. 555), or section 15 of Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress (48 Stat. 11; U. S. C., title 38, sec. 715), compensation or pension payable except for the forfeiture, from and after the date of suspension of payments to the veteran, shall be paid to his wife, child or children, and/or dependent parents, such payments not to exceed the amount payable in case such veteran had died from such service-connected disability: Provided, That no compensation or pension shall be paid to any dependent who has participated in the fraud for which the forfeiture was imposed.

The provisions of section 504, World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, or section 15 of Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, shall not be construed to prohibit reimbursement on account of expenses incurred in the burial of such veteran otherwise authorized by law, or to prohibit payments of death compensation benefits for service-connected death or under Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, as amended.

Benefits authorized by this section shall not be paid for any period prior to the date of this enactment.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

ANTIETAM BATTLEFIELD SITE

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1780) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to acquire property for the Antietam Battlefield site in the State of Maryland, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to acquire in behalf of the United States, through donations or by purchase at prices deemed by him reasonable, or by condemnation in accordance with the act of August 1, 1888 (25 Stat. 357), lands, buildings, structures, and other property, or interests therein, which he may determine to be of historical interest in connection with the Antietam Battlefield site, the title to such property or interests to be satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That payment for such property or interests shall be made solely from donated funds. All such property and interests shall be a part of the Antietam Battlefield site and shall be subject to all laws and regulations applicable thereto.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

UNIFORM RULE FOR NATURALIZATION OF ALIENS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2176) to amend subsection 10 of section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 596; U. S. C., title 8, sec. 377).

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection 10 of section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 596; U. S. C., title 8, sec. 377), entitled "An act providing for a uniform rule for the naturalization of aliens throughout the United States, and establishing the Bureau of Naturalization," as amended and supplemented, is further amended to read as follows: "Any person not an alien enemy, who resided uninterruptedly within the United States during the period of 5 years next preceding July 1, 1925, and was on that date otherwise qualified to become a citizen of the United States, except that he had not made a declaration of intention required by law, and who during or prior to that time, because of misinformation regarding his citizenship status, erroneously exercised the rights and performed the duties of a citizen of the United States in good faith, may file the petition for naturalization prescribed by law without making the preliminary declaration of intention required of other aliens, and upon satisfactory proof to the court that he has so acted may be admitted as a citizen of the United States upon complying in all respects with the other requirements of the naturalization law."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

RELIEF OF NEEDY INDIANS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8937) to authorize an appropriation for the relief of ill-clothed, ill-fed, and ill-housed needy American Indians through utilization of surplus American agricultural and other commodities.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill go over without prejudice.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold that request? It is necessary that this bill be passed because many of these Indians in the western country and in the southern country also are in want. It is more necessary to pass this bill than any other similar bill that we know of. If it is not passed, there will be suffering among the Indians not only in the Northwestern States but in the Southern and Western States. This bill provides for the purchase of livestock, farming equipment for Indians, and building of other necessary improvements, as well as furnishing relief. I hope the gentleman will not object to the bill but will permit it to be passed. I cannot object, however, if the gentleman asks that the bill go over without prejudice, because, of course, he will then object to its passage.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The Department makes no recommendation, and the matter apparently has not been presented to the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. O'CONNOR. No; it has not.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The Department of the Interior apparently makes no recommendation on it whatsoever.

Mr. O'CONNOR. But the Commissioner of Indian Affairs has approved the bill as being necessary to prevent the condition that I have spoken of.

Mr. WOLCOTT. There is nothing in the report to show that the matter has ever been referred to the Indian Bureau or the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It is in the nature of an emergency bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Let me read the first sentence:

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $10,000,000, to be immediately available.

Mr. Speaker, over a year ago I announced that the policy of the objectors on this side of the aisle would be that any bill carrying more than a million dollars would be scanned with a great deal of interest, inasmuch as we did not think, as a matter of general policy, that we should pass bills authorizing appropriations of large amounts of money by unanimous consent.

Here we have this situation: This bill authorizes $10,000,000. There is no report from the Indian Bureau and there is no report from the Bureau of the Budget. I think that before we authorize $10,000,000 more out of the Treasury of the United States we should at least let the people know that we are giving adequate consideration to our action. My principal objection to the bill and my principal reason for wanting it to go over without prejudice, because I do not know that I would vote against the bill if it were considered on the floor, is the amount of money involved. I do not think that we should pass bills by unanimous consent authorizing large amounts of money such as this bill provides for.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I think if the gentleman understood the conditions and had heard the evidence that was offered before the Committee on Indian Affairs he would not oppose this bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The reason I am asking that the bill go over is that all Members who have the responsibility of their constituents and taxpayers in their districts should have an opportunity to study those hearings and have them discussed here on the floor, so that we will know what we are doing before we will spend $10,000,000.

Mr. O'CONNOR. This money would be used to purchase surplus commodities such as cotton, grains, and materials of that kind for the use of these people. So it would serve a very good purpose to people who have a surplus of any kind of goods that could be used as well as other materials.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Do the relief acts which we have passed exempt Indians? Cannot the President use the money which we have authorized for relief to feed the ill-fed Indians?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Apparently they are getting very little of it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Then we are establishing this precedent: We are appropriating $10,000,000 for the relief of a particular class of our citizenry, because they are our citizens, for all practical purposes. Why should I not come here and ask that $10,000,000 be appropriated for the relief of the poor and needy in the Seventh Congressional District of Michigan?

Mr. O'CONNOR. The reason why it is necessary to pass this legislation is because the United States Government, at various times, and the white men at various times during the past 75 years, have taken all of the good lands that the Indians had, and the only thing they have now is what the white man did not want. The only thing the Indians have left is the poor land that is no good.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I may say to the gentleman that because of ill-advised investments on the part of those who were in power, hundreds of my citizens find themselves in very dire circumstances. If we are going to attempt to relieve this situation in respect to the gentleman's Indians, then of course reserve the right to offer an amendment for another ten or twelve million dollars for the relief of my people, and so on ad infinitum all over the United States.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The difference between the gentleman's people and the Indian is that the Indian has already been robbed by the Government and the white man. The only thing he has left is what the white man did not want. That is why he has to come here for relief.

Mr. WOLCOTT. My white and colored citizens have possibly been robbed by other white and colored citizens, so I cannot see the difference.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Well your people have not yet been made wards.

The regular order was demanded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

TIME OF APPOINTMENT OF PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS AND ELECTION OF SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES IN CONGRESS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8700, to change the time of the appointment of Presidential electors and the election of Senators and Representatives in Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is probably one of the most important and far-reaching bills which has been on the floor for months, at least, and possibly years. It will necessitate changing the election machinery in all of the States and Territories of the United States. There is a great deal of merit in the bill. I am in sympathy with the objectives of the bill as far as they go, but I wonder if we can justify passing a bill by unanimous consent without giving consideration to the effect of this bill on the election machinery of the 48 States and Territories. Understand that if this bill is enacted it is going to cause the legislatures of the 48 States between now and 1944 to amend their State laws in respect to the date of election. It advances the date of the general election 30 days, so that the general election will come the first Tuesday after the first Monday in October, and that will necessitate changing the primary date in many of the States. For example, in my own State of Michigan, if I may be pardoned for using that as an example, our primary is late. It is in September. If we advance the date of the general election we have to advance the date of the primary election. In our particular case it would bring the primary election into the very hot and sometimes disagreeable month of August. So we have to give consideration to that situation.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I wish to call the attention of the gentleman from Michigan to the fact that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LEWIS] is necessarily absent, and I wish the gentleman would ask that the bill go over until he can be present.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for me to make that request?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Texas first.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I would like very much to have the attention of the gentleman and the attention of the committee to what is proposed by this bill. It is something tremendously important, in so far as the responsibility of this House is concerned, and it is not a difficult thing to understand. Otherwise I would not take the time of the House now.

It is not difficult. Here is the proposition, and it is just as plain as it can be. Before we passed the "lame duck" amendment we inaugurated the President in March. When we passed the "lame duck" amendment we moved the time for the inauguration of the President from March up to January and we left the time for the election of the electors exactly as it was before. Prior to the passage of the "lame duck" amendment we had an average of 120 days intervening between the election and the inauguration. By the "lame duck" amendment we cut off something like 47 days from this time and in addition we injected the possibility of another contest, namely, the contest with reference to the organization of the House. I understand there was one time when it took 22 days to organize the House. Before the "lame duck" amendment, the "lame duck" Congress—the old Congress already organized—of course, functioned with regard to counting the vote, and so forth. Since the "lame duck" amendment the new Congress must be organized before there is any Congress to function. We are in the ridiculous position of having injected an additional possibility of contest, which would require time, of course, and at the same time cutting the time from 120 days, where only two contests were possible, to 73 days, when three contests are possible.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield at that particular point?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. WOLCOTT. This bill does not correct that evil, because Congress will still meet on the 3d of January.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Why, of course.

Mr. WOLCOTT. And the President will still take his oath of office on the 20th. So there is nothing in this bill to correct that evil.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Oh, the gentleman is wrong.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The only evil this bill will correct, and rightfully so, is in respect to the contests of the Members of the House and the Senate, and the contests in respect to the election of Presidential electors. Congress will still meet on the 3d of January, and the President will still take his office on the 20th. Those dates are established in the Constitution.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is the very reason for this bill, I suggest to my friend from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Let me understand the gentleman. He called attention to, or at least implied, that this bill would correct a situation where the House found itself unable to organize.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No; my friend permitted his attention to wander for a minute; he did not follow me quite fully.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Do I understand, then, that the gentleman does not contend that this bill changes the date for the convening of Congress or the inauguration of the President?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Why, of coure not.

Mr. WOLCOTT. We are to understand that this bill does not cover that situation at all?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No; of course not. I said the gentleman permitted his attention to slip for a moment; I do not like to have to go back over my statements, but I must.

We cannot, of course, change the time for the inauguration of the President; everybody knows that. That is just as fixed as a stake driven in the ground. Two dates are fixed unalterably, and it can be well represented by this lectern in front of me. The left side of this desk, my left hand, represents the time of electing electors. The right side of this lectern, or my right hand, is the time for the inauguration of the President. When we passed the "lame duck" amendment, to continue the metaphor, we moved my right hand over toward my left hand; we cut 47 days off the intervening interval of 120 days. Anybody with sense is bound to know that we did not have any too much time the way it was before the "lame duck" amendment between the election of electors and the inauguration of the President to determine questions of the honesty of the election of electors, for instance. That was 120 days. Now we have only 73 days, with the possibility of another contest over the organization, and we do nothing about it.

We have actually brought about a situation in this country under which it is possible to elect a President by fraud and not one thing could be done about it. Why? Because there is not a State in the Union that can gear up its judicial machinery fast enough to try the question of fraud in an election of Presidential electors in the time now provided. We have resting on our shoulders a pretty big responsibility to the country, as I see it, and I am trying my best to discharge my part of it. I have been introducing this bill for years. Twice this session I have called attention to its necessity. In addition to the cutting off of the 47 days we have injected the necessity of organizing a new House that has to pass on the election of the President. That did not obtain under the old situation.

What do I propose? I propose to do the practical, horse-sense thing, to put back a part of that time which we cut off. I am trying to put back part of it. We cannot disturb the time when the President is inaugurated, because that is fixed in the Constitution. That end is fixed. We can move up the time of the election of the electors by statute. That end is not fixed. This bill will only give us 30 days. I drafted the bill by which we bring these returns here by mail instead of by messenger. Out of an abundance of caution, I overprotected that then. In the light of experience I can rework the bill and give us another week. That would give us about 37 days. Even then we would still be 10 days short of the old time.

We do not propose by this bill to affect the coming elections, but we want to get it through as soon as we can so the legislatures will have plenty of time to change the time of their elections. It provides it shall not go into effect until 1944. I have been 6 years trying to get the House to do something about this thing. One of these days this inexcusable neglect of duty may cause this country to face a mighty dangerous crisis.

Mr. BREWSTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. BREWSTER. I am thoroughly in accord with taking this step back to the first Monday in October. I think it is a long step in the right direction. But I wonder why the gentleman does not complete it and come back to the second Monday in September, to which the State of Maine has always and wisely adhered?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. They say that the Nation follows Maine, but I just did not have that in mind. I do not want to take the time of the House further. I know other gentlemen are trying to get their bills through.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COCHRAN. We are going to be required in a great many States of the Union to change our State laws in order to comply with this proposal.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. This gives you 4 years in which to do that. You are going to have to do it anyway or we will have a situation where you can elect a President by fraud and we can do nothing about it.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman from Texas must remember that we have 48 States in the Union.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes; I heard about that.

Mr. COCHRAN. They are going to be required to change their State laws or have two elections.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN. What does it cost to have an election in a State?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. How much does the gentleman think it would cost the Nation to know that a President had been elected by crookedness and the National Legislature had not provided any way to avoid it?

Mr. COCHRAN. Would it not be better to consider the advisability of amending the Constitution, then when the States ratified it they would automatically take care of the situation in their States?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I am not personally willing to assume the responsibility of sitting in my place in this House and knowing that because of my failure to legislate a President could be elected by fraud and I did nothing about it, and then excuse myself by talking about a constitutional amendment; and I say that in all respect.

Mr. WOLCOTT. It seems to me this debate we have just had proves the importance of this subject. We will have to take into consideration in addition to these statements the fact that some of the State constitutions might have to be changed, because if a State constitution provides that an election shall be held in November, then a constitutional amendment will be necessary to change the date. So we have to proceed with caution or we will find ourselves in a position where many of our States will be holding their elections in October and some of them holding their elections in November. For the reason that I think we should spend a great deal of time to debate this bill so that the delegations representing the several States may be heard on this question, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. May I suggest to the gentleman that he object to the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I do not want to object to the bill because I do not know that I am opposed to it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McCORMACK). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT]?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman leaves me no other recourse than to object.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

PROCUREMENT WITHOUT ADVERTISING

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8152, providing for procurement without advertising.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN]?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the gentleman would not withdraw that objection. I have talked this bill over with its author, and I think the amendment which he has pending on the desk and which I have pending on the desk will meet all objections. I think it is time that the bill be considered.

Mr. COSTELLO. I understand those amendments merely refer to the procurement of horses and polo ponies as far as the War Department is concerned. It is my understanding those are only a minor part of the cases in which the War Department makes purchases of amounts up to approximately $500. If this bill goes through requiring the War Department to make those purchases by giving formal notice and taking bids, it is going to offset their established policy, and I may say there are approximately 37,000 cases now pending.

Mr. COCHRAN. I may say to the gentleman from California that this bill is brought about because of the dozens of exemptions that have been placed on appropriation bills in the last few years. The exemptions provide the statute does not apply to the purchase of certain material. For instance, in the Navy and Army you can spend all the money that we appropriate for the medicine, if they desire, without advertising. The Agriculture Department can buy all the poison they need to destroy insects, and so forth, without advertising. Do you say that is sound business?

The businessmen in this country who sell standard supplies have complained that under these exemptions it is possible to give the business to some one firm. I do not say there is anything wrong, but the opportunity is there. If we do ever find that there is something wrong, then the Congress as well as the procurement officer will be to blame for having a statute that will permit them to do something wrong if they desire to do it.

I have gone into this matter with the War Department officials and with the Navy Department and other officials and I know that some of them are not satisfied. They do not want to give up a thing that they have. I believe that this bill in its present form takes care of what the gentleman from Minnesota is interested in, but I am willing to accept his amendment. However, I can tell you there is going to be a day when we shall look into the purchase of stallions, horses, and mules. We have about 700 stallions now and they are buying 50 to 70 more a year. What are they doing with all of them?

This is a bill the Comptroller General says will save money. It liberalizes the situation to some extent when we are making the uniform amount $100. I think it is sound legislation, and I hope the gentleman will not object.

Anything that is fundamentally right, that sets up standard specifications for procurement should not be objected to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

FILLING OF ALL VACANCIES IN POSITION OF ASSISTANT POSTMASTER IN FIRST- AND SECOND-CLASS POST OFFICES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8171, to require the filling of all vacancies in the position of assistant postmaster in first- and second-class post offices.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, this bill is not recommended by the Department. There are 80 vacancies which have not been filled in the office of assistant postmasters. This bill provides for the creation of 2,038 new jobs at an annual cost of $4,627,700.

Mr. BURCH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. BURCH. I am satisfied the gentleman is not correct in his statement. This bill does not provide for 2,038 special or extra jobs, it simply provides that assistant postmasters shall be appointed by the Post Office Department. Quite often, as is now the case, a vacancy occurs and a clerk is named to fill that position and does fill the position, thus not increasing the personnel or reducing the personnel. The bill provides that someone shall be made the assistant postmaster. Often a clerk is named to act in that place. He has to assume the responsibility and he has to give an additional bond, but he is not the assistant postmaster, and if the postmaster should die there is always some trouble and embarrassment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. May I quote to the gentleman and for the RECORD from the letter of the Honorable James A. Farley, Postmaster General:

> There are 4,809 first- and second-class post offices and under present law 8 of the largest first-class post offices are entitled to 2 assistant postmasters. Thus a total of 4,817 assistant postmasters would be required. At the present time, we are carrying on the rolls a total of 2,699 assistant postmasters and there are 80 vacancies where the position has been authorized but at the present time it is not filled. This bill would require that we appoint 2,038 additional assistant postmasters.

There are 80 cases where the position has been authorized but at the present time the vacancy has not been filled. This bill would require that we appoint 2,038 additional assistant postmasters. The difference, as I see it, is that at the present time they may do so but this bill requires that they do so.

Mr. BURCH. The bill does require them to appoint assistant postmasters, but if the gentleman will read a little further he will see that this bill will not increase the personnel. The bill simply provides that assistant postmasters shall be appointed instead of a clerk being substituted as the assistant postmaster.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Let me quote to the gentleman the next paragraph, then. If the gentleman does not believe this bill will create 2,038 additional assistant postmasters, then the Postmaster General must be wrong in his statement when he states:

> This bill would require that we appoint 2,038 additional assistant postmasters.

With reference to the cost, may I call attention to the next paragraph of the Postmaster General's letter:

> If all of these positions were filled; that is, if an assistant postmaster were authorized at each of the first- and second-class offices, it would require an appropriation of $11,769,700. The appropriation bill now before Congress carries an item for assistant postmasters for the fiscal year 1941 of $7,142,000. In filling all of these positions, it would require an addition of $4,627,700 to the amount carried in the bill now pending before Congress. In other words, the increased cost in this particular appropriation would be $4,627,700.

Mr. BURCH. No.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I do not believe that this House or this Congress should force the Postmaster General to appoint over 2,000 assistant postmasters whom he apparently does not need, because he has not fulfilled all the requirements we have provided for at the present time.

Mr. BURCH. If the gentleman will read a little further in the Postmaster General's letter, he will find this:

> The authorization of an assistant postmaster at a second-class office would not necessarily mean any increase in the personnel.

Further, the Postmaster General states that the net cost of this bill would be $347,900. The gentleman will find that about the middle of page 2 of the committee report.

The object of this bill is to have assistant postmasters appointed. The law provides that assistant postmasters shall be appointed. I will be frank with you and say that the Postmaster General and the Post Office Department will be glad to do this. The trouble has been that they have not been given sufficient appropriations to appoint these assistant postmasters.

Mr. WOLCOTT. In answer to the gentleman, let me quote the last three paragraphs of the Postmaster General's letter, in which he states:

This bill would make the appointments mandatory, which would automatically require a sufficient appropriation.

Mr. BURCH. That is correct.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Continuing:

The bill requires that all vacancies be filled within 60 days after they occur and to this provision the Department must object for the reason that it has long been the policy to require an employee to serve a 90-day probationary period in a supervisory position before he is actually promoted in salary. To make the appointment within 60 days would nullify the 90-day probationary period now required.

Mr. BURCH. The committee amendment provides for 120 days.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The letter concludes:

It has been ascertained from the Bureau of the Budget that the proposed legislation is regarded as unnecessary and that its enactment would not therefore be in accord with the program of the President.

The Department does not want the bill, so why should we force it upon them? For that reason, I object to the consideration of the bill, Mr. Speaker.

AUTHORIZATION OF CONVEYANCE TO COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA OF PORTION OF NAVAL RESERVATION IN PRINCE WILLIAM COUNTY, VA.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4229, authorizing the conveyance to the Commonwealth of Virginia a portion of the naval reservation known as Quantico in Prince William County, Va.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized and empowered in the name and on behalf of the United States of America to convey to the Commonwealth of Virginia, upon such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, all right, title, and interest of the United States of America in and to that portion of the Quantico Naval Reservation, Prince William County, Va., upon which the State of Virginia has been granted permission to construct and maintain a State highway designated as Route No. 1 by an instrument dated : Provided, That the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to make such deviations in the description of the land involved as may be necessary to carry out the purposes and intent of this act.

SEC. 2. This act shall be in force from the date of its passage.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 2, in line 2, after the word "dated", insert "February 10, 1933."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GIFT OF THE YACHT "FREEDOM"

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8983, authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept on behalf of the United States a gift of the yacht Freedom from Sterling Morton.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized to accept on behalf of the United States, without expense to the Government, the yacht Freedom and her equipment as a gift from her owner, Sterling Morton, to the United States Naval Academy.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GRANT OF CERTAIN REAL ESTATE BY THE CITY OF MIAMI, FLA.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7543, to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to accept real estate granted to the United States by the city of Miami, Fla., and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to accept on behalf of the United States the real estate granted to the United States by the city of Miami, Fla., in manner provided by and in accordance with provisions of resolution No. 15635, adopted by the Commission of the City of Miami, Fla., on September 20, 1939.

With the following committee amendment:

Line 9, strike out the period, insert a comma in lieu thereof, and insert the following: "as amended by resolution No. 16087, adopted by the Commission of the City of Miami, Fla., on April 5, 1940."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ESTABLISHMENT OF HOT SPRINGS DIVISION OF THE WESTERN JUDICIAL DISDRICT OF ARKANSAS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7811, to establish the Hot Springs division of the western judicial district of Arkansas.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsections (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), and (g) of section 71 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 28, sec. 144), are amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 71. (a) The State of Arkansas is divided into two districts, to be known as the western and eastern districts of Arkansas.

"(b) The western district shall include five divisions constituted as follows: The Texarkana division, which shall include the territory embraced on July 1, 1920, in the counties of Sevier, Howard, Little River, Hempstead, Miller, Lafayette, and Nevada; the El Dorado division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Columbia, Ouachita, Union, Ashley, Bradley, and Calhoun; the Fort Smith division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Polk, Scott, Logan, Sebastian, Franklin, Crawford, Washington, Benton, and Johnson; the Harrison division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Baxter, Boone, Carroll, Madison, Marion, Newton, and Searcy; the Hot Springs division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Pike, Clark, Garland, Grant, Hot Springs, Montgomery, and Saline.

"(c) Terms of the district court for the Texarkana division shall be held at Texarkana on the second Mondays in May and November; for the El Dorado division, at El Dorado on the third Mondays in April and October; for the Fort Smith division, at Fort Smith on the second Mondays in January and June; for the Harrison division, at Harrison on the first Mondays in April and October; and for the Hot Springs division, at Hot Springs on .

"(d) The clerk of the court for the western district shall maintain an office in charge of himself or a deputy at Texarkana, Fort Smith, El Dorado, Harrison, and Hot Springs. Such offices shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of the court.

"(e) The eastern district shall include four divisions constituted as follows: The eastern division, which shall include the territory embraced on July 1, 1920, in the counties of Desha, Lee, Phillips, St. Francis, Cross, Monrce, and Woodruff; the northern division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Fulton, Independence, Cleburne, Stone, Izard, Sharp, and Jackson; the Jonesboro division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Crittenden, Clay, Craighead, Greene, Mississippi, Poinsett, Randolph, and Lawrence; the western division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Arkansas, Chicot, Cleveland, Conway, Dallas, Drew, Faulkner, Jefferson, Lincoln, Lonoke, Perry, Pope, Prairie, Pulaski, Van Buren, White, and Yell.

"(f) Terms of the district court for the eastern division shall be held at Helena on the second Monday in March and the first Monday in October; for the northern division, at Batesville on the fourth Monday in May and the second Monday in December; for the Jonesboro division, at Jonesboro on the first Monday in May and the fourth Monday in November; and for the western division, at Little Rock on the first Monday in April and the third Monday in October.

"(g) The clerk of the court for the eastern district shall maintain an office in charge of himself or a deputy at Helena, Batesville, Jonesboro, and Little Rock. Such offices shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of the court."

SEC. 2. The act of April 21, 1926 (ch. 168, 44 Stat. 304), is hereby repealed.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 14, strike all of said line 14 and insert in lieu thereof "Grant, Hot Springs, and Montgomery."

Page 2, line 22, after the word "on", insert "the third Mondays in March and September: Provided, That accommodations for holding terms of court at Hot Springs shall be furnished free of cost to the United States."

Pages 2 and 3, subsection (d), strike out the first sentence of said subsection (d) and insert in lieu thereof "The clerk of the court for the western district shall maintain an office in charge of himself or a deputy at Texarkana, Fort Smith, El Dorado, and Harrison."

Page 3, line 16, after "Pulaski", insert "Saline."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following committee amendments:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. McLAUGHLIN:

On page 1, line 10, strike out "five" and insert in lieu thereof "six."

Page 2, line 9, strike out "Washington, Benton,"

Page 2, line 12, strike out "Madison,"

Page 2, line 12, after the semicolon insert "the Fayetteville division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Benton, Madison, and Washington; and"

Page 2, line 23, after the semicolon insert "for the Fayetteville division at Fayetteville on the second Mondays in March and October: Provided, That suitable rooms and accommodations for holding court at Fayetteville are furnished without expense to the United States: And provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the provision of quarters for the officers of said court and appropriate courtrooms for the holding of the sessions of said court in any new Federal building which may be constructed in Fayetteville;"

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SALE OF CERTAIN LANDS TO THE CONCONULLY CEMETERY ASSOCIATION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8316, authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell certain land to the Conconcully Cemetery Association.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have the author of this bill explain the measure.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, this bill involves the acquisition of 30 acres of land at an ancient white cemetery established when that part of the State of Washington was part of the Territory of Oregon. This land is public domain now, but has been withdrawn from acquisition of title by reason of being held for an irrigation reservoir, but this tract of 30 acres lies above any possible flooding and the descendants of the folks who are buried there are still using it as a burial ground and desire to acquire title to it. They will pay the Government the customary price.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It will not cost the Government anything?

Mr. LEAVY. It will bring the Government some money.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not object to the bill.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subject to Executive Order No. 1032 of February 25, 1909, withdrawing lot 5, section 7, township 35 north, range 25 east, Willamette meridian, Okanogan County, Wash., and other lands, and setting them apart for the use of the Department of Agriculture as preserves and breeding grounds for native birds, the Secretary of the Interior, upon payment therefor at the rate of $1.25 per acre shall cause a patent to issue to the Conconcully Cemetery Association, for cemetery uses, for all of lot 5, section 7, township 35 north, range 25 east, Willamette meridian, Okanogan County, Wash., except the 300-foot strip along the westerly border of such lot, heretofore determined by the Commissioner of Reclamation to be necessary for reclamation purposes, which shall be reserved from such grant. Except for the uses herein authorized, neither this act nor the patent that may issue thereunder shall be construed as abrogating or in any manner affecting the aforesaid Executive order of February 25, 1909, which order shall otherwise remain in full force unless and until revoked by the President or by act of Congress.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 9, strike out the word "shall" and insert in lieu thereof the word "may."

Page 1, line 10, strike out the word "Conconcully" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Conconully."

Page 2, line 5, strike out the word "reserved" and insert in lieu thereof the word "excepted."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell certain land to the Conconully Cemetery Association."

WITHDRAWAL OF NATIONAL-FOREST LANDS FOR PROTECTION OF WATERSHEDS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 229) to authorize the withdrawal of national-forest lands for the protection of watersheds from which water is obtained for municipalities, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. This bill is a rather sweeping bill. It would authorize the withdrawal of national-forest lands from all forms of location. It authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to prescribe rules and regulations necessary in his opinion to protect the watersheds, including a regulation forbidding persons other than forest officers and representative of a municipality from even going on the lands. Under the circumstances I think the bill is pretty far reaching. I ask unanimous consent that it be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PENSIONS FOR CHILDREN OF DECEASED VETERANS, SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2874) to provide that pensions otherwise payable for a child of a deceased veteran of the Spanish-American War, Boxer Rebellion, or Philippine Insurrection shall continue until the child reaches the age of 21 where he is attending accredited school, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I hope that the gentleman will not ask that the bill be passed over without prejudice, because if it is to be acted on by the Senate after having passed the House, before adjournment, we have not time to lose. The bill changes the eligibility ages of children of veterans of the Spanish-American War from 16 years to 18 years and to 21 years, if the child is attending an accredited school, approved by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs. That would make the ages correspond with the ages of children of veterans of the World War under existing law. That is all the bill does. It was favored by General Hines when he appeared before the Pensions Committee at the hearings which were held February 8, 1939. General Hines before the committee advocated the passage of this bill to eliminate the inequality now existing, but the Budget has made the usual objection. It will affect 5,900 children of veterans of the Spanish-American War. The President, under paragraph 6 of Veterans Regulation No. 10, provided that the ages should be uniform as applied to children of veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Regular Establishment, and the World War. That regulation, however, was superseded by the passage of the act, Public Law 269, Seventy-fourth Congress, in which we restored the pensions and reenacted the act of 1926. Consequently, we have this existing disparity and inequality in the ages as compared with children of the veterans of the World War and the Regular Establishment.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. And this does not involve many children, does it?

Mr. SMITH of Washington. It does not. It is an inequality it seems to me which should be corrected. The following letter sets forth the views of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in support of this legislation:

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., May 6, 1940.

Re H. R. 2874.

The Honorable MARTIN F. SMITH,
Chairman, House Committee on Pensions,
House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SMITH: Very probably, H. R. 2874, "a bill to provide that pensions otherwise payable for a child of a deceased veteran of the Spanish-American War, Boxer Rebellion, or Philippine Insurrection shall continue until the child reaches the age of 21, where he is attending accredited school, and for other purposes," will be called up for consideration on the House floor from its position on the Consent Calendar this afternoon.

It will be remembered that when hearings were held before your committee about a year ago concerning this bill and others, Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, during the course of his testimony, stated to the assembled members of the committee that he was in favor of the provisions of this bill on the ground that it would bring about the same eligibility for the receipt of pensions on the part of children of deceased Spanish-American War veterans up to the age of 18, or up to the age of 21, if attending an accredited school, in the same manner as now payable to the eligible dependent children of deceased World War veterans, and thus to bring about a greater uniformity as between the two groups, so far as eligibility on the basis of age is concerned.

It seems to me that it ought to be emphasized that continued payment of pensions otherwise payable to the child of a deceased veteran of the Spanish-American War, Boxer Rebellion, or Philippine Insurrection, until the child reaches the age of 21, where he is attending an accredited school, thus, in effect, means that such continued pension payments will be used primarily for educational purposes, for the 5,900 children of deceased Spanish-American War veterans who would be affected during the first year after the enactment of such bill. The cost, after the first year, would be a decreasing cost. It will be noted that the formal report of the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs indicates that the estimate of "approximate cost of $794,000 for the fiscal year 1940" to affect 5,900 children, "may be considered the maximum cost." It is altogether probable that a considerably lesser number of children of deceased Spanish War veterans will avail themselves of the opportunity to continue to go to an accredited school and thus to be entitled to the continuance of the pension payable to them under present law, up to the age of 16, rather than to the smaller amounts to which they are entitled after that age, under the provisions of the regulations of Public Law No. 2.

It seems a very unfair proposition that the amount of pension payable to these children of deceased Spanish-American War veterans should be drastically reduced after they have attained the age of 16, because of the fact that they are entitled to pensions thereafter up to the age of 18, or up to the age of 21, if attending an accredited school, on the basis of the lesser amounts of pension payable under the provisions of Public Law No. 2. It would seem to be in the interest of justice that the same amounts of pension payable to them prior to the age of 16 should continue to be paid up to the same ages as if they were the children of deceased World War veterans.

In the interest of greater uniformity and simple justice to those children affected, as well as in the interest of encouraging such children to pursue their educational courses, the Veterans of Foreign Wars earnestly believes that this proposed legislation ought to be enacted into law by this Congress.

With kind regards, I am,

Respectfully yours,

MILLARD W. RICE,
Legislative Representative.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, does not this bill provide for greater benefits than we now grant to the World War children? Does not the age go on further, from 18 to 21, and is not that a new policy, so far as veterans' legislation is concerned?

Mr. SMITH of Washington. No; not from the ages 18 to 21 it is not a new policy, because the children of veterans of the World War have received benefits between those ages. There is some difference in the rate, but the World War Veterans' Committee has reported out a bill, H. R. 9000, which will come before the House shortly, which provides for the same eligibility benefits for children of veterans of the World War as now received by children of the veterans of the Spanish-American War. By this change in the ages we are merely correcting and equalizing and Congress undoubtedly will correct the inequality in rate as to children of the World War veterans. We can best do one thing at a time. Let us equalize and make uniform the ages under this bill and make the rates uniform later. We will probably accomplish the latter by the passage of H. R. 9000, as I have suggested. It seems to me that that is no reason why we should not act on this bill.

Mr. COSTELLO. That apparently is the difficulty that comes up in all veterans' legislation. As soon as an inequality is created, then legislation has to be passed for some other group in order to eliminate the inequality, and it has been the experience in the House that every time the committee eliminates one inequality they create another, and in their effort to remove one inequality nearly always go beyond the requirements of that inequality by providing additional benefits. That creates a new situation and requires the committee to come in again and pass other legislation to eliminate this new inequality. If an inequality is created as to one group, then another group will come in and try to get extra benefits for itself and use as an excuse for it the fact that some minor inequality does exist.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Of course, that is not true as far as this particular group of children is concerned, because they would only receive the same consideration, according to age, as the children of veterans of the Regular Establishment and the World War at the present time. That is, we are correcting a present inequality in ages. In view of the fact that the children take benefits which would otherwise go to widows, their deceased mothers, they are certainly a most deserving group, and the money would go to pay for their education. There certainly could not be any more worthy purpose than that.

Mr. COSTELLO. I agree with the gentleman as to the worthy purpose, but we have this very definite statement in the conclusion of the letter of the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs:

> The Director, Bureau of the Budget, has advised "inasmuch as enactment of H. R. 2874 would exaggerate still further the inequalities now existing between the Spanish-American and World War groups, the bill would not be in accord with the program of the President."

In other words, in an attempt to try to eliminate one inequality you are creating a greater inequality between this group and the World War group, which undoubtedly the World War group will demand be eliminated.

I think for the present the bill should be passed over, and we should have further consideration of it and not create these additional inequalities.

The gentleman has referred to the bill H. R. 9000. There, again, is a similar case of trying to eliminate certain inequalities. The World War veterans, in attempting to get equal treatment for widows and orphans in the World War group, are going 'way beyond and bringing in the parents of World War veterans. It has been the experience in all this legislation that we are passing that each time another group of inequalities is created, and I do not think we should do so.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Washington. I yield to the distinguished gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. ROGERS].

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Of course, the gentleman realizes there is a dependency clause in the so-called Rankin bill for dependent mothers and fathers and also a dependency clause for widows and orphans. That has never been in any Spanish War veteran bill or in any other World War veteran bill. You have a totally new conception there. In this case, however, does not the gentleman feel it is so difficult to secure employment that it is very important to allow these boys and girls to complete their education? It is only a short time longer that they would be on the pay roll anyway.

Mr. COSTELLO. As far as this particular bill is concerned, it is not so much the amount of money that is concerned, but it is the fact we are creating these inequalities.

The regular order was demanded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I feel constrained to object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, under the circumstances, I must object.

WARTIME PENSION RATES FOR SERVICE-CONNECTED DISABILITY FOR SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR VETERANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5180, to provide Spanish War veterans wartime pension rates for service-connected disability or death of certain veterans of the Spanish-American War recognized by veterans regulations as "veterans of any war," and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a), as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 38, ch. 12, appendix), is further amended by adding to paragraph 1 of part II the following subparagraph:

"(d) Any veteran or the dependents of any deceased veteran who served in the military or naval service of the United States between August 13, 1898, and July 4, 1902, both dates inclusive, and who left the continental United States under orders for military or naval service in Guam, Cuba, or Puerto Rico between such dates who is otherwise entitled to pension under the provisions of part II of this regulation, based upon such service shall be entitled to receive the rate of pension provided in part I of this regulation."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 6, after the word "regulation", insert "and amendments thereto, and subject to the conditions and limitations prescribed therefor."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZED ENLISTED STRENGTH OF MEDICAL DEPARTMENT OF THE REGULAR ARMY

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3654, to amend section 10, National Defense Act, as amended, with relation to the maximum authorized enlisted strength of the Medical Department of the Regular Army.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 10 of the National Defense Act, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920 (41 Stat. 766), be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to provide that hereafter the authorized maximum number of enlisted men of the Medical Department of the Regular Army shall be in each fiscal year such number as shall equal 7 percent of the average annual pay strength of the active list of the Regular Army and the average strength of all other military personnel on extended active duty with the Regular Army during such fiscal year: Provided, That in event of actual or threatened hostilities involving the United States the President may, within the limit of the total authorized strength of the Regular Army, authorize additional enlistments in the Medical Department to such number as he may deem necessary.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ENLISTMENTS IN THE ARMY IN TIME OF WAR, ETC.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3470, to amend the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended, to provide for enlistments in the Army of the United States in time of war, or other emergency declared by Congress, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 127a, added to the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916 (39 Stat. 166), by section 51 of the act of June 4, 1920 (41 Stat. 785), as amended, be, and the same is hereby, further amended by inserting after the concluding paragraph thereof a new paragraph to read as follows:

"In time of war or other emergency declared by Congress, all enlistments in the active military service of the United States shall be in the Army of the United States without specification of any particular component or unit thereof and shall be for the duration of the war or other emergency plus 6 months, subject in each case to earlier discharge at the discretion of the President or otherwise according to law. Eligibility for such enlistment shall be limited to persons not less than 18 years of age and otherwise qualified under such regulations as the Secretary of War shall prescribe. The oath or affirmation of enlistment set forth in Article of War 109 shall be used and may be taken before any officer of the Army of the United States. All persons enlisted at any time in the Army of the United States or any component thereof, as long as they continue in the military service, shall, in time of war or other emergency declared by Congress, be available for assignment to duty with any unit of the Army of the United States and may be freely transferred from one unit to another, regardless of the component status of the units involved."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REQUIREMENTS FOR APPOINTMENT IN DENTAL CORPS, UNITED STATES ARMY

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3633, to amend section 24e, National Defense Act, as amended, so as to add an alternative requirement for appointment in the Dental Corps.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the next to the last sentence of section 24e, of the National Defense Act, as amended by section 7 of the act of April 3, 1939 (Public, No. 18, 76th Cong.), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows: "To be eligible for appointment in the Dental Corps, a candidate must be a graduate of a recognized dental college, and have been engaged in the practice of his profession for at least 2 years subsequent to graduation, or must have, after such graduation, satisfactorily completed a dental internship of not less than 1 year in a hospital or dispensary."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ESTABLISHMENT OF BOUNDARY LINES OF WILMINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY, N. C.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9121, to authorize the establishment of boundary lines for the Wilmington National Cemetery, N. C.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill S. 3675, a similar bill, be substituted for the House bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter into and execute an agreement or agreements with the owners or claimants of adjoining land to fix and establish the location of the boundary lines of the Wilmington National Cemetery, N. C., and he may, if he deems it advisable, give to or receive from such owners or claimants appropriate releases, by way of quitclaim deeds or otherwise.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A House bill (H. R. 9121) was laid on the table.

AMERICAN NEGRO EXPOSITION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8826, to authorize an appropriation to assist in defraying the expenses of the American Negro Exposition to be held in Chicago, Ill., during 1940.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $75,000 out of any funds in the United States Treasury not already otherwise appropriated, to assist in defraying the expenses of the American Negro Exposition to be held in Chicago, Ill., from July 4, 1940, to September 2, 1940, for the purpose of celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the emancipation of the Negro and of showing the progress, advancement, and achievements of the Negro race during the past 75 years. Such sum shall be expended by an auxiliary commission composed of three persons to be appointed by the President of the United States, one of whom shall be a Member of the House of Representatives, one a Member of the United States Senate, and a third to be selected by the President, which auxiliary commission shall work in conjunction with the Afra-Merican Emancipation Exposition Commission appointed by the Governor of the State of Illinois under the direction and supervision of the Governor of the State of Illinois.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 2, insert "in the United States."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

UNITED STATES GRAIN STANDARDS ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7696, to amend the United States Grain Standards Act, to provide for the grading of soybeans, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the United States Grain Standards Act is amended as follows:

(a) By inserting after "flaxseed", in the first sentence of section 2 thereof, the following: "soybeans."

(b) By striking out in the second sentence of section 7 thereof the following: ": Provided, That in any State which has, or which may hereafter have a State grain-inspection department established by the laws of such State, the Secretary of Agriculture shall issue licenses to the persons duly authorized and employed to inspect and grade grain under the laws of such State."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DEFINING AND CLASSIFYING INDIAN GRATUITY EXPENDITURES

The Clerk called the next business, Senate Joint Resolution 101, defining and classifying gratuity expenditures allowable as offsets in favor of the United States and against the Five Civilized Nations or Tribes of Indians.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this resolution may be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is a bill that defines and classifies the gratuity expenditures allowable as offsets in favor of certain Indians. I have a long report on this bill. I will not take the time of the House now to go into it at length but I merely state that we had better keep our eyes open, for this legislation sets a precedent. While there are many classes of gratuities that are affected by this legislation I will tell you of one only, that is, a class of gratuities that amounts to $12,000,000 with interest for 100 years.

The point I want to impress upon you is that if you pass such a bill for the Five Civilized Tribes you will be required to pass the same kind of a bill for every Indian tribe in the United States, which will result in the provision in the Deficiency Act of 1935 being worthless. That provision is what has saved the taxpayers of this country hundreds of millions of dollars.

Mr. Speaker, I therefore object to this bill going over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I object to the consideration of the bill. I think it should go off the calendar.

SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 13, FROID, MONT.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1450, to provide funds for cooperation with school district No. 13, Froid, Mont., for extension of public-school buildings to be available to Indian children.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill may be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to call the gentleman's attention to the condition which resulted in the bill's passage by the Senate and its being reported out by the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House. The present structure in which the school is housed was built in 1911 with an addition in 1918. It is cold, dreary, and in a deplorably crowded condition. In fact, it is in such condition that it is only a question of time before it must be condemned for use of any kind. Its safety is questionable at the present time. It is an extreme fire hazard in actual danger of collapsing. They are unable to offer either domestic science or agricultural courses on account of lack of space for these courses. This places the school at a disadvantage with the neighboring schools that are able to give these courses, yet the Froid School has always ranked high scholastically.

I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that there are 175 or 176 white children accommodated in this school and 28 Indians. The average cost per child for housing and school facilities in that country is approximately $1,500. If we were to build a separate school for the 28 Indian children it would cost the Government in the neighborhood of $42,000. The expenditure of the $30,000 provided in this bill would complete the job and furnish school facilities not only to the Indian children but to the white children as well.

I call attention to the further fact that the bill provides for repayment over a period of 30 years. Under the present population the income based on what is paid by Indians would amount to $810 per annum. This, of course, would not take care of amortizing the principal but it would take care of nearly all of the interest. We can safely assume, of course, that there will be an increase in the Indian population as well as in the white population, necessitating eventually the construction of a larger building such as is provided by the pending bill.

Before asking the gentleman to withdraw his request, I wish also to call his attention to the fact that nearly one-half of the land in this school-district area is owned by the Indians and is nontaxable. The district therefore is in the position that it is difficult to bond the district; in fact, they cannot bond themselves beyond $11,000, as stated in the report. We are therefore unable to provide the improvements required to take care of these children; and I appeal to the gentleman, in justice to these Indians and in justice to that school district, not to ask that this bill go over but to let the bill be passed by the House as it was passed by the Senate.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I may say to the gentleman that the balance reported on hand at the beginning of the fiscal year was $5,993.22. It is reported that the district had an indebtedness in October 1938 amounting to $6,615.18. In other words, they are within about $700 of being free of debt. It does not seem to me that we should establish a precedent here whereby the Federal Government, under the guise of educating 28 Indian children, should virtually give this district a free school to house 176 white children. I have many school districts in my congressional district which find themselves embarrased because of lack of funds.

We would like to help every school district in the United States if it were possible, but we have on this calendar now three or four bills of this nature. I understand the purpose, of course, and I am in sympathy with giving all the help we can; but when the Secretary of the Interior, who has control over Indian affairs, and who has the responsibility of educating the Indian wards, recommends against the bill, I do not believe we should force on the Department something the Department does not want. For this reason, of course, I shall have to insist on my request that the bill go over without prejudice.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Still reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the local debt limit is $17,000. They cannot, therefore, bond the district for more than $11,000 without exceeding the debt limit. Therefore their hands are tied so far as making this improvement is concerned.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The mere fact there is a debt limit in the State does not justify our passing this bill. That is a State obligation and responsibility and the debt limit could be removed.

Mr. O'CONNOR. But the debt limit is there and they are unable to increase it. There appears in the report the real need of a new school building, and I hope the gentleman will not object.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

COOPERATION WITH PUBLIC SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 37, M'CURTAIN, OKLA.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2523, to provide for the construction, extension, equipment, and improvement of public-school facilities at McCurtain, Okla.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT]?

There was no objection.

AMENDING SECTION 301 (A) OF THE SUGAR ACT OF 1937

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3237, to amend section 301 (a) of the Sugar Act of 1937.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it seems to me very clear that these farmers have violated the Sugar Act of 1937 regarding child labor, and, therefore, I am constrained to object. Children must be protected.

UNIFORMITY IN PAY OF ALL CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES OF NAVY DEPARTMENT

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3014, to amend the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. 662), so as to provide uniformity in the pay of all civilian employees of the Navy Department appointed for duty beyond the continental limits of the United States and in Alaska.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I may say that the point of order would also apply to the next two bills on the calendar, Nos. 670 and 671. Those of us who are asked to supervise this calendar, both on the Republican and Democratic sides, of necessity work long hours on these bills. I think the three gentlemen on the Democratic side as well as the three of us on the Republican side are reconciled to the fact that every other Sunday we must put in our time at the office or in our studies at home working on this calendar. We find it very embarrassing, at least inconvenient, when the Ramseyer rule is not complied with.

My point of order is that the Ramseyer rule has not been complied with so far as these three bills are concerned. I do not know that there is any point in striking the bills from the calendar because the rule has not been complied with and I am willing to withhold my point of order and ask unanimous consent that they go over without prejudice, if the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON] will supply in a supplemental report the information which is required under the Ramseyer rule.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. I may say to the gentleman that my committee is very punctilious in reference to carrying out the provisions of the Ramseyer rule. I did not know it had not been complied with. Of course, we can ask unanimous consent to pass the bill over without prejudice with permission to file a supplemental report, but as a rule this committee as well as every other committee carries out the Ramseyer rule and points out what the present law is and what change is made.

In view of the fact that nothing will be gained except an additional expense in the Printing Office, I am wondering if the gentleman will not permit the bill to be considered, with the assurance that if any other bills from this committee come in without complying with the Ramseyer rule that it will let the ax fall?

Mr. WOLCOTT. There will be something gained. There will be an assurance to the House at least that we have studied the bill in the light of existing law. I may say to the gentleman that when I did not find the existing law in the report I happened to be out of the office with no opportunity whatsoever to refer to the code. So I have not studied this bill, nor the next two, in the light of existing law.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill may be passed over without prejudice and that the committee may have permission to file a supplementary report in compliance with the Ramseyer rule with reference to Calendars Nos. 670 and 671.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's request covers Calendars Nos. 669, 670, and 671?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON]?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object in order to clear the RECORD. I withdraw my point of order and I shall not object to the gentleman's request.

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING SALE OF FUEL, ELECTRIC CURRENT, ICE, AND WATER AT ISOLATED NAVAL STATIONS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3065, authorizing the sale of fuel, electric current, ice, and water at isolated naval stations.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I object.

AUTHORIZING SECRETARY OF NAVY TO ACCEPT ON BEHALF OF UNITED STATES A BEQUEST OF THE LATE DUDLEY F. WOLFE

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3098, authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept on behalf of the United States a bequest of certain personal property of the late Dudley F. Wolfe.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized to accept on behalf of the United States the personal property bequeathed to the United States Naval Academy by the terms of the will of the late Dudley F. Wolfe.

SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this act.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BOOKS FOR THE ADULT BLIND

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9236, to amend the act entitled "An act to provide books for the adult blind," approved March 3, 1931.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to provide books for the adult blind," approved March 3, 1931, as amended (U. S. C., 1924 ed., Supp. IV, title 2, sec. 135a), is amended by striking out the figures "$275,000," wherever occurring therein, and inserting in lieu thereof the figures "$350,000," and by striking out the figures "$175,000" and inserting in lieu thereof the figures "$250,000."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONFERRING JURISDICTION ON THE STATE OF KANSAS OVER OFFENSES COMMITTED BY OR AGAINST INDIANS ON INDIAN RESERVATIONS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3048, to relinquish concurrent jurisdiction to the State of Kansas to prosecute Indians or others for offenses committed on Indian reservations.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That concurrent jurisdiction is hereby relinquished to the State of Kansas to prosecute Indians and others for offenses by or against Indians or others, committed on Indian reservations in Kansas, including trust or restricted allotments, to the same extent as its courts have jurisdiction for offenses committed elsewhere within the State in accordance with the laws of the State; and section 328 of the act of March 4, 1909 (35 Stat. 1151), as amended by the act of June 28, 1932 (47 Stat. 337), and sections 2145 and 2146 of the United States Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 548, title 25, secs. 217, 218) are modified accordingly insofar as they apply to Indian reservations or Indian country in the said State of Kansas.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

"That jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the State of Kansas over offenses committed by or against Indians on Indian reservations, including trust or restricted allotments, within the State of Kansas, to the same extent as its courts have jurisdiction over offenses committed elsewhere within the State in accordance with the laws of the State: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall deprive the courts of the United States of jurisdiction over offenses defined by the laws of the United States committed by or against Indians on Indian reservations."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to confer jurisdiction on the State of Kansas over offenses committed by or against Indians on Indian reservations."

RED LAKE BAND OF CHIPPEWA INDIANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8369, authorizing a per capita payment of $12.50 each to the members of the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians from the proceeds of the sale of timber and lumber on the Red Lake Reservation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I withhold it temporarily, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota. Does not the gentleman know that this bill went through Congress twice? Of course, it was vetoed by the President each time, but I have some pretty good authority to the effect that the President will not veto it this time. In 1935 a bill was passed providing for a per capita payment of $15 for these Indians. There are about 2,000 of them, so the payment would have amounted to $30,000. At that time the Indians had in the United States Treasury $211,000, and this payment would of course have reduced the fund to $181,000. This fund has increased until they now have $405,000.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Is it not a fact that this bill provides for an appropriation of the Indians' own money, and it will reduce the expenditures of the Federal Treasury because when the Indians get this money they will not have to have so much money from W. P. A. and other Federal relief agencies?

Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota. It is their own money, and they have $405,000 now. I hope the gentleman will not object.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I believe we should at least have the benefit of an opinion by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, in view of the fact that the President has previously vetoed the bill. There is no opinion from the Office of Indian Affairs. We do not know what authority the Secretary of the Interior has now over the payment of these moneys. I surely am not assuming that I, as a Member of Congress, am in a better position to know the needs of these Indians than the Bureau of Indian Affairs or the Secretary of the Interior. At least, until this bill has been referred to the Bureau of Indian Affairs and we have at least their opinion on it, I am not constrained to go along and assume that I know more about it than they do. We created that Bureau down there for the purpose of supervising situations such as this. I believe I know the purpose of the bill and I am in sympathy with the objective of the gentleman, but after all, I have a duty that perhaps the gentleman does not have in respect of these Indians.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. It is true that the Indian Bureau has been created by Congress. The Committee on Indian Affairs has been created by Congress to study legislation which is referred to it by the Congress. I happen to be a humble member of the Republican minority on the Committee on Indian Affairs. I assure the gentleman that this committee has given a great deal of consideration to this bill and has favorably reported it by a unanimous vote. I sincerely hope that the gentleman on my side will not object to these poor Indians getting $12.50 of their own money in their pockets.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is demanded. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I object, Mr. Speaker.

TRANSFERRING CERTAIN INDIAN LANDS TO THE GRAND RIVER DAM AUTHORITY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7901, to transfer certain Indian lands to the Grand River Dam Authority, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby granted to the Grand River Dam Authority, a public corporation of the State of Oklahoma, all the right, title, and interest held by the United States and by individual Indians and tribes of Indians in Indian lands located in Ottawa, Delaware, Craig, and Mayes Counties, Okla., lying below an elevation of 750 feet above mean sea level, which may be required for the Grand River Dam Reservoir, subject, however, to the consent of the respective individual Indian owners or tribes as the case may be, the approval of a map of definite location by the Secretary of the Interior, and the payment of such compensation as he may determine: Provided, That should any individual owners or tribes refuse their consent, condemnation is hereby authorized, in the appropriate Federal district court, the United States to be made a party defendant with the Indians.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to prescribe necessary rules and regulations for carrying out this act, and in his discretion to utilize the compensation received hereunder in the purchase of lieu lands, to be held in like manner as may be appropriate in each case, subject where applicable to the provisions of the act of June 30, 1932 (47 Stat. 474).

Mr. DISNEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DISNEY: On page 2, line 8, after the last period, insert the following: "Provided further, That the consent of the Cherokee Nation shall be given by and through a principal chief to be appointed under section 6 of the act of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. 137, 139): Provided further, That as to the lands of the Seneca Indian School the interest conveyed hereby shall be a flowage easement only."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING SECTION 79 OF THE JUDICIAL CODE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8373, to amend section 79 of the Judicial Code, as amended.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the eleventh sentence of section 79 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 28, sec. 152), is amended by striking out the colon after the word "December" and the following: "Provided, That facilities for holding court at Benton are furnished free of expense to the United States."

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

"That section 79 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. IV, title 28, sec. 152), is amended to read as follows:

" 'The State of Illinois is divided into three districts, to be known as the northern, southern, and eastern districts of Illinois. The northern district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of July 1910 in the counties of Cook, De Kalb, Du Page, Grundy, Kane, Kendall, Lake, La Salle, McHenry, and Will, which shall constitute the eastern division; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Boone, Carroll, Jo Daviess, Lee, Ogle, Stephenson, Whiteside, and Winnebago, which shall constitute the western division. Terms of the district court for the eastern division shall be held at Chicago on the first Mondays in February, March, April, May, June, July, September, October, and November, and the third Monday in December; and for the western division, at Freeport on the third Mondays in April and October. The clerk of the court for the northern district shall maintain an office in charge of himself or a deputy at Chicago and at Freeport, which shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of the court. The marshal for the northern district shall maintain an office in the division in which he himself does not reside and shall appoint at least one deputy who shall reside therein. The southern district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of July 1910 in the counties of Bureau, Fulton, Henderson, Henry, Knox, Livingston, McDonough, Marshall, Mercer, Putnam, Peoria, Rock Island, Stark, Tazewell, Warren, and Woodford, which shall constitute the northern division; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Adams, Bond, Brown, Calhoun, Cass, Christian, De Witt, Greene, Hancock, Jersey, Logan, McLean, Macon, Macoupin, Madison, Mason, Menard, Montgomery, Morgan, Pike, Sangamon, Schuyler, and Scott, which shall constitute the southern division. Terms of the district court for the northern division shall be held at Peoria on the third Mondays in April and October; for the southern division, at Springfield on the first Mondays in January and June, and at Quincy the first Mondays in March and September. The clerk of the court for the southern district shall maintain an office in charge of himself or a deputy at Peoria, at Springfield, and at Quincy, which shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of the court. The marshal for said southern district shall appoint at least one deputy residing in the said northern division, who shall maintain an office at Peoria. The eastern district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of July 1910 in the counties of Alexander, Champaign, Clark, Clay, Clinton, Coles, Crawford, Cumberland, Douglas, Edgar, Edwards, Effingham, Fayette, Ford, Franklin, Gallatin, Hamilton, Hardin, Iroquois, Jackson, Jasper, Jefferson, Johnson, Kankakee, Lawrence, Marion, Massac, Monroe, Moultrie, Perry, Piatt, Pope, Pulaski, Randolph, Richland, Saint Clair, Saline, Shelby, Union, Vermilion, Wabash, Washington, Wayne, White, and Williamson. Terms of the district court for the eastern district shall be held at Danville on the first Mondays in March and September; at Cairo, on the first Mondays in April and October; at East St. Louis, on the first Mondays in May and November; and at Benton on the first Mondays in June and December. The clerk of the court for the eastern district shall maintain an office in charge of himself or a deputy at Danville, at Cairo, at East St. Louis, and at Benton, which shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of the court, and shall there keep the records, files, and documents pertaining to the court at that place.'"

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HARDEMAN COUNTY, TEX.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9013, to transfer Hardeman County, Tex., from the Fort Worth Division to the Wichita Falls division of the northern judicial district of Texas.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, effective 30 days after the date of the enactment of this act, the territory embraced in Hardeman Couny, Tex., shall be withdrawn from the Fort Worth division of the northern judicial district of Texas and shall constitute a portion of the Wichita Falls division of such district.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ALASKAN INTERNATIONAL HIGHWAY COMMISSION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9271, to extend the existence of the Alaskan International Highway Commission for an additional 4 years, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the terms of the members of the Alaskan International Highway Commission appointed pursuant to the provisions of the act entitled "An act to create a commission to be known as the Alaskan International Highway Commission," approved May 31, 1938, shall be 6 years in lieu of 2 years as provided by such act.

SEC. 2. The last sentence of such act of May 31, 1938, is amended to read as follows: "Said commission shall, within 2 years after their appointment and at such other times as the commission may deem advisable, report to the President the extent and results of their activities and of any conferences, relative to such highway, and the President shall transmit said reports to the Congress."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT OF PERISHABLE AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES ACT, 1930

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3661, to amend the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (c) of section 7 of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930 (46 Stat. 531), as amended by section 10 of the act of August 20, 1937 (50 Stat. 725), is hereby amended by striking out the period at the end of the first sentence and by inserting in lieu thereof a colon and the following: "Provided, That in cases handled without a hearing in accordance with paragraphs (c) and (d) of section 6 or in which a hearing has been waived by agreement of the parties, appeal shall be to the district court of the United States for the district in which the party complained against is located."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SPEECHES AND WRITINGS OF EDMUND BURKE

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 307, to provide for the printing of the speeches and writings of Edmund Burke, as a House document.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

GRANTING OF RIGHT-OF-WAY TO THE HIGHWAY COMMISSION OF STATE OF MONTANA

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3262, to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to grant a right-of-way to the Highway Commission of the State of Montana.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to grant to the Highway Commission of the State of Montana a permanent right to use for highway purposes that part of the property owned by the United States, known as the Bozeman, Mont., fisheries station, in the south half of the northwest quarter of section 34, township 1 south, range 6 east, Montana principal meridian, in Gallatin County, Mont., for which a revocable license, dated December 23, 1938, was granted by the Secretary of Commerce. Such right shall be granted upon condition that a public highway shall be maintained across such property and upon such other conditions as the Secretary of the Interior deems necessary to protect the interest of the United States.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GRANTING OF EASEMENT TO WAYNE COUNTY, MICH.

The clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8958, to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to grant to the county of Wayne, State of Michigan, an easement over certain land of the United States in Wayne County, Mich., for a sewage-disposal line.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Commerce is hereby authorized to grant to the county of Wayne, State of Michigan, an easement over a 20-foot strip of land situated along the Middle Branch of the Rouge River on the southeasterly side thereof across fisheries station property in the east half of the northeast quarter of section 9, township 1 south, range 8 east, Northville Township, Wayne County, Mich., for the purpose of maintaining a sewer and sewage facilities thereon.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 3, strike out the word "Commerce" and insert in lieu thereof the words "the Interior."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GRANT OF CERTAIN LAND BY THE STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9441, to accept the grant to the United States of certain land by the State of South Carolina and to authorize its use by the United States Coast Guard.

The being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the right, title, and interest to and in, and jurisdiction over, the following-described lands, situated in the township of Sullivans Island, in the county of Charleston, State of South Carolina, granted and ceded to the United States for the purposes of the United States Government by an act of the General Assembly of the State of South Carolina approved July 1, 1939, be, and the same are hereby, accepted by the United States:

All that tract, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying, and being on the western end of Sullivans Island, in the county of Charleston, State aforesaid, being all the land lying to the northward and westward of the western boundary of the road leading to Cove Inlet Bridge, and to the northward and westward of the west line of Church Street. The above tract of land shall specifically include lots Nos. 1 through 17, inclusive, including the half lots, and also including all that portion of Middle Street which lies to the northward and westward of the west boundary of Church Street extended, together with the water lots and marshes; all of which is shown on map of Sullivans Island Waterworks, made by the John McCrady Co., dated November 1937, and on file in the office of the board of township commissioners for Sullivans Island, S. C.

SEC. 2. That the premises embraced in the foregoing description so granted and ceded by the State of South Carolina and accepted by the United States may be used by the United States Coast Guard for its lawfully authorized purposes.

SEC. 3. That the right, title, or interest of any person in or to any portion of the premises embraced in the foregoing description or any buildings, structures, or improvements thereon may be acquired by the use of funds in any available appropriation of the Coast Guard by the Secretary of the Treasury in behalf of the United States by donation, purchase, condemnation, or otherwise to satisfy the condition of section 2 of the aforesaid act of the State of South Carolina approved July 1, 1939.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT OF MERCHANT MARINE ACT OF 1936

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 519, to suspend section 510 (g) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, during the present European war, and for other purposes.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. BUCK. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I reserve the right to object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, a very serious situation has developed in the country with respect to this commerce not only in coastal but also foreign trade, and with the present condition of affairs in the world, it is very important that there shall be the right in the Maritime Commission, while Congress is not in session, to meet the condition by using vessels that are now in the laid-up steel fleets to carry the commerce of the world.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. It is my understanding this joint resolution will grant to the Maritime Commission the authority to sell or charter old vessels. I do not object to the sale of the vessels, but I do object to the chartering of vessels for intercoastal trade. The railroads of this country are in a position to carry all the necessary freight from the west coast to the east coast.

Mr. BLAND. There was not any objection interposed by the railroads in the hearings and there were 37 witnesses who came before the committee and presented a most serious situation confronting the country unless this joint resolution should go through.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I am sorry, but I find it necessary to object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

STOWAWAYS ON VESSELS ENGAGED IN INTERSTATE OR FOREIGN COMMERCE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9492, making it a misdemeanor to stowaway on vessels engaged in interstate or foreign commerce and providing punishment therefor.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman concerning the amendment on page 2, line 16, why a different penalty is provided for aiding and abetting than for the principal offense?

Mr. BLAND. It was thought by the committee that when a man who served on the ship, in whatever capacity and who himself in many cases, it is believed, received money for aiding and abetting these stowaways, that he is sometimes making that stowaway his victim, and that he ought to be punished a little more severely for his aiding and abetting than the other fellow.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I did not quite catch that point, but it is to apply principally to members of the crew, who aid?

Mr. BLAND. Yes; people who ought to know better. It was suggested in some cases they are paid money to enable these people to be stowed away on the ships, and in this way they get on board the ship. Then they aid them while they are on board.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain what he proposes to do with the person smuggled in? Do you charge him with any crime?

Mr. BLAND. Yes, he is punished; but we do not interfere with the immigration laws and expressly provide that nothing herein shall interfere with the immigration laws of the United States.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Do you not send those men right back, or is it the gentleman's idea to keep them in jail and feed them here and then send them back?

Mr. BLAND. My idea is that the distinguished gentleman, chairman of the Committee on Immigration, has taken care of that in that committee's legislation.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. And you do not keep the person smuggled in here?

Mr. BLAND. Not if it is in violation of the immigration laws.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any person, without the consent of the owner, charterer, or master of any vessel and with intent to obtain without paying therefor transportation on such vessel to any place within or without the United States, who shall board, enter, or secrete himself aboard such vessel and shall be thereon at the time of departure of said vessel from a port, harbor, wharf, or other place within the United States, or other place subject to its laws, or who, having boarded, entered, or secreted himself aboard such vessel in any place within or without the jurisdiction of the United States, shall remain aboard any such vessel after such vessel has left such place and who shall be found thereon at or before the time of arrival of such vessel at any other place in the United States, or any place subject to its laws, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment for a period not exceeding 1 year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 2. Whoever shall knowingly aid, abet, or assist any person to violate this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment for a period not exceeding 1 year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 3. Nothing contained in this act shall modify, restrict, alter, or change in any particular any laws of the United States in existence at the date of enactment of this act, or which shall be thereafter enacted either for the purpose of preventing any person from entering the United States in violation of the laws of the United States or for the purpose of securing the deportation from the United States of any person who, under the laws of the United States, shall be subject to deportation.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 9, after the word "within", insert "the jurisdiction of."

Page 2, line 1, after the word "States", strike out "or other place subject to its laws" and insert "including the Canal Zone."

Page 2, line 7, strike out "other place in" and insert "place within the jurisdiction of."

Page 2, line 8, after the word "States", strike out "or any place subject to its laws" and insert "including the Canal Zone."

Page 2, line 15, after the word "exceeding", strike out "$500" and insert "$1,000."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended to read: "A bill making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels and providing punishment therefor."

CIVILIAN NAUTICAL SCHOOLS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9262, to provide for the examination of civilian nautical schools and for the inspection of vessels used in connection therewith, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That as used in this act the term "civilian nautical school" means any school or branch thereof operated and conducted in the United States which offers to persons quartered on board any vessel instruction for the primary purpose of training for service in the merchant marine.

SEC. 2. Every civilian nautical school shall be subject to examination and inspection by the United States Maritime Commission, and the Commission may, under such rules and regulations as it may prescribe, provide for the rating and certification of such schools as to the adequacy of the course of instruction, the competency of the instructors, and the suitability of equipment used by or in connection with such schools.

SEC. 3. (a) All laws covering the inspection of passenger vessels in effect on the date of enactment of this act are hereby made applicable to all vessels or other floating equipment used by or in connection with any civilian nautical school, whether such vessels or other floating equipment are being navigated or not, to such extent and upon such conditions as may be required by regulations prescribed by the Board of Supervising Inspectors, with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce.

(b) The Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation is authorized and directed, through such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Commerce may approve, to prescribe minimum standards for the size, ventilation, plumbing, and sanitation of quarters assigned to members of the crew, passengers, cadets, students, instructors, or any other persons at any time quartered on board any vessel used by or in connection with any civilian nautical school.

(c) No certificate of inspection shall be issued to any such vessel until and unless a board of local inspectors has found such vessel to be in compliance with all the requirements of this section and the regulations issued thereunder. Such certificates shall be subject to revocation in the manner prescribed by section 4453 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 435).

(d) On and after 90 days from the date of enactment of this act it shall be unlawful for any vessel to which the act applies to be used by or in connection with any civilian nautical school unless it is in possession of a valid, unexpired certificate of inspection or a valid, unexpired temporary certificate of inspection.

(e) In case of the violation of this section or of any of the regulations issued thereunder by any vessel, or any owner or officer thereof, such vessel, owner, or officer shall be fined not more than $1,000, and such owner or officer may be imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or subjected to both fine and imprisonment. Should the owner of such vessel be a corporation, organization, or association, each officer or director participating in the violation shall be liable to the penalty hereinabove prescribed.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 5, after the word "States", insert "(except State nautical schools and schools operated by the United States or any agency thereof)."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING CANAL ZONE CODE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9383, to amend the Canal Zone Code with respect to the trial of joint defendants, the removal of fugitives from justice, and the regulation of criminal procedure in the Canal Zone.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I am wondering whether the bill has been properly referred to the gentleman's committee? I notice that it pertains to criminal procedure.

Mr. BLAND. It is properly referred to the committee because it is an amendment of the Canal Zone Code Act, which emanated from the committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 365 of title 6 of the Canal Zone Code be, and it is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"365. Trial of defendants jointly charged: When two or more defendants are jointly charged with any offense, they shall be tried jointly, unless the court orders separate trials. The court in its discretion may order a separate trial as to one or more defendents, and a joint trial as to the others, or may order any number of the defendants to be tried at one trial, and any number of the others at different trials, or may order a separate trial for each defendant."

SEC. 2. That title 6 of the Canal Zone Code be, and it is hereby, amended by adding, immediately after section 861, a new section numbered 861a and reading as follows:

"861a. Arrest and removal to or from the Canal Zone: The provisions of section 1014, Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 591), so far as applicable, shall apply throughout the United States for the arrest and removal therefrom to the Canal Zone of any fugitive from justice charged with the commission of any crime or offense against the United States within the Canal Zone, and shall apply within the Canal Zone for the arrest and removal therefrom to the United States of any fugitive from justice charged with the commission of any crime or offense against the United States. Such fugitive may, by any judge or magistrate of the Canal Zone, and agreeably to the usual mode of process against offenders therein, be arrested and imprisoned or bailed, as the case may be, pending the issuance of a warrant for his removal to the United States, which warrant it shall be the duty of a judge of the district court seasonably to issue, and of the officer or agent of the United States designated for the purpose to execute. Such officer or agent, when engaged in executing such a warrant without the Canal Zone, shall have all the powers of a marshal of the United States so far as such powers are requisite for the prisoner's safe-keeping and the execution of the warrant."

SEC. 3. That title 7 of the Canal Zone Code be, and it is hereby, amended by adding, immediately after section 26, a new section numbered 26a and reading as follows:

"26a. Rules of criminal procedure: In respect to matters not covered by this code, the United States District Court for the District of the Canal Zone may adopt rules governing its criminal procedure not inconsistent with the laws of the United States."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RELATING TO SEIZURE OF GEAR FOR VIOLATION OF ALASKA FISHERY LAWS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7542, to amend section 6 of an act of Congress entitled "An act for the protection of the fisheries of Alaska, and for other purposes," approved June 6, 1924.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 6 of an act of Congress entitled "An act for the protection of the fisheries of Alaska, and for other purposes" (43 Stat. 464–467), approved June 6, 1924, is hereby amended by striking the period following the word "admiralty", in the eighteenth line of said section, and inserting a colon in lieu thereof and after the colon the following: "Provided, That no boat, net, or seine belonging to any person residing in Alaska shall be summarily seized and held for forfeiture for alleged violation of this section until after the arrest, trial, and conviction in the courts of Alaska of the owner or operator of such boat, net, or seine: Provided further, That when any United States marshal, deputy marshal, employee of the Bureau of Fisheries, or other peace officer having authority, so finds any such boat, net, or seine being used or operated in violation of this act, or in violation of said act approved June 26, 1906, it shall be his duty immediately to make a list or inventory of such boat, net, or seine, stating how and in what manner he alleges the same to have been used or operated in violation of either or both of said acts, and cause it to be verified by his oath and forwarded to and filed in the office of the clerk of the district court in the division in which said violation of law is said to have occurred, and it shall be the duty of the clerk of said district court to file said verified statement in his office without making any charge therefor; and in case of the conviction of the owner or operator of such boat, net, or seine so used in violation of either or both of said acts involving the illegal use of such boat, net, or seine, the said list or inventory shall operate as a lien upon such boat, net, or seine so used and such lien may thereupon, at the request of the United States attorney for the judicial division in which such violation occurred, be foreclosed by the district court as of the date when the violation occurred, and the decree of foreclosure may, in the discretion of the court, be incorporated into any judgment given and rendered by the court in the criminal action against such owner or operator; and in the decree of foreclosure, whether incorporated in the judgment given and rendered in the criminal action or given and rendered separately, the court shall determine and state therein the value of such boat, net, or seine as of the date when the violation occurred and shall provide therein for the sale of said boat, net, or seine as is usual in case of foreclosure of liens upon the same: Provided further, That in the event the United States attorney shall not request foreclosure of such lien at the time of the rendition of the judgment of conviction of the owner or operator of the property covered by the lien, the lien shall be considered as satisfied and discharged: And provided further, That in the event such boat, net, or seine cannot be found after the foreclosure of said lien, the owner or operator thereof who has so been found guilty in the criminal action shall be personally liable for the value thereof as of the date when the violation occurred and as determined in the decree of foreclosure, in a civil suit to be brought for that purpose."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 9, after the word "seine" strike out "belonging to any person residing in Alaska".

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ALASKA SALMON TROLLING INDUSTRY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8172, to amend section 5 of the act of Congress approved June 26, 1906, relative to the Alaska salmon fishery.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5 of the act of Congress approved June 26, 1906, entitled "An act for the protection and regulation of the fisheries of Alaska", as amended, is further amended by striking the period at the end of the first sentence of said section and inserting a comma in lieu thereof and after said comma the following: "nor shall such authority be exercised to prohibit any person from fishing for or taking salmon by hook and line, either for personal use or for sale, during any weekly closed period in any of the waters of Alaska where salmon fishing is otherwise permitted by law and the regulations based thereon."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SLUM CLEARANCE IN TERRITORY OF ALASKA

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8884, to authorize the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska to create a public corporate authority to undertake slum clearance and projects to provide dwelling accommodations for families of low income and to issue bonds and other obligations of the authority for such purpose, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I will reserve the objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. On page 2 of the bill I notice this language:

such bonds and other obligations shall not be a debt of the Territory of Alaska or any political or municipal corporation or other subdivision of the Territory other than such authority.

Of course, the authority refers to the local housing authority set up to participate in the slum-clearance program. I may say to the gentleman that I can see no objection to this bill, and I think if it is not passed we will be in the position of having discriminated against the Territory of Alaska. But I want to bring out this point: If the Territory does not underwrite these bonds, and if there is no political or municipal corporation which can underwrite the bonds, what, then, is the security for the payment of the bonds?

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Speaker, the security is in the housing which is constructed with the money secured from the sale of the bonds. That is the only security that can be obtained. I thank the gentleman for his observation, but it is in order to say that this language is the same language that was used in the acts with respect to Puerto Rico and Hawaii. It would not be in order to make any of this debt the debt of the Territory of Alaska. Neither would it be in order to make it the debt of a city.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I do not think we should put the Territory of Alaska in any different category than we do the States under the United States Housing Act.

Mr. DIMOND. Quite right.

Mr. WOLCOTT. But the point I want to make is, if the Territory does not pledge its credit, or if the municipality does not pledge its credit, or any other political subdivision other than the authority does not pledge its credit, then what is the assurance that the bonds will be repaid? The gentleman has answered that the building itself is the security.

Mr. DIMOND. Yes, sir.

Mr. WOLCOTT. That is my understanding. So whether the bonds are good or not depends on the action of the Congress in appropriating the money to retire the bonds. Is that right?

Mr. DIMOND. No; I think that has nothing to do with it, but if it has, then I insist that, as the gentleman says, Alaska and the citizens of Alaska should not be the victims of discrimination, and neither the Territory nor the cities of Alaska should underwrite the bonds.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I wish the gentleman would weigh his remarks when he says that would have nothing to do with it, because up to the present time in all of these projects in all of these States, the market for the bonds depends on the fulfillment of the moral obligations of the Congress to appropriate money annually for 60 years to retire them, and there is not 1 cent of the money which comes to the Authority from rent which is used to retire the bonds. These bonds are retired at the present time out of the annual contributions appropriated by Congress, and if the annual contributions are shut off, then the bonds are not retired unless the municipalities are granted authority to pledge their credit against them. I do not think we should object to this bill and cut Alaska off from participation in the slum-clearance program, even though I am opposed to the methods employed by the United States Housing Authority as set up by Congress.

I went over this bill carefully, and it puts Alaska in the same position as the Territory of Hawaii and the States. I think we have created an incongruous situation in respect to the operation of the United States Housing Authority Act, and I think we should give a great deal of consideration to it before we expand the operation of the act.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I yield to the distinguished gentlewoman from Illinois.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. I wonder if the gentleman from Michigan has failed to notice this distinction: That apparently these other Territories were permitted to go ahead and organize housing authorities before the Congress last spring voted down a rule to consider the bill under which we would continue Government subsidies for housing. If we pass this law, would not the Congress, in effect, be saying, you have our consent to issue these bonds? Would we not then be under a moral obligation to go ahead and furnish the subsidy?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I see no connection between this bill and the bill to expand the United States Housing Authority, for the reason that the moneys which we have already set up go into a revolving fund. If the Administrator of the United States Housing Authority has the funds, or will have the funds in years from now, available, then I see no reason why Alaska should not come in and get her share.

I want it distinctly understood, in view of the gentlewoman's remarks, that nothing contained in this bill or the action of the Congress in respect to this bill should be interpreted as continuing, or indicating its willingness to continue, the United States Housing Authority. I think we should make it very clear that by this bill we are merely removing a discrimination which attaches to Alaska and are not expanding or declaring any congressional intent in respect to the continuance or expansion of existing law or methods.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman admit that under this act we are subjecting innocent investors to a stripping by watered stock and worthless stock peddlers?

Mr. WOLCOTT. No; I cannot agree with the gentleman on that. I think the act is bad enough without charging that. I think they are the best bonds that anybody could buy. Congress appropriates the money to repay them. There is a moral, social, and legal obligation on the part of the present Government to retire these bonds. We should stop the program before we commit Congresses for the next 60 years to pay these bonds. I agree with the gentleman in that respect, but these bonds are gilt-edged, because they have the full faith and credit of the United States behind them. They are tax-exempt, and we have signed a solemn pledge to appropriate the money every year to retire them. I would not hesitate to recommend these bonds to anyone.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Is not that a valid reason for killing this bill right now?

Mr. WOLCOTT. No; I don't think it is. I think it is a valid reason for setting up some new plan for doing this job. I would not want to see this bill killed, because I do not think it is fair to the Territory of Alaska to do it, because all the bill seeks to do is to remove a discrimination against Alaska and I hope the gentleman will not object to it and will join with us, if we have to meet the issue, by amending the Housing Act so that private capital may be encouraged to come in and do the job.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. If the gentleman will just let me have a minute so I can explain my position on this bill I will be much obliged to him.

This bill involves socialism. In Milwaukee we have the Parklawn Government housing project. Who lives in these tax-exempt apartments? Postal employees with incomes as high as $2,300 a year, city policemen, and walking delegates for labor unions who have an income of $75 a week. The poor and underprivileged cannot and do not live in these Government-subsidized tax-exempt housing projects.

Abraham Lincoln, our Republican leader, said that the country could not exist half slave and half free. I believe that our Republican Party should adhere to the proposition that our country cannot remain half communistic soviet socialism and half a capitalistic American constitutional democracy. I, therefore, object to the consideration of this socialistic bill.

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Speaker, I am deeply obliged to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] for having stated the case in favor of this bill more clearly and cogently than I could have stated it. The sole point at issue is whether the citizens of Alaska will receive, by act of Congress, the same benefits and privileges which have already been accorded to the citizens who reside in the 48 States and those who reside in Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Without exception, they have been accorded all of the benefits of the United States Housing Act with respect to slum clearance and low-cost housing. It is true, Mr. Speaker, that the United States Housing Act very properly extends to the territories and insular possessions, as well as to the States. So far as that act is concerned, no distinction is made as to citizens of the United States wherever they may reside under our flag. But Alaska is a Territory, and as a Territory it has only rigidly limited powers of legislation. At the present time the Territory has no authority to engage in slum clearance or to assist its citizens of small income with respect to low-cost housing. Congress has heretofore, under similar circumstances made a grant of the necessary authority to the people of Hawaii and to the people of Puerto Rico, acting through their respective legislatures, to engage in this highly meritorious realm of relief for their citizens of low income. We seek only in this bill to have the same authority granted to the Legislature of Alaska so that the citizens of Alaska too, may, if the Alaska Legislature sees fit to approve the program, enjoy the benefits which have been accorded to all other citizens of the United States with respect to housing and slum clearance. We are not seeking to expand or enlarge the United States Housing Act. We are not asking for a single dollar in additional appropriation. We are not advocating any increase in appropriation for housing, or for any other purpose. We simply say to the Congress that we are citizens of the United States and therefore, upon the plainest principles of justice and equity, entitled to whatever governmental benefits or advantages have been given by Congress to all other citizens of the United States. We are not asking for any special privilege. As the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] has so forcefully said, we are simply seeking an end of the discrimination which now exists with respect to Alaska in the application of the United States Housing legislation.

Mr. Speaker, if Alaska were a State, we would not be obliged to apply for any such legislation, because a State would be able, if it chose, either by legislative act, or by constitutional amendment, to enjoy the advantages which may be obtained under the Housing Act. But since Alaska is a Territory with a legislature of limited powers, it is necessary for us to apply to Congress for an enlargement of those powers so that we may be placed in the same position, and no better position, than the States, and the Territory of Hawaii, and Puerto Rico.

It is hard to conceive of any sound objection which can be made to our request. Surely it will not be urged that the citizens of Alaska are in some lower status or category than the citizens of the 48 States and the citizens of Hawaii and the citizens of Puerto Rico, all of whom are citizens of the United States. Lord North had some such idea with respect to colonies and the citizens of colonies, but, as I understand, that idea of offshore or colonial inferiority has generally been abandoned and few indeed are the people in this Nation who now say publicly that because a citizen of the United States lives in Alaska or Hawaii or Puerto Rico, he is not deserving of all of the rights and privileges and immunities which are enjoyed by the citizens of the United States who may happen to reside in the States of Michigan or Wisconsin, or any other of the 48 States.

Mr. Speaker, I am particularly comforted by the fact that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] has forcefully advanced the arguments in favor of the passage of this bill. The more so, because he is opposed, as I understand, to the general policy of the United States housing program. In spite of that opposition he is concerned to see justice and equity given to the citizens of Alaska. Those of us who live in the Territory are his debtors for thus so strongly advancing the cause of fair treatment and equal justice to all citizens of the United States wherever they may reside.

It cannot be fairly argued, Mr. Speaker, that the inclusion of Alaska with the 48 States and the Territories of Hawaii and Puerto Rico within the active scope of the United States housing program will take a single additional dollar out of the United States Treasury. The Delegate from Alaska has no vote in this House; Alaska has no representation whatever in the Senate; and Alaska, like Hawaii and Puerto Rico, is not even eligible for election of Presidential electors. And so it is obvious that the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate will not increase the appropriations requested for carrying on the program of the United States Housing Authority because Alaska, if this bill be passed, may be eligible to share with the States and with Hawaii and Puerto Rico in the benefits of that program. The passage of this bill will not expand or enlarge the chances for such an increased appropriation for housing, because Alaska may be eligible to share in the housing benefits, by as much as 1 to 1,000,000,000,000,000, and the latter raised to the *n*th power. It would be simply frivolous to say that the passage of this bill will mean larger appropriations for carrying on the work of the United States Housing Authority.

And so, Mr. Speaker, I suggest that no valid argument can be offered in opposition to this bill unless the Members are willing to adopt the views of Lord North and say that because citizens of the United States happen to reside in its Territories they are not entitled to the benefits and rights which are unhesitatingly accorded to the citizens of the several States. Of course, I understand that no Member of this House is even thinking of advocating any such policy, and yet such a policy would constitute the only reasonable and logical justification for opposition to the enactment of this measure.

Before concluding I desire to put in the RECORD at this point the body of House report on the bill favoring its passage:

The Committee on the Territories, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8884) to authorize the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska to create a public corporate authority to undertake slum clearance and projects to provide dwelling accommodations for families of low-income and to issue bonds and other obligations of the authority for such purpose, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report favorably thereon and recommend that the bill do pass.

The purpose of the bill is to enable the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, through the creation of suitable public corporate authority, to undertake projects for slum clearance and to provide dwelling accommodations for families of low income.

Congress has heretofore enacted similar measures for the Territory of Hawaii (act, July 10, 1937, 50 Stat. 508) and for Puerto Rico (act, June 25, 1938, 52 Stat. 1203) under which both Hawaii and Puerto Rico have undertaken work similar to that which is contemplated for Alaska.

That there is widespread need for housing aid and slum clearance in Alaska was amply shown at the hearings on the bill. At the present time the work cannot be undertaken because the Legislature of Alaska does not possess sufficient authority, and the object of the bill is to enlarge the legislative authority of the Territory so as to enable the legislature to adopt and undertake such a program if it shall see fit to do so. By the two acts above mentioned, similar authority has already been given to the Legislatures of Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

If the bill is enacted and if the Legislature of Alaska creates the housing authority as outlined in the bill, that authority will be eligible to apply for assistance to the United States Housing Authority to undertake slum clearance and low-cost housing. Thus, the Territory of Alaska will be qualified to share with the States and with Hawaii and Puerto Rico in whatever help may be obtained through the United States Housing Authority.

In essence the bill is designed to give to the citizens of Alaska the same rights and privileges with respect to housing which have already been conferred upon the citizens of the 48 States and upon the citizens of Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Nothing further is designed or intended and nothing further can be done under the bill.

The bill has the approval of the Secretary of the Interior and the Bureau of the Budget as is indicated by a letter dated April 26 addressed to the chairman of the committee by the Secretary of the Interior, which is hereinafter set out. The bill does not call for or authorize or even suggest any appropriation from the United States Treasury.

The letter from the Secretary of the Interior is as follows:

APRIL 26, 1940.

Hon. LEX GREEN,
Chairman, Committee on the Territories, House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. GREEN: I have received your letter of March 14 requesting a report on H. R. 8884, a bill to authorize the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska to create a public corporate authority to undertake slum clearance and projects to provide dwelling accommodations for families of low income and to issue bonds and other obligations of the authority for such purposes, and for other purposes.

The purpose of this bill is to enable the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska to create a Territorial housing authority, in order that Alaska may participate in the benefits afforded by the United States Housing Act of 1937 (50 Stat. 888). This act authorizes the United States Housing Authority to furnish financial assistance to public housing agencies in States and Territories for undertaking slum clearance and low-rent housing. Alaska is specifically included in the provisions of the Housing Act, but before a public-housing agency may be created in the Territory, the legislature must enact covering legislation.

The legislative powers of the Territorial legislature are limited, however, by section 9 of the organic act of August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. 512), as amended. Although the legislature is permitted to enact legislation governing the creation of corporate bodies for designated purposes, it is not clear from the covering language of the organic act whether or not the legislature has been given the power to provide for a public body to undertake slum clearance and low-cost housing. H. R. 8884 would clearly authorize the legislature to enact such measures and thereby enable the Territory to profit by the United States Housing Act—an act in which Alaska is specifically included.

The provisions of the proposed legislation are similar in effect to those contained in the acts of Congress of 1937 and 1938 enabling the Legislatures of Hawaii (50 Stat. 508) and Puerto Rico (52 Stat. 1203) to create housing authorities:

Section 1 would authorize the creation of a housing authority by the Territorial legislature.

Section 2 would permit Territorial legislation covering the powers of the authority necessary to qualify for assistance under the United States Housing Act, specifying, however, that such powers shall not include the power of taxation nor any power to pledge the faith of the people of the Territory for any loan whatever.

Section 3 would authorize the legislature to provide for the issuance of bonds and other obligations, but would prohibit such authority from issuing any obligations as debts of the Territory or any body other than the Territorial housing authority.

The bill appears to me to be in the interest of Alaska, is in accord with the policy established by existing Federal law on the same subject, and I recommend its passage as written.

I am advised by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget that there is no objection to presenting this report to the Congress.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

CUMBERLAND GAP NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9394, to provide for the establishment of the Cumberland Gap National Historical Park in Tennessee, Kentucky, and Virginia.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That when title to all the lands, structures, and other property in the Cumberland Gap-Cumberland Ford areas, being portions of the Warriors Path of the Indians and Wilderness Road of Daniel Boone, within Bell and Harlan Counties, Ky.; Lee County, Va.; and Claiborne County, Tenn.; as may be determined by the Secretary of the Interior as necessary or desirable for national historical park purposes, shall have been vested in the United States such area or areas shall be, and they are hereby, established, dedicated, and set apart as a public park for the benefit and inspiration of the people and shall be known as the "Cumberland Gap National Historical Park": Provided, That the United States shall not purchase by appropriation of public moneys any lands within the aforesaid areas: Provided further, That such area or areas shall include at least the following features and intervening lands: Cumberland Gap, The Pinnacle, the remaining fortifications of the War between the States, Soldiers Cave, King Solomon's Cave, Devils Garden, Sand Cave, The Doublings, White Rocks, Rocky Face, Moore Knob, and that portion of the Warriors Path and Daniel Boone's Wilderness Road extending from the city of Cumberland Gap, Tenn., to Cumberland Ford, near Pineville, Ky.

SEC. 2. The total area of the Cumberland Gap National Historical Park, as determined pursuant to this act, shall not exceed 50,000 acres, and shall not include any land within the city limits of Middlesboro and Pineville, Ky.; Cumberland Gap, Tenn.; or any lands adjacent thereto which the proper officials thereof shall indicate to the Secretary of the Interior prior to the establishment of said park are required for expansion of said cities.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to accept donations of land, interests in land, buildings, structures, and other property within the boundaries of the said historical park as determined and fixed hereunder, and donations of funds for the purchase and maintenance thereof: Provided, That he may acquire on behalf of the United States out of any donated funds, by purchase at prices deemed by him reasonable, or by condemnation under the provisions of the act of August 1, 1888, such tracts of land within said historical park as may be necessary for the completion thereof.

SEC. 4. The administration, protection, and development of the aforesaid national historical park shall be exercised under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior by the National Park Service, subject to the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535), entitled "An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes," as amended.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 3, at the end of line 10, add the following: "The title to any lands or interests in lands to be acquired pursuant to this act shall be satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, this bill providing for the establishment of Cumberland Gap National Historical Park in Tennessee, Kentucky, and Virginia is a most meritorious proposal and one which has the approval of the Department of the Interior.

The Committee on the Public Lands recently held a thorough hearing on the bill, at which representatives from the three States appeared in support of it.

The proposal to establish a national historical park in the Cumberland Gap area has attracted favorable comment among historians, naturalists, conservationists, and others interested in preserving the highly interesting historical aspects and the natural beauty of this area.

Cumberland Gap is one of the most historical passes in America and ranks with the most interesting mountain passes in the world. The first white man to pass through this gap, so far as is known, was Dr. Thomas Walker, of Virginia, who, with five companions, passed through this gateway in 1750, going into what is now Kentucky; but the aborigines had been passing through it for ages in their trips to the South and Southeast. George Rogers Clark likewise passed through Cumberland Gap, after which he won his victory at Vincennes, Ind., except for which the western boundary of the United States might well have been the Cumberland Range. Dr. Walker, when he first visited this place, suggested its name in honor of the Duke of Cumberland. There followed Daniel Boone and many other historical characters.

This is veritably a land of beauty as well as history. There is a greater variety of flora in the southern Appalachian Mountains than in any part of the United States. It is a land of magnolias, azaleas, rhododendron, and a hundred other varieties of beautiful shrubbery and flora. It is highly important that this remarkable area be conserved and protected for the benefit of posterity.

In my opinion, it will become one of the most popular small parks in America, and, due to its close proximity to the Great Smoky Mountains, Norris Dam, and Mammoth Cave, it will become immediately accessible to the millions who will visit these areas annually.

This is a proposal in which I have been greatly interested for a number of years, and it gives me a great deal of personal satisfaction to see it coming to a successful conclusion.

I want to express my appreciation to the chairman and members of the Committee on the Public Lands for their careful consideration of the bill, resulting in an unanimous favorable report.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE

The Clerk called the next business, Senate Joint Resolution 71, relating to pay to certain employees of the Government Printing Office for uncompensated leave earned during the fiscal year 1932.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, acting on an agreement with the ranking minority member of the Committee on Printing, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH], who finds it impossible to be in the Chamber at the time this joint resolution is called, I ask that the joint resolution may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

BIOGRAPHICAL CONGRESSIONAL DIRECTORY

The Clerk called the next business, House Concurrent Resolution 54.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, there is no money in the Treasury today. This directory is not a necessity. Until the Nation's finances are in better condition I think we should be glad to forego this sort of luxury.

I ask unanimous consent that this joint resolution may be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I hope the gentleman will withhold his request, for to discontinue the continued publication of this biography at the present time—the last compilation was made in 1928—would be practically a waste of the money originally spent on this valuable work.

This work consists of the compilation of biographies of every Member who ever served in this body. Since the 1928 edition was printed, approximately 1,000 Members have served in the House of Representatives whose names are not included in that compilation. The pending bill would provide for a continuation of this work. It is a necessity, not only as a work of reference but it is something that should be handed down to posterity as historical data. I hope the gentleman will not object to the joint resolution. Seventy of the present 96 Members of the Senate do not appear at all in the present compilation, and the names of some 362 Members of the House of the present session of Congress are also without recognition.

When the edition was published in 1928 it was done so only after tremendous research and at considerable expense. With the close of the present session of Congress bringing with it a national election, it seems fitting that if this work is to be continued at all this is the year to do it. This bill will bring these biographies up to date as of December 31, 1940. The biographical matter contained in the present Congressional Directories is entirely inadequate, as many Members of the House and Senate, now as in the past, exemplifying great modesty, have refrained from placing important items concerning their careers within those pages. Their great deeds and the history of their important careers should be handed down to posterity, both for historical preservation as well as reference, hence the need of the revision of the 1928 edition at this time. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his request so that this joint resolution may pass.

Mr. KEAN. May I not say to the gentleman from Massachusetts that this will cost $36,000? It is not a necessity, and I must renew my request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey that the joint resolution be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

OFFICERS' RESERVE CORPS OF THE ARMY

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3198, to provide allowances for uniforms and equipment for certain officers of the Officers' Reserve Corps of the Army.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That officers of the Officers' Reserve Corps of the Army shall be entitled to an allowance for uniforms and equipment of $50 per annum upon completion, in separate fiscal years, of each of their first three periods of active-duty training of 3 months or less, following their original appointment, during which periods the uniform is required to be worn.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks on the bill (H. R. 9394) recently passed, and to insert them in the RECORD at the point where the bill was considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY LIBRARY

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1542, to authorize the Director of the Geological Survey, under the general supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, to acquire certain collections for the United States.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Director of the Geological Survey, under the general supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized to acquire for the United States, by gift or devise, scientific or technical books, manuscripts, maps, and related materials, and to deposit the same in the library of the Geological Survey for reference and use as authorized by law.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DOCUMENTATION OF CERTAIN VESSELS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8283, to amend section 4370 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 316).

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4370 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 316) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4370. (a) It shall be unlawful for any vessel not wholly owned by a person who is a citizen of the United States within the meaning of the laws respecting the documentation of vessels and not having in force a certificate of registry, a certificate of enrollment, or a license, issued pursuant to title XLVIII or title L of the Revised Statutes, or a certificate of award of number issued pursuant to the act of June 7, 1918, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 46, sec. 288), to tow any vessel other than a vessel of foreign registry, or a vessel in distress, from any port or place in the United States, its Territories or possessions, embraced within the coastwise laws of the United States, to any other port or place within the same, either directly or by way of a foreign port or place, or to do any part of such towing, or to tow any such vessel, from point to point within the harbors of such places. The owner and master of any vessel towing another vessel in violation of the provisions of this section shall each be liable to a fine of not less than $250 nor more than $1,000, which fines shall constitute liens upon the offending vessel enforceable through the district court of the United States for any district in which such vessel may be found, and clearance shall not be granted to such vessel until the fines have been paid. The towing vessel shall also be further liable to a penalty of $50 per ton on the measurement of every vessel towed in violation of this section, which sum may be recovered by way of libel or suit.

"(b) The term 'person' as used in subsection (a) of this section, shall be held to include persons, firms, partnerships, associations, organizations, and corporations, doing business or existing under or by the authority of the laws of the United States, or of any State, Territory, district, or other subdivision thereof.

"(c) Any foreign railroad company or corporation, whose road enters the United States by means of a ferry, tugboat, or towboat, may own such vessel and operate the same in connection with the water transportation of the passenger, freight, express, baggage, and mail cars used by such road, together with the passengers, freight, express matter, baggage, and mails transported in such cars, without being subject to any other or different restrictions than those imposed by law on any vessel of the United States entering ports of the United States from ports in the same foreign country: Provided, That except as authorized by section 27 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1920, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 46, sec. 883), such ferry, tugboat, or towboat shall not, under penalty of forfeiture, be used in connection with the transportation of any merchandise shipped from any port or place in the United States, its Territories or possessions, embraced within the coastwise laws of the United States, to any other port or place within the same.

"(d) No foreign vessel shall, under penalty of forfeiture, engage in salvaging operations on the Atlantic or Pacific coast of the United States, in Alaska, in any portion of the Great Lakes or their connecting or tributary waters, including any portion of the Saint Lawrence River through which the international boundary line extends, or in territorial waters of the United States on the Gulf of Mexico, except when authorized by a treaty or in accordance with the provisions of the act of June 19, 1878, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 725): Provided, however, That if, on investigation, the Secretary of Commerce is satisfied that no suitable vessel wholly owned by a person who is a citizen of the United States and documented under the laws of the United States or numbered pursuant to the act of June 7, 1918, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 46, sec. 288), is available in any particular locality he may authorize the use of a foreign vessel or vessels in salvaging operations in that locality and no penalty shall be incurred for such authorized use.

"(e) Nothing in this section shall be held or construed to prohibit or restrict any assistance to vessels or salvage operations authorized by article II of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain 'concerning reciprocal rights for United States and Canada in the conveyance of prisoners and wrecking and salvage,' signed at Washington, May 18, 1908 (35 Stat. 2036), or by the treaty between the United States and Mexico 'to facilitate assistance to and salvage of vessels in territorial waters,' signed at Mexico City, June 13, 1935 (49 Stat. 3359)."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 3, line 25, strike out the words "in Alaska."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING TRANSFER OF FUNDS TO COVER ADVANCES FOR CROP INSURANCE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9594, to amend section 12 (b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing the transfer of funds to cover advances for crop insurance.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 12 (b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, be amended by adding the following sentence at the end thereof: "In carrying out the provisions of this subsection, the Secretary may transfer to the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, prior to the execution of applications for insurance or requests for advances by producers, the funds estimated as necessary to cover the advances which will be requested for the payment of premiums under a crop-insurance program, and any portion of such funds not used for advances to producers under such program shall be returned to the Secretary by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was lead on the table.

AMENDING THE PERISHABLE AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES ACT, 1930, AS AMENDED

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8628, to amend the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended, to include as a perishable agricultural commodity cherries in brine, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (4) of section 1 of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (relating to the definition of "perishable agricultural commodity"), is amended to read as follows:

"(4) The term 'perishable agricultural commodity'—

"(A) Means any of the following, whether or not frozen or packed in ice: Fresh fruits and fresh vegetables of every kind and character; and

"(B) Includes cherries in brine as defined by the Secretary in accordance with trade usages;".

SEC. 2. Paragraph (6) (C) of section 1 of such act, as amended (relating to the definition of "dealer"), is amended by inserting after the word "ice" a comma and the following: "or consists of cherries in brine,".

SEC. 3. Paragraph (1) of section 2 of such act, as amended (relating to the definition of "unfair conduct"), is amended to read as follows:

"(1) For any commission merchant, dealer, or broker to engage in or use any unfair, unreasonable, discriminatory, or deceptive practice in connection with the weighing, counting, or in any way determining the quantity of any perishable agricultural commodity received, bought, sold, shipped, or handled in interstate or foreign commerce;".

SEC. 4. Paragraph (5) of section 2 of such act, as amended (relating to the definition of "unfair conduct"), is amended by inserting after "quality," the following: "quantity, size, pack, weight,".

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ALTERATION OF CERTAIN BRIDGES AND APPORTIONMENT OF COSTS THEREOF

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of H. R. 9381, to provide for the alteration of certain bridges over navigable waters of the United States, for the apportionment of the cost of such alterations between the United States and the owners of such bridges, and for other purposes, No. 797 on the Union Calendar, which was inadvertently omitted from the Consent Calendar.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS]?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain this bill?

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill which was passed by the Congress last year without an objection or a dissenting vote. The President vetoed the bill after the Congress had adjourned.

A letter written by Senator HARRY S. TRUMAN to the chairman of the Bridge Subcommittee of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the House, will explain the amendments which appear on pages 2, 5, and 6 of the new bill, H. R. 9381:

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 22, 1940.

Hon. VIRGIL CHAPMAN,
Chairman, Bridge Committee, House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CHAPMAN: While I may not, because of the rule of protocol against quoting the President, state exactly what he said to me, yet I may with propriety certify the clear understanding I gained from a personal interview with the President.

Therefore, I certify H. R. 9381 is in complete and perfect accord with my clear understanding, so gained, of the wishes of the President with respect to that legislation.

H. R. 9381 is essentially the same bill passed by the Senate and the House last year in which have been incorporated amendments that I am sure will make it acceptable to the President.

Sincerely yours,

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS]?

Mr. DARDEN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I am in accord with the gentleman's bill, but may I inquire if that was not included as a part of the transportation bill?

Mr. HOBBS. No, sir; that is not true.

Mr. DARDEN of Virginia. Was it not a part of the bill when it passed the House last year?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes, sir.

Mr. DARDEN of Virginia. It was stricken out by the conferees?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes, sir; or at least the Senate conferees would not agree to incorporate it in the conference report.

Mr. DARDEN of Virginia. They assigned as their reason the fact it had been vetoed?

Mr. HOBBS. Not exactly, as I understand it. It was not in the Senate version. It was in the House version. The conferees preferred that it be done this way.

There is no objection from any source whatsoever. It comes in here with a unanimous report of the great Interstate Commerce Committee. It has the unanimous support of all 21 of the railroad brotherhoods and of every railroad in the country. It also is recommended in the unanimous report of the President's Committee of Six appointed to study the whole field of railway problems. The President selected and appointed to serve on this Committee of Six representatives of railway management, railway labor, and of the public. It was a group of men of outstanding ability, honesty, and patriotism. They studied the question presented by this bill exhaustively. Their unanimous report advocating the passage of such a bill should be given great weight.

The philosophy of this bill is taken from the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of N. C. & St. L. R. R. Co. v. Walters (294 U. S. 405), relating to the analogous problem arising there as to the elimination of grade crossings of railways by highways. The same reasoning applies with equal force to the equities arising when the Army engineers order the remodeling of a railway bridge crossing a navigable stream because of the needs of navigation.

This bill does not seek to diminish the authority nor power of the Army engineers by one iota. It leaves the determination of the equities entirely in their hands. It simply requires them to ascertain the equities and after charging the affected railroad with all the benefits, past, present, and future, accruing to it, if in equity and good conscience they determine that there is a balance which should be paid by the Government for the benefit of navigation, they should so adjudge. In the event of such adjudication it is provided that the Government should make such contribution as may have been held to be equitable in the particular case.

In view of Senator TRUMAN's assurance that the amendments incorporated in the new bill meet the objections of the President, it is confidently expected that the President will approve the pending bill when passed by both Houses of Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.

DEFINITIONS

SECTION 1. When used in this act, unless the context indicates otherwise—

The term "alteration" includes changes of any kind, reconstruction, or removal in whole or in part.

The term "bridge" means a lawful bridge over navigable waters of the United States, including approaches, fenders and appurtenances thereto, used and operated for the purpose of carrying railroad traffic, or both railroad and highway traffic.

The term "bridge owner" means any corporation, association, partnership, or individual owning any bridge, and, when any bridge shall be in the possession or under the control of any trustee, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, or lessee, said term shall include both the owner of the legal title and the person or entity in possession or control of such bridge.

The term "bridge owner" shall also mean and include all joint owners, particularly States, counties, municipalities, or other participants in ownership of bridges for both railroad and highway traffic.

The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of War acting directly or through the Chief of Engineers.

The term "United States", when used in a geographical sense, includes the Territories and possessions of the United States.

OBSTRUCTION OF NAVIGATION

SEC. 2. No bridge shall at any time unreasonably obstruct the free navigation of any navigable waters of the United States.

NOTICE, HEARINGS, AND FINDINGS

SEC. 3. Whenever any bridge shall, in the opinion of the Secretary, at any time unreasonably obstruct such navigation, it shall be the duty of the Secretary, after notice to interested parties, to hold a hearing at which the bridge owner, those interested in water navigation thereunder or therethrough, those interested in either railroad or highway traffic thereover, and any other party or parties in interest shall have full opportunity to offer evidence and be heard as to whether any alteration of such bridge is needed, and if so what alterations are needed, having due regard to the necessity of free and unobstructed water navigation and to the necessities of the rail or highway traffic. If, upon such hearing, the Secretary determines that any alterations of such bridge are necessary in order to render navigation through or under it reasonably free, easy, and unobstructed, having due regard also for the necessities of rail or highway traffic thereover, he shall so find and shall issue and cause to be served upon interested parties an order requiring such alterations of such bridge as he finds to be reasonably necessary for the purposes of navigation.

SUBMISSION AND APPROVAL OF GENERAL PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS

SEC. 4. It shall be the duty of the bridge owner to prepare and submit to the Secretary, within 90 days after service of his order, general plans and specifications to provide for the alteration of such bridge in accordance with such order, and for such additional alteration of such bridge as the bridge owner may desire to meet the necessities of railroad or highway traffic, or both. The Secretary may approve or reject such general plans and specifications, in whole or in part, and may require the submission of new or additional plans and specifications, but when the Secretary shall have approved general plans and specifications, they shall be final and binding upon all parties unless changes therein be afterward approved by the Secretary and the bridge owner.

CONTRCTS FOR PROJECT; GUARANTY OF COST

SEC. 5. After approval of such general plans and specifications by the Secretary, and within 90 days after notification of such approval, the bridge owner shall, in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe, take bids for the alteration of such bridge in accordance with such general plans and specifications. All bids, including any bid for all or part of the project submitted by the bridge owner, shall be submitted to the Secretary, together with a recommendation by the bridge owner as to the most competent bid or bids, and at the same time the bridge owner shall submit to the Secretary a written guaranty that the total cost of the project, including the cost of such work as is to be performed by the bridge owner and not included in the work to be performed by contract, shall not exceed the sum stated in said guaranty. The Secretary may direct the bridge owner to reject all bids and to take new bids, or may authorize the bridge owner to proceed with the project, by contract, or partly by contract and partly by the bridge owner, or wholly by the bridge owner. Upon such authorization and fixing of the proportionate shares of the cost as provided in section 6, the bridge owner shall, within a reasonable time to be prescribed by the Secretary, proceed with the work of alteration; and the cost thereof shall be borne by the United States and by the bridge owner, as hereinafter provided.

APPORTIONMENT OF COST

SEC. 6. At the time the Secretary shall authorize the bridge owner to proceed with the project, as provided in section 5, and after an opportunity to the bridge owner to be heard thereon, the Secretary shall determine and issue an order specifying the proportionate shares of the total cost of the project to be borne by the United States and by the bridge owner. Such apportionment shall be made on the following basis: The bridge owner shall bear such part of the cost as is attributable to the direct and special benefits which will accrue to the bridge owner as a result of the alteration, including the expectable savings in repair or maintenance costs; and that part of the cost attributable to the requirements of traffic by railroad or highway, or both, including any expenditure for increased carrying capacity of the bridge, and including such proportion of the actual capital cost of the old bridge or of such part of the old bridge as may be altered or changed or rebuilt, as the used service life of the whole or a part, as the case may be, bears to the total estimated service life of the whole or such part: Provided, That the part of the cost of alteration of any bridge for both highway and railroad traffic, attributable to the requirements of traffic by highway, shall be borne by the proprietor of the highway: Provided further, That in the event the alteration or relocation of any bridge may be desirable for the reason that the bridge unreasonably obstructs navigation, but also for some other reason, the Secretary may require equitable contribution from any interested person, firm, association, corporation, municipality, county, or State desiring such alteration or relocation for such other reason, as a condition precedent to the making of an order for such alteration or relocation. The United States shall bear the balance of the cost, including that part attributable to the necessities of navigation.

PAYMENT OF SHARE OF THE UNITED STATES

SEC. 7. When the Secretary shall have approved the general plans and specifications for the alteration of such bridge and the guaranty with respect to the cost thereof, and shall have fixed the proportionate shares thereof as between the United States and the bridge owner, he shall furnish to the Secretary of the Treasury a certified copy of his approval of such plans and specifications and guaranty, and of his order fixing the proportionate shares of the United States and of the bridge owner, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon set aside, out of any appropriation available for such purpose, the share of the United States payable under this act on account of the project. When the Secretary finds that such project has been completed in accordance with his order, he shall cause to be paid to the bridge owner, out of the funds so set aside, the proportionate share of the total cost of the project allocated to the United States; or he may, in his discretion, from time to time, cause payments to be made on such construction costs as the work progresses. The total payments out of Federal funds shall not exceed the proportionate share of the United States of the total cost of the project paid or incurred by the bridge owner, and, if such total cost exceeds the cost guaranteed by the bridge owner, shall not exceed the proportionate share of the United States of such guaranteed cost, except that if the cost of the work exceeds the guaranteed cost by reason of emergencies, conditions beyond the control of the owner, or unforeseen or undetermined conditions, the Secretary may, after full review of all the circumstances, provide for additional payments by the United States to help defray such excess cost to the extent he deems to be reasonable and proper, and shall certify such additional payments to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment. All payments to any bridge owner herein provided for shall be made by the Secretary of the Treasury through the Division of Disbursement upon certifications of the Secretary of War.

APPROPRIATION AUTHORIZED

SEC. 8. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH ORDERS; PENALTIES; REMOVAL OF BRIDGE

SEC. 9. Any bridge owner who shall willfully fail or refuse to comply with any lawful order of the Secretary, made in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished in any court of competent jurisdiction by a fine not exceeding $5,000, and every month such bridge owner shall remain in default shall be deemed a new offense and subject such bridge owner to additional penalties therefor. In addition to the penalties above prescribed the Secretary may, upon the failure or refusal of any bridge owner to comply with any lawful order issued by the Secretary in regard thereto, cause the removal of any such bridge and accessory works at the expense of the bridge owner; and suit for such expense may be brought in the name of the United States against such bridge owner and recovery had for such expense in any court of competent jurisdiction. The removal of any bridge erected or maintained in violation of the provisions of this act or the order or direction of the Secretary made in pursuance thereof, and compliance with any order of the Secretary made with respect to any bridge in accordance with the provisions of this act, may be enforced by injunction, mandamus, or other summary process upon application to the district court of any district in which such bridge may, in whole or in part, exist, and proper proceedings to this end may be instituted under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States at the request of the Secretary.

REVIEW OF FINDINGS AND ORDERS

SEC. 10. Any order made or issued under section 6 of this act may be reviewed by the circuit court of appeals for any judicial circuit in which the bridge in question is wholly or partly located if a petition for such review is filed within 3 months after the date such order is issued. The judgment of any such court shall be final except that it shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certification or certiorari, in the manner provided in sections 239 and 240 of the Judicial Code, as amended. The review by such Court shall be limited to questions of law, and the findings of fact by the Secretary, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive. Upon such review such Court shall have power to affirm or, if the order is not in accordance with law, to modify or to reverse the order, with or without remanding the case for a rehearing as justice may require. Proceedings under this section shall not operate as a stay of any order of the Secretary issued under provisions of this act other than section 6, or relieve any bridge owner of any liability or penalty under such provisions.

REGULATIONS AND ORDERS

SEC. 11. The Secretary is authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations, and to make and issue such orders, as may be necessary or appropriate for carrying out the provisions of this act.

EXISTING PROVISIONS OF LAW

SEC. 12. (a) The first sentence of section 4 of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 33, sec. 494), and section 18 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1899 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 33, sec. 502), shall be inapplicable with respect to any bridge to which the provisions of this act are applicable, except to the extent provided in this section.

(b) Any bridge, the construction, reconstruction, or alteration of which was required by an order of the Secretary issued prior to July 1, 1939, and was not completed on such date, and in the case of which no penalties have accrued at the time of the enactment of this act, shall be constructed, reconstructed, or altered as required by such order, and not in accordance with the provisions of this act. In the case of any such bridge, however, the Secretary shall apportion the cost of the project between the bridge owner and the United States, and payment of the share of the United States shall be made in the same manner as if the provisions of this act applied to such construction, reconstruction, or alteration, subject to the following limitations:

(1) In case such construction, reconstruction, or alteration has not begun on or before April 1, 1940, such apportionment of cost shall be made only if (A) the construction, reconstruction, or alteration is carried out in accordance with plans and specifications, and pursuant to bids, approved by the Secretary, and (B) the bridge owner has submitted to the Secretary a written guaranty of cost as provided for in section 5.

(2) The Secretary's determination as to such apportionment and as to such plans and specifications and bids shall be final.

(3) Such apportionment shall not be made if such construction, reconstruction, or alteration is not completed within the time fixed in such order of the Secretary or within such additional time as the Secretary, for good cause shown, may allow.

(c) Any bridge (except a bridge to which subsection (b) applies) the construction, reconstruction, or alteration of which was required by an order of the Secretary issued prior to July 1, 1939, and was not begun before such date, shall be subject to the provisions of this act as though such order had not been issued, and compliance with the provisions of this act and with such orders as may be issued thereunder shall be considered to constitute compliance with such order issued prior to July 1, 1939, and with the provisions of law under which it was issued.

RELOCATION OF BRIDGES

SEC. 13. If the owner of any bridge used for railroad traffic and the Secretary shall agree that in order to remove an obstruction to navigation, or for any other purpose, a relocation of such bridge or the construction of a new bridge upon a new location would be preferable to an alteration of the existing bridge, such relocation or new construction may be carried out at such new site and upon such terms as may be acceptable to the bridge owner and the Secretary, and the cost of such relocation or new construction, including also any expense of changes in and additions to rights-of-way, stations, tracks, spurs, sidings, switches, signals, and other railroad facilities and property, and relocation of shippers required for railroad connection with the bridge at the new site, shall be apportioned as between the bridge owner and the United States in the manner which is provided for in section 6 hereof in the case of an alteration and the share of the United States paid from the appropriation authorized in section 8 hereof: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring the United States to pay any part of the expense of building any bridge across a navigable stream which the Secretary of War shall not find to be, in fact, a relocation of an existing bridge.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 6264) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the conference report.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6264) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 17, 51, and 100.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1 to 16, inclusive; 18 to 50, inclusive; 52 to 63, inclusive; 65 to 77, inclusive; 79 to 184, inclusive; 186 to 201, inclusive; and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"Guadalupe River, Texas: The construction of the nine-foot navigation channel from the Intracoastal Waterway to a point about three miles above Victoria as recommended in sub-paragraph (a) of paragraph 2, page 2, in House Document Numbered 247, Seventy-sixth Congress, First Session."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 78, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "Harbor" insert the word "California;"; And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 185, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the word "Michigan" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Wisconsin"; And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 202, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In lieu of the figures "$144,754,450" insert the figures "$109,985,450"; and after the word "herein" strike out the words "over the seven-year period beginning July 1, 1941", and insert in lieu thereof the word "adopted"; And the Senate agree to the same.

J. J. MANSFIELD,
JOSEPH A. GAVAGAN,
RENÉ L. DEROUEN,
GEORGE N. SEGER,
ALBERT E. CARTER,
Managers on the part of the House.

JOSIAH W. BAILEY,
MORRIS SHEPPARD,
CHAS. L. MCNARY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6264) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, submit the following statement explaining the effect of the action agreed upon:

The river and harbor bill as it passed the House carried authorizations for the improvement of 69 new projects in the amount of $83,848,100. The Senate by amendment struck from the House bill all but strictly navigation projects, thus eliminating 3 projects amounting to $10,220,000 and added 92 navigation projects to cost $71,184,350, making a grand total of $144,804,450.

As a result of the conference, the following project items of the House bill were eliminated:

East River, N. Y.	$34,509,000
Caloosahatchee and Lake Okeechobee drainage area, Florida	3,960,000
Guadalupe River, Tex. (flood control and power)	8,500,000
Sacramento River flood control, California	1,600,000
Bayocean Peninsula, Oreg.	120,000
Total	45,689,000

Item restored to the bill by the conferees:

Guadalupe River, Tex., navigation improvement	$3,700,000

As the result of the conference the amount authorized to be appropriated has been reduced to $109,985,450.

Projects in detail

An itemized list of the projects with first cost, as the bill passed the House of Representatives, is as follows:

Northeast Harbor, Maine	$94,500
Hendricks Harbor, Maine	6,000
Josias River, Maine	32,000
Boston Harbor, Mass.	103,000
Clinton Harbor, Conn.	21,900
Norwalk Harbor, Conn.	29,500
Greenwich Harbor, Conn.	31,000
Northport Harbor, N. Y.	15,000
Orowoc Creek, N. Y.	15,200
Peconic River, N. Y.	20,000
Shark River, N. J.	118,000

Projects in detail—Continued

New Jersey Intracoastal Waterway	$2,100,000
Mill Creek, Md	4,200
Black Walnut Harbor, Md	21,000
Town Creek, Md	25,000
Lower Thoroughfare, Deals Island, Md	22,000
Duck Point Cove, Md	19,500
Channel to Island Creek, Md	10,000
St. Catherines Sound, Md	10,900
Susquehanna River, above and below Havre de Grace, Md	18,000
Waterway on the coast of Virginia (Inland Waterway from Chesapeake Bay to Chincoteague Bay)	263,000
Appomattox River, Va	110,000
Norfolk Harbor, Va	35,000
Inland Waterway from Norfolk, Va., to Beaufort, N. C	39,000
Chowan River, N. C., and Blackwater River, Va	135,000
Channel from Pamlico Sound to Rodanthe, N. C	5,000
Channel from Edenton Bay into Pembroke Creek, N. C	9,500
Rollinson Channel, N. C	27,000
Swan Quarter Bay, waterway, North Carolina	22,500
Cape Fear River, N. C	675,000
Abbapoola Creek, S. C	10,800
Russell Creek, S. C	15,500
Winyah Bay, S. C	1,260,000
Charleston Harbor, S. C	465,000
Channel from the Intracoastal Waterway to Vero Beach, Fla	7,300
Channel from Apalachicola River to St. Andrews Bay, Fla	81,000
Anclote River, Fla	10,000
Warrior and Tombigbee Rivers, Ala. and Miss	6,750,000
Mobile Harbor, Ala	57,000
Bayou Galere, Miss	6,000
Biloxi Harbor, Miss	4,000
Mississippi River at the mouth, Louisiana	4,200,000
Louisiana-Texas Intracoastal Waterway	5,200,000
Houston Ship Channel, Tex	3,696,300
Guadalupe River, Tex	8,500,000
Ouachita River and Black River, Ark. and La	[1]
Mississippi River between Ohio River and Missouri River	10,290,000
Mississippi River, Red Wing Harbor, Minn	11,500
Mississippi River at Cochrane, Wis	33,000
Calumet-Sag Channel and Indiana Harbor and Canal, Ill. and Ind	25,900,000
Missouri River, Sioux City to the mouth	6,000,000
Baudette Harbor, Minn	15,000
Menominee Harbor and River, Mich. and Wis	[1]
Green Bay Harbor, Wis	56,000
Milwaukee Harbor, Wis	110,000
Calumet Harbor and River, Ill. and Ind	910,000
St. Joseph Harbor, Mich	74,000
Cleveland Harbor, Ohio	191,000
Erie Harbor, Pa	33,000
Rochester Harbor, N. Y	10,000
Oswego Harbor, N. Y	1,000,000
Monterey Harbor, Calif	74,000
Sacramento River flood control, California	1,600,000
Columbia River at Camas, Wash	45,000
Bayocean Peninsula, Oreg	120,000
Columbia River at Arlington, Oreg	39,000
Tacoma Harbor, Wash	160,000
Wrangell Narrows, Alaska	2,731,000
Metlakahtla Harbor, Alaska	120,000
Meyers Chuck Harbor, Alaska	25,000

[1] Modification.

Projects added to the bill by Senate amendments to which the House receded

Amendment No.	House Document No.	Title of report	Estimated cost
2	560	Portland Harbor, Maine	$780,000
3	701	Salem Harbor, Mass	43,000
4	703	Newburyport Harbor, Mass	68,000
5	362	Boston Harbor, Mass	2,300,000
7	568	Nantasket (Hull) Gut and Weymouth Fore River, Mass	141,000
8	425	Cohasset Harbor, Mass	62,000
9	557	Wellfleet Harbor, Mass	64,000
10	365	Menemsha Creek, Mass	37,500
11	368	Connecticut River Below Hartford	72,900
12	367	Thames River, Conn	120,000
13	307	New Haven Harbor, Conn	2,508,000
14	697	Larchmont Harbor, N. Y	52,000
15	700	Jamaica Bay, N. Y	270,000
16	369	Lake Montauk Harbor, N. Y	105,000
18	430	Passaic River, N. J	(1)
19	673	Compton Creek, N. J	16,000
20	580	Delaware River, Philadelphia to Sea	1,036,000
21	658	Wilmington Harbor, Del	(1)
22	330	Indian River, Del	151,000
23	429	Pocomoke River, Md	4,250
24	457	Crisfield Harbor, Md	(1)
25	556	Middle River and Dark Head Creek, Md	54,000
26	465	Cadle Creek, Md	5,500
27	687	Cranes Creek, Va	7,500

[1] Modification of project at no additional cost.

Projects added to the bill by Senate amendments to which the House receded—Continued

Amendment No.	House Document No.	Title of report	Estimated cost
28	285	Urbanna Creek, Va	$9,600
29	686	Totuskey, Va	44,000
30	381	Broad Creek, Va	20,500
31	582	Whitings Creek, Va	11,500
32	671	Pamunkey River, Va	10,000
33	559	Hampton Creek, Va	15,000
34	358	Onancock River, Va	(1)
35	683	Norfolk Harbor, Va	182,000
36	325	Silver Lake Harbor, N. C	60,000
37	316	Pamlico Sound to Avon, N. C	16,500
38	S87	Thoroughfare Bay to Cedar Bay, N. C	20,000
39	334	Beaufort Harbor, N. C	54,000
40	660	Beaufort to Cape Fear River Waterway	24,000
41	313	Manteo to Oregon Inlet, N. C	45,000
42	S83	Cape Fear River Below Wilmington, N. C	790,000
43	S170	Northeast Cape Fear River, N. C	73,000
44	327	Myrtle Beach, S. C., Anchorage Basin	11,000
45	602	Beresford Creek, S. C	21,000
46	283	Savannah Harbor, Ga	281,000
47	603	St. Johns River, Fla., Jacksonville to Lake Harney	290,000
48	336	Sebastian, Fla., to Intracoastal Waterway	19,000
49	553	New River, Fla	60,000
50	470	Miami Harbor, Fla	800,000
52	696	Waterway From Punta Rasa to Stuart and Fort Pierce, Fla	208,000
53	371	Caloosahatchee River to Withlacoochee River Waterway, Fla	3,200,000
54	552	Little Manatee River, Fla	77,000
55	342	Apalachicola, Chattahoochee, and Flint Rivers, Ga. and Fla	6,500,000
56	442	Apalachicola Bay to St. Marks River Intracoastal Waterway	32,500
57	555	Watson Bayou, Fla	(1)
58	282	Mobile Harbor, Ala., Airport Channel	55,000
59	333	Dauphin Island Bay, Ala	23,000
60	281	Bayou La Batre, Ala	27,500
61	326	Biloxi Harbor, Miss	6,000
62	685	Sabine-Neches Waterway, Tex	10,000
64	247	Guadalupe River, Tex	3,700,000
65	337	Chocolate and Bastrop Bayous and Oyster Creek, Tex	108,000
66	314	Lavaca and Navidad Rivers, Tex	85,000
67	428	Louisiana and Texas Intracoastal Waterway (Barroom Bay), Tex	6,300
68	335	Brazos Island Harbor, Tex	127,500
69	------	Mississippi River, Lock and Dam at Alton, Ill	(1)
70	547	Mississippi River at St. Paul, Minn	88,800
71	137	Modifies Project for Upper Mississippi River, Adopted in 1935, for Liquidating Damages to Drainage Districts	(1)
72	661	Grand Haven Harbor and Grand River, Mich	150,000
73	------	Cleveland Harbor, Ohio, Modification of Existing Project	(1)
74	328	Sandusky Harbor, Ohio	(1)
75	679	Wilson Harbor, N. Y	131,000
76	363	Cape Vincent Harbor, N. Y	59,000
77	682	Noyo River, Calif	600,000
78	688	Crescent City Harbor, Calif	1,610,000
79	672	Coquille River, Oreg	(1)
80	S86	Umpqua River and Harbor, Oreg	55,000
81	551	Salmon River, Oreg	5,000
82	443	Baker Bay, Columbia River, Oreg	170,000
83	544	Willamette River at and Below Willamette Falls, Oreg	3,600,000
84	------	Columbia River at Bonneville Oreg., Indian Fishing Grounds	50,000
85	481	Bay Center Channel, Willapa Harbor	30,000
86	699	Olympia Harbor, Wash	88,000
87	670	Petersburg Harbor, Alaska	80,000
88	578	Port Alexander, Alaska	31,000
89	284	Wrangell Harbor, Alaska	189,000
90	558	Craig Harbor, Alaska	80,000
91	331	Sitka Harbor, Alaska	109,000
92	579	Elfin Cove, Alaska	38,000
93	702	Seldovia Harbor, Alaska	50,000
94	332	Kodiak Harbor, Alaska	70,000
95	329	Keehi Lagoon, Honolulu, T. H	3,300,000
96	280	Fajardo Harbor, P. R	211,000
97	364	San Juan Harbor, P. R	700,000

[1] Modification of project at no additional cost.

This large number of Senate amendments for the improvement of river and harbor projects is due to the long interval between the passage of the bill by the House and action by the Senate, and they represent most of the favorable reports which have been submitted to Congress by the Secretary of War since May 18, 1939.

To the 65 items in the House bill providing for preliminary examinations and surveys of various localities with a view to determinating if improvement in the interest of navigation is warranted, the Senate, by amendments, added 84 items.

Several other minor amendments are described in the explanation of all Senate amendments, as follows:

On amendment No. 1, page 2: Provides that foundations for power installations be incorporated in any dam authorized by this bill for future use if approved by the Secretary of War on the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers and the Federal Power Commission. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 2, page 2: Portland Harbor, Maine. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an anchorage area 35 feet deep and approximately 170 acres in area northwest of House Island at an estimated cost of $780,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 3, page 2: Salem Harbor, Mass. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel in South River 10 feet deep, approximately 90 feet wide to the bend near Central wharf, thence 50 feet wide to the upstream end of Pickering wharf, and for a branch channel on the east side of Derby wharf 8 feet deep, 100 feet wide, and approximately 700 feet long, widening to a basin of the same depth 500 feet long and 200 feet wide, at an estimated cost of $43,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 4, page 2: Newburyport Harbor, Mass. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide a continuous channel from the sea to the wharves at Newburyport, 15 feet deep and 400 feet wide through the bar; thence 12 feet deep and 200 feet wide to and including a widened turning basin in front of the wharves, at an estimated first cost of $102,000, of which $34,000 is to be contributed by local interests. House conferees recede.

On amendments 5 and 6, pages 2 and 3: Boston Harbor, Mass. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a seaplane channel 12 feet deep and 1,500 feet wide, extending northwesterly from President Roads 17,500 feet to the easterly margin of Boston Airport, and for deposit of excavated material in such places as will permit enlargement of the airport, at an estimated cost of $2,300,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 7, page 3: Nantasket (Hull) Gut and Weymouth Fore River, Mass. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel in Nantasket Gut 27 feet deep and 400 feet wide, extending from deep water in Nantasket Roads to Hingham Bay, a distance of about 2,000 feet; thence through Hingham Bay 27 feet deep and 300 feet wide, for a distance of about 1.4 miles to deep water in Weymouth Fore River west of Sheep Island, at an estimated cost of $141,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 8, page 3: Cohasset Harbor, Mass. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an entrance channel 8 feet deep and 90 feet wide, with an anchorage area 7 feet deep and 18 acres in extent, at an estimated cost of the United States of $62,000, plus a local contribution of $30,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 9, page 3: Wellfleet Harbor, Mass. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for a channel 125 feet wide and 10 feet deep from Deep Hole, to and including an anchorage basin of the same depth, 800 feet long and 500 feet wide, at the town building, at an estimated cost to the United States of $64,000, plus a local contribution of $32,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 10, page 3: Menemsha Creek, Marthas Vineyard, Mass. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an entrance channel 10 feet deep and 80 feet wide between jetties, with anchorage areas varying from 6 to 10 feet in depth, and a channel 8 feet deep and 80 feet wide through Menemsha Creek to deep water in Menemsha Pond, at an estimated cost to the United States of $37,500 with a local contribution of $12,500 in addition. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 11, page 3: Connecticut River below Hartford, Conn. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an anchorage in North Cove in the town of Old Saybrook, Conn., connected with deep water in the Connecticut River by a channel 11 feet deep and 100 feet wide, at an estimated cost to the United States of $72,900 and to local interests of $67,500. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 12, page 3: Thames River, Conn. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for increased width of channel opposite the United States submarine base by an average of 350 feet for three-fourths of a mile and to a depth of 20 feet, at an estimated cost of $120,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 13, page 3: New Haven Harbor, Conn. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for a harbor channel 30 feet deep from the sound to Tomlinson Bridge with anchorage basins 30 feet deep and 16 feet deep, and a channel in Quinnipiac River 27 feet deep from Tomlinson Bridge to the Ferry Street Bridge with a turning basin of the same depth at the junction of Mill and Quinnipiac Rivers, at an estimated cost of $2,508,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 14, page 4: Larchmont Harbor, N. Y. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide a channel 8 feet deep and 75 feet wide from deep water to Cedar Island; thence 8 feet deep and generally 60 feet wide to a turning basin and anchorage 8 feet deep and 200 by 400 feet in area, in the vicinity of a proposed public landing at Flint Park; and two anchorages 8 feet deep, one 7 acres in area, and the other 30 acres, in the vicinity of Rock Island, at an estimated cost to the United States of $52,000 and to local interests, $52,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 15, page 4: Jamaica Bay, N. Y. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide that in lieu of the existing project for Jamaica Bay, N. Y., there be provided: (a) an interior channel extending from the vicinity of the Marine Parkway Bridge along the west and north shores of the bay, 18 feet deep and 300 feet wide to Mill Basin, with a swinging basin 1,000 feet wide and 1,000 feet long at that point, thence 12 feet deep and 200 feet wide to Fresh Creek Basin; (b) an interior channel extending from the same locality along the south shore to Head of Bay, 15 feet deep and 200 feet wide; and (c) an entrance channel connecting the two interior channels with deep water in the Atlantic Ocean, of suitable hydraulic dimensions to maintain the present tidal prism in the bay, but not less than 18 feet deep and 500 feet wide from opposite Barren Island to Rockaway Point, thence enlarging to not less than 20 feet deep and 1,000 feet wide, protected by one existing riprap jetty; at an estimated cost of $270,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 16, page 4: Lake Montauk Harbor, N. Y. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 12 feet deep and 150 feet wide extending from the 12-foot contour in Block Island Sound to the same depth in the existing yacht basin east of Star Island; for a boat basin 10 feet deep, 400 feet wide, and 900 feet long, located northwest of Star Island; and for repair and extension shoreward of the east and west jetties, at an estimated cost of $105,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 17, page 4: East River, N. Y. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel generally 40 feet deep extending from the upper limit of the existing 40-foot depth at Brooklyn Navy Yard to Throgs Neck, with widening of the bend in the channel south of Belmont Island to a depth of 40 feet, dredging a cross channel 20 feet deep between Belmont and Welfare Islands, dredging East Channel at Welfare Island 25 feet deep, removal of certain portions of Hallets Point, removal of the southern arm of Mill Rock, removal of ledges near Mill Rock and along the east bank of East River in the vicinity of Triborough Bridge, filling an area in the vicinity of Hogs Back Light and constructing a dike from this area to Wards Island, cutting back Negro Point on Wards Island, and dredging a channel 40 feet deep between North and South Brother Islands, at an estimated cost of $34,509,000.

The Secretary of the Navy has stated that the deeper channel would contribute materially to the effectiveness of our naval forces. Senate recedes.

On amendment No. 18, page 4: Passaic River, N. J. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide that when spoil-disposal areas are not available for maintenance dredging in the existing project from the Montclair and Greenwood Lake Railroad to the Eighth Street Bridge in Passaic, or when placing spoil ashore is not economical as compared with other methods of disposal, local interests shall not be required to furnish spoil-disposal areas for maintenance dredging. Annual maintenance cost to the United States will be increased when spoil-disposal areas are no longer available. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 19, page 4: Compton Creek, N. J. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide a channel 8 feet deep and 75 feet wide to a point 1,000 feet upsteam from the Main Street Bridge, with widening at the bends, at an estimated cost of $16,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 20, page 4: Delaware River, Philadelphia to the sea. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel depth of 37 feet from Allegheny Avenue to the Philadelphia-Camden Bridge and in Port Richmond anchorage at an estimated cost of $1,036,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 21, page 4: Wilmington Harbor, Del. Item recommended by the Chief of Engineers modifies existing project to permit temporary occupancy by the city of Wilmington of any part of the south jetty for city activities under revocable license issued by the Secretary of War upon recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, and provided that the occupied portion of the jetty is properly maintained without expense to the United States. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 22, page 5: Indian River, Del. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for a channel 9 feet deep to and including the turning basin at Old Landing, thence 4 feet deep to the highway bridge at Millsboro, at an estimated cost to the United States of $151,000 and to local interests of $50,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 23, page 5: Pocomoke River, Md. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for the extension of the navigable channel to above the bridge at Snow Hill, Md., to a depth of 9 feet and widths of from 100 to 150 feet, with a turning basin at the upper end of the channel, all at an estimated cost to the United States of $4,250 and to local interests of $4,250. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 24, page 5: Crisfield Harbor, Md. Item recommended by the Chief of Engineers modifies the existing project by changing the location of the anchorage basin and connecting channel as authorized in the River and Harbor Act of August 26, 1937, and upon which work has not yet commenced, to a more desirable location. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 25, page 6: Middle River and Dark Head Creek, Md. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide a channel 150 feet wide and 10 feet deep from that depth in Chesapeake Bay to the head of Dark Head Creek at an estimated cost to the United States of $54,000 and to local interests of $54,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 26, page 6: Cadle Creek, Md. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide an entrance channel 100 feet wide and 6 feet deep across the bar at the mouth of the creek at an estimated cost of $5,500. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 27, page 6: Cranes Creek, Va. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an entrance channel 80 feet wide and 6 feet deep across the offshore bar from that depth in Great Wicomico River to deep water in Cranes Creek, a distance of about 1,500 feet, at an estimated cost of $7,500. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 28, page 6: Urbanna Creek, Va. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for the extension of the westerly limit of the turning basin at Urbanna to the pierhead line at an estimated cost of $9,600. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 29, page 6: Totuskey Creek, Va. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel of 10 feet deep from that depth in the Rappahannock River to and including a turning basin below Totuskey Bridge, with a width of 150 feet through the bar at the entrance and 100 feet thence upstream. Estimated cost to the United States $44,000 and to local interests $1,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 30, page 6: Broad Creek, Va. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an entrance channel 7 feet deep by 100 feet wide from deep water in the Rappahannock River to deep water in the entrance to Broad Creek at an estimated cost of $20,500. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 31, page 6: Whitings Creek, Va. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 4 feet deep and 70 feet wide across the offshore bar at the entrance, from deep water in the Rappahannock River to Snake Point in the entrance to the creek, a distance of approximately 3,100 feet, at an estimated cost to the United States of $11,500 and to local interests of $500. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 32, page 6: Pamunkey River, Va. Item adopts project in which the Chief of Engineers recommends a channel 5 feet deep and 50 feet wide between Bassett Ferry and Manquin Bridge at an estimated cost of $10,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 33, page 6: Hampton Creek, Va. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel in Herberts Creek having widths of 100 feet and 80 feet and a depth of 12 feet extending from the existing improved channel in Hampton Creek upstream to Jackson Street, Hampton, Va., at an estimated cost of $15,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 34, page 6: Onancock River, Va. Item recommended by the Chief of Engineers modifies the existing project by relieving local interests of the responsibility of providing spoil-disposal areas for subsequent maintenance except when and as required. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 35, pages 6 and 7: Norfolk Harbor, Va. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for extending the improved anchorage south of Craney Island to the Western Branch Channel affording two anchorage spaces, each 1,200 feet by 1,200 feet by 22 feet deep, and one anchorage space approximately 900 feet by 1,900 feet by 16 feet deep, at an estimated cost of $182,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 36, page 7: Silver Lake Harbor, N. C. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for a channel 10 feet deep from that depth in Pamlico Sound, with widths of 100 feet and 60 feet, to and including an anchorage basin in Silver Lake Harbor, at an estimated cost of $60,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 37, page 7: Pamlico Sound to Avon, N. C. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for a channel 6 feet deep from Pamlico Sound to and including a basin at Avon at an estimated cost of $16,500. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 38, page 7: Thoroughfare Bay-Cedar Bay Channel, N. C. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide a channel 7 feet in depth with increased widths at the bends, connecting Thoroughfare and Cedar Bays, at an estimated cost of $20,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 39, page 7: Beaufort Harbor, N. C. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for enlargement of the existing basin at Beaufort at an estimated cost of $54,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 40, pages 7 and 8: Intracoastal Waterway from Beaufort, N. C., to Cape Fear River. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for the construction of six mooring basins along the main channel at points north and south of Morehead City and in the vicinity of Swansboro, Peru, Seabreeze, and Fish Factory, N. C., at an estimated cost of $24,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 41, page 8: Manteo to Oregon Inlet, N. C. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for a channel 6 feet deep from the existing channel (channel leading from Roanoke Sound into Manteo Bay) south through Roanoke Sound and Pamlico Sound to Oregon Inlet, at an estimated cost of $45,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 42, page 8: Cape Fear River, N. C., at and below Wilmington. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a depth of 32 feet in the river channel from the ocean to Wilmington, and in the turning basin, including lengthening of the approach to the anchorage basin, at an estimated cost of $790,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 43, page 8: Northeast (Cape Fear) River, N. C. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 25 feet deep and 200 feet wide, extending from Hilton Bridge to and including a turning basin of the same depth and 600 feet wide at a point 1¼ miles above, and to eliminate the authorization for the 22-foot channel on which no work has been done, at an estimated cost of $73,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 44, page 8: Cape Fear River to St. Johns River intracoastal waterway, anchorage basin near Myrtle Beach, S. C. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an anchorage basin 125 feet wide, 325 feet long, and 12 feet deep outside of the channel limits of the intracoastal waterway near Myrtle Beach, S. C., at an estimated cost of $11,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 45, page 8: Beresford Creek, S. C. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 6 feet deep and 60 feet wide continuously from deep water in Cooper River via Clouter Creek to mile 1.83, at an estimated cost of $21,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 46, page 9: Savannah Harbor, Ga. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for widening the present channel in the vicinity of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad terminals to a maximum of 550 feet over a length of 5,000 feet, and deepening turning basin and authorized channel above Seaboard Air Line Bridge to 30 feet, at an estimated cost of $281,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 47, page 9: St. Johns River, Fla., Jacksonville to Lake Harney. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 100 feet wide and 10 feet deep from Palatka to Sanford, with a side channel of like dimensions to Enterprise, and for cut-offs and easing of bends, at an estimated cost of $290,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 48, page 9: Sebastian, Fla., to intracoastal waterway. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide an entrance channel 8 feet deep and 100 feet wide from the main channel of the intracoastal waterway to and including a turning basin 300 by 600 feet at Sebastian, at an estimated cost of $19,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 49, page 9: New River, Fla. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 8 feet deep and 100 feet wide through the rock shoal between the intracoastal waterway and Tarpon Bend and for removal of sunken vessels and snags in New River and its south fork to the intersection of the Dania Cut-off canal, all at an estimated cost of $60,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 50, page 9: Miami Harbor, Fla. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for the construction of an approach channel and a turning basin as part of a comprehensive development of Virginia Key, at an estimated cost to the United States of $800,000 and to local interests of $2,475,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 51, page 9: Caloosahatchee River and Lake Okeechobee Drainage Areas, Fla. Item would adopt project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for raising existing levees on the east side of Lake Okeechobee to protect against maximum hurricane tides, at an estimated cost of $3,960,000. The Senate recedes in view of the fact that this is not an improvement for the benefit of navigation as will be seen from the following description quoted from the Senate report:

"The levees around Lake Okeechobee were designed and constructed by the Federal Government to protect the communities and farming lands around the lake from floods caused by hurricane tides. The hurricane of 1935 which caused serious damage along the Florida Keys was of greater intensity than the 1928 storm upon which the levee heights were designed. The raising of certain sections of levee is necessary to protect against the possibility of a more intense storm which would cause great damage if the levees were breached or overtopped. The work is needed and warranted for the protection of life and property."

On amendment No. 52, page 9: Waterway from Punta Rasa to Stuart and Fort Pierce, Fla. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 8 feet deep from Fort Myers to the Intracoastal Waterway near Stuart with widths of 90 feet from Fort Myers to Moore Haven, 80 feet in the existing channel along the southerly shore of the lake to the hurricane gate structure at Clewiston, 100 feet thence along a relocated channel to deep water on the south side of the lake, 100 feet from deep water on the east side of the lake to St. Lucie lock No. 2, and thence 80 feet to the Intracoastal Waterway; all at an estimated first cost of $208,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 53, page 9: Caloosahatchee River to Withlacoochee River, Fla. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an Intracoastal Waterway from Caloosahatchee River to Withlacoochee River by improvement of the section from the Caloosahatchee River to the Anclote River to a depth of 9 feet and width of 100 feet, to include the existing projects for Sarasota Bay, Caseys Pass, and channel from Clearwater Harbor through Boca Ciega Bay to Tampa Bay, at an estimated cost of $3,200,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 54, page 10: Little Manatee River, Fla. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for a channel 100 feet wide and 6 feet deep from that depth in Tampa Bay to a point 2,700 feet above the railroad bridge at Ruskin and 75 feet wide and 6 feet deep in Marsh Branch to and including a turning basin at the highway bridge at Ruskin, at an estimated cost of $77,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 55, page 10: Appalachicola, Chattahoochee, and Flint Rivers, Ga. and Fla. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for the intitial and partial accomplishment of a comprehensive plan for the development of these rivers by construction of locks and dams at Fort Benning and at the junction for the 9-foot project, supplemented by dredging and contraction works, to provide a navigable depth of 6 feet to Columbus, and to Bainbridge, Ga., at an estimated cost of $6,500,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 56, page 10: Intracoastal Waterway from Appalachicola Bay to St. Marks River, Fla. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for the construction of a movable span in the Georgia, Florida & Alabama Railroad bridge over the Ocklocknee River near McIntyre, Fla., at an estimated cost of $32,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 57, page 10: Watson Bayou, Fla. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for the maintenance of a channel in Watson Bayou 100 feet wide and 10 feet deep from that depth in St. Andrews Bay to the highway bridge in Panama City. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 58, page 10: Mobile Harbor, Ala. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide, upon establishment by the United States of a depot and air field in the vicinity of Arlington pier, extension of previously recommended channel through Garrows Bend, 27 feet deep and 125 feet wide, to and including a turning basin with the same depth, and 600 by 800 feet in extent, at an estimated cost of $55,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 59, page 10: Dauphin Island Bay Channel, Ala. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 7 feet deep and 150 feet wide from Mobile Bay to an anchorage 600 by 500 feet in extent and 7 feet deep, located north of Fort Gaines; and a channel 4 feet deep and 40 feet wide from the anchorage into Dauphin Island Bay, with a jetty to protect the entrance if and when necessary to reduce maintenance costs, at an estimated cost of $23,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 60, page 10: Bayou La Batre, Ala. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide a channel 9 feet deep and 100 feet wide from Mississippi Sound to the highway bridge at the town of Bayou La Batre to cost $27,500. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 61, page 11: Biloxi Harbor, Miss. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an entrance channel 8 feet deep and 100 feet wide from Back Bay through Cranes Neck into Bayou Bernard, to cost $6,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 62, page 11: Sabine-Neches Waterway, Tex. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for extension of the Beaumont turning basin upstream 300 feet, thus forming a basin 350 feet by 2,300 feet. Estimated cost, $10,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 63, page 11: Buffalo Bayou and its tributaries, Tex. Stricken from House bill by Senate. This item adopted by Flood Control Act of August 11, 1939. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 64, page 11: Guadalupe River, Tex. Item stricken from House bill by Senate for the reason that a portion of the improvement is for the development of power.

On this provision the Chief of Engineers recommends: (1) Modification of the existing project for the Guadalupe River to provide a channel 9 feet deep and 100 feet wide extending from the Louisiana-Texas Intracoastal Waterway by way of Seadrift to a point on the Guadalupe River 3 miles above Victoria, at an estimated first cost of $3,700,000, with $82,000 annually for operation and maintenance, subject to the provisions that local interests furnish free of cost to the United States all lands, easements, rights-of-way, and spoil-disposal areas for construction and for subsequent maintenance as required, hold and save the United States free from all claims for damages that may result from the construction and maintenance of the channel, bear all costs of required bridge modification and give assurances satisfactory to the Secretary of War that they will provide adequate terminal facilities, including turning basins at Seadrift and Victoria.

(2) Construction of the Canyon Reservoir for stream-flow regulation in the interests of navigation and power development and for flood control, at an estimated first cost of $4,275,000.

(3) That a power plant be constructed at Canyon Dam at an estimated cost of $525,000 provided further field investigations show such a development to be practicable.

Senate conferees recede with amendment providing that the navigation portion of the recommendation in paragraph (1) only be adopted. House recedes on paragraphs (2) and (3).

On amendment No. 65, page 12: Chocolate Bayou, Bastrop Bayou, and Oyster Creek, Tex. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide a channel 6 feet deep and 60 feet wide in Chocolate Bayou from the Intracoastal Waterway to a point near Liverpool, Tex.; and to provide a channel 6 feet deep and 60 feet wide in Bastrop Bayou from the Intracoastal Waterway to a point near the Missouri Pacific Railroad. Estimated cost $108,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 66, page 12: Lavaca and Navidad Rivers, Tex. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide a channel 6 feet deep and 100 feet wide from Port Lavaca, by way of Lavaca Bay and River to mile 3 on the Navidad River, a total distance of 20 miles, at an estimated cost of $85,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 67, page 12: Channel from Louisiana and Texas Intracoastal Waterway to Barroom Bay, Tex. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide a short branch channel 6 feet deep and 60 feet wide from a point on the intracoastal waterway near Port O'Connor into Barroom Bay to cost $6,300. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 68, page 12: Brazos Island Harbor, Tex. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for enlargement of the turning basin at Port Isabel to 1,300 feet in length by 1,000 in width, at an estimated cost of $127,500. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 69, page 12: Mississippi River between Missouri River and Minneapolis. This item declares the construction of lock and dam No. 26 at Alton, Ill., to be in accord with the project authorized by the River and Harbor Act of August 30, 1935.

In view of the fact that the attorneys for landowners involved in condemnation proceedings for lock and dam No. 26, on the upper Mississippi River, have questioned the authority for locating this dam at Alton, Ill., it is felt that the Chief of Engineers, under the authority vested in him to prepare plans for this project, had ample authority to locate the dam at this point, this clarifying provision is deemed advisable in order to avoid needless litigation. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 70, page 13: Mississippi River between Missouri River and Minneapolis (at St. Paul). Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for improvement of the existing navigable channel at St. Paul to provide for a small-boat harbor at the lower end of Harriet Island, for enlargment of the flood capacity of the main channel, and for placing of dredged material so as to form the base for a roadway along the left bank of the river. Estimated cost to the United States $88,800 and to local interests $41,200. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 71, page 13: Mississippi River between Missouri River and Minneapolis. Item amends provision in House bill to provide for the construction of remedial works or land acquisitions in any levee or drainage district to rectify drainage problems caused by the Federal navigation improvement on the upper Mississippi River as recommended by the United States district engineer. Estimated cost, $25,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 72, page 14: Grand Haven Harbor and Grand River, Mich. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 300 feet wide and 21 feet deep from the enlargement in the existing channel at the Grand Trunk Western car-ferry slip to and including a turning basin 18 feet deep at the Grand Trunk Western Railroad bridge, at an estimated cost of $150,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 73, page 14: Cleveland Harbor, Ohio. Item modifies the existing project to permit cuts or partial cuts to be made before related railroad bridges are modified or rebuilt when approved by the Chief of Engineers. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 74, page 15: Sandusky Harbor, Ohio. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for maintenance of the bay channel to a depth of 22 feet, with widths varying from 300 to 400 feet, estimated to cost $12,000 annually. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 75, page 15: Wilson Harbor, N. Y. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for the restoration of the piers and for an entrance channel 80 feet wide and 8 feet deep, at an estimated cost of $181,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 76, page 15: Cape Vincent Harbor, N. Y. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a depth of 16 feet in an area behind and adjacent to the breakwater, and for a depth of 20 feet in an area downstream from the breakwater and for elimination from the project of the uncompleted portion of the authorized breakwater, at an estimated cost of $59,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 77, page 15: Noyo Harbor, Calif. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for the construction of a rubble-mound breakwater extending northwesterly about 1,100 feet from the south headland of Noyo Harbor, at an estimated cost of $600,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 78, page 15: Crescent City Harbor, Calif. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for the extension of the existing breakwater along its present alinement for approximately 2,700 feet to Round Rock, at an estimated cost of $1,610,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 79, page 15: Coquille River, Oreg. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for the maintenance of a channel 13 feet deep and of suitable width from the sea to a point 1 mile above the Coquille River Lighthouse, and for snagging to the State highway bridge at Coquille City, to cost $2,000 annually. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 80, page 15: Umpqua River and Harbor, Oreg. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 22 feet deep and 200 feet wide from the main river channel near mile 8 to and including a turning basin of the same depth 500 by 800 feet opposite the mill dock at Gardiner. Estimated cost, $55,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 81, page 15: Salmon River, Oreg. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for the removal of dangerous rocks to natural-bottom depths, not to exceed 5 feet at lower low water, at the entrance to the river, at an estimated cost of $5,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 82, page 16: Baker Bay, Columbia River, Wash. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide a depth of 8 feet in the west channel with widths of from 200 to 150 feet from deep water in the Columbia River to Baker Bay. Estimated cost, $170,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 83, page 16: Willamette River, Oreg. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for contractions works to secure with stream-flow regulation controlling depths of 6 feet to the mouth of the Santiam River and 5 feet thence to Albany, and for the reconstruction and enlargement of the locks at Oregon City (Willamette Falls) at an estimated cost of $3,600,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 84, page 16: Columbia River at Bonneville, Oreg. Item authorizes the Secretary of War to acquire lands and provide facilities to replace Indian fishing grounds submerged or destroyed in the construction of the Bonneville Dam at a cost not to exceed $50,000. Said lands to be transferred to the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 85, page 16: Bay Center Channel, Willapa Harbor, Wash. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 10 feet deep and 40 feet wide from deep water in Phalix River to Bay Center, and a mooring basin at the shoreward end of the channel, at an estimated cost of $30,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 86, page 17: Olympia Harbor, Wash. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide an entrance channel 500 feet wide to and including a turning basin 3,350 feet long and generally 960 feet wide, suitably flared at the entrance, all at a depth of 30 feet, at an estimated first cost of $88,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 87, page 17: Petersburg Harbor, Alaska. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for enlargement of the present small-boat basin by dredging to a depth of 11 feet an area of about 135,000 square feet adjacent to and shoreward of the existing basin, at an estimated cost of $80,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 88, page 17: Port Alexander, Alaska. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a channel 40 feet wide and 6 feet deep in the entrance to the inner lagoon. Estimated cost, $31,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 89, page 17: Wrangell Harbor, Alaska. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for a breakwater 320 feet long on the reef north of Shakes Island, and inner basin east of Shakes Island, and a channel 10 feet deep connecting with the present basin. Estimated cost, $189,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 90, page 17: Craig Harbor, Alaska. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for a mooring basin in South Cove 11 feet deep, 225 feet wide, and approximately 700 feet in length, including an entrance channel of the same depth over a width of 100 feet. Estimated cost, $80,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 91, page 17: Sitka Harbor, Alaska. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for elimination of the present authorized project upon which no work has been done, and substitution therefor of breakwaters to protect Sitka Harbor. Estimated cost, $109,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 92, page 17: Elfin Cove, Alaska. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an outer entrance channel 10 feet deep and 60 feet wide and an inner entrance channel 8 feet deep and 40 feet wide, at an estimated cost of $38,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 93, page 17: Seldovia Harbor, Alaska. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for removal of obstructions in the entrance channel near Watch Point to a depth of 24 feet, at a total estimated cost of $50,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 94, page 17: Kodiak Harbor, Alaska. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for a channel between Near Island and Kodiak Island 22 feet deep and 200 feet wide. Estimated cost, $70,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 95, page 18: Keehi Lagoon, Oahu, Hawaii. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for a trans-Pacific seaplane harbor by dredging 3 intersecting runway channels 3 miles long, 1,000 feet wide, and 10 feet deep, and other facilities, at an estimated cost of $3,300,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 96, page 18: Fajardo Harbor, P. R. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers to provide for an approach channel 28 feet deep and 200 feet wide, together with a turning basin of the same depth, and 10½ acres in extent, at an estimated cost to the United States of $211,000, and to local interests of $30,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 97, page 18: San Juan Harbor, P. R. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers providing for the removal to a depth of 8 feet of Anegado, Largo, and Capitanejo Shoals, and for construction of a channel 400 feet wide and 30 feet deep from the existing anchorage to and including a turning basin of the same depth 1,000 by 2,200 feet in front of graving dock. Estimated cost, $700,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 98, page 18: Bayocean Peninsula, Oreg. Item providing $120,000 to repair damage and check erosion caused by storm in January 1939 in order to provide adequate protection to nearby areas was stricken from the House bill by the Senate. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 99, page 18: Sacramento River flood control, California. Item authorizing $1,600,000 for completion of the project authorized in the River and Harbor Act of August 26, 1937, was stricken from the House bill by the Senate. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 100, page 18: Central Valley project, California. Item amends project previously authorized (River and Harbor Act of August 30, 1935) by providing for the construction of distribution systems. This provision stricken from House bill by the Senate. Senate recedes.

On amendment No. 101, page 19: Changes section number.

On amendment No. 102, page 20: Item amends provision in House bill by providing that the cost of snagging and removal of temporary obstructions from tributaries of waterways under Federal improvement be paid from funds appropriated for the maintenance and improvement of rivers and harbors. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 103, page 20: Declares the project for the Denison Reservoir, Texas and Oklahoma, heretofore authorized to be for navigation, flow regulation, flood control, and other beneficial uses. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 104, page 20: Changes section number.

On amendment No. 105, page 23: Corrects error.

On amendment No. 106, page 23: Corrects error.

On amendment No. 107, page 23: Changes section number.

On amendment No. 108, page 23: Language providing that preliminary examinations and surveys shall include all related conservation subjects was stricken from the House bill by the Senate. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 109, page 24: Item provides that the language in section 5 shall not be construed to interfere with the performance of any duties vested in the Federal Power Commission under existing law. House conferees recede.

Preliminary examination and survey items—Locality

On amendment No. 110: Bunganuc Creek, Maquoite Bay, Maine.

On amendment No. 111: Cathance River, Maine.

On amendment No. 112: Winterport Harbor, Maine.

On amendment No. 113: Cundy's Harbor, Maine.

On amendment No. 114: Portland, Maine, to Boston, Mass., a continuous waterway inland where practicable.

On amendment No. 115: Wood Island Harbor and the pool at Biddeford, Maine.

On amendment No. 116: Channel to Hog Island, Hingham Bay, Mass.

On amendment No. 117: Norwalk Harbor, Conn.

On amendment No. 118: Saw Mill River, N. Y.

On amendment No. 119: Bronx River, N. Y.

On amendment No. 120: Hutchinson River, N. Y.

On amendment No. 121: Hackensack River, N. J.

On amendment No. 122: Salem River, Salem County, N. J.

On amendment No. 123: Toms River, N. J., from the bridges at Toms River to a connection with the Intracoastal Waterway.

On amendment No. 124: Channel from Charleston, Northeast River, Md., to Havre de Grace.

On amendment No. 125: Channel from Havre de Grace, Md., to Red Point, Md., via Stump Point and Carpenter Point.

On amendment No. 126: Honga River and Tar Bay, including channel into and harbor in Back Creek, Hooper Island, Md.

On amendment No. 127: Nanticoke River, Del.

On amendment No. 128: Broad Creek, Del.

On amendment No. 129: Channel from Ocean City to Chincoteague Bay and Harbor at Public Landing, Worcester County, Md.

On amendment No. 130: Broadkill River, Del.

On amendment No. 131: Waterway from Indian River Inlet to Rehoboth Bay, Delaware.

On amendment No. 132: Taylors Landing, Worcester County, Md.

On amendment No. 133: Potomac River at and near Washington, D. C.

Amendment No. 134: Potomac and Anacostia Rivers and adjacent waters in and near the District of Columbia, with a view to attaining a comprehensive and coordinated improvement and development of such waters and their shores. In determining the recommendations to be made with respect to such improvement and development, consultations shall be had with, and consideration given to the recommendations of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

On amendment No. 135: Potomac and Anacostia Rivers at and near Washington, D. C., with a view to providing a municipal sailing base.

On amendment No. 136: Potomac River and tributaries at and below Washington, D. C., with a view to elimination of the water chestnut.

On amendment No. 137: St. Patricks Creek, Md.

On amendment No. 138: Big Kingston Creek, St. Marys County, Md.

On amendment No. 139: Farnham Creek, Richmond County, Va.

On amendment No. 140: Southwest side of Rappahannock River, in vicinity of Bowlers Wharf, Essex County, Va., to secure harbor of refuge and connecting channels.

On amendment No. 141: Bransons Cove, lower Machodock River, Va.

On amendment No. 142: Davis Creek, Mathews County, Va.

On amendment No. 143: Marumsco Creek, lower Somerset County, Md.

On amendment No. 144: Chester River Channel, Md.

On amendment No. 145: Parkers Creek, Calvert County, Md.

On amendment No. 146: Channel from the Thoroughfare to Albemarle Sound, N. C., either by way of lower Cashie River, Middle River, and Bachelors Bay or by any other route.

On amendment No. 147: Bogue Inlet, N. C.

On amendment No. 148: Little Pee Dee River from junction of the Lumber River to the Great Pee Dee River with a view toward removing logs, debris, etc.

On amendment No. 149: Edisto River and tributaries, South Carolina.

On amendment No. 150: Murrell Inlet, S. C.

On amendment No. 151: Intracoastal Waterway from Jacksonville, Fla., to Miami, Fla., including all appropriate side channels and spur channels, with a view to increasing the navigable capacity and commercial utility of the existing project.

On amendment No. 152: Intracoastal Waterway from Jacksonville, Fla., to Miami, Fla., with a view to determining whether the existing project should be modified in any way at the present time, including rectification of alinement, increase in width or depth, either or both, and provision of appropriate side channels and spur channels leading to the various communities on or near the banks of said waterway—all with a view to increasing the navigable capacity and commercial utility of the existing project.

On amendment No. 153: Side channel from the Intracoastal Waterway to, and turning basin at, Flagler Beach, Fla.

On amendment No. 154: Intracoastal Waterway from Jacksonville, Fla., to Miami, Fla., with a view to providing an auxiliary side channel from the Intracoastal Waterway near Titusville through, and easterly of, Merritt Island via Banana Creek and River, to, or near, Eau Gallie, Fla.

On amendment No. 155: Waterway from packing house and railroad terminal at Belle Glade, Fla., to Lake Okeechobee and to the Intracoastal Waterway through the Hillsboro and West Palm Beach Canals.

On amendment No. 156: Kissimmee River, Fla.

On amendment No. 157: Channel, turning basin, and improvements at Horseshoe, Dixie County, Fla.

On amendment No. 158: Canal from St. Marks to Tallahassee, Fla.

On amendment No. 159: Waterway from the Intracoastal Waterway south across Santa Rosa Island, Fla., to a point at or near Deer Point Light.

On amendment No. 160: Intracoastal Waterway from the St. Marks River to the Anclote River, Fla.

On amendment No. 161: Chassahowitzka River, Fla.

On amendment No. 162: Santa Fe River, Fla., from Federal Highway No. 41, High Springs, to the Suwannee River.

On amendment No. 163: Channel from bridge at Bradenton, Fla., to deep water in Gulf of Mexico (Tampa Bay).

On amendment No. 164: Channel from Tampa Bay to Safety Harbor, Fla.

On amendment No. 165: Channel from old Tampa Bay to Oldsmar, Fla.

On amendment No. 166: St. Petersburg (Fla.) Harbor—to provide for a channel up to the depth of 30 feet from the main Tampa Bay ship channel past the port of St. Petersburg in front of the recreation pier.

On amendments Nos. 167 and 168: Oklawaha River, Fla., from Lake Eustis to Lake Griffin, and thence from Lake Griffin to Silver Springs Run.

On amendment No. 169: Oklawaha River, Fla., from Lake Apopka through Lake Dora to Lake Eustis and adjoining waterways.

On amendment No. 170: Entrance to Perdido Bay, Ala. and Fla., from the Gulf of Mexico to deep water in Perdido Bay, via the most practicable route.

On amendment No. 171: Big Sand Creek, Miss., with a view to determining the advisability of undertaking measures for the prevention of bank caving in the vicinity of North Carrollton, Miss.

On amendment No. 172: Grand Bayou Pass, La., from the Gulf of Mexico to Buras and Empire.

On amendment No. 173: Bayou Schofield, La., from the Gulf of Mexico to Buras and Empire.

On amendment No. 174: Bayou Lafourche, La., from the Gulf of Mexico to Leeville or to Golden Meadow.

On amendment No. 175: Bayou Lafourche, La., from Donaldsonville to the Intracoastal Waterway, via Bayou Boeuf, Assumption Parish.

On amendment No. 176: Vermilion Bay and Bayous Petit Anse, Carlin, and Tigre, from the Gulf of Mexico to Erath and to Jefferson Island, La., channels in Louisiana between the Gulf of Mexico and the Intracoastal Waterway.

On amendment No. 177: Mermentau River, La., from the Gulf of Mexico to Grand Chenier.

On amendment No. 178: Bell City Drainage Canal, La.

On amendment No. 179: Pine Island Bayou, Tex.

On amendment No. 180: Cedar Bayou Pass, Corpus Christie Pass, and pass at Murdocks Landing, Tex.

On amendment No. 181: Waterway from Alvin, Tex., to Intracoastal Canal.

On amendment No. 182: In this survey item for the Missouri River in South Dakota the Senate struck from the House bill the following language: "with a view to improvement to make power available to develop deposits of manganese and other strategic minerals, and for pumping and other uses."

On amendment No. 183: In this survey item for the Red River of the North Drainage Basin, Minn., S. Dak., and N. Dak., the Senate struck from the House bill the following language: "with a view to improvement for navigation, flood control, power development, irrigation, conservation of water, and increase of low-water flows for domestic and sanitary purposes."

On amendment No. 184: Tofte Harbor, Minn.

On amendment No. 185: Algoma Harbor, Mich.

On amendment No. 186: Harbor at Ballast Island, Ohio.

On amendment No. 187: Rocky River, Ohio.

On amendment No. 188: At or near North East, Pa., with a view to constructing a harbor of refuge.

On amendment No. 189: Harbor in Hamburg Township, N. Y.,

On amendment No. 190: Port Bay, N. Y.

On amendment No. 191: Mohawk River, N. Y.

On amendment No. 192: Nelscott, Oreg., with a view to protection of the beach.

On amendment No. 193: Channel at Charleston, South Slough, Oreg.

On amendment No. 194: Friday Harbor, Wash.

On amendment No. 195: Sitka Harbor, Alaska.

On amendment No. 196: In this survey item for the Gastineau Channel, Alaska, the following language was stricken from the House bill by the Senate: "and flood control, both tidal and run-off."

On amendment No. 197: Kodiak Harbor, Alaska.

On amendment No. 198: Skagway Harbor, Alaska.

The House conferees receded on all survey items.

On amendment No. 199: Section 6, recommended by the War Department, provides that amounts collected from private parties or other agencies for services rendered, for the use of any facility or property, for the sale of any property, or for the exchange value of any property traded in on new property, when the cost of such services, facilities, and property is borne by funds appropriated for rivers and harbors or flood-control work, shall be deposited in the Treasury to the appropriation to which the cost of such services, facilities, and property has been charged. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 200: Section 7, recommended by the War Department, authorizes the Chief of Engineers, with the approval of the Secretary of War, to provide such facilities as are necessary for the health and welfare of employees engaged in the prosecution of river-and-harbor, flood-control, or other civil works under his jurisdiction, which are located at isolated points where such facilities are not available. Such facilities to be paid for from funds appropriated for the projects at these localities. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 201: Section 8, approved by the War Department, reenacts the provisions of section 9 of the River and Harbor Act approved June 20, 1938 (Public, 685, 75th Cong.), and extends the time for commencing and completing the construction of a dam and dike for preventing the flow of tidal water in North Slough, in Coos County, Oreg., authorized to be constructed by the State of Oregon, acting through its highway department, the North Slough drainage district, and the North Slough diking district. House conferees recede.

On amendment No. 202: Section 9 authorizes that the sum of $144,754,450 be appropriated over a period of 7 years, beginning July 1, 1941.

House conferees recede with an amendment, which makes this item read as follows: "The sum of $109,985,450 is hereby authorized to be appropriated for carrying out the improvements herein."

J. J. MANSFIELD,
JOSEPH A. GAVAGAN,
RENÉ L. DEROUEN,
GEORGE N. SEGER,
ALBERT E. CARTER,
Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SUSPENSION OF SECTION 510 (G) OF THE MERCHANT MARINE ACT, 1936

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 519) to suspend section 510 (g) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, during the present European war, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the House joint resolution, as follows:

House Joint Resolution 519

Resolved, etc., That section 510 (g) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended (restricting the use of vessels in the laid-up fleet of the Maritime Commission), is hereby suspended until the proclamation heretofore issued by the President under section 1 (a) of the Neutrality Act of 1939 is revoked.

SEC. 2. At any time prior to revocation of the proclamation heretofore issued by the President under section 1 (a) of the Neutrality Act of 1939 all vessels transferred to the Maritime Commission by the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, or otherwise acquired by the Commission (other than vessels constructed under the Merchant Marine Act, 1936), may, notwithstanding any provision of law contrary hereto or inconsistent herewith, be sold or chartered by the Commission, upon competitive bids and after due advertisement, upon such terms and conditions (including with respect to charters the charter period) and subject to such restrictions (including restrictions affecting the use or disposition of the vessel by the purchaser or charterer) as the Commission may deem necessary or desirable for the protection of the public interest.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK]?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK] is recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SCHAFER] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, an emergency, while it cannot be called a national emergency, certainly exists in certain United States maritime circles today as a result of the war. On September 1, 1939, there were 135 ships engaged in the Atlantic-Pacific intercoastal trade, exclusive of oil tankers, which have, generally speaking, not been affected by the war. Forty-nine of those have been removed by sale abroad or by transfer to other routes since that time. The loss of deadweight tonnage has been 34 percent, a total of 455,994 tons. The loss, however, is not confined to intercoastal trade.

A great many Norwegian ships were engaged in carrying products, tramp service, you may call it, to the United States from foreign ports on what are known as nonessential trade routes. I give you one example, that from Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, where wood pulp is carried into the United States on those ships. Those ships have been for the most part interned by the British Government, and they are not now available.

Mr. Speaker, I believe if I explain this bill there will be no real objection to it. I know that sometimes resolutions and bills on the Consent Calendar are objected to because Members do not understand what the purpose is. Let me say for the information of the Members that this bill has been considered in hearings and reported favorably by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries of the House, and a companion resolution introduced by Senator JOHNSON, of California, has been reported favorably by the Commerce Committee of the Senate.

The sole purpose of the bill is to suspend section 510 (g) of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, which requires that the fleet of ships which the United States Government owns that are over 20 years of age and which are controlled by the Maritime Commission be sterilized—in other words, not put into use. All we propose to do is to let the Maritime Commission, under certain conditions which it will require from the purchasers or charterers, to make use of these ships, and only for the period of the war. In other words, we propose to give some relief to shippers and consignors—I am talking now for my west-coast shippers primarily who want to send lumber, who want to send wool, who want to send canned goods, and so forth, through the Panama Canal, but cannot get bookings even 6 to 8 weeks ahead, although at the present time there is this sterilized tonnage that could be utilized.

There was no opposition to this bill before the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. I had anticipated that no objection would be made today by anyone. This is an emergent proposition.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I understand that a certain number of ships will be sterilized.

Mr. BUCK. No. All of the fleet that is owned by the United States Government and which is over 20 years of age is now sterilized. There are 116 of these ships, and some 92 of them can be utilized in freight service if released from the provisions of section 510 (g). Not all of them can be used.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. They are not in use now?

Mr. BUCK. They are not in use now.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Will they have to be reconditioned?

Mr. BUCK. Their machinery is in pretty good condition. It has been kept up, but they will have to be reconditioned, yes.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. So they will be put back in active service?

Mr. BUCK. Of course, this is an authorization bill, I may say to the gentleman from Minnesota. It does not assure me or anybody else that somebody will come in and bid for the ships, either for sale or charter. If bids are made and accepted by the Maritime Commission the ships will be put in service.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia, and I wish to say in yielding that I apologize to him for having had to make the motion while he was off the floor.

Mr. BLAND. I am delighted that the gentleman has brought the matter up. I thought it was coming up after the conference report, and went from the floor for a few moments.

Mr. BUCK. It did, but they adopted the conference report in a hurry.

Mr. BLAND. There are 116 ships involved. What is meant by the sterilization is that in this Congress we passed a bill that those ships, over 20 years of age, in what is known as the laid-up steel fleet, should not be sold or used except under a proclamation of an emergency by the President, which would be very unwise at this time. At the ports of the country, west coast as well as east coast, goods are piling up now, and people are unable to make contracts for the delivery of those goods. The railroads are being affected because many of the goods have come from the interior to the seaboard for shipment. The condition has been aggravated within the last few days by the Norwegian-Danish situation, and our own people are seriously affected.

Mr. BUCK. I should like to ask the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries if he anticipates that any damage whatever can be done to the railroads by the passage of this resolution.

Mr. BLAND. It is absolutely beneficial to them. They will be carrying the commerce from the interior of the country to the seaboard, leaving out of the picture the intercoastal shipments that they will be carrying to the seaboard. If there are no ships there, shall we allow the ports to be congested and have a repetition of the conditions that existed in 1914, although now we have 116 ships that can be used to relieve that condition? In other words, we have the ships now, and should use them for the benefit of our people.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. BREWSTER. There was a great deal of concern at the time of the consideration of the legislation embargoing our ships going to belligerent ports that it would adversely affect our merchant marine. As a matter of fact, the effect has been exactly the reverse, has it not? The ships are now enjoying an unprecedented demand and are going at a favorable price.

Mr. BUCK. There is no question about it.

Mr. BREWSTER. We very much need this safety valve to care for the additional shipments that are demanding service.

Mr. BUCK. There is no question about that, either.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. BLAND. May I add that Great Britain and the other maritime nations are now, of course, putting their ships into the necessary work in the blocked-out area, and our ships are needed to carry commerce to other parts of the world, or we will stop the shipment of goods much needed by the American people.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania so he may explain his objection to the measure.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I wish to inform the gentleman I do not object to the reconditioning of these vessels for the purpose of trans-Pacific or trans-Atlantic trade, but if used in intercoastal trade you do compete with the railroads of our country and this is what I object to. The gentleman knows Government-subsidized ships carrying freight from the west coast through the Canal to the east coast, much of which can be carried by the transcontinental railroads, has destroyed the jobs of railroad men.

Mr. BUCK. I take it the gentleman simply feels that the railroads ought to have the advantage of the 34-percent decrease in the intercoastal tonnage.

Mr. BLAND. May I correct one statement of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VAN ZANDT]?

Mr. BUCK. Certainly.

Mr. BLAND. They are not subsidized carriers when engaged in domestic commerce.

Mr. BUCK. That is correct.

Mr. BALL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield.

Mr. BALL. I would simply like to reenforce what the gentleman from Virginia has stated. There are two ports in Connecticut, New London and Bridgeport, that are tremendously affected by this bill, and I sincerely hope it will go through.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CULKIN. May I make this observation to the gentleman from California? In the first instance, I was not strongly for this bill, especially in the sale phase of it, but upon getting the explanation that these ships are needed to carry the manufactured products of the country, and also the agricultural products of the country into the belligerent territory, not under our flag, but after sale they may go under a foreign flag and may be useful for that purpose; after I had learned this, then I became favorable to this bill and very strongly favorable to it. I cannot conceive of any objection to this bill from the standpoint of any patriotic American.

Mr. BUCK. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. The gentleman from California will state to the House that the merchants, manufacturers, and laboring groups of both the Pacific and Atlantic coasts are tremendously concerned in the passage of the bill, and there is a grave emergency confronting these interests and they are hoping and praying that Congress will pass the measure expeditiously. Is not that correct?

Mr. BUCK. I have stated already it is an emergency proposition and I can confirm what the gentleman from Washington has said.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. In answer to our friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. VAN ZANDT] I may say that intercoastal shipping on waterways helps rather than injures the railroads of the country, and many farm commodities in the interior, particularly the Middle West, because of discriminatory freight rates—we do not enjoy, of course, the cheap transportation through the Panama Canal—would find it impossible, of course, to ship clear across the country.

Mr. BUCK. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. CARLSON. I want to inform the gentleman from California that I have no objection to transferring these ships for the foreign trade, but I question seriously their need for intercoastal trade, and I call attention to a letter, written as late as April 19, 1940, to Mr. BLAND, the chairman of the Merchant Marine Committee.

Mr. BUCK. Let me say to the gentleman that the letter to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND] was a report of the Maritime Commission on the original resolution introduced by me, in which letter the Commission suggested an additional amendment, which is section 2 of the present resolution and their report on House Joint Resolution 519 is favorable.

Mr. SHORT. And the whole world situation has changed vastly since that time.

Mr. BUCK. We have the Norwegian-Danish situation on our hands or in our laps, just as you want to express it.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I attended the meeting of the Commission, which was attended by a number of interests from the Pacific coast having this matter in hand, and it was there stated by the Commission itself that this legislation was necessary if any relief was to be given. It merely releases these old vessels, 116 of them, which are now sterilized and out of use, so that a very serious condition, in our district particularly, may be relieved, and otherwise there will be no transportation available.

Mr. Speaker, the contention made by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SCHAFER] that these ships will be sold by the Maritime Commission to foreign operators and the ships will find their way into the war trade is wholly untenable. I personally appeared before the Maritime Commission in connection with this matter, to ascertain the purpose of this legislation and the position the Maritime Commission would take in selling or chartering these sterilized vessels. It was definitely stated at that meeting and understood by all that the Maritime Commission would impose conditions in the sale or charter of these vessels, which it is permitted to do under the law, insuring that these vessels would be used in the intercoastal trade and also that they would not be used to replace vessels owned or operated by the purchaser, which would thereby be released or sold to foreign owners. In other words, it is the plan of the Maritime Commission to utilize these vessels in providing additional bottoms to take care of intercoastal trade.

At the present time it is impossible to obtain shipping space short of 30 or 60 days in intercoastal shipments and in many cases impossible to obtain any space. It is particularly damaging to the Pacific coast in that we have large quantities of lumber, grain, canned goods, fruits, fish, and other products which move through the Panama Canal and can only be handled through the intercoastal service. Over 30 percent of the vessels heretofore in this service have been moved out and many more are being transferred to other service. The foreign war has absorbed many of the vessels suitable as cargo carriers which are available for intercoastal trade. The selling price is so attractive that it has caused all of the older vessels to be taken from the usual channels of trade. It has been particularly damaging to the Pacific coast. The Maritime Commission has signified its willingness to cooperate in every way in this emergency if this law is enacted.

The district which I represent, the third district of Oregon, has within it the port of Portland, which is the outlet for intercoastal and foreign shipping from all of the Columbia River territory.

This legislation has for its purpose the suspension of section 510–g of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 during the present European war, which section restricted the use of vessels in the laid-up fleet of the Maritime Commission. It has particular reference to intercoastal shipping from the Pacific coast.

A very serious condition has arisen there by reason of the sale and charter of many vessels which formerly were used in intercoastal trade. The demand for these ships by foreign shippers, growing out of the needs of the European war, has practically robbed the west coast of its shipping facilities. At the present time it takes from 3 to 4 weeks for west-coast shippers to secure shipping space either for east-bound or west-bound cargoes.

One-fifth of the lumber produced in the Northwest goes through the Panama Canal, and averages one and one-half million tons annually. Forty-six percent of the softwoods used in lumber production originates in Oregon and Washington for eastern consumption. Federal records show that one-third of the ships formerly used in this intercoastal industry have either been sold or chartered out of this traffic. As a result, curtailment of production on tidewater mills in the Pacific Northwest has been reduced over one-third, owing to lack of bottoms for handling the intercoastal trade. As a result, it is curtailing production. Indications are that this summer during the building period there will be a very marked advance in building operations, not only in carrying forward the Federal-housing program but also in various other industrial activities which require considerable quantities of lumber products. The war trade has developed a considerable demand also for lumber. Low-cost housing requires large quantities of lumber products as low-cost building utilizes lumber largely for construction. Unless shipping facilities for intercoastal trade are made available, there will be a critical shortage of lumber production, with the failure of quantities with which to carry forward these programs. As a result, not only will mills in the Pacific Northwest be shut down and large numbers of laborers thrown out of employment but various allied industries will be curtailed and building operations generally slowed up, resulting in increasing the unemployment rolls. The use of these old ships in this trade instead of working a hardship on railroads will help them. It will increase rail tonnage going to and from the terminal points. This cargo is not such that it may be carried by rail. The cost is prohibitive.

One of the large forest-product industries in the Pacific Northwest is the chemical pulp industry, which manufactures pulp material used in various types of high-grade paper, rayon, plastics, and other similar products. This pulp is made largely from hemlock and waste material from lumber operations, much of which would be entirely lost unless devoted to this or a similar use. From sixty to seventy million dollars are invested in this industry alone in the Pacific Northwest. It manufactures some 800,000 tons per annum, requiring 780,000 man-hours alone to produce the logs. Thirty-five percent of the cargoes originating in this industry are water-borne. Twenty-five thousand tons of shipping space are needed but only 10,000 tons are available under existing conditions. These cargoes all go to the eastern seaboard.

The purpose of this legislation is to lodge in the Maritime Commission sufficient power to make available vessels which under existing law are now tied up. They are old, outmoded ships, but could be utilized in this emergency to prevent serious interruption of an essential industry in the Pacific Northwest. Shippers have entire confidence in the effectiveness of the Maritime Commission to meet and solve this situation, if power is given them under proper legislation.

The situation is so critical that it is most essential that immediate action be had so that the Senate may pass the necessary legislation without delay before Congress adjourns.

Mr. BUCK. I am very glad to have the gentleman make that statement, because he attended that meeting, when I could not, with others, who had come here from a long distance; and there were also, I believe, some New England people there at the same time.

Mr. ANDERSON of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ANDERSON of California. Is it not true that as a result of the effect of the Neutrality Act on maritime shipping we have put a lot of American seamen on the beach without jobs, and if this bill passes it will give us an excellent opportunity to reemploy a great many of these American seamen?

Mr. BUCK. There is no doubt about that.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND] has just called my attention to an article which appeared in the Journal of Commerce today, which I shall read:

BUCK BILL BACKED BY SHIP OFFICERS

Prompt passage of the Buck resolution or similar legislation which would permit the Maritime Commission to sell all the war-time-built laid-up fleet for further operations was recommended in telegrams sent to many prominent Congressmen last night by the United Licensed Officers of the United States of America.

Bert L. Todd, general secretary of the organization, said that sale and operation of the Commission's laid-up fleet would alleviate unemployment of ship officers and seamen. Owing to transfer of a large number of American tankers and freighters to foreign flags, and disruption of normal American line services on account of restrictions imposed by the Neutrality Act, many ship officers are ashore at this time, he said.

Under the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, the Maritime Commission is not permitted to sell any vessel more than 20 years old for further operation. The proposed joint resolution now before Congress would change this section of the law.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield.

Mr. BLAND. And at least 75 percent of the crews of the nonsubsidized vessels must be American citizens.

Mr. BUCK. Yes.

Mr. Speaker, for the moment, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BUCK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and to include therein the newspaper article referred to by him.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I demanded a second in order that we might have an opportunity to look into this bill and see what it proposes to do. I believe that the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULKIN] let the cat out of the bag when he indicated that he was supporting the passage of this bill because it would permit the sale or chartering of the 116 laid-up vessels of our United States merchant marine to foreign countries to carry supplies, munitions, implements of war, and so forth, to belligerents in the new unpleasantness in Europe.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Yes.

Mr. CULKIN. The gentleman is overemphatic in his statement, and that is a polite way of putting it. I did not say 116 ships. I said a few ships, some ships, would be available after transfer to a foreign flag to carry American agricultural products and American-manufactured products into the combat areas. If that is letting the "cat out of the bag," the gentleman may make the most of it.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Certainly; and I am glad that the gentleman admits that he has let the "cat out of the bag." I know now that I am one Member of Congress who is not going to vote for this bill, which violates the neutrality of the United States. The taxpayers of America have expended hundreds of millions of dollars in subsidies to build up our American merchant marine as an essential part of our national defense. We know that it is just as essential to have an adequate merchant marine, from a national-defense standpoint, as it is to have cruisers, torpedo boats, battleships, airplanes, and so forth.

Congress passes a neutrality act, and the President of the United States and Members of Congress belonging to both parties proclaim to the world that they are neutral and want to keep the United States neutral and out of the new European war which is now raging. We now find Members of the House who talked and voted for the Bloom Neutrality Act and boasted about their desire to keep America out of the war and preserve our neutrality asking us to vote for this bill to sell or charter hundreds of vessels of our American merchant marine to foreign interests so that they can be used to carry supplies, munitions, and implements of war to belligerents in the existing European war. If that is neutrality, then I am a Chinaman. This bill reminds me of our New Deal brethren spending many billion dollars of the taxpayers' money in the name of national defense, and then giving the latest secrets regarding our national defense in respect to airplanes to potential enemies in foreign lands.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Yes. I yield with pleasure.

Mr. HAWKS. Is it not a fact that because of the activities of a fellow like Harry Bridges, we cannot even begin to man our own merchant marine anyway?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The gentleman is correct. Let me suggest to our New Deal brethren who are supporting this bill in the name of American shipping interests and American seamen that they better get busy and have their administration turn the "heat" on the alien British subject, Harry Bridges, who has been trying to destroy our American merchant marine and the jobs of American seamen in order to promote the welfare of British shipping interests and furnish jobs for seamen who, like himself, are British subjects.

This New Deal administration is certainly carrying on the interrupted march of the Wilson administration, as promised in President Roosevelt's 1932 acceptance speech. It is following the same path while promising to keep us out of war, as Wilson promised.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Yes.

Mr. BLAND. I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that he is mistaken about carrying in belligerent zones.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. A gentleman from the gentleman's committee admitted that.

Mr. BLAND. Belligerent countries are withdrawing their ships from other sections, and we cannot get enough ships to carry American goods to Africa, South America, and various other sections that are completely neutral, with which we have a right to trade, and consequently the producers in America are having their goods left on the shelves.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Then why does not the gentleman offer an amendment to this legislation and provide that these ships of our American merchant marine can only be sold or chartered to American citizens or to American corporations. That would keep them out of belligerent zones under the Neutrality Act. This bill permits the sale and charter to foreign interests and, therefore, their use in belligerent zones.

Mr. BLAND. If the gentleman asks me, the conditions are changing so rapidly every day and every minute in the day that I wish to place the authority to handle this in the best interests of America, and I believe that has been done by this resolution.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, we are now told that we must pass this bill because we do not have enough vessels in operation to take care of our shipping requirements although American shipowners and operators who have received millions of dollars in subsidies from the taxpayers' Treasury have been transferring the registry of many of their ships to foreign countries in order to violate the spirit, if not the letter, of the Bloom Neutrality Act.

Mr. BLAND. The trouble about it is the gentleman is mistaken. None of these has been transferred.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. My opposition to the bill is based on the fact that intercoastal steamship trade competes with the private carriers or railroads of our country. At this time I want to put in the RECORD a paragraph from Admiral Land's letter dated April 19 and addressed to Chairman BLAND, in which he "lets the cat out of the bag":

> While the net diversion of tonnage from intercoastal trade is considerable on the basis of tonnage figures alone, it must be remembered that up to the beginning of the war the tonnage was definitely in excess of needs. From the available data it does not appear that any emergency exists in the intercoastal trade as far as available space is concerned at this time.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. That is a fact and the real purpose of this bill, as stated by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULKIN], is to sell or charter vessels of our American merchant marine, to weaken our own national defense, transfer those ships to foreign registry so that they can be used as war-supply ships in violation of true American neutrality. This bill is another step taken by our New Deal brethren along the pathway which leads to the new European war. President Roosevelt and his New Deal tribe of internationalists and interventionists are heading for war while talking for peace before election. President Wilson promised to keep us out of war before election, and you and I went overseas to help him make the world safe for democracy and end all wars after his election. Remember that this bill, if enacted, will be in effect after this November election.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Is it not true if a few of the transcontinental railroads, especially the Milwaukee Railroad, which passes through the gentleman's district, carried just a portion of the freight these ships carry, hundreds of railroad workers in your district would have jobs?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The gentleman is correct. This bill should be defeated from an American national-defense standpoint. Let us keep the ships of our American merchant marine an important arm of our national defense under the American flag and not permit their sale and charter to foreign interests and their operation under foreign flags. Let us furnish jobs to Americans by keeping these ships under the American flag. Let us not permit these American merchant marine ships to be used by either side in the European conflict which is now raging for the purpose of carrying arms, munitions, implements of war, and war supplies to belligerent countries, as the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULKIN] correctly stated, might be done under the bill.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. May I say to the gentleman that what I said was exactly true?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The bill will permit that, will it not?

Mr. CULKIN. Just a minute. It seems to me the gentleman leans so far backward on this question that he is almost in the other camp.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. No; I am in the American camp; I want to maintain American neutrality and preserve our American national defense. [Applause.] I do not want my children, and other World War veterans do not want their children, slaughtered on battlefields in Europe in order to pull foreign countries' chestnuts out of the fire. Our New Deal fuehrer in the White House is following in the footsteps of Woodrow Wilson, who talked peace before election and plunged our country into war after election in the name of "making the world safe for democracy." It now seems that our Democratic brethren who "made the world safe for democracy" in 1917, 1918, and 1919 are not satisfied with their work and now want us to swallow more foreign propaganda and "save world democracy."

Mr. CULKIN. May I commend the gentleman for his patriotism and his vigorous patriotism? I want to say this—that the gentleman is seeing ghosts on this question, despite the statement that I made which seemed to set him on fire.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. You trotted out the ghost and perhaps that is the ghost I see. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. CULKIN. May I say to the gentleman it is impossible to get coal from the State of Pennsylvania, if you please, to South American countries by reason of the lack of ships?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. All right. If that be so it is not necessary to permit the selling and chartering of these American Merchant Marine vessels to foreign interests as this bill does.

Mr. CULKIN. No American ship, no American sailor, under the provisions of this bill—I have been very frank about it thus far, and I am yet—can go into the war zone on any ship. It does provide for sale, and that is the thing I originally objected to.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. How are you going to furnish jobs for those American seamen, whom the proponents of this bill wept crocodile tears over, if they cannot go on these ships in the war zones, and if the ships can be sold or chartered to foreign interests, who can send them into the war zones?

Mr. CULKIN. The world is greater than the combat zone. There is Africa and South America. South America has no coal now. The gentleman is going to send coal to South America.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Then does not the gentleman believe we should amend this bill and provide that these ships can only be sold to or chartered by American corporations or American citizens?

Mr. CULKIN. I do not think so.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. So that we do not leave the door wide open so that hundreds of ships of our subsidized American merchant marine can be sold to or chartered by foreign interests and used to carry arms, munitions, implements of war, and war supplies to belligerent nations as the bill does now provide?

Mr. CULKIN. No American ship can do that under this act.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. But under this act the Maritime Commission can sell or charter any or all of the ships to foreign interests or American interests for foreign registry and the ships can then be used in war zones as war supply vessels to carry troops, munitions of war, war supplies, or implements of war. Such use of our subsidized American merchant marine will not maintain the neutrality of our country.

Mr. CULKIN. That is all quite true. The gentleman can make the most of that argument, but despite that I say that this bill is sound in principle and is sound Americanism and does not violate the Neutrality Act.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Would the gentleman favor taking an arm of our national defense, these ships of our American merchant marine, and selling or chartering them to Germany and Russia, on one side, or England and France, on the other side, for use in the war zone to carry implements and munitions of war and war supplies? Would the gentleman approve of that?

Mr. CULKIN. The gentleman must know that cannot be done under the Neutrality Act.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Why, this bill is to circumvent the Neutrality Act. Of course, it can be done under this act and the cash-and-carry provisions of the Bloom so-called Neutrality Act.

Mr. CULKIN. No; it cannot be done.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Any American ship which is sold to or leased to foreign purchasers and transferred to a foreign registry does not come under the provisions of the Neutrality Act. This bill is clearly designed to permit the use of many ships of our American merchant marine in European war service to get around the provisions of the Neutrality Act, weaken our national defense, and take sides in the new European war. The Congress should not abdicate and vest the New Deal bureaucrats with the unlimited authority carried in this bill. Mr. Speaker, this bill is not limited to the 116 ships in the laid-up or sterilized fleet, but includes "all vessels transferred to the Maritime Commission by the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, or otherwise acquired by the Commission, other than vessels constructed under the Merchant Marine Act, 1936." Mr. Speaker, page 2 of the committee report reads as follows:

Section 1 of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 519) would suspend, during the European war, section 510 (g) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended (Public, No. 259, 76th Cong., approved August 4, 1939). Section 510 (g), which is a part of the "turn-in-and-build" amendment to the 1936 act, prohibits the use for commercial operation (except in certain limited cases) of vessels over 20 years old, which were in the Commission's laid-up fleet on August 4, 1939, or are turned in under the "turn-in-and-build" provisions (sec. 510). Section 1 of the joint resolution would lift such prohibition on the use of such vessels, and would permit the Commission to sell, charter, or use vessels in the laid-up fleet or the turned-in vessels, pursuant to the merchant marine acts in force prior to August 4, 1939.

Section 2 of the joint resolution would permit the Maritime Commission to sell or charter its vessels (other than those constructed under the Merchant Marine Act, 1936), including those in the laid-up fleet, upon such terms and conditions and subject to such limitations as the Commission may deem necessary or desirable in the furtherance of the public interest. The authority to sell or charter old vessels under the merchant marine acts is somewhat restricted, and not suited to flexible temporary or emergency use.

Mr. Speaker, page 2 of the committee report also states:

The Commission has a laid-up fleet of 116 vessels, about 1,000,000 tons, which have been deemed to be of sufficient value to warrant preservation for a national or commercial emergency. While the vital machinery of these vessels has been preserved, the vessels will require reconditioning before they can be put into service in any trade.

It appears that to enable the Government to be in a position to make effective disposition of its old vessels in any shipping emergency in foreign or domestic trade, it would be desirable to lift the restrictions of section 510 (g), and to vest in the Commission broad and flexible authority to sell or charter its vessels, including those in the laid-up fleet, for use in the coastwise or intercoastal trades, as well as to sell or charter for use in the foreign trade.

The committee reporting this bill states:

The Commission has a laid-up fleet of 116 vessels, about 1,000,000 tons, which have been deemed to be of sufficient value to warrant preservation for a national or commercial emergency.

Mr. Speaker, if these 116 vessels and many other vessels of our American merchant marine are sold to or chartered for the use of foreign interests, as they can be under this bill, how can they be preserved for a national emergency? The Chairman of the Maritime Commission, E. S. Land, in a letter of April 19, 1940, to the chairman of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, which appears in the committee report, states:

The Commission consequently favors the enactment of the joint resolution to suspend, during the European war, the restrictions of section 510 (g) on the use or disposition of vessels in the Commission's laid-up fleet, together with an amendment which would vest in the Commission complete authority to make effective disposition of its vessels as needs therefor may arise during the continuance of the war.

Such amendment should vest in the Commission general authority, during the European war, to sell or charter its vessels, including those in the laid-up fleet, under such terms and conditions and subject to such limitations as the Commission deems necessary or desirable. It is impossible to foresee just what emergent conditions may require use of the Commission's vessels in commercial operation, and a broad flexibility of authority to meet such conditions promptly in the national interest is necessary to make really effective use of such vessels.

To attain such flexibility, it is desirable that the Commission have certain authority in addition to and in modification of existing law. For example, it would be desirable that the Commission have authority to charter vessels for use in the coastwise or intercoastal trades, as well as to charter vessels for operation in foreign trades other than in lines or on essential routes in the foreign trade of the United States. It would also be desirable in attaining the objectives of the joint resolution to broaden the Commission's authority to sell vessels individually for operation in other than lines or essential trade routes.

Mr. Speaker, in view of the facts, I cannot vote for this bill, which is designed to weaken our national defense, violate the neutrality of the United States, and permit the use of ships of our American merchant marine in service for the benefit of belligerents in the European war which is now raging.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman use some more of his time?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. ROBSION].

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I voted and spoke against the Bloom neutrality bill, and I have not changed my mind one bit on that subject. The resolution before us does not involve the Neutrality Act.

I am just as anxious for this country to keep out of war as my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. SCHAFER]. This Nation must not become involved in another European war. Our boys must not again be sent to fight and die on foreign seas and in foreign lands in fruitless efforts to settle the age-old quarrels of European and Asiatic nations.

The resolution before us will not involve us in any foreign war. My good friend the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VAN ZANDT] is fearful that this resolution, if adopted, will hurt the railroads, and my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. SCHAFER] fears that this resolution might involve us in war. I desire to take up both of these contentions briefly.

About 12 or 15 years ago we were confronted with almost this same situation. There was a demand for American coal in the Mediterranean countries, the West Indies, and South America. At that time the National Coal Association and the National Coal Exporters Association and the railroads urged Congress to recondition some of these ships which were built during the World War so as to carry American coal to the Mediterranean countries, the West Indies, and South America. We had already reconditioned some of these ships to carry wheat, lumber, meats, foods, and so forth, in our export trade, but we had made no provision for the carrying of export coal. I made a fight for appropriations to recondition these ships and we secured appropriations amounting to somewhere between three and five million dollars for that purpose.

Some of these World War merchant ships were reconditioned and a great lot of coal was exported. This gave work to American miners and business to American coal producers, and it furnished business for the railroads and employment for the railroad workers.

Now, what is the situation confronting our country on this very matter today? Germany produces considerable coal and exported a lot of coal. Great Britain produces more coal than any other country in the world except the United States. Germany and Great Britain exported a lot of their coal to the Mediterranean countries and South America. They are now engaged in war and cannot supply these markets. They are now charging $20 or more a ton freight to ship coal to certain foreign countries. There is a great market begging for American coal, but we do not have the ships to transport the coal.

Our Government spent hundreds of millions of dollars during the World War building these more than a hundred merchant ships that have been tied up in our harbors and rivers ever since the World War, decaying and going to waste. This resolution provides that the Government may recondition a number of these ships and put them into service to carry coal, farm commodities, lumber, meat, and other products to Africa, the Mediterranean, the West Indies, and Central and South American countries. Other nations have withdrawn a lot of their merchant ships from carrying American products, and our ports are being piled up and congested with these exportable products.

The National Coal Exporters' Association and the National Coal Association and many of our railroads are very anxious to see this resolution adopted and these ships reconditioned to carry coal and other products and to relieve the congestion in our seaports. I am reliably informed that the representatives of the Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Norfolk & Western, and Virginian Railroads were here recently and approved this resolution. It is also approved by the United States Maritime Commission and had the unanimous support of the Merchant Marine Committee of the House—Democrats and Republicans.

HELPFUL TO COAL OPERATORS, RAILROADS, AND WORKERS

I know that the coal operators, miners, railroads, and railroad workers in Kentucky, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and other coal-producing States of the Union want this legislation so that coal may be produced in the mines and carried by the railroads to the seaports. Why should we sit idly by here and see these ships, costing millions of dollars, rusting and decaying and see hundreds of thousands of miners and railroad workers out of work and their families on relief and in great need of the necessities of life when we have an opportunity to recondition these ships, put them into service and produce millions of tons of coal to be carried by the railroads to the seaports? We need these ships to carry the coal to the markets of the world—markets far removed from the war zone—give business to the coal producers, work for the miners, and provide tonnage for the railroads and employment for the railroad men, and it will also provide employment for thousands of idle seamen. Many of us have been very much interested in this proposal for some time and I am very happy to have an opportunity to support this resolution. [Applause.]

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I yield.

Mr. MAY. It is just plain common sense to pass this bill and open up that great market.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. We have these ships that cost us hundreds of millions of dollars. They are tied up in various harbors of the country and decaying. Why should we refuse to pass this bill and have these ships remain tied up in our harbors rusting away, our miners and railroad people idle and our ports filled up and congested with farm products, lumber, meats, and other exportable products that cannot now be moved? We have nearly 11,000,000 unemployed industrial workers in this country. We have a great surplus on our farms, in our factories, mills, and shops. Why deny opportunities for work to some of these millions of unemployed industrial workers who must have private jobs or go on relief? Why deny this relief to the farmers, lumbermen, and others? Why should we not give this business to the railroads, the coal operators, and shippers?

This is a good American bill backed by the Republicans as well as the Democrats. It is helpful and salutary legislation. It is in the best interests of our country and I strongly favor it and urge its passage. [Applause.]

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VAN ZANDT.]

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I repeat that I oppose this legislation because I am deeply concerned with the problem of the employees of the railroads of the United States, many of whom are now on involuntary furlough. I agree with the gentleman from Kentucky that to recondition these ships would open a new field for American-mined coal, but the gentleman refuses to recognize the fact that those who are sponsoring this legislation are using the coal miners of the country as an excuse to open up new intercoastal trade which will take business away from the transcontinental railroads, or in other words, inflicting injury on a natural ally of the coal industry. I am looking at this proposal from the standpoint of the railroad employee. It is true the railroads will get additional employment transporting coal from the mines to the seaports. However, you gentlemen must realize that not all of these ships will carry coal to foreign countries nor will they carry coal from the east coast to the west coast. To the contrary, their principal cargoes will be products other than coal, thereby diverting freight traffic from the already hard-pressed railroads. Keep this in mind each time a ship travels through the Panama Canal carrying freight it takes jobs from the railroad men of this country. If the railroad men of our country had the privilege of standing in the Well of this House and understanding this legislation and its effect on the railroad industry, I dare say that not one railroad man would support this measure.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. CARLSON. In 1930 we passed an act sterilizing 116 ships as a part of our national defense. Now, at a time when the world is at war and when we might be threatened ourselves, it is proposed to transfer these ships to foreign countries.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I wish someone would answer the question as to why owners of ships flying the American flag transferred the ships to foreign flags immediately after the declaration of war. Nobody has answered that question on the floor as yet. It is difficult for me to understand the practice of certain shipping concerns transferring ships to foreign flags and then expect our Government to replace those ships at the expense of the American taxpayer. This is another Government subsidized threat to private business.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, this is strictly an American unemployment and reemployment measure, let me say in reply to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SCHAFER] and other gentlemen who have expressed similar views. No supporter of this bill, and certainly not the Maritime Commission, in my opinion, contemplates for one moment the charter or sale of any of these vessels to anyone except American interests, the vessels to be operated by Americans under the American flag, employing American seamen, shipping American goods, and American products manufactured by American workmen in the factories of America. [Applause.] Under the Neutrality Act our vessels cannot enter the combat zones anywhere in Europe or Asia. I cannot see the slightest danger that this measure will affect our neutrality. If I thought for one moment that it would, I would be strongly opposed to it.

Mr. Speaker, this measure will enable the lumber, plywood, veneer, pulp and paper, fruit and vegetable canning, grain and flour milling industries of the Pacific Northwest, the highly important manufacturing industries on the Atlantic seaboard and in the New England States and in the Gulf and Southern States, as well as the farmers of the Middle West, to ship their products in American bottoms. Thereby our factories and industries will be enabled to continue to operate and probably increase their operations, and many thousands of workmen will have employment. These vessels, now sterilized, have been paid for by American taxpayers, are the property of the American people, and should be reconditioned and made available to serve American interests. I urge the House to adopt the resolution offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK]. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH].

Mr. WELCH. Is it not a fact that the lumber interests on both coasts as well as on the Gulf particularly desire this legislation?

Mr. BUCK. Yes.

Mr. WELCH. They cannot transport their lumber or pulp, and as a result nearly all the lumber and pulp mills on both coasts are closed down.

Mr. BUCK. That applies not only to lumber, but also to wool, canned fruit producers, and to people who produce other materials.

Mr. WELCH. The primary purpose of this resolution is to relieve a condition on the Pacific coast brought about by the European war.

The act of August 4, 1939, provided for the removal from service old or obsolete ships and their replacement with modern ships in the interest of national defense and the shipping industry.

The Maritime Commission is authorized under the terms of the resolution to sell or charter its laid-up ships during the continuance of the war. Care will be exercised by the Maritime Commission to see to it that the resale of the ships in question shall not be made to people who might acquire them for speculative purposes.

It is an emergency measure which in turn will bring to the Government a good price for sterilized ships which otherwise will eventually be sold for junk.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. MOTT].

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, in view of the remarks made by the gentleman from Wisconsin, I want to call attention of my Republican colleagues to the fact that this bill is a nonpartisan one. The gentleman from Wisconsin was in error, of course, when he said it was a New Deal bill, and when he intimated that Republicans were opposed to it he cast a reflection upon the intelligence of the Republicans. [Laughter and applause.] To my own personal knowledge every Republican on the Pacific coast is in favor of the bill and so far as I know every Republican representing port areas on the Atlantic coast is in favor of it.

Mr. WELCH. And every Republican on the committee voted for the bill.

Mr. MOTT. Certainly, they are all in favor of it. All of our industries on the Pacific coast, and the lumber industry particularly, are being seriously hampered and menaced on account of the shortage of ships. If we do not have the legislation provided in this bill it is possible those industries may be entirely ruined.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time on this side.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding this debate I simply want to emphasize the fact this is an absolutely nonpartisan bill, designed for the interest of the United States and designed to reemploy men. Forty-nine ships have already been taken out of the intercoastal service. You are not doing anything to help those sailors who came off those ships and are on the beach today unless you put them back in some other bottoms. I hope the vote on this bill will be unanimous.

The SPEAKER. All time has expired.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to amend the resolution by adding two amendments which strike out the word "heretofore" and insert "on November 4, 1939." The reason for that is that when the report was made there was only one proclamation of neutrality.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND]?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman perfect the bill so that we can all support it by striking out the provisions which will permit foreign countries to purchase these boats and restrict it only to American corporations and American citizens?

Mr. BLAND. In view of the fact I do not concede the theory of the gentleman, I cannot agree to do that.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND]?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLAND: On page 1, line 6, strike out the word "heretofore" and insert, after the word "President", in the same line, the following: "on November 4, 1939."

On page 1, line 10, strike out the word "heretofore" and insert, after the word "President", the following: "on November 4, 1939."

The SPEAKER. The question is, Shall the House suspend the rules and pass the resolution as amended?

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin) there were—ayes 194, noes 15.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. (After counting.) Two hundred and thirty-one Members are present, a quorum.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DEPARTMENTS OF STATE, COMMERCE, AND JUSTICE, AND THE JUDICIARY APPROPRIATION BILL—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. McANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill, H. R. 8319, making appropriations for the Departments of State, Commerce, and Justice, and for the judiciary, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8319) making appropriations for the Departments of State, Commerce, and Justice, and for the Judiciary, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 7, 12, and 21.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 5, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 23, 25, 26, 27, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, and 37, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment amended to read as follows:

"Bureau of Interparliamentary Union for Promotion of International Arbitration, $10,000;"

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 4: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$8,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$1,083,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$110,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 18: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$308,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 19: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$1,325,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 20: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 20, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the amount named in said amendment, insert "$7,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 22: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the amount named in said amendment, insert "$7,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 24: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$1,650,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 35: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$187,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 28 and 29.

JAS. MCANDREWS,
LOUIS C. RABAUT,
MILLARD F. CALDWELL,
JOHN H. KERR,
BUTLER B. HARE,
ALBERT E. CARTER,
KARL STEFAN,
Managers on the part of the House.

KENNETH MCKELLAR,
RICHARD B. RUSSELL,
PAT MCCARRAN,
J. H. BANKHEAD,
KEY PITTMAN,
STYLES BRIDGES,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8319) making appropriations for the Departments of State, Commerce, and Justice, and for the Judiciary, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

State Department

On amendment No. 1: Authorizes the use of the appropriation for contingent expenses for translating services, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 2: Corrects a citation of law.

On amendment No. 3: Appropriates $10,000 for the expenses of a contribution by the United States to the expenses of the Bureau of Interparliamentary Union for Promotion of International Arbitration instead of eliminating all appropriations for this agency, as proposed by the Senate, or appropriating $20,000, of which $10,000 would be for a contribution and $10,000 for the expense of sending American delegates to a meeting of the Union, as proposed by the House.

On amendment No. 4: Authorizes $8,000 of the appropriation for the International Labor Organization to be used to meet expenses attendant upon participation by the United States in the meetings of the Organization, instead of making $5,901 available for such purpose, as proposed by the House, or $10,000 available for such purpose, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 5: Makes the appropriation for the International Labor Office available for such expenses as may be authorized by the Secretary of State, as proposed by the Senate, instead of making such appropriation available for necessary expenses, as proposed by the House.

On amendment No. 6: Corrects a total.

On amendment No. 7: Eliminates from the bill an appropriation of $25,000, proposed by the Senate, for fence construction on the international boundary of the United States and Mexico.

On amendment No. 8: Makes available $120,500 for salaries and expenses of the so-called "cultural relations" program with South and Central America, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $155,500, as proposed by the House.

On amendment No. 9: Eliminates from the bill, as proposed by the Senate, the authority to expend $35,000 under the direction of the Department of Agriculture to further the cultural-relations program with South and Central America, instead of sanctioning such expenditure, as provided by the House.

On amendment No. 10: Permits officers of the Federal Works Agency to be assigned for duty as inspectors of Government-owned or occupied buildings in foreign countries, as proposed by the Senate.

Department of Commerce

On amendment No. 11: Appropriates $110,000 for salaries and expenses of the Census Bureau in furnishing information concerning age of applicants for social-security benefits instead of $120,000, as proposed by the House, and $100,000, as provided by the Senate.

On amendment No. 12: Reinstates in the bill language eliminated by the Senate dealing with the right of the Patent Office to investigate certain public use or sale of inventions and conduct other investigations.

Department of Justice

On amendments Nos. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 23, 27, 31, 32, 33, and 35: All have to do with the transfer of the appropriations for the Probation Service of the Department of Justice to the office of the Administrator of United States Courts. The Senate had proposed this transfer, and the bill as agreed to contains language and transfers of funds to accomplish this end. The House conferees have receded from all the above-named Senate amendments except Nos. 18 and 35. In the case of these two amendments, the Senate had proposed to transfer $15,000 from the office of the Director of Prisons to the office of the Administrator of United States Courts. The conferees have agreed to the transfer of $10,000 between these appropriations, such sum being approximately the amount expended on employees' salaries engaged in administering the Probation Service.

On amendment No. 19: Appropriates $1,325,000 for salaries and expenses of enforcing the antitrust laws, instead of $1,250,000 as proposed by the House and $1,400,000 as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 20: Prevents the expenditure of any of the appropriation for enforcement of the antitrust laws in the establishment or maintenance of permanent regional offices and requires that all persons appointed to positions under this appropriation paying $7,500 or more per annum must first be confirmed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 21: Appropriates $375,000 for salaries and expenses of the Veterans' Insurance Litigation Division, as proposed by the House, instead of $325,000, as provided by the Senate.

On amendment No. 22: Requires that all attorneys paid from funds appropriated under the paragraph for salaries and expenses of special attorneys shall, if their salary be $7,500 per annum or more, be confirmed by the Senate. The Senate had proposed that this requirement be extended to all persons drawing salaries of $5,000 or more.

On amendment No. 24: Appropriates $1,650,000 for expenses of support of Federal prisoners in State, county, and city jails, instead of $1,750,000 as proposed by the House and $1,550,000 as provided by the Senate.

On amendment No. 25: Inserts a title in the bill as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 26: Appropriates $131,000 for salaries of the Court of Claims, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $127,660, as provided by the House.

On amendment No. 30: Eliminates the surplus word "ten" as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 34: Defines the term "circuit court of appeals" as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 36: Requires the allotment of certain salaries out of appropriations made in the bill as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 37: Prevents the use of any funds appropriated in the bill in paying any person for the filling of any position for which he has been nominated after the Senate has voted not to approve of the nomination of said person, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 28 and 29: Reported as in disagreement.

JAS. MCANDREWS,
LOUIS C. RABAUT,
MILLARD F. CALDWELL,
JOHN H. KERR,
BUTLER B. HARE,
ALBERT E. CARTER,
KARL STEFAN,
Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COOPER). The Clerk will report the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 28: On page 78, line 19, after the amount insert: "Provided, That the salary of no probation officer shall be less than $1,800 per annum nor more than $3,000 per annum."

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 28 and concur in the same with an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CALDWELL moves to recede and concur in Senate amendment No. 28 with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said Senate amendment insert the following: "Provided, That the salary of no probation officer shall be less than $1,800 per annum nor more than $3,200 per annum."

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 29: On page 78, in line 21, after "per annum", insert "Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to abridge the right of the district judges to appoint probation officers, or to make such orders as may be necessary to govern probation officers in their own courts."

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the house recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 29 and agree to the same with an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CALDWELL moves to recede and concur in Senate amendment No. 29 with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said Senate amendment, insert the following: "Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to abridge the right of the district judges to appoint probation officers, or to make such orders as may be necessary to govern probation officers in their own courts: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used to pay the salary or expenses of any probation officer who, in the judgment of the senior or presiding judge certified to the Attorney General, fails to carry out the official orders of the Attorney General with respect to supervising or furnishing information concerning any prisoner released conditionally or on parole from any Federal penal or correctional institution."

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the motions were agreed to was laid on the table.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Speaker, in connection with this bill we wish it to be known that we have great confidence in the administrative ability of Mr. Chandler, who has been selected as the head of the administrative office of the United States courts, but I wish to say at this time that it was with great reluctance that we yielded to the request of the Senate to transfer the probation service to this agency. Because of the fear we have of a great increase in the cost of carrying on this work, which was formerly under the Bureau of Prisons, we hope that Mr. Chandler will find it possible not to make it necessary to set up a new system of parole officers to handle the work that was formerly carried on so efficiently and effectively by the Bureau of Prisons.

It has been estimated that if we should have to set up a new set of parole officers, the annual cost would be upward of $350,000. No necessity for such a new organization can come into being if the probation officers devote their energies to parole activities in the same way that they do probation activities and if the high standards of the past few years that were set by the Attorney General to govern the appointment of probation officers is continued in effect. We have agreed to this change with our tongues in our cheek, so to speak, hopeful that the dual problem of probation and parole can be successfully handled under this new set-up. If proper attention is not given by probation officers to the matter of paroled convicts, however, and because of the lack of proper parole supervision the Parole Board refuses to grant paroles, thus requiring an additional outlay of Federal funds to keep the prisoners incarcerated in Federal institutions, you may expect a move to be made by me and other members of the committee to place this probation service back under the Department of Justice.

PRIVATE CALENDAR

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the call of the Private Calendar on tomorrow may be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

HON. JAMES M'ANDREWS

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say that the appropriation bill we have just been considering, which passed the House so well and the conference report on which has just been unanimously agreed to, was under the leadership of of my old and dear friend, the gentleman from Illinois, JIM MCANDREWS. [Applause.]

Twenty-seven years ago last March I got off a streetcar at Fourteenth and K Streets. Where the Tower Building now stands there was a hotel, and in that hotel as a Member of Congress lived the gentleman from Illinois, JIM MCANDREWS. Twelve years before that, or 39 years ago, he first became a Member of the House of Representatives. I believe he has been elected from every section of the great city of Chicago. [Applause.] When Jim moves into another section of Chicago and they draft him as the nominee all other Democratic candidates in the primary immediately withdraw, and the Republicans know their case is hopeless.

This House has never had in it a grander or a better man than the gentleman from Illinois, JIM MCANDREWS. [Applause.] I simply wished to take this 1 minute to call attention to the fact that 39 years ago he first became a Member of the Congress, and that during the three periods in which he has served here he has carried himself so that every Member of the House on both sides of the aisle during all that time has had a wholesome and a great respect for this fine, upstanding American. [Applause, Members rising.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I made today with respect to the bill H. R. 8884 and to include therein the House report on the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Delegate from Alaska?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BRADLEY] may have permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ENGEL] may be allowed to address the House for 20 minutes tomorrow at the conclusion of any special orders heretofore entered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow, after the business of the day and any special orders heretofore entered, I may address the House for 30 minutes on the subject of pending amendments to the National Labor Relations Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

SAFEGUARDING THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. HINSHAW asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, this noon there was held in the city of Washington the annual meeting of the Society of American Military Engineers, of which I have the honor to be a member. The meeting was addressed by Brig. Gen. George V. Strong, Assistant Chief of Staff of the United States Army, on the subject of Safeguarding the Western Hemisphere. The address is of great importance, and I am going to ask permission to place it in the RECORD at this point, and suggest that every Member of the House read it, as it is important not only to the House itself, but to the people of the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

ADDRESS BY BRIG. GEN. GEORGE V. STRONG, ASSISTANT CHIEF OF STAFF, UNITED STATES ARMY

It is perhaps particularly fitting to discuss before the Society of American Military Engineers the problem of safeguarding the Western Hemisphere, because there is no other profession whose activities play as large a part in the solution of this question as that of the engineer. As a matter of fact, our whole scheme of national defense is based upon the maintenance and the continued operation of that enduring monument to engineering skill that is found in the Panama Canal. It is a fact, as stated by our Secretary of War, that the Panama Canal is the keystone of our national defense, and as such it must be as nearly impregnable as engineering skill and trained soldiers can make it.

In considering broadly the subject of safeguarding the Western Hemisphere, it might be well to consider just what we mean by the Western Hemisphere. From a cartographic standpoint, the Western Hemisphere is somewhat different from the Western Hemisphere that we consider in matters of national policy. The latter, primarily a political matter, has been determined for us:

First. By various statements of the President;

Second. By the attitude of this Government in connection with various international conferences, such as the one held at Buenos Aires and at Lima; and Third. By the declarations of the Panama Conference which was convened immediately after the outbreak of the European War, and to which we were a party.

The latter, for neutrality purposes, prescribed a zone around the North and South American continents, with their appendant islands, some 300 miles in width. This then represents in general terms the section of the world in which we are primarily interested. Under present conditions, and in view of the present development of weapons, this hemisphere is safe from any aggression from abroad just as long as two conditions maintain:

First. That the Panama Canal is open for the transit of the United States fleet; and Second. That an aggressor from abroad has no bases in this hemisphere from which to operate.

Our problem then involves the maintenance of these two conditions, that is, keeping the Panama Canal open, and denying an aggressor from abroad bases from which to operate.

As to the first condition, it is generally accepted that the Panama Canal, with its existing seacoast armament, is safe from an attack by surface vessels alone. No power would assume the risk involved in a strictly naval attack upon either entrance of the Canal because the chances of success would not justify the risk of loss of costly matériel. A combination of sea and land attack would have slightly better chances of success, but the difficulties of transporting a landing force overseas, coupled with the danger involved in air attack on transports and the inevitable losses from beach defense combined with the difficulties of an advance through tropical jungles, make the chances of such an attack very small indeed. An air attack offers better chances of success, but an air attack involves the use of at least two carriers or a land base within a radius of approximately a thousand miles of the Canal, and the number of planes involved is not inconsiderable. These three forms of attack—land, sea, or air, or a combination of them—represent the application of military force to put the Canal out of action.

For the protection of the Canal against sea attack, we have installed harbor-defense armament adequate to meet and vanquish any naval force that is rash enough to attempt an attack upon the Canal. To meet a land attack, there is maintained in the Canal Zone a mobile military force deemed adequate to meet any initial raids that may be made by a hostile landing force, and plans are in existence promptly to reinforce this garrison in the event of an emergency. To meet an air attack, there is maintained in the Canal Zone antiaircraft armament which, with augmentations now provided, is adequate, in conjunction with the air garrison of pursuit and bombardment aviation, to cope with an air attack launched against the Canal, provided we have a reasonable warning of such an attack.

We cannot be sure, however, that our planned defense against air attack or against sabotage will be 100 percent efficient. The present Canal, as you know, consists of three double sets of locks. The lock chambers of each set are side by side and, in view of their construction, it is quite possible that one lucky hit of a large bomb or a heavy explosion in one lock chamber would be sufficient to put the Canal out of commission. In addition, the dimensions of these lock chambers limit the size of our naval units. Some of our aircraft carriers are just able to squeeze through the locks and no more. In consequence, in order adequately to meet naval requirements and to further minimize the chances of sabotage, or an air raid putting the Canal out of commission, there has been authorized the construction of an additional set of locks. These locks will be approximately 25 percent larger than the present locks and will be separated from them from a quarter to a half a mile. Appropriations for initiating this work are now pending before the Congress. Under present plans, assuming that work can be initiated this summer, this set of locks would not be open for use until 1945 or 1946. If the present troubled international situation becomes more menacing, we will face an engineering problem which will tax the ingenuity and skill of the engineering profession to speed up the construction of the new set of locks to meet what may be a crucial national-defense requirement. We can rest assured, however, that when the other set of locks is open to the use of our Navy, our national-defense problem, insofar as the Panama Canal is concerned, will be improved 50 percent.

The greatest danger to the Canal lies not in the application of military force but in the possibilities of sabotage. Against this our greatest efforts must be made.

Sabotage may take many forms. A vessel might be blown up in the locks; time bombs might be dropped in the locks; dams might be blown up; vital installations, such as control mechanisms or power sources, might be damaged or destroyed; but these possibilities have all been foreseen and steps have been taken to minimize, or in some cases nullify, efforts along this line. There is always the possibility, however, that a brain bent on destruction may be one jump ahead of measures for protection, and it is in this field that we are constantly striving by means of devices or installations, largely of an engineering character, to render the Canal safe from sabotage.

With the Canal reasonably safe from attack by land, sea, or air, and reasonably protected against attempts at sabotage, we are well assured of our ability to move our fleet from one ocean to the other as circumstances may demand. With the fleet available, the Army and the Navy, acting as a team, are free to perform their function of joint operations to deny an aggressor the seizure and establishment of bases from which he can operate against us or against any other American republic, or against the Canal. In considering these joint operations to deny an aggressor a base from which to operate against us, it might be well to consider from a practical standpoint the general areas in which an aggressor might wish to establish a base. As far as the North American Continent is concerned, Newfoundland offers practicable facilities as an air base from which operations can be launched against vital areas in the United States as far south as the Potomac River; it offers excellent advanced base facilities for naval or military action against the northeastern part of the United States; and a base from which practically to interdict all traffic from the northern part of North America to Europe. An enemy, once established in Newfoundland, would constitute a very serious threat against either Canada or the United States. Dislodging an enemy once established on Newfoundland would involve continued air operations from the northeastern part of the United States, and a joint military and naval expedition from our territories.

Farther south, the Bahamas offer a number of sites from which harassing air operations could be launched, covering generally the Atlantic States as far west as the Alleghenies. Here, too, dislodgment of an enemy once established would involve a joint overseas operation on the part of the Army and the Navy.

Farther south, Puerto Rico, if seized by an enemy, would be an ideal base from which to raid the United States, to interdict our coastwise commerce, and to attack the Panama Canal. If the present garrison were overwhelmed, reconquering Puerto Rico would be a far more difficult and a far costlier operation than when it was originally taken in 1898. The Lesser Antilles, covering the eastern approaches to the Caribbean and extending south from Puerto Rico to Trinidad just off the South American Continent, present a number of places owned by the European powers on which bases for attack against either the United States or the Panama Canal could be established. From a military standpoint, in many respects, the island of Trinidad is the most important. It not only covers the southeastern approaches to the Caribbean but presents extraordinarily favorable features either in the defense of the Caribbean or as a base from which we may be attacked. South of the Caribbean, the great hump of South America jutting out in the Atlantic offers in Natal the nearest approach from the African Continent, and many possibilities for the establishment of an air base from which operations could be directed to the north and west. In the Caribbean itself Cuba, Jamaica, and the countries bordering the Caribbean on the south, have numerous sites from which an attack could be launched against the Canal or against the southern part of the United States. The western coast of South America, with the exception of the Galapagos Islands approximately a thousand miles from the Pacific entrance of the Canal, does not offer a great threat to us except in the event of one or more of the American republics being dominated by a European or Asiatic power and turning against us and our sister republics. The western coast of Central America offers a number of places which could be seized and used as a base for operations against the Panama Canal. This same remark applies to the west coast of Mexico. Some 2,000 miles off our own Pacific coast lie the Hawaiian Islands in which is located our principal naval base in the eastern Pacific. Extending west from the Hawaiian Islands we have Wake, Midway, and Guam which mark the route to our outpost in the Orient, the Philippine Islands, which presumably will achieve its independence in 1946.

North of Hawaii we have our immensely rich Territory of Alaska, in which recently both the Army and the Navy have taken steps to establish bases. From Alaska there juts out to within a few hundred miles of Asia the Aleutian Islands in which it is contemplated to establish an outpost intended primarily for reconnaissance and surveillance of the great circle routes leading from the Orient to the northwestern part of the continental United States. These Alaskan bases, in spite of the questions which have been raised by the Congress as to the wisdom of their establishment, are of tremendous importance to the United States because, held in reasonable strength, no enemy would initiate operations against the northwestern part of the United States if subject to the possibility of flank attack over a distance of almost 2,000 miles.

This rather hurried sketch of possibilities of problems that may arise in safeguarding the Western Hemisphere quite naturally raises the question as to what means we have of denying an enemy the use of these bases. It is perfectly obvious that initially the protection of the territory of any of the American Republics and Canada lies primarily in the hands of national forces of the country concerned. It is likewise perfectly obvious that in many cases local forces, due to lack of strength or to distribution or location, will not be adequate to prevent a determined aggressor from seizing bases within their territory and it is under these conditions that we, as a Nation, must face as a practical problem the question of furnishing aid in preventing the violation of the territorial integrity of our sister republics. This is not a high-minded Utopian proposition. On the contrary, it is a stark realistic military necessity because the establishment of a base by an aggressor from abroad in the territory of one of the other American republics is just as real and just as dangerous a threat against us as against the country in whose territory the base is seized. As a matter of fact, in many respects it is of greater danger to us than to the country primarily involved, because we have far more to lose in a material way than any other government in this hemisphere.

The present wars in Europe and in Asia differ in only one respect from their predecessors, namely in a keener appreciation and a more effective use of the time element. This, of course, is based primarily upon the development and application of the internal-combustion engine, principally the use of the airplane and the motor vehicle.

This development has increased the difficulty of our problem and indicates very clearly the vital necessity of applying in the safeguarding of the Western Hemisphere that principle of war, translated into homely language by General Forrest as "getting there fustest with the mostest men." This means, when applied to our problem, that we must maintain a small, adequately trained, properly armed, highly mobile, seasoned force, capable of acting instantly in the event of an emergency. Not only must this force have the basic characteristics which I have just indicated, but it must be so organized in units, so equipped with material, and so trained, basically and specially, as to be able to solve satisfactorily and promptly any of the infinite number of problems that may face it under varying circumstances in the Western Hemisphere. We must be prepared to outblitz the blitzkrieg.

This requirement of speed raises two problems for the military engineer. The strategic mobility of the so-called streamlined division, dependent as it is upon the use of motor transportation, and its increased fire power depending upon weapons whose ammunition consumption is far greater than in the past, emphasizes the necessity of the maintenance and construction of roads capable of bearing the strain placed upon them. This, of itself, demands a higher percentage of engineer troops than has been used in the past. In addition, the construction and maintenance of landing fields for the operation of our air forces is an added burden upon the military engineer which calls for a high degree of skill and unremitting work. In this field, time is vital and numbers, equipment, and training of engineering troops assume a degree of importance never attained in the past.

For the first time in 20 years this country is national-defense conscious. For the first time in 20 years has the Congress reflected this attitude of the American people in partially meeting the requirements of the military and naval service. We have spent huge sums in the past year and we are spending them now, but the conversion of this money into material, all of which will not be in the hands of troops for another 18 months, does not fully meet our requirements. Due to the starvation policy forced upon the War Department over a long period of years, we are still short almost half a billion dollars' worth of critical and essential items needed to equip the forces to be raised under our protective mobilization plan. For any other forces that may be required as emergency develops we have but a very small percentage of the arms and equipment that is necessary. We have made our plans and we are in position to take the first step for safeguarding the Western Hemisphere. We are not prepared, and unless the very real problem which may involve our continued national existence is realized, and funds are appropriated for urgent requirements, we will not be in position to take the second step, that is, make a major military effort, at least in time to meet the probable necessities of a situaion which would involve us in a major war on this continent.

To be in position to meet our requirements in the event of an emergency, it is vital to success that we procure, with the least practicable delay, the material necessary to fully arm and equip the forces contemplated in our protective mobilization plan; that we maintain in time of peace war reserves of critical items adequate to keep our forces going under war conditions until industry can produce in quantities sufficient to meet war-time requirements for such a force; and third, that we maintain, in time of peace, a Regular Army and National Guard organized, trained, and equipped to meet M-Day requirements. These three steps will cost money, but that money is the best possible insurance of keeping us out of war. The principal question now before the American people is whether they will insure our country being kept out of war by paying this price of preparedness for national defense, which is essential to the maintenance of peace in the Western Hemisphere.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include a radio address which I made out home and to include as a part of that address an editorial appearing in the New York Herald Tribune.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

PROPOSED REORGANIZATION OF THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, the proposed reorganization of the C. A. A. has required a lot of explaining.

First, there had to be White House conferences and inspired newspaper stories.

Then the Budget Bureau had to write a long, complicated letter trying to explain all that was not said in the plans which have been transmitted to Congress.

Then a Budget Bureau report of many hundred words had to be issued. It was not a report; it was an argument, pure and simple.

Then the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Mr. J. Monroe Johnson, had to be moved to the I. C. C. and the post offered to the present C. A. A. chairman.

Aviation should be pinned down where it is and left there. We know that the C. A. A. is doing a fine job. We know the Department of Commerce did a terrible job.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday, following the orders heretofore entered, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER] be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday, after the disposition of other special orders, I be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CONFISCATION OF AMERICAN PROPERTY IN MEXICO

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under special order heretofore made the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, on Friday last week in this Chamber my handsome and brilliant young colleague the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HENNINGS] made a forceful statement in which he clearly pointed out the strained diplomatic relations now existing between the Government of the United States and the Government of Mexico. The entire speech of the honorable gentleman is worth reading, but for fear some Members will be too busy or too lazy to read it, I wish to call to the attention of those Members present two brief excerpts. On page 5505 of the RECORD the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HENNINGS] stated:

> During the past 20 years the United States has exercised extreme forbearance and patience toward Mexico in the face of frequent or constant provocation arising from her acts of aggression against our citizens and her failure to reciprocate our many favors, such as the purchase of her silver at prices above the world market. We have been long-suffering and kind to Mexico, even while our citizens have been calling for help and for the justice to which they are entitled under our Constitution and under the law of nations.

On the same page the honorable gentleman continued:

Mexico is the first to succumb to the totalitarian and communistic principle that gives to the state absolute powers. Her surrender is the first breach in the dike of democracy. Her laws and conduct are the greatest menace that now confront the peace and security of this hemisphere, because they resist and challenge the laws and justice which govern these sister republics.

Mr. Speaker, under the Constitution of the United States the Government of course can seize the property of private citizens for public use but not without due process of law or without adequate compensation therefor. Under the law of nations any sovereign state can seize the property not only of its own private citizens, but the private property of aliens for public use, but not without prompt, adequate, and effective compensation therefor. Mexico during the past 25 years has violated not only its own constitution, but has violated this fundamental principle of international law that is built upon fair play and fair dealing.

In his note of July 1938 and in the note of April 1940, to Mexico, our Secretary of State reduced the acts of the Government of Mexico, in the taking of property of citizens of the United States, to acts of confiscation. Confiscation is universally recognized, by the law of nations, as a belligerent right against the property of an enemy. Confiscation of property is a proper war measure.

The purpose of confiscating the property of the enemy is to reduce his strength and make him more vulnerable to the attacks of the belligerent confiscating the property.

The Supreme Court of the United States, volume 78, page 306, defines confiscation:

The whole doctrine of confiscation is built upon the foundation that it is an instrument of coercion which, by depriving an enemy of property within reach of his power, whether within his territory or without it, impairs his ability to resist the confiscating government. * * * Hence any property which the enemy can use * * * is a proper subject of confiscation.

The property of our citizens has been systematically confiscated by Mexico while our President calls that Government our good neighbor.

Here is a fair example:

Mexico urged American citizens to take leases on possible oil lands in Mexico and explore and develop oil wherever they could find it. Our citizens took leases or titles offered them by Mexico to search for oil if they could find it. They took the leases in good faith. They used their experience, spent their time and money in finding where the oil was located and taking it out of the ground. They made it useful. It had been in the ground unused for millions of years. It seemed a good thing for Mexico, as well as for those who produced the oil.

But, on the 18th of March 1938 the Government of Mexico, without declaring war on the United States, confiscated all the oil properties and equipment, office furniture, moneys, and everything used in connection with the business. Mexico simply used the force in confiscating the property that an outlaw uses when he takes property away from anyone.

The Government of Mexico has, in this way, confiscated the property of American citizens to an amount near a billion and a half of dollars, in value, and all this in time of peace between our country and Mexico. There have been mild protests, to be sure, of this abuse of a war power by Mexico against citizens of the United States while our President has been calling that government our good neighbor. There has been too much forbearance in the matter.

Mexico justifies, in the mind of that government, the confiscation of property belonging to citizens of our country under a political philosophy that is alien to the Western Hemisphere. It is a philosophy that has been taken from Russia. It is only a few years ago that this Government entered into an agreement with Mexico that if Mexico would not steal property belonging to citizens of the United States that Mexico would be given diplomatic recognition by the United States. But Mexico has kept on stealing property from our citizens. The time for further forbearance in the matter has passed. It is time to call a spade a spade and a thief a thief. The Government of Mexico is as guilty of theft as a plain highwayman.

Merely condemning the confiscation in time of peace of property belonging to citizens of the United States does not appear to have moved the Government of Mexico to cease confiscating the property of the citizens of our country. The confiscated property must be returned. I repeat, Mexico is guilty in confiscating the property of our citizens, of exercising a war power, when the Government of Mexico and the Government of the United States are at peace.

The Government of Mexico cannot plead as a defense that it has been expropriating the property of American citizens. Under the law of Mexico and of the law of nations, the necessity for expropriation would first have to be established under the forms of the law provided. After necessity for the expropriation was established, Mexico would have to arrive at an agreement with the owners of the property of its value, and the price agreed upon would then have to be paid before the right to take the property was established.

But Secretary of State Hull, with the authority and responsibility of his high office, and being fully advised of all the facts, has declared that the Government of Mexico has not been expropriating the property of citizens of the United States according to the laws of Mexico and the law of nations, but has been confiscating it, in time of peace, in violation of the laws of Mexico as well as in violation of the law of nations.

The alien political philosophy adopted by Mexico under which that Government violates its own constitution and laws, as well as the law of nations, cannot be advanced as a defense against its unlawful acts in confiscating the property of citizens of the United States. The Government of the United States was not at war with the Government of Mexico when any of the properties in question were confiscated.

But the amazing thing is that the Secretary of State has asked the Government of Mexico to arbitrate the unlawful confiscation of the property of our citizens.

You cannot arbitrate robbery. But Secretary Hull is trying to argue the Communist-dominated President of Mexico into arbitrating the enormous sums due American citizens for stolen property—it cannot be done. Arbitrators cannot decide a question which cannot be arbitrated. No one arbitrates with a thief. The only award that could be made would be the immediate return of the property confiscated by Mexico, or, full payment now, in cash, not a promise to pay at any time in the future. It is well known that the Mexican Government has neither the ability nor the intent to pay for the confiscated property.

While Mexico calls these confiscations "expropriations," Secretary Hull has a more exact name for them. He has told Cardenas that his seizure of the properties of our citizens—here I quote the Secretary—"without compensation is not expropriation. It is confiscation."

The Secretary also has said this to Mexico. That under international and Mexican laws, and here again I quote the Secretary, "under every rule of law and equity, no government is entitled to expropriate private property, for whatever purpose, without provision for prompt, adequate, and effective payment therefor."

This just standard for judgment, of course, makes the expropriations of American properties by Mexico out-and-out, 100-percent confiscations—a public steal. You cannot get away from that. The facts shout the truth.

More: Cardenas, dominated by a Communist labor agitator, has caused Washington to understand that Mexico will not make "prompt, adequate, and effective payement" requested by the State Department. His contention is that Mexico does not have to pay American citizens until 10 years after the theft of the property.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHORT. Not now. I shall later.

He says that he does not have to adjust his dictums, his edicts, his confiscatory acts in taking the property of Americans to the requirements of either international laws or of the laws of Mexico itself. For Mexican, as well as international, laws have been ignored or broken by his notorious steals.

What, then, is there to arbitrate? Robbery cannot be arbitrated. No sane person believes that it can be, even though Cardenas should agree to arbitrate. But Cardenas now intimates he will not arbitrate his thefts of American property. Secretary Hull is waiting for his answer. He now has it. Yesterday the American press made public the note delivered to United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels in Mexico by Gen. Eduardo Hay, Mexican Foreign Minister, in which he states:

> My Government considers that arbitration must not be admitted except when the Nation has put into practice in full its rights of sovereignty through the action of its courts and the existence of a denial of justice can be proved.

Robberies such as those perpetrated by Mexico—robberies in the category of larcenies—committed anywhere or by any power, state, or individual cannot be compromised. If they could be, half of the thief takers, the police, and the criminal courts and the public prosecuting attorneys the world over might shut up shop, go out of business. Their occupation would be gone. Little would remain for them to do. Arbitrators would take over their functions. No; robbery cannot be arbitrated, compromised, or condoned.

What is there to arbitrate, to compromise, about these Mexican confiscations anyway? A horse-high, hog-tight, bull-strong case of robbery is standing against Mexico. Will our Government take the kind of action now that it has been taking for 150 years in similar matters? All of the protestations to the contrary of Cardenas, his officials, and his friends—who call themselves fellow travelers, comrades of similar ideology, and friends of Mexico—fail to weaken a single element in the damning structure of the case.

The record is too clear, too flagrant, too notorious. Remember Mexico invited Americans to invest there. They went there, they spent their time, their energy, and their money; they developed Mexico and advanced her interests and improved the condition of the Mexican people.

Notwithstanding the fact that they went to Mexico on the invitation of Mexico and in good faith spent their time and money, developed agricultural property, built smelters, opened mines, and plantations, built railroads, and did much for the material development of the country, their property, both real and personal, has been stolen by the Government of Mexico. Americans have been driven from Mexico while thousands of Mexicans continue to be gainfully employed in the United States.

As a matter of fact, Americans who went to Mexico in good faith and aided in the development of the country under treaties existing between our country and Mexico, having a right to go there, have been subjected to continued depredations and wrongs. The present Mexican Government has failed and refused to respect American rights, rights secured by treaty in behalf of American citizens as well as the Government of the United States itself.

If we expect American trade and commerce to be extended, American citizens to be secure in their persons and property in other countries, the United States must protect them and see that they are not despoiled of their property.

Suppose we arbitrate the theft of our citizens' property by Mexico. What will they get as an award in their favor? An award for the full value of the property confiscated would not be worth a penny.

Awards against the Mexican Government on account of seizure of farm lands aggregate $200,000,000. The Mexican Government promised to make prompt payment of this award. The only payment made on the $200,000,000 award is one-half of $1,000,000.

Many claimants, each having small amounts, submitted their claims to arbitration. Awards were made in their behalf as far back as 1910 and 1920 for $3,000,000. The awards are not paid.

General claims of American citizens, not involving oil, were long since reduced to the form of a debt from the Mexican Government, in the sum of $80,000,000 which still stands unpaid.

The principal of Mexico's external debt, unpaid, is $243,000,000. The interest on this debt, now due, amounts to $267,000,000, making a total of $510,000,000 with no part of it paid.

The Mexican Government confiscated the railways in Mexico. The confiscation was reduced to the form of a debt from the Mexican Government. The principal amount of the debt is $240,000,000, no part of it paid. The interest now due on the debt is $226,000,000, no part of it paid. Another total of principal and interest in the sum of $466,000,000.

There is a debt of $679,000, and another of $47,000,000, owing to the citizens of another country on account of claims reduced to the form of a debt from the Mexican Government. No part of interest or principal of these debts, amounting to $47,679,000, has been paid.

These total a debt of $1,378,679,000 now due on awards and claims and unpaid by the Mexican Government.

Do these unpaid claims and the unfulfilled promises to pay reveal either Mexico's ability or willingness to discharge its honest obligations?

Now, then, the question. I anticipate what the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. WHITE] will say, "What are we going to do about it," and I crave his careful attention.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I think the gentleman has misinterpreted my line of questioning.

Mr. SHORT. If so, I am sorry. If the gentleman will kindly withhold and let me finish this, then I shall gladly yield. About 2 years ago the President of the United States dedicated a bridge in Chicago and spoke about economic sanctions and quarantining aggressor nations. That, of course, was obviously aimed at Japan, and perhaps was all right. In his message to this Congress he told us that this Government of ours could employ methods stronger than words, but just short of war in order to defend the ideals of a democracy. That, no doubt, was aimed at certain European powers. It is all right, of course, to have our bleeding sympathy for peoples in distant quarters of the earth, but I suggest that the Chief Executive of our Nation and the present administration pay a little attention to the rights and interests of American citizens who are nearby and close to home. [Applause.] You ask what are we going to do about it.

The makers of our Constitution so related piracy and the violation of the law of nations, as Mexico is violating it, that they separated the two offenses only by a comma. The Constitution gives Congress the same power, without restrictions, to deal with Mexico that it had to deal with piracy in the early days of our Republic. Congress is given the power to use its discretion in providing means to redress the wrongs done to our citizens, whether they be committed upon the high seas by pirates or by the Government of Mexico within its borders, using a war power to take from American citizens in time of peace properties they lawfully acquired in Mexico.

Congress can direct suitable reprisals against Mexico. Congress can declare a partial or complete embargo against Mexico. Congress can refuse to purchase silver or any other commodity from Mexico. Congress can refuse immigration from Mexico. Congress can put a proviso in the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill that no part of the money appropriated may be used for the maintenance of an Embassy in the city of Mexico. Congress has enacted laws in the past for the redress of such wrongs against citizens of the United States as those of which Mexico is guilty. We can employ economic force. The hour has now struck when the United States Government must cease coddling the Communists. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein a letter from a former member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under special order heretofore entered the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] is entitled to be recognized for 15 minutes.

THE W. P. A.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I have been opposed to unwarranted and hurriedly considered proposals to make cuts in the total number of W. P. A. workers to be employed, and have likewise been opposed to certain oppressive and stringent restrictions which were leveled against unfortunate citizens who, because of no fault of their own, were obliged to seek employment with the W. P. A. I have been particularly opposed to the imposition of restrictions which caused hardship to men of family who are above the age of 45. They were the first to feel the effect of the so-called 18-month employability restriction. I am convinced more than ever that my objections of a year ago have been fully justified. The reduction in the W. P. A. rolls has been more rapid than the ability of private industry to absorb them. I think that the conservatives, as represented by the Republican minority, and certain Members whom I choose to term as "Geographic Democrats," were entirely in error when they combined to reduce W. P. A. expenditures by devious and unjustified restrictions.

The reemployment trend did not in the meantime keep pace with the discharge of large numbers of W. P. A. workers who, since cuts were authorized, have not been able to find employment in private industry. It might be said that the upward trend of employment broke sharply even before it attained a certain calculated peak upon which these cuts were predicated. In fact, following this break in the employment index, there has been a sharp recession, and the result, insofar as the separated employees are concerned, was in many instances almost tragic.

I am just as anxious as any other Member of this House to see the day when the W. P. A. will no longer be necessary and the workers themselves would welcome such a time, for it would reflect real prosperity in the country. It will be a long time before we can hope to see such conditions returned and permanently established. In the meantime, we cannot and we must not be reckless with the unfortunate citizen who finds it necessary to fall back upon the W. P. A. for employment. We must not only cease forthwith any further attempts to reduce the W. P. A. rolls, but we must calculate on the number who must be made eligible by law and promptly reemployed.

I do not say for a certainty that it is essential that 3,000,000 men be employed under the W. P. A., but I assume that that figure is somewhere near correct. I do feel, however, that the cut authorized in the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress of approximately 700,000 workers was excessive and has caused incalculable hardship to countless thousands of our American citizens.

It is high time that the Congress give heed to the needs of these unfortunate people and immediately take the necessary steps to alleviate their sufferings. I trust that partisanship will be forgotten in the consideration of the problem and that this howl for economy might be applied to outlays less worthy than the W. P. A. expenditure. Pending an accurate survey of actual needs, I must subscribe to the statement that there are approximately 3,000,000 employables who are deserving of W. P. A. employment.

The W. P. A. expenditures for this fiscal year are running low because, in the first place, the amount of the appropriation of a billion and a half was insufficient to cover even the reduced number of employables. Now we face the possibility of a further cut for the ensuing year. The original estimate of $1,300,000,000, states one editorial, "is ludicrously inadequate, barring a pick-up in private employment." Unless the cities, counties, States, and the minor subdivisions of local governments undertake to do a substantial portion of their own public improvements and thereby give employment directly and indirectly to countless thousands of workingmen, this figure will be woefully inadequate and will be exhausted in less than 9 months even with the contemplated cut in the total number of W. P. A. employees.

It seems to me that the fault is not altogether to be attributed to the Federal Government. Part of the blame for the continuance of the depression and the attendant unemployment can be traced directly to and placed upon the shoulders of local governments. It is an undeniable fact that as the Federal Government was willing to assume the financial responsibility for local public improvements and services that the local governmental bodies and the legislatures curtailed or abandoned their expenditures for construction and for maintenance of essential public services. They passed the buck to the Federal Government, balanced their local budgets while building schools, libraries, fire houses, pumping stations, lighting plants, paved their streets, alleys, and park trails with Federal money, after which on more than one occasion leveled a barrage of criticism against the Congress of the United States for reckless spending. References were made by members of State legislatures and by municipal legislators that were quite uncomplimentary and unjustified.

It appears to me that the solution of the unemployment problem is one which must be attacked from all angles and in truly American fashion. The Federal Government must be expected to do its share and more, but the local governments must not shirk their responsibilities. Private industry can and must extend itself to the utmost and I think that essentially there must be a change in the psychology of our people, and I refer solely to those who are regularly and gainfully employed. After all, with these rest the solution of the unemployment problem. To illustrate exactly what I mean, it is not a question of overproduction that ails the United States. It is a question of underconsumption. We have raised the American living standard to a plane not approached by any other people. Our appetites and our desires generally have been whetted and made keen by superior economic conditions until the average American was privileged to enjoy almost without restriction the fruits and the products of the land.

Then suddenly came the depression, panic, chaos, and unemployment which disturbed our mental equilibrium and confidence. I think it is largely a question of restoring public confidence and correcting a depression psychology. About 45,000,000 people, constituting about 82 percent of the employables, are regularly and gainfully employed. Roughly 10,000,000 people, or about 18 percent, are without employment or on the W. P. A. rolls. Whether or not this element included in the 18 percent is ever to enjoy regular employment in private industry, and thus be restored to normalcy and usefulness, depends entirely upon the psychological change and mental outlook on the part of the 82 percent who are regularly and gainfully employed. It is my contention that these more fortunate Americans can and will buy more and better and bigger things—things that they have been used to and which they have previously enjoyed, and such things as they might have desired but never had, if the "calamity howlers" and political fakers are driven to cover and silenced.

This great element which constitutes the overwhelming majority of our people possessed of all of the buying power will do its share toward the restoration of prosperity by relaxing their grip upon the American dollar which has been slowed in circulation by depression mongers. They will buy sufficient of the worldly goods to stimulate production of manufactured and farm products, which will bring about the reemployment of the 18 percent in need and who are classed as unemployed.

Thus I sum up the problem as involving, first and most important, the silencing of the panic monger. Second, the return to normal functioning and normal spending for essential public services by the States and municipalities and other local government units, and such cooperation and financial assistance as might be necessary to reinforce these activities on the part of the Federal Government. Only by the combination and the coordination of these actions and methods can the depression and unemployment be banished.

While I am a Democrat, steadfast in my loyalty to my party, I can and will cooperate with anybody who will aid me in bringing about a realization of this important objective, which so vitally affects the welfare of our Nation. I am a partisan, of course, but I am an American first, and owe the very first consideration to my country, even ahead of my party. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under special order heretofore entered, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. ANDERSON] is entitled to recognition for 20 minutes.

THE HATCH BILL

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I do not seek during the course of the remarks I am about to make to disparage in any way the personal opinion of any Member of this honorable body or to impugn his character. The personal equation does not enter into the matter which I propose to discuss. This House, which under our form of government and under our Constitution is the one direct representative agency of the people, stands accused by those people today of failure to carry out the public will. We have it within our power to disprove this charge and to restore this honorable body to the full confidence of those whom we represent throughout our Nation.

It is with sincere hope that the membership of this House will recognize the seriousness of the situation that I address these remarks to you.

I direct your attention to the public reaction which has resulted from the unprecedented procedure by the House Committee on the Judiciary, when on May 1, by a vote of 14 to 10, it tabled S. 3046, the amendments to the Hatch law.

The purpose of this action is apparent. It was intended only to prevent, if possible, full consideration by this body of legislation which already has passed the Senate and has for its sole purpose the reestablishment of decency, common honesty, and true democratic principles in political campaigns and political parties.

From all sides and through virtually every medium of public information—the press, over the radio, and by mail and wire—a storm of protest and condemnation has broken over the head of this House of Representatives, which presages such a revulsion in public opinion as we have not encountered before in many years, despite the fact that the Congress has come in for no small amount of criticism, whether just or unjust, since time immemorial. The full membership of this House is being held responsible for an action by a group of committee members, for which, so far as I know, not one word of approval has been sounded from any quarter since that action was taken. Can we sit supinely by and permit to pass unchallenged an action which has been characterized as unequaled in the annals of this country for its callous and brazen betrayal of public trust, for its utter disregard and frustration of the public will, and for its violation of the public confidence?

If we do not take fitting and proper action to restore this body to full faith and confidence of the public, and render ourselves deserving of that faith and confidence, I am forced reluctantly to state my candid belief that no other House of Representatives in American history will find emblazoned upon the pages it has written so bold an inscription of "Discredited" as will this one.

Are we to permit the secret action of a committee which has cloaked itself in anonymity insofar as the action of its individual members is concerned, to nullify a two-thirds vote of the Senate of the United States and to repudiate the declared approval of the Chief Executive of the Nation of legislation which is intended solely to put an end to those pernicious political practices which have been condemned by the vast majority of the right-thinking people of this Nation?

It is more than passing strange, it seems to me, that what is deemed to be reliable current information points to the fact that the great majority of the members of this committee, despite the vote reported, have let it be known, both here in Washington and through the press back home, that they were not to be included among the 14 whose secret ballots resulted in tabling this legislation in the committee. It would appear that there is a wide discrepancy between this information and the report of the tellers of that vote, and without seeking to question the integrity of anyone it may be that there has been an error in the counting of the vote. On that matter I am not, of course, in the position to advise the membership of this House accurately. Be that as it may, can this honorable body acquiesce in and approve such an action? Is it possible that those who resorted to such an extreme and unprecedented method in an effort to cloak their identity in anonymity foresaw the turbulent tide of condemnation that would rise to engulf not only the committee but the entire membership of this body?

Mr. Speaker, I am not asking these questions or making these statements solely upon a basis of my own opinion, nor am I prompted by any personal feeling. I am forced, as every other Member of this House should be, to take cognizance of the facts, and the facts in this case are not pleasant to contemplate.

I crave your indulgence while I quote briefly from editorials which have appeared in the press since the details of this secret vote have become public information. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, editorial quotes as follows:

RETRIEVE THE HATCH BILL

Unadulterated, self-seeking politics cast the vote that pigeonholed the supplementary Hatch measure in the House Judiciary Committee, Wednesday. Election-year jitters had solons by the napes of their necks. Rather than risk crippling State machines they chose to sink a harpoon into this excellent Government reform.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I object to that language.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COOPER). Does the gentleman make a point of order?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes; I do. I do not think that is good language.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. HOFFMAN. May I have it read by unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Missouri yield for that purpose?

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. I do not.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Then I ask that the words be taken down, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. That is all right.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri will take his seat and the words complained of will be taken down.

The Clerk reported the words as follows:

RETRIEVE THE HATCH BILL

Unadulterated, self-seeking politics cast the vote that pigeonholed the supplementary Hatch measure in the House Judiciary Committee, Wednesday. Election-year jitters had solons by the napes of their necks. Rather than risk crippling State machines they chose to sink a harpoon into this excellent Government reform.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is prepared to rule.

The words reported do not go to the personal conduct of any Member of the House and are rather a criticism of procedure that may have been employed.

Therefore the point of order is overruled. The gentleman will proceed in order.

Mr. HOFFMAN. May I state something on the RECORD?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman yield for that purpose?

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. I do not.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri will proceed in order.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. I will read this again:

RETRIEVE THE HATCH BILL

Unadulterated, self-seeking politics cast the vote that pigeonholed the supplementary Hatch measure in the House Judiciary Committee Wednesday. Election-year jitters had solons by the napes of their necks. Rather than risk crippling State machines they chose to sink a harpoon into this excellent Government reform.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that those words are not in order. I think they reflect upon members of a committee of this House. It is a direct charge against members of a committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman request that the words be taken down?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I do.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri will take his seat and the Clerk will again report the words.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. The Chair has already ruled on that. That was passed on by the Chair a moment ago. I am simply reading what was ruled on a moment ago.

The Clerk reported the words as follows:

RETRIEVE THE HATCH BILL

Unadulterated, self-seeking politics cast the vote that pigeonholed the supplementary Hatch measure in the House Judiciary Committee Wednesday. Election-year jitters had solons by the napes of their necks. Rather than risk crippling State machines they chose to sink a harpoon into this excellent Government reform.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It appears to the Chair that the language complained of now is uttered in repetition and are the same words that were heretofore taken down. Therefore the Chair having ruled, the gentleman from Missouri will proceed in order.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri (reading):

RETRIEVE THE HATCH BILL

Unadulterated, self-seeking politics cast the vote that pigeonholed the supplementary Hatch measure in the House Judiciary Committee Wednesday. Election-year jitters had solons by the napes of their necks. Rather than risk crippling State machines they chose to sink a harpoon into this excellent governmental reform. The only dubiously redeeming feature of the committee's attitude was its refusal to reveal, as is customary, the way each member voted. Obviously they weren't proud of their accomplishment.

The new antipolitics bill would, in effect, amend the 1939 Hatch law to prohibit political activity on the part of State employees, paid in part or entirely by Federal funds. The original Hatch Act applies to all but a few policy-making Federal workers, not already covered by civil-service restrictions. The current measure, passed by the Senate, was voted down by the House committee, 14 to 10.

Intense opposition arose in Congress. One objection was the bill would constitute an invasion of State rights. This argument is altogether specious. Unquestionably the Federal Government has the right to lay down reasonable restrictions under which its moneys can be used. The actual reason is that Congressmen do not want to sap any power from State political machines, when an election is highballing along the way.

Representative DEMPSEY, of New Mexico, who fostered the measure in the House, has not given up the fight. He promises to go the route in attempting to lever the bill from the committee's smothering clutch. Two ways are open: He can by resolution put up to the Rules Committee a decision on whether the House as a whole should vote on considering the bill regardless of the Judiciary Committee action; or he can circulate a petition, which if signed by a majority of House Members, would have the same effect. The first alternative ought to take less time and doubtless will be tried. If this fails the petition will be used.

The new Hatch bill should be revived promptly. It should be passed. The public is surfeited with attempts of its officials and lawmakers to buy career aggrandizement with tax bounties. It was bad enough in the old days. Now, with enormous Federal disbursements through State channels, the distended political power concentrated in Washington grows increasingly dangerous.

The Washington Star, in its issue of May 2, said editorially, under the caption "By Secret Ballot":

Fourteen men, taking shelter behind the uncourageous device of a secret ballot, have succeeded—for the time being at least—in blocking congressional action on the Hatch clean-politics bill. The spectacle is not a pretty one.

Here is a measure which has as its sole objective the removal of one source of corruption in American politics. It passed the Senate by a two-to-one vote. There is good reason to believe that it could command a majority vote in the House, and the country as a whole is strongly behind it. Without a doubt, all of these facts were thoroughly understood by the 14 anonymous members of the House Judiciary Committee who voted yesterday to table the measure, for had it been otherwise they would hardly have insisted upon cloaking their identities by resorting to the undemocratic practice of the secret ballot.

The Washington Post of May 3, under the editorial caption "Aiding Machine Politics," had this, in part, to say:

The attempt of the House Judiciary Committee to bottle up the Hatch bill has aroused resentment in and out of Congress. Coming on the eve of the 1940 political campaigns, that action must be considered a surrender to machine politics.

If the committee found any compelling objection to the bill, it should have reported its conclusions to the House. The proper procedure in that event is to bring in an adverse report on the legislation. But the committee has made no case against the measure. It has simply voted by secret ballot to withhold the bill from consideration by the entire House. To say the least, that is high-handed legislative procedure.

In effect, the House Judiciary Committee has secretly voted for continued use of Federal money to support the machines of State politicians. Surely the House as a body will wish to reverse that action before its Members ask for a vote of confidence in November.

And, on the same date the Washington Daily News, under the editorial caption "Who's Not Afraid to Vote?" stated, in part:

The Judiciary Committee has made a farce of the legislative process—and it has done so in a skulking way, by secret ballot in secret session. Some members of the committee are still showing bad faith. The announced vote by which the Hatch bill was tabled was 14 to 10. Yet in response to questions of newspaper reporters, 13 members have said they voted against the tabling motion—and only 4 have admitted voting for it. You can draw any one of several conclusions—that only 10 out of 13 Congressmen have told the truth to the press; or that the tellers miscounted those slips of paper dropped into Judge SUMNERS' hat; or that some of the members didn't know how they voted. None of these conclusions reflects credit on the Judiciary Committee.

And, Mr. Speaker, I have failed yet to find in the press, over the radio, or through other channels of communication, one word in rebuttal of this arraignment of the House of Representatives. We must, as a matter of self-defense and the preservation of our good name, see that this just and well-based criticism is answered by an action which will remove the cause for that criticism.

Are we performing our obligation to those who have chosen us to represent them here; are we, in fact, living up to the oath which we took in accepting this office of public trust, unless we do bring to the floor of this House for free and open public discussion and consideration this vital and important legislation?

Mr. Speaker, I believe all of us will freely express our admiration for the courage and the sincerity of the Members of the United States Senate, who through 2 long weeks of debate openly and frankly declared themselves either in favor of or against this legislation, and finally by a two-thirds vote approved it.

It is my contention that the Members of the Senate acted in full good faith and with consideration for the will of the public when they went on record, without an attempt on their part to dodge the consequences of their stand, or to engulf themselves in a smoke screen of secrecy. During the course of this extended debate in the Senate the President of the United States let it be known that he believed these amendments to be proper legislation, particularly in view of the fact that the original Hatch law, which he had advocated and approved as desirable, was already on the Federal statute books. The Chief Executive went even further and in his message to the Congress approving the original law, pointed out to the Congress the need for this further legislation as contained in the amendments tabled by the Judiciary Committee. Most certainly, then, by no stretch of the imagination can we construe the action of this committee as being even remotely prompted by consideration of the will of the overwhelming majority of the people, or the announced position of the head of this administration, the President of the United States.

To what, then, can we ascribe their action? Have they, as has been charged in the press of the country, been guided solely by pressure brought upon them from those forces within our political structure which have engaged in the past and wish in the future to engage in those pernicious practices which this legislation seeks to stamp out, practices which have been condemned by the vast majority of our citizens; practices which most certainly cannot be included in a code of honor; and principles befitting to or worthy of either of the great major political parties of this country or their leaders.

The public, Mr. Speaker, is fully aware of the identity of those forces which are opposed to this legislation and are seeking at every step to hamper its program.

The public knows that those same forces have in the past selfishly disregarded the rights of thousands who earn their livelihood as employees of the Federal Government, the various States of the Union and their political subdivisions.

The public is fully aware of the fact that the foes of this legislation are those who have created and fostered an extreme and reprehensible application of political patronage methods until it justly can be termed the loot-and-spoils system. The public is not deluded into the belief that the foes of this legislation are sincere in a contention that it would deprive anyone of his or her rights as a citizen, because the public knows that those who offer this contention are the very ones who have demanded and received financial tribute from protesting and helpless thousands and have cracked the lash of bossism over the heads of those whom this legislation seeks to free from political peonage. Can it be that the membership of this House is not as fully cognizant of those facts as is the public at large? Can we profess ignorance of the pressure that is being exerted to kill this legislation, and can we acquiesce in any action, whether in committee or out, which deprives the membership of this House of full consideration of this bill? We condemn the ruthlessness of dictators in other parts of the world. Are we to allow ourselves to be balked when we attempt to eliminate that sordid type of procedure from our own political picture; when we seek to reassure the people of this Nation of the innate integrity of their political parties and of the sincerity and honesty of their leaders? I do not believe we are; and I cannot conceive, in view of the vote accorded the original Hatch law by this honorable body a year ago, that the membership of this House will permit this legislation to be sunk into oblivion through the dark channels of secrecy.

The price of secrecy always is suspicion. Already the finger of suspicion is directed our way. We cannot and must not sustain any secret action and thereby become parties to it unless we are willing to remain under justified suspicion.

It is my sincere hope that the Members of this House will rise above anything that smacks of political bossism or expediency and bring this legislation to the floor, not only because of the importance of the legislation but because we will then prove the criticisms thus far voiced unfounded and that we are seeking sincerely to serve, rather than to rule, a Nation. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include in my remarks certain editorials.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial from the Clarksville Leaf-Chronicle.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made this afternoon on the bill H. R. 2874 and to include therein a letter from the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow after the disposition of the legislative business for the day and such other special orders as may have been entered that I may address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks which I made today on House Joint Resolution 519 and to include therein a few brief excerpts from the committee report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mrs. NORTON, for 1 week, on account of official business.

To Mr. DUNN, for several days, on account of death in the family.

JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H. J. Res. 431. Joint resolution to extend the 1940 New York World's Fair and the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition the provisions according privileges under certain customs and other laws to the expositions of 1939.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the previous order of the House, the gentleman from Montana [Mr. THORKELSON] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein letters that have a bearing on the subject on which I am speaking, and other quotations.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 2, 1940, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] inserted a lengthy letter from the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights. In this letter the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League calumniated me.

Among other things, I was asked in this letter to state whether, in using the word "internationalist," I did not mean Jew. My answer is "No," for a Jew who is a nationalist is an American, and an internationalist, whether he be Jew or gentile, is not an American. I realize that there are many Jews in the United States who are not internationalists and are not looked upon as being anything but ordinary, plain American citizens, and it is not with them that I take issue. My contention is with the internationalist, the Jew who is using all the people in the United States to build an international empire for himself at our expense.

In the Anti-Nazi Bulletin, March 1940, myself and others are depicted as "Apes of wrath," and we are included in what this magazine labels, "The American Union of Fascists—an exposé of Italian Fascist activities in the United States, based on findings by the N. S. A. N. L., department of investigation." I am not familiar with any Fascist organization in this country, and I inserted in the RECORD of July 19, 1939, the Department of Justice report of the investigation of the German Bund in order to place such information before the public.

In regard to other organizations I may say that I know nothing about them. I spoke before a group called the Christian Mobilizers, and shall ask permission to insert that speech in the Appendix of the RECORD.

I now ask permission, Mr. Speaker, to insert that speech in the Appendix of the RECORD so there will be no opportunity for misquotation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I believe it is a duty of all public officials to speak to public audiences, because much good can come from it when the speaker confines himself to discussion of the fundamental principles of the Government.

The exposé in the Anti-Nazi Bulletin issued by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, bases its accusations upon the findings of its own investigating department or detective service, which I maintain should not be operated by any private organization. Let us assume that all organizations in the United States operated an intelligence service to spy upon each other. What a frightful mess it would be. It is to avoid such conflict that we maintain the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and if that is sufficient for the majority of the American people, it certainly should be acceptable to a group like the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League.

The Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League was organized in 1933 by Samuel Untermyer for the sole purpose to combat Hitlerism by means of a boycott of German goods and services. This league is largely composed of Jews and is financed by themselves. The nonsectarian aspect is furnished by a few professional sponsors, whose names are familiar as fronts for other organizations. Many of them are listed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD by committees investigating communism, and others are listed in the Red Network as radicals and Communists. I grant that this list may contain names of persons entirely innocent and unfamiliar with the purposes they serve. Yet the time is at hand when each and all of them should awaken to the dangers which lie in sponsorship.

I do not know of another group that employs its own intelligence service, or that conducts special courts for its own people. Americans are satisfied with our system of courts, so why should not the proponents of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League be, also?

I often wonder why Jewish organizations rely upon sponsorship of gentiles instead of upon themselves. Surely sponsorship should not be required by anyone unless he is unknown, or unless he is engaged in practices which need to be camouflaged. Why do the Jewish groups use the Catholics and Protestants as a shield to protect themselves? I have never yet heard a Jewish group proclaim its own faith.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THORKELSON. I yield.

Mr. BLOOM. Did I understand the gentleman to say he never heard of a Jew approving of his own faith?

Mr. THORKELSON. I said I never yet heard a Jewish group proclaim its own faith. I was saying that they always used some other faith, Catholic or Protestant, to protect themselves. That is precisely what they are doing. It can be seen that I am just replying to the letter that was put in the RECORD Friday. I would like to proceed with my remarks. I shall be glad to yield when I have finished my prepared statement.

Mr. BLOOM. But the gentleman is making a statement with which I disagree absolutely. I think the gentleman is entirely mistaken. I do not believe the gentleman should make such statements.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, regular order.

Mr. BLOOM. The regular order is that I shall make a point of order that there is not a quorum present.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I believe the situation would be clarified if the Jews would stand on their own feet and protect their own beliefs, whatever they may be, and let other faiths alone. Surely everyone knows that Christian faiths are not threatened in the United States, and for that reason need no protection from the Jews or anyone else.

Can it be possible that the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, which is made up of Jews, will investigate any of its own people? Of course not. The investigation of the league will be directed against all who do not acquiesce to the demands of the internationalistic Jew, or kneel to them in abject submission and fear. The people who object to internationalistic domination are those patriotic Americans who believe in the fundamental principles of this Government, and who will go ahead in spite of international intrigue and general public skepticism and incredulity. It is this group of active objectors that the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League designates Fascist, Nazi, and anti-Semitic.

The internationalist tries to confuse by directing his attack, not against his real object of hate, but instead against those who are neutral or who refuse to join him in hating. The next step is to bring about greater division in our own ranks, and this is done by designating all who do not join the hate parade as pro-Nazi, pro-Hitler, or pro-Fascist, and he finally places all of these "pros" in one group, under the label of anti-Semitic. He does not call them anti-Jew, because that would attract attention to individuals; he calls them instead anti-Semitic, hoping in such designation to confuse us and protect himself. The strange part is that the Jews in Asia Minor are anti-Semitic, for they have been and are now engaged in war with the Arabs, who are the true Semites.

The internationalist builds his power on intrigue and confusion. It is our duty to lift this veil so that we may see him in his true character, a destroyer of peace and proponent for war. It was said in The Conquering Jew:

> The movement of precious metals throughout the world is under the influence of Jews. It is rightly said that no big war can be waged except by the financial assistance of the Jews. No national or international loan can be floated if the Jews care to act together and stop it. To a considerable extent the rate of exchange between countries is regulated by them.

This statement is 25 years old. It was written at a time when the conquering Jews had begun to take charge of our government, and to make this clear, let me quote further:

> Go into the foreign market at Berlin and Frankfort, and you will find that considerably over half the members are Jews. I have mentioned the great international firm of Rothschild. But there are also to be counted the Jewish financial firms of Montagu, Sassoon, Raphael, and Stern, in London; Camondo, Fould, Perier, and Bischoffsheim, in Paris; Gunsberg, in Russia; Bleichroder, Warschauer, and Mendelssohn, in Berlin; Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Lazard Frères, and Seligman, in the United States—to mention a few of the principal firms. The example set by the Rothschilds is followed. Jewish financial concerns do not always lose their identity in joint-stock companies, though they originated joint-stock companies. The Jewish hands retain personal control.
>
> Amongst European banks and firms run by Jewish capital and controlled by Jews are the Dresdner Bank, and the Handels-Gesellschaft, the Credit Mobilier of Paris, Bischoffsheim, and Goldschmidt. The greatest bullion brokers in London are Jews. In the United States, President Wilson nominated a Jew, Mr. Paul Warburg (of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.), to be one of a committee of five to see that the system of banking throughout the United States was carried out according to the decision of Congress. Many Jews are among the bankers of San Francisco. The Nevada National, the Anglo-Californian, are under Jewish control. The Lord Chief Justice of England (Mr. Rufus Isaacs, a stockbroker before he took to the law and became Lord Reading) is a Jew. The president of the British Local Government Board, Mr. Herbert Samuel, and the secretary to the treasury, Mr. Montagu, are Jews and cousins. Mr. David Leventritt, justice of the Supreme Court of New York, was a Jewish shoemaker before he learned law. Many King's Counsel in England are Jews. The greatest international lawyers of modern times—Jellinck in Germany, Lyon-Caen in France, and Asser in Holland—are all Jews.

Do not fail to note:

> It is rightly said that no big war can be waged except by the financial assistance of the Jews. No national or international loan can be floated if the Jews care to act together and stop it.

As you cogitate upon this, remember that they make the loans, but we pay for them. Remember loans made during the World War, by these bankers, are now charged to the people of the United States, and we, like fools, pay and pay to keep the Jewish international financiers in power.

It might appear that I am bitter toward this group of international exploiters, but I am not. I only feel sorry for our own people who have permitted Congress to enact laws which have given complete control of gold and money to these international pirates. I regret that Members of Congress have been so careless as to vote for legislation that has placed this burden, not only upon Members of Congress themselves, but upon all the people who sent them to Congress to protect their rights and provide for the security of our Nation. Congress should, in justice to the American people, repeal all powers given to the President, not only because they are unconstitutional but because they are dangerous powers in the hands of any President, no matter whether he be Republican or Democrat. Congress should then set the gold aside as security for the American people, for it is their property and not the property of any private financial group, no matter whether they are Jews or gentiles. The Nation's gold and money belongs to the United States and to the people of this Nation. It was so ordained and set forth in the Constitution. Let us, therefore, restore these rights, which were taken from the people by obtuse Congressmen enacting unconstitutional legislation that even a child should know would end in the destruction of this Republic.

If you recall the early part of 1939, you will remember that there was much agitation for war or alliance with England. Realizing the source of this agitation, I inserted an article in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on May 1, 1939, entitled, "The Invisible Government." In this article, among other things, I quoted some facts and figures about the Jews in Germany. After that information was published, I was called a Fascist, Nazi, and anti-Semite, by the internationalistic and communistic press—which I had expected, for so are all called who tell the truth. However, if we look into the past, we find that the Jews not only controlled the finances of Germany but controlled the civilian and the military governments as well. It is also well to remember that most Jews were pro-German until Hitler became the leading man. They were, as intelligence files will show, pro-German even after we became involved in the World War. Few of the big Jewish bankers were even interned during the World War, because of their aid to Germany. Today, the same group hates the leading man, Mr. Hitler, and is willing and even anxious to destroy the German people and everything German in order to get its man. In their mad race to run Hitler down, they expect all of us to join, and when we show lack of interest or fail to join in their "Leagues of Hate," they get mad as hornets and call us names.

Every one of us should realize that when we join to fight those whom the internationalist designates—the pro-Nazi, pro-Fascist, pro-Hitler, or anti-Semitic—we divide ourselves into two factions, and on the ruins of our mutual downfall the internationalist will dominate the United States. No one should be confused about that, for it is happening, and will go on until the American people stick together to protect their own majority rights as expressed in the Constitution of the United States.

The question may be asked, What right has any organization to maintain and operate an intelligence department to investigate the American people? What right has a purely Jewish organization to maintain an antidefamation league, a bureau of investigation, and a secret-service force to spy upon the American people and report their findings to the F. B. I. or Justice Department? This is an affront and an insult to the American people. It is humiliating, for in our acquiescence we admit cause, and can it be possible that the American people are criminals? We have a Justice Department and a Federal Bureau of Investigation, and we pay both of these departments to protect us against crimes and criminals. Is not it a bit strange that both departments take orders from these Jews and protect the Communists instead of the American people who pay the expenses of the departments? Is not it a bit strange that our courts protect the Communists and prosecute patriotic American citizens? Is not it strange that excessive bail is set on a patriotic American when he is turned over to the Department of Justice by the Jewish intelligence, and that the guilty Jewish Communist is left entirely free as he waves the Bill of Rights and shouts, "Help, I am persecuted"? Is not it strange that we have an administration that appoints judges to our courts who are so indifferent to their obligation that they believe the Bill of Rights and the Constitution are to protect the Communists and those who are engaged in sabotage and destruction of our Government instead of, as it is intended to be, a protection for our own people? Is not it time that the American people set this right and get rid of this horde of aliens who are now employed in our justice departments, intelligence bureaus, and who sit as judges in many of our courts?

I shall now read a letter which the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League did not quote in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 2, 1940:

MARCH 19, 1940.

DEAR MR. ———: The arrest of 17 members of the Christian Front, and the discovery of weapons which were allegedly prepared in a plot to overthrow the United States Government, should serve to focus our attention to the real danger of which these Nazi-inspired subversive groups are to the peace and security of the United States.

Lurking behind the scene of imported fascism are sinister individuals and subversive groups which must be investigated and exposed. Nazi methods which formerly applied in Germany, Austria, and Czechoslovakia are now rampant in this country. They succeeded in destroying human rights in Europe. These same rights are now being threatened in the United States.

We are sure you agree with us that it is of vital importance to do everything in our power to counteract these organizations which are plotting to undermine our democratic government and all of its liberal principles.

The Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League is the American organization concentrating upon the fight against this pro-Hitler movement. Our department of investigation maintains a staff of experienced investigators which uncovers and discloses the activities of the subversive groups in our country. We have been able to aid officials of our Government in prosecuting leading members of these groups.

In order to carry on our Nation-wide activities, we must raise a fund of at least $250,000 this year. For this reason we appeal to you, as one of our supporters, to stand by us again as you did in the past, by contributing generously, and if possible, increasing your former contribution. Your support is needed now more urgently than at any time in the past.

For your convenience we are enclosing a statement and a return envelope. Please mail your contribution today.

Accept our gratitude for your cooperation and support.

Sincerely yours,

JAMES H. SHELDON,
Prof. James H. Sheldon.
Chairman, Board of Directors.

NAZI IDEOLOGY THREATENS ALL CIVILIZATION

After reading this letter, it should be evident that the Jewish intelligence service was out to "get" the Christian front, and is using these 17 men and the Christian Mobilizers in their letter, which the gentleman from Illinois inserted in the RECORD, as a weapon to disparage those who believe in sound government. This procedure is typically communistic, for when he can find no evidence against the individual, when he cannot buy or bribe, he will in desperation throw mud, thereby displaying his true characteristics. In this game of defamation and mud-slinging, I crown him king of kings. It would be interesting to know how many times $250,000 they have raised, to destroy patriotism. I have been informed that there is a fund of over $50,000,000 employed for this purpose, upon which no interest or income tax is paid, and no account given to the Federal Government. This is something that Congress may also investigate, for it is certain that the activities carried on by the internationalists costs money, and it is our business to find out the source of this finance.

It would also be well for Congress to investigate how much property has been acquired and is now owned by banks and other financial houses in the United States and in their interlocking groups abroad. There is a lot of important work that Congress might do for the safety and security of the United States.

The gentleman from Illinois next inserted over two columns of names, of persons who are supposed to represent the sponsors of a paper called The Voice for Human Rights. This appears impressive. The writer, however, forgot to state that many of these sponsors have withdrawn their names because they found The Voice was edited by Jews who did not express the viewpoints of the sponsors, and for that reason these sponsors compelled the editor to make this retraction in the issue of April 1940:

RETRACTION AND APOLOGIES TO CONGRESSMAN THORKELSON

In the January issue of this paper appeared a special to The Voice, regarding Congressman THORKELSON, of Montana. We have since learned that it contained a number of baseless charges which we hereby retract, and tender our apologies.

Instead of the Congressman's status as an authentic doctor of medicine being doubtful or questionable, it is wholly beyond doubt or question. His standing as a competent and experienced physician and surgeon in Montana is of the best.

There is no basis whatever for the claim or suggestion that the Congressman ever ran a nudist colony or was ever in any way connected with any such affair.

Moreover, the charge that he was born a Catholic and had marital and extra-marital adventures which brought church disapproval was entirely unfounded. In fact, he has never been a Catholic nor ever claimed to be. Instead of turning publicly or violently or otherwise against Catholicism, the Congressman's fair and friendly attitude toward Catholics has been generally recognized in Montana.

Accordingly, we hereby retract everything that we have published against Congressman THORKELSON with respect to these matters.

We also withdraw all suggestion that Congressman THORKELSON has a "mind poisoned against America." Our disagreement with Congressman THORKELSON'S diagnosis of internationalists, or an invisible government, to which he attributed the economic ills of America, is no reason for reflecting upon his character, honesty, and patriotism.

In order to correct the statement of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League in its attempt to show justification for the letter inserted in the RECORD, let me quote other letters received by my attorney, Mr. George E. Sullivan, Fifteenth and H Streets, Washington, D. C.:

PAULIST FATHERS,
New York City, January 10, 1940.

Mr. GEORGE E. SULLIVAN,
Fifteenth and H Streets, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I write to acknowledge receipt of a copy of your letter to the editor of The Voice for Human Rights, dated January 6, 1940, and to advise you that I am not now a member of the Committee of Catholics to Fight Anti-Semitism, having withdrawn on August 4, 1939. It is possible you found my name on an earlier list.

I am,
Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCSORLEY, C. S. P.

AMALGAMATED MEAT CUTTERS AND BUTCHER WORKMEN OF NORTH AMERICA,
Chicago, Ill., January 10, 1940.

Mr. GEORGE E. SULLIVAN,
Suite 226, Woodward Building, Fifteenth and H Streets NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. SULLIVAN: I am in receipt of a copy of the letter you addressed to the editor of The Voice for Human Rights and wish to advise you that on December 19 I sent to Dr. Emmanuel Chapman an excerpt from a letter I received from Mr. Wm. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, expressing his opinion in the matter of the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights. Mr. Green's letter was as follows:

"I cannot understand how any Catholic committee could invite and accept John Brophy, or men like John Brophy, as members of a Catholic committee. Everybody knows that John Brophy went to Russia as a sympathizer of the Soviet Government. Everybody knows that a responsible person testified before the Dies committee that John Brophy was supported by the Communists when he ran for president of the United Mine Workers some years ago, and that the Communists supplied him the money with which to pay the expenses of said election. I would not accept appointment on such a committee as the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights."

I asked Dr. Chapman on the above date to eliminate my name as one of those serving on the executive board of the committee.

Sincerely,

PATRICK E. GORMAN,
President, Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America.

ST. MARY'S COLLEGE,
St. Marys, Kans., January 11, 1940.

Mr. GEORGE E. SULLIVAN,
Woodward Building, Washington.

DEAR SIR: For some time I have been intending to withdraw my name from the committee behind The Voice for Human Rights. Your letter has finally prompted that action. I think The Voice is a good instance of how a good cause may be damaged by the wrong sort of defense.

Yours very sincerely,

GERALD ELLARD, S. J.

SURROGATE'S COURT OF THE COUNTY OF NEW YORK,
New York City, January 11, 1940.

GEORGE E. SULLIVAN, Esq.,
Suite 226, Woodward Building, Fifteenth and H Streets NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 6th instant, addressed to me at Fordham University, reached me today. I know nothing about the matters therein discussed respecting Congressman THORKELSON. I am undertaking inquiries at this time of Dr. Chapman. I personally disavow any statement concerning Congressman THORKELSON which is untrue or even discourteous. When I have some information about the subject and when I have had an opportunity to read the article of which you complain, I shall communicate with you further.

If you should have occasion again to write, you might address your letter to this place.

Very truly yours,

JAMES A. VAUGHAN.

THE SODALITY OF OUR LADY,
St. Louis, Mo., January 13, 1940.

Mr. GEORGE E. SULLIVAN,
Suite 226, Woodward Building, Fifteenth and H Streets NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. SULLIVAN: A copy of your letter to the editors of The Voice has been received. I have never had any connection with their publication or its policies.

Sincerely yours in Christ,

DANIEL A. LORD, S. J.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., January 22, 1940.

Mr. GEORGE E. SULLIVAN,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of your correspondence of January 20. In response I am enclosing a letter sent today to Dr. E. Chapman which, I believe, will explain any association of my name with the association referred to.

I wish to further state that I have never met, communicated with, or had any correspondence with any executive, member, or representative of this organization outside of the general public invitation to subscription which I accepted. I feel that the publication of my name was an implication of any acquaintanceship with this organization which is not justified.

Trusting that you will understand that I was just a reader of this publication and therefore hardly responsible for its management, direction, or policies, I am,

Sincerely yours,

REV. CHARLES T. CAROW.

DUNS SCOTUS COLLEGE,
Detroit, Mich., January 22, 1940.

Mr. GEORGE E. SULLIVAN,
Suite 226, Woodward Building, Fifteenth and H Streets NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. SULLIVAN: When I sent in a dollar for The Voice for Human Rights, and later added another to help the cause along, I did not intend to become a member of any committee. After I saw my name on the list I simply let it there and did nothing about it.

I do not see how you can hold every member of the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights responsible for what is printed in The Voice. If that is true, I for one would certainly have my name removed from the list of members.

On the other hand, if Mr. THORKELSON has been maligned or slandered, I am very sorry, and would prevail upon the editor to make the necessary apologies and corrections. I shall write to Dr. Chapman on this matter.

Hoping that any wrong done to Mr. THORKELSON will be duly righted, I am,

Sincerely yours in Christ,

SEBASTIAN ERBACHER, O. F. M.

CULL AND FULLER,
Cleveland, January 24, 1940.

Mr. GEORGE E. SULLIVAN,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: This will acknowledge receipt of mimeographed copy of your letter dated January 6, 1940, addressed to editor, The Voice of Human Rights, at 261 Broadway, New York, N. Y. I have read your communication with great interest.

Permit me to say that some time ago I was appealed to by the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights to consent to join with other members of the Catholic faith in Cleveland to become members of a local committee to oppose the spread of antisemitism and all forms of racial intolerance. I consented to become a member of a local committee for such purposes, but whether one has ever been formed I do not know. If it has been formed, no word of its formation or notice of any of its activities has ever been communicated to me. I have never been notified of any such local committee, nor have I ever received a copy of any publication, or statement either by the general committee or by any local committee, and particularly have not received any copies of the publication to which you refer. The copy of your communication to the editor of The Voice for Human Rights also gives me my first information of the publication of the alleged libelous attack on Congressman

THORKELSON. You may be sure I am deeply concerned over the character of the charges made against the Congressman, since I do not approve that kind of an attack under any circumstances. Permit me also to say that the only communication I ever received from the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights contained this assurance as to its methods:

"Our approach will be positive and dignified and there will be no personal attacks against anyone."

I had no knowledge whatsoever of the history of Dr. THORKELSON in any of the connections referred to in your communication, and I am entirely without opinion as to his character or reputation except to say that I presume them to be good.

In conclusion may I not state also that when I gave assent to become a member of a local committee, which I assumed would be called together from time to time for the purpose of deciding policies, etc., I was influenced by the assurance above referred to and additionally by the fact that there were many distinguished clergymen and laymen of my faith apparently serving as the officers and members of the general committee. In view of your statements contained in your letter to the editor of the publication referred to, I must conclude that the promise made has not been kept and that the other assurances relied on were of doubtful value.

I am sending a copy of this letter to Dr. Emmanuel Chapman, 261 Broadway, New York City, as you suggest, with the request that my name be no longer used even as a member of the local committee.

Respectfully,

DAN B. CULL.

EMPIRE STATE, INC.,
New York, January 25, 1940.

Mr. GEORGE E. SULLIVAN,
Suite 226, Woodward Building, Fifteenth and H Street NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. SULLIVAN: I am in receipt of your letter. I know absolutely nothing about this matter. I became a member of the committee in August, at which time they issued a statement of purpose which said, among other things, "* * * * and there will be no personal attacks against anyone."

Since my joining the committee I have never heard from them one way or the other until I received your letter. Immediately upon its receipt I sent to Dr. Chapman my resignation, copy of which I enclose.

Sincerely yours,

ALFRED E. SMITH.

aes:mc.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY NAME OF MARY,
Algiers, La., January 26, 1940.

DEAR MR. SULLIVAN: Just received your mimeographed letter of January 6, and its carbon-copy appendage dated January 20. Having been completely out of contact with the organization since my transfer from Brunswick, Ga., last September, these recent developments come as startling news. I have written to Dr. Chapman anent the matter but have not yet received an answer. Needless to say I do not subscribe to maliciously libelous accusations and, pending Dr. Chapman's answer, I accept your version of the affair. I sincerely trust the matter will be settled to the satisfaction of all concerned, especially Congressman THORKELSON, of Montana. While I voluntarily answered Dr. Chapman's letter soliciting membership, I most certainly did not commit myself to malicious libel.

Yours truly,

THOMAS J. ROSHETKO.

BRYN MAWR, PA., January 26, 1940.

Mr. GEORGE E. SULLIVAN,
Attorney at Law, Suite 226, Woodward Building, Fifteenth and H Streets NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I have received a typewritten memorandum dated January 20, 1940, bearing your typewritten name as the sender, together with copy of letter dated January 6, 1940, likewise bearing your typewritten name, addressed to the editor of The Voice for Human Rights.

I did not know of the article in question and in fact have nothing to do with the publication you mention, nor do I have any knowledge or information about the matters mentioned in your letter.

Accordingly I disclaim any responsibility in connection with the matters mentioned.

Yours truly,

ANGELINE H. LOGRASSO.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., February 1, 1940.

Dr. EMMANUEL CHAPMAN,
261 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

DEAR DR. CHAPMAN: I was surprised to receive a copy of a circular memorandum from Mr. George E. Sullivan relative to the responsibility of an article concerning one Congressman JACOB THORKELSON, of Montana, which as alleged appeared in The Voice of Human Rights.

The circular letter, which I endorsed back to you, asked if I would be interested in serving or working on a committee in my city to interest people in the condition of Jews, especially those who were at that time being severely persecuted in certain European countries. This I would have gladly done. However, as no one has ever called me to date regarding this committee, I naturally presumed that it met with failure.

Therefore, if you have me registered as being a sponsor for the publication of The Voice of Human Rights it is most certainly without my authority. Besides, it is not logical that I, who live in New Orleans, would endorse articles unread, unchecked, and which are published in another city besides my own.

If you have my name listed as one being responsible for the publication of your paper, I request that you remove it immediately.

Please advise me accordingly.

Very truly yours,

JOHN W. MCSHANE.

cc
Mr. Geo. E. Sullivan,
226 Woodward Bldg.,
Washington, D. C.

This will answer your circular memo of January 20, 1940.

It should be clear after reading these letters that the persons named as sponsors for this publication are not in accord with the views expressed in it, and this is perfectly proper and right, as there is no relationship between Christianity and Judaism. The rabbi is not, as generally assumed, a minister or preacher. He is, instead, a dispenser of laws and presides over the Jewish courts. I quote from Webster's Dictionary:

Rabbi, master—used as a Jewish title; also, a Jewish teacher or doctor of the law.

For further information, those who are interested may read The Book of the Kehillah, volume II, third edition, St. Petersburg, 1888. Document No. 155, pages 81, 82, 83, and 84:

Points which were worked out and adopted for the protection of the sacred law and of the cause, which, owing to our great sins, has been completely undermined. They (the representatives of the city) were basing themselves on the law according to which it is commanded to exercise efforts and persistency in order to prevent our enemies from becoming our judges (that is to say, that the Jews should refrain from applying to alien courts) and with the object of curbing the rebel and of compelling every son of Israel to obey the law (Jewish law). The regulations mentioned below and all preventative measures were unanimously adopted by the representatives, leaders, and chiefs of the city and by the rightful Bet-Din and by great and prominent rabbi. The undersigned unanimously decided and took oath to support and follow all the decisions contained in these regulations as well as to support and fortify the law by whomever and by whatever means possible. The wise men have considered these regulations and have termed them as follows.

This is of no interest except for its reference to the Jewish people and their courts, and my object in quoting it is to correct the erroneous assumption that a rabbi occupies a position similar to the Christian clergyman. It can be seen from this that he is not a clergyman but is instead a dispenser of law and judge of Jewish courts.

I shall now return to discussion of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, and quote from their letter:

Do you know all these facts, Mr. Congressman? Or are you so busy addressing the native Fascist groups that you have no time to catch up with your reading?

Perhaps you are not aware of the fact that our native Fascist groups, masquerading under patriotic or Christian names, are Nazi inspired or Nazi contrived. Permit us to bring to your attention excerpts from reports of their meetings.

In these statements, the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League condemns itself, for no one employs innocent titles more than the internationalist. It is because of such names that communistic and subversive Jewish groups operate so freely, for who would suspect that the Humanity Guild is not what the name implies? The margins of the letterheads of this organization list 120 names as sponsors, and is not the purpose of this organization precisely the same as that of the Anti-Defamation and Non-Sectarian Leagues? This is another trick employed by Jewish organizations to shift responsibility by blaming their own subversive activities on someone else.

The letter then goes on and quotes from reports of the meetings of various organizations in which I nor anyone else has particular interest. The purpose of these quotations, however, is clear, for the writer of the letter by implication attempts to slander me. To this I can only reply that if the writer is no nearer the truth in regard to the gentleman he quotes than he is when he quoted me, he is indeed reckless with the truth. I shall insert in the Appendix of the RECORD the speech that I delivered to the Christian Mobilizers on March 4, 1940, with the hope that he will read my speech, for I am sure that he will find nothing controversial therein.

The writer of the letter inserted by the gentleman from Illinois refers to the Declaration of Independence and to the Constitution. I shall ask him to read my remarks on A United America, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and I shall also ask him to read the Constitution, for it is quite evident that he does not understand it.

The author quotes a resolution of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League which condemns the Communists as well as the Nazis, and another resolution that praises the work of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League in investigating and exposing subversive groups and individuals in the United States. These are simply resolutions showing that the Anti-Nazi League is trying to evade the charges it has earned by its activities.

If all Jews are opposed to communism, why is the leadership in socialistic and communistic movements carried on by Jews? One of the outstanding rabbis, Judah Leo Magnes, who is now the president of the University of Jerusalem, boasted of Jewish revolutionaries and troublemakers when, in February 1919, he said:

Jews are closely identified with the beginnings of capitalism in its development from the feudal state. It was Friedrich Julius Stahl, a born Jew, who laid down the classical theory of the German Nationalstaat, based upon the politics of power. It was Benjamin Disraeli who is the father of the latter-day Tory democracy of England. Just so when the Jew gives his thought, his devotion, his spirit, to the cause of the workers and of the dispossessed, of the disinherited of the world, the radical quality within him there, too, goes to the roots of things, and in Germany he becomes a Marx and a Lasalle, a Haase, and an Eduard Bernstein. In Austria he becomes a Victor Adler and a Friedrich Adler; in Russia, a Trotzky.

Just take for the moment the present situation in Russia and in Germany. The revolution set creative forces free, and see what a large company of Jews was available for immediate service. Socialist revolutionaries and Mensheviki and Bolsheviki, majority and minority Socialists—whatever they be called; and I assume that it is not a question at all at this moment of agreeing or disagreeing with any one of them—Jews are to be found among trusted leaders and the routine workers of all those revolutionary parties. There are some among us who say that we ought not to admit this, because it will lead to anti-Semitism. I answer: What if it does? If it leads to anti-Semitism, it will be but another evidence in our long Jewish history of that stupidity, of that brutality, which we want the free men and women of the world to condemn and crush out. In Germany, now that the first free glow of the revolution is passing, the anti-Semites are beginning to talk of the "Judendemokratie." Suppose anti-Semitism does lift its ugly head in Germany and the Jews there and here and everywhere be made to suffer because of the prominence of Jews in the glorious German revolution.

This requires no explanation from me, but if the reader is interested in the leaders of these revolutionary movements, I refer him to a book by A. Cloyd Gill, America's Other Sixty Families, and many other publications written on such issues. I have covered these subjects in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD since May 1, 1939, to the present time. For my documented information I have been roundly abused by the Communists and internationalists and by the controlled press.

Let us now see how the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League conducts its "championship for human rights." In the February issue of the Anti-Nazi Bulletin a hooded figure rides an ass, which has a label on its right ear inscribed, "American Union of Fascists." Its right front foot is labeled, "Christian Mobilizers," and right hind quarter, "German-American Bund"; it is going past a post marked "Terrorism." The hooded figure is marked "K. K. K." The article is by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, department of investigation. What is the purpose of this pamphlet? Its sole purpose is to stir up hatreds and racial antagonisms; and as this happens, the internationalist shifts the blame upon those he designates Fascist, Nazi, and anti-Semitic. In this way he hopes to create sympathy for himself by instilling fear in those who do not understand—fear toward their own people.

The bulletin is filled with part truths and deliberate falsehoods. For example: In an article by Wilhelm Sollman, in which he mentions the Russian revolution in 1905 and 1917, nothing is said about the Jews. The author attempts to shift responsibility to others by studiously avoiding the use of the word Jew by name or implication. What are the facts? The facts are that Jews led the revolution in 1905 and also the revolution in 1917, and this information can be obtained from many sources, including the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Let me now add a bit of information to that, from Senate Document No. 346:

The Hungarian Government frantically appealed to the Allied and associated powers to save Hungary from complete annihilation. There was no response. Then a large number of disciples of Lenin and Trotsky returned to Hungary and held out to the Hungarians the hope that bolshevism can save Hungary. These Bolsheviks seized the Government of Hungary, and bolshevism reigned with all the terror that deteriorated human minds could devise.

For the sake of truth, let it be said that about 95 percent of the Bolsheviks in Hungary were Jews, and the Bolshevik dictator of Hungary, Bela Cohen [Kun] was a Jew. These were augmented by Russian Jewish terrorists. [See Dillon's Inside Story of the Peace Conference, p. 2241.] The outrages and the atrocities these terrorists committed in Hungary are unfit to be printed.

The Hungarians now were in a terrible situation. Stripped of everything they had, tortured by the Bolsheviks, the unoccupied part of Hungary was invaded by a Rumanian army. In the meantime, certain financial interests of the Allied and associated powers seeking economic advantages in Hungary began to parley with Cohen, the Bolshevik dictator. He was offered brilliant advantages, he was assured that he would be honored by an invitation to the Peace Conference of Paris, if he would grant these financial interests certain concessions in the Banat, one of the richest sections of Hungary. The name of this financial group, for obvious reasons, remained unnamed. [Dillon's The Inside Story of the Peace Conference, p. 239.] It was also proposed that the Banat be made an independent republic, for which a protector was required. This humanitarian role of protectress was promised to be assigned to democratic France. French agents were on the spot to provide the arrangements. The actors of this episode were not all officers and civil servants. They included some men in responsible position. [Dillon's The Inside Story of the Peace Conference, pp. 239 and 240.] Unsuccessful in their attempts to obtain concessions in Hungary, those unnamable financiers let the Rumanian Army proceed. What the invaders did in Hungary is graphically described by an American writer, as follows:

"The story of the pillaging by Rumanian Army in Hungary is Homeric. It equals anything of the kind done in the war. The Rumanians took away machines, farm implements, cattle, and even seed grain of the peasants. A member of the English mission, sent to the east of Hungary to investigate the facts, said epigrammatically that the Rumanians had not even left the nails in the boards." [J. J. Bass' The Peace Tangle, p. 193.]

When the Rumanian Army found nothing more to pillage, it proceeded to ransack the Hungarian National Museum, which contained invaluable treasures of art and other collections of national and educational interest. A large truck was backed to the door of the museum, and the Rumanian soldiers were ready to break in the doors. In the meantime, the American military mission stationed at Budapest heard of the intended vandalism. Brigadier General Bandholtz hastened to the museum, placed the United States seal on its door, and informed the Rumanians that the breaking of that seal would result in serious consequences. Thus, thanks to Brigadier General Bandholtz, the Hungarian National Museum was saved.

The writer of the article in the Bulletin did not bring out this fact. Neither did he mention this statement from the book by Ambassador Francis, which I quoted on page 2305 of the Appendix of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

I have just (January 1918) been called to the phone and heard that Smolny Institute, Bolshevik headquarters, has formally announced that a revolution similar to that in Russia has begun in Germany. The Bolshevik leaders here, most of whom are Jews, and 90 percent of whom are returned exiles, care little for Russia or any other country but are internationalists and they are trying to start a world-wide social revolution. If such a revolution can get a foothold in Germany where the people are obsequious to those above them and domineering and tyrannical to those beneath them and where organization and system has obtained such a foothold as it never had in history before, I begin to fear for the institutions not only of England but of the Republic of France, and the thought arises in my mind whether our own institutions are safe.

This should be sufficient evidence to prove who are the Communists and the revolutionaries who are now undermining our Government.

I have in my possession over a dozen items of propaganda issued by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League and the Jewish Congress, which I shall not quote because it takes too much time and space in the RECORD. All of these sheets reek with hatreds, falsifications, and deliberate prevarications in which the writers actually blame their enemies with their own shortcomings. It is simply a case in which the communistic Jew, in order to hide his own subversive activities, blames others for the very things that he himself is engaged in doing. In this he has been more than successful, because he has been able to rally to his side many gentile dupes, whom he has used to entrench himself and further his own ends.

In conclusion, it is my desire to inform the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] that he need not feel sorry for me, for I am not a tool of anyone, not even the Jew himself. When the gentleman from Illinois attempts to slander me by insinuating that I am a tool in the hands of designing men who have been on trial for subversive activities and who should be charged with treason, he joins others of his people in outright vilification, calumniation, and plain prevarication. I am acquainted with only one of the men whom the gentleman from Illinois mentioned, and that is Mr. Pelley, and I am sure that he is not a criminal but is instead a victim of rabid persecution. However, I realize that is none of my business, but I do resent it when the gentleman from Illinois attempts to involve my reputation by implication.

No one person or organization is engaged in a more vicious propaganda than the groups to which I have referred. My evidence for this statement is lying here on the table, and any Member of Congress may examine this if he is interested in such filth. I challenge anyone to produce examples of equally vicious propaganda from any source before this body or any congressional committee, for in my opinion, it has no equal any place.

My reason for speaking plainly is due to the fact that I know what is going to happen and to save the innocent I want those who are engaged in the sabotage of our industries and Government to stop and cease using American industry and labor as a convenience for international interest.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman is going to make such statements, I must insist on my point of order that there is not a quorum present. The gentleman at least should yield to give me an opportunity to answer. If he will not give me an opportunity to reply, I make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, there are eight Members on the floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York makes the point of order that a quorum is not present.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas moves that the House do now adjourn. The motion is not debatable.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 12 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, May 7, 1940, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON IRRIGATION AND RECLAMATION

The Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation will meet on Tuesday, May 7, 1940, at 10:30 a. m., in room 128, House Office Building, for the consideration of H. R. 9093.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of a subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a. m., Tuesday, May 7, 1940, for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 457, entitled "For the Transfer of the Marketing Laws Survey to the Department of Commerce."

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on Monday, May 13, 1940, at 10 a. m.

Business to be considered: To begin hearings on S. 280 and H. R. 145—motion pictures. All statements favoring the bill will be heard first. All statements opposing the bill will follow.

COMMITTEE ON PATENTS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Patents on Thursday, May 9, 1940, at 10:30 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 8441, H. R. 8442, and H. R. 8444, all of which relate to amendments to the patent laws.

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Patents on Thursday, May 16, 1940, at 10:30 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 9384, H. R. 9386, and H. R. 9388, all of which relate to amendments to the patent laws.

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

There will be meetings of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization Tuesday, May 7, and Wednesday, May 8, 1940, at 10 a. m., for the consideration of: Tuesday, H. R. 6127, Nationality Code; and Wednesday, H. R. 8310, to deport Communists.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold the following hearings at 10 a. m. on the dates specified:

Wednesday, May 8, 1940:

H. R. 9581, to amend the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended. (This bill has to do with tax exemption of a construction reserve fund to aid in the construction of new vessels. It is an improved form of H. R. 5883.)

Tuesday, May 14, 1940:

H. R. 9553, to amend and clarify certain acts pertaining to the Coast Guard, and for other purposes.

Thursday, May 16, 1940:

H. R. 9477, to apply laws covering steam vessels to certain passenger-carrying vessels.

COMMITTEE ON MINES AND MINING

The subcommittee on Mines and Mining that was appointed to consider S. 2420 will hold hearings beginning Thursday, May 16, 1940, at 10 a. m., in the Committee rooms in the New House Office Building.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1594. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a report of an investigation made under the act of Congress approved June 22, 1936 (49 Stat. 1803), covering the Uintah Indian Irrigation Project, Utah; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

1595. A letter from the Architect of the Capitol, transmitting the Annual Report of the Office of the Architect of the Capitol for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1939; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. LYNDON B. JOHNSON: Committee on Naval Affairs. Supplemental report (pt. II) to accompany S. 3014. An act to amend the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. 662), so as to provide uniformity in pay of all civilian employees of the Navy Department appointed for duty beyond the continental limits of the United States and in Alaska; without amendment (Rept. No. 1980). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MAAS: Committee on Naval Affairs. Supplemental report (pt. II) to accompany S. 3016. An act to amend the act approved February 15, 1929, entitled "An act to permit certain warrant officers to count all active service rendered under temporary appointments as warrant or commissioned officers in the Regular Navy, or as warrant or commissioned officers in the United States Naval Reserve Force, for purpose of promotion to chief warrant rank," so as to permit service in the National Naval Volunteers to be counted for purposes of promotion; without amendment (Rept. No.

1981). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DREWRY: Committee on Naval Affairs. Supplemental report (pt. II) to accompany S. 3017. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to authorize an exchange of lands between the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Co. and the United States at Quantico, Va.", approved June 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 395), so as to permit the removal of certain encumbrances on the lands concerned; without amendment (Rept. No. 1982). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CANNON of Florida: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 9140. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to acquire land at Key West, Fla.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2079). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CONNERY: Committee on Printing. House Concurrent Resolution 62. Concurrent resolution to provide for printing additional copies of hearings held by the Committee on Appropriations investigating Work Projects Administration (Rept. No. 2078). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, the Committee on Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9649) granting a pension to Annie Joyce, and the same was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANGELL:

H. R. 9663. A bill to authorize the construction of a National Guard Armory at Portland, Oreg.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DURHAM:

H. R. 9664. A bill to provide for the reappointment and classification without term of incumbent postmasters serving for a term, prior to the expiration of such term; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. CLASON:

H. R. 9665. A bill to reduce the amount of damages for infringement of copyright of musical compositions in certain hotels and other places; to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. LEONARD W. HALL:

H. R. 9666. A bill to extend until January 1, 1941, the time within which payments made into State unemployment compensation funds may be permitted the Federal credit; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KEFAUVER:

H. R. 9667. A bill to provide a larger Federal contribution for old-age assistance; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEMKE:

H. R. 9668. A bill to amend the Sugar Act of 1937, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. McCORMACK:

H. R. 9669. A bill to extend the provisions of the act of May 22, 1934, known as the National Stolen Property Act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ROMJUE:

H. R. 9670. A bill to provide an 8-hour workday and payment for overtime for dispatchers and mechanics in charge in the Motor Vehicle Service of the Postal Service; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. YOUNGDAHL:

H. R. 9671 (by request). A bill for acquiring lands in the Superior National Forest, the Kabetogama and Grant Portage Purchase Units; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. KEFAUVER:

H. J. Res. 525. Joint resolution authorizing the issuance of a special postage stamp in honor of completion and dedication of Chickamauga Dam; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BATES of Kentucky:

H. R. 9672. A bill granting an increase of pension to James O. Scott; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. DEMPSEY:

H. R. 9673. A bill for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn A. Hoss; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FITZPATRICK:

H. R. 9674. A bill for the relief of Michael Weiss; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HALLECK:

H. R. 9675. A bill to authorize the presentation of a medal of honor to Samuel O. Duvall; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. RYAN:

H. R. 9676. A bill for the relief of Edmund P. Gould; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

8068. By Mr. ANDERSON of California: Petition signed by E. S. Kaffer, of San Jose, Calif., and others, urging Congress to enact House bill 5620, the General Welfare Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8069. By Mr. GROSS: Petition of Effie Wallick, of York, Pa., and 30 others, urging Congress to enact House bill 5620, the General Welfare Act, thus relieving the suffering of needy citizens over 60 years of age and providing prosperity for America and security for all at 60; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8070. By Mr. HINSHAW: Petition of Nona Tubbs, of Pasadena, Calif., containing the signatures of 210 citizens of the Eleventh Congressional District of California, urging the enactment of House bill 5620, the General Welfare Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8071. By Mr. HOUSTON: Petition of Charles E. Miller and 40 other residents of Newton, Kans., urging the enactment during this session of Congress of House bill 5620, the General Welfare Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8072. By Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois: Petition of 30 residents of Rock Island County, urging passage of House bill 1; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8073. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of Eppinger & Russell Co., New York City, concerning Senate bill 2009, the transportation bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8074. Also, petition of the American Enterprise Association, New York City, concerning Senate bill 2009, the transportation bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8075. By Mr. LUDLOW: Petition of citizens of Indianapolis, Ind., opposing House bill 6321, to provide that the United States shall aid the States in fish restoration and management projects, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

8076. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Department of Public Works, Albany, N. Y., urging favorable consideration of Senate bill 3783 and House bill 8595, the Wagner-Byrne bill, to the Committee on Education.

8077. By Mr. RABAUT: Petition of R. H. Rattray and F. Walker, of Detroit, and A. Robinson, of Rochester, Mich., and others; urging that House bill 1, the Patman chain-store tax bill, be enacted into law; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8078. By Mr. SCHWERT: Resolution petitioning the enactment into law of the Wagner-Steagall low-cost-housing bill before adjournment of this session of Congress; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8079. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the National Maritime Union of America, New York, N. Y., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the Lee E. Geyer of California bill concerning poll tax; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

8080. Also, petition of Union De Mujeres Americanas, Inc., Z. Evangelian A. de Vaughan, president, New York, N. Y., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to setting aside August 25 as Mary Ball, Mother of Washington, Day, to be observed annually with proper ceremonies throughout the Nation; also asks the Postmaster General, Hon. James A. Farley, to cause to be prepared in honor of Mary Ball Washington a commemorative postage stamp for use in the mails; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

8081. Also, petition of the American Communications Association, New York, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the National Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

8082. Also, petition of the Bergen County Woman's Republican Club, Hackensack, N. J., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to Government agencies, Senate bill 915, and House bill 6324; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

8083. Also, petition of Allan Elliott, president, San Francisco, Calif., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to unemployment and House bill 8615; to the Committee on Labor.

8084. Also, petition of the Daughters of the Revolution, Tenafly, N. J., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the American Youth Act; to the Committee on Appropriations.

8085. Also, petition of John Boyle and Eric Mikkola, Hancock, Mich., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to House bill 8615, American Standard Work and Assistance Act; to the Committee on Labor.

SENATE

TUESDAY, MAY 7, 1940

(Legislative day of Wednesday, April 24, 1940)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Lord of love, in whom alone we live, kindle in our souls Thy fire of love, and, as we bow before Thee, help us to lay aside all thought of self, together with our disappointed hopes, our fruitless efforts, and the vain struggles of a divided mind, that, as we enter upon the duties of another day, we may find ourselves no longer weak and broken but strong and eager with new hope and courage to dedicate each thought and each endeavor to the service of our fellow men.

We pray for all who seem to have forgotten Thee, for all who are turning from the light; do Thou redeem them from every evil way, and grant that in the shining of Thy beauty all the lesser lures of life may cease to charm.

Sanctify Thy gracious gifts, that we may ever use them to Thy honor and Thy glory, and, above all, give to us the mind of Christ, that we may learn to rejoice even in the lowliest place where loving souls may serve. In the dear Redeemer's name we ask it. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day of Monday, May 6, 1940, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. MINTON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	La Follette	Russell
Ashurst	Davis	Lee	Schwartz
Austin	Donahey	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Downey	Lucas	Sheppard
Bankhead	Ellender	Lundeen	Shipstead
Barbour	Frazier	McCarran	Slattery
Barkley	Gerry	McKellar	Smathers
Bilbo	Gillette	McNary	Stewart
Bone	Glass	Maloney	Taft
Brown	Guffey	Mead	Thomas, Idaho
Bulow	Gurney	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Hale	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Byrd	Harrison	Murray	Townsend
Byrnes	Hatch	Norris	Tydings
Capper	Hayden	Nye	Vandenberg
Caraway	Herring	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Chandler	Holman	Overton	Wagner
Chavez	Hughes	Pittman	Walsh
Clark, Idaho	Johnson, Calif.	Radcliffe	Wheeler
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Reed	White
Connally	King	Reynolds	Wiley

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] is absent from the Senate because of illness.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are unavoidably detained.

The Senators from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS and Mr. PEPPER], the Senators from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT and Mr. NEELY], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN] are necessarily absent.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL] is detained on public business.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] are necessarily absent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 1542. An act to authorize the Director of the Geological Survey, under the general supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, to acquire certain collections for the United States;

S. 1780. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to acquire property for the Antietam Battlefield site in the State of Maryland, and for other purposes;

S. 3098. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept on behalf of the United States a bequest of certain personal property of the late Dudley F. Wolfe;

S. 3198. An act to provide allowances for uniforms and equipment for certain officers of the Officers' Reserve Corps of the Army;

S. 3262. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to grant a right-of-way to the Highway Commission of the State of Montana;

S. 3470. An act to amend the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended, to provide for enlistments in the Army of the United States in time of war, or other emergency declared by Congress, and for other purposes;

S. 3633. An act to amend section 24e, National Defense Act, as amended, so as to add an alternative requirement for appointment in the Dental Corps;

S. 3654. An act to amend section 10, National Defense Act, as amended, with relation to the maximum authorized enlisted strength of the Medical Department of the Regular Army;

S. 3661. An act to amend the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended, and for other purposes; and

S. 3675. An act to authorize the establishment of boundary lines for the Wilmington National Cemetery, N. C.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolutions, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 2176. An act to amend subsection 10 of section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 596; U. S. C., title 8, sec. 377);

H. R. 3048. An act to confer jurisdiction on the State of Kansas over offenses committed by or against Indians on Indian reservations;

H. R. 4229. An act authorizing the conveyance to the Commonwealth of Virginia a portion of the naval reservation known as Quantico, in Prince William County, Va.;

H. R. 5180. An act to provide Spanish War veterans wartime-pension rates for service-connected disability or death of certain veterans of the Spanish-American War recognized by veterans' regulations as "veterans of any war," and for other purposes;

H. R. 7542. An act to amend section 6 of an act of Congress entitled "An act for the protection of the fisheries of Alaska, and for other purposes," approved June 6, 1924;

H. R. 7543. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to accept real estate granted to the United States by the city of Miami, Fla., and for other purposes;

H. R. 7696. An act to amend the United States Grain Standards Act, to provide for the grading of soybeans, and for other purposes;

H. R. 7811. An act to establish the Hot Springs division of the western judicial district of Arkansas;

H. R. 7901. An act to transfer certain Indian lands to the Grand River Dam Authority, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8172. An act to amend section 5 of the act of Congress approved June 26, 1906, relative to the Alaska salmon fishery;

H. R. 8283. An act to amend section 4370 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 46, sec. 316);

H. R. 8316. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell certain land to the Conconully Cemetery Association;

H. R. 8357. An act to amend the Mount Rushmore Memorial Act of 1938;

H. R. 8373. An act to amend section 79 of the Judicial Code, as amended;

H. R. 8628. An act to amend the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended, to include as a perishable agricultural commodity cherries in brine, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8642. An act to establish and promote the use of standard methods of grading cottonseed, to provide for the collection and dissemination of information on prices and grades of cottonseed and cottonseed products, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8826. An act to authorize an appropriation to assist in defraying the expenses of the American Negro Exposition to be held in Chicago, Ill., during 1940;

H. R. 8930. An act to amend section 202 (3), World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, to provide more adequate and uniform administrative provisions in veterans' laws, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8958. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to grant to the county of Wayne, State of Michigan, an easement over certain land of the United States in Wayne County, Mich., for a sewage-disposal line;

H. R. 8983. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept on behalf of the United States a gift of the yacht Freedom from Sterling Morton;

H. R. 9013. An act to transfer Hardeman County, Tex., from the Fort Worth division to the Wichita Falls division of the northern judicial district of Texas;

H. R. 9236. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to provide books for the adult blind," approved March 3, 1931;

H. R. 9262. An act to provide for the examination of civilian nautical schools and for the inspection of vessels used in connection therewith, and for other purposes;

H. R. 9271. An act to extend the existence of the Alaskan International Highway Commission for an additional 4 years, and for other purposes;

H. R. 9383. An act to amend the Canal Zone Code with respect to the trial of joint defendants, the removal of fugitives from justice, and the regulation of criminal procedure in the Canal Zone;

H. R. 9394. An act to provide for the establishment of the Cumberland Gap National Historical Park in Tennessee, Kentucky, and Virginia;

H. R. 9441. An act to accept the grant to the United States of certain land by the State of South Carolina and to authorize its use by the United States Coast Guard;

H. R. 9492. An act making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels and providing punishment therefor;

H. R. 9594. An act to amend section 12 (b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing the transfer of funds to cover advances for crop insurance;

H. J. Res. 445. Joint resolution to establish a Commission for the Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of Thomas Jefferson; and

H. J. Res. 519. Joint resolution to suspend section 510 (g) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, during the present European war, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled joint resolution (H. J. Res. 258) to amend section 8 (f) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, and it was signed by the President pro tempore.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR DEPARTMENTS OF STATE, COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND THE JUDICIARY

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its action on certain amendments of the Senate to House bill 8319, making appropriations for the Departments of State, Commerce, Justice, and so forth, which was read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
May 6, 1940.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 28 to the bill (H. R. 8319) making appropriations for the Departments of State, Commerce, and Justice, and for the Judiciary, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, and for other purposes, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert " : Provided, That the salary of no probation officer shall be less than $1,800 per annum nor more than $3,200 per annum"; and

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 29 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment, as follows:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert: ": Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to abridge the right of the district judges to appoint probation officers, or to make such orders as may be necessary to govern probation officers in their own courts: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used to pay the salary or expenses of any probation officer who, in the judgment of the senior or presiding judge certified to the Attorney General, fails to carry out the official orders of the Attorney General with respect to supervising or furnishing information concerning any prisoner released conditionally or on parole from any Federal penal or correctional institution."

Mr. McKELLAR. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 28 and 29.

The motion was agreed to.

LANDS TO BE PATENTED TO STATE OF MINNESOTA

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation relating to the issuance of a patent to the State of Minnesota for certain lands in that State, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

PETITION AND MEMORIAL

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a resolution of Labor Department Local No. 12, United Federal Workers of America, Washington, D. C., favoring enactment of the so-called Mead bill, being the bill (S. 3859) permitting the establishment of 5-day workweeks for any part or for the whole year in the Federal departments of the Federal service, which was referred to the Committee on Civil Service.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a memorial from Chauncey J. Hamlin, of Buffalo, N. Y., chairman of the Niagara Frontier Planning Board, embracing Erie and Niagara Counties, N. Y., transmitting a survey and report of that Board relative to the St. Lawrence seaway project and remonstrating against the adoption of the proposed project, which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. WHEELER, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which were referred the following bill and joint resolution, reported them each without amendment and submitted a report thereon as indicated:

H. R. 9381. A bill to provide for the alteration of certain bridges over navigable waters of the United States, for the apportionment of the cost of such alterations between the United States and the owners of such bridges, and for other purposes; and

S. J. Res. 234. Joint resolution providing for more uniform coverage under the Railroad Retirement Acts of 1935 and 1937, the Carriers Taxing Act of 1937, and subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code (Rept. No. 1572).

Mr. WHEELER also, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which was referred the resolution (S. Res. 264) increasing the limit of expenditures for the investigation of railroad financing and certain other matters, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1574) thereon; and the resolution was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 3801) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a railroad bridge across the Missouri River at or near Randolph, Mo., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1573) thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BANKHEAD:

S. 3928. A bill to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930; to the Committee on Civil Service.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

S. 3929. A bill to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Memphis, Tenn.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. LUCAS:

S. 3930. A bill to provide for the completion of the pioneer memorial according to the design reproduced on the pioneer memorial half dollar; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. JOHNSON of California and Mr. HAYDEN:

S. 3931. A bill for the acquisition of Indian lands for the Parker Dam and Reservoir project, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BROWN:

S. 3932. A bill authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to reimburse Frank Rublein and Paulina Rublein, husband and wife, for the losses sustained by them by reason of the death of their son, Ernest J. Rublein, resulting from the negligence of an employee of the Civilian Conservation Corps; and

S. 3933. A bill authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to reimburse Richard W. and Ethel Bowers, husband and wife, for the losses sustained by them by reason of the death of their son, Richard Bowers, resulting from the negligence of an employee of the Civilian Conservation Corps; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 3934. A bill authorizing the State of Michigan, acting through The International Bridge Authority of Michigan, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge or series of bridges, causeways, and approaches thereto across the St. Marys River from a point in or near the city of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to a point in the Province of Ontario, Canada; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. STEWART:

S. 3935. A bill for the relief of Nell Victoria Lea; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

S. 3936. A bill to extend the provisions of the act of May 22, 1934, known as the National Stolen Property Act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BARBOUR:

S. 3937. A bill authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to assist closed building and loan associations through loans and the purchase of assets; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. GLASS:

S. 3938. A bill to authorize the purchase by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of stock of Federal home-loan banks; to amend the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS REFERRED OR PLACED ON CALENDAR

The following bills and joint resolutions were severally read twice by their titles and referred, or ordered to be placed on the calendar, as indicated below:

H. R. 2176. An act to amend subsection 10 of section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 596; U. S. C., title 8, sec. 377); to the Committee on Immigration.

H. R. 4229. An act authorizing the conveyance to the Commonwealth of Virginia a portion of the naval reservation known as Quantico in Prince William County, Va.;

H. R. 7543. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to accept real estate granted to the United States by the city of Miami, Fla., and for other purposes; and

H. R. 8983. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept on behalf of the United States a gift of the yacht Freedom from Sterling Morton; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

H. R. 5180. An act to provide Spanish War veterans wartime pension rates for service-connected disability or death of certain veterans of the Spanish-American War recognized by veterans' regulations as "veterans of any war," and for other purposes; to the Committee on Pensions.

H. R. 7542. An act to amend section 6 of an Act of Congress entitled "An act for the protection of the fisheries of Alaska, and for other purposes," approved June 6, 1924;

H. R. 8172. An act to amend section 5 of the Act of Congress approved June 26, 1906, relative to the Alaska salmon fishery;

H. R. 8283. An act to amend section 4370 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 46, sec. 316);

H. R. 8958. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to grant to the county of Wayne, State of Michigan, an easement over certain land of the United States in Wayne County, Mich., for a sewage-disposal line;

H. R. 9262. An act to provide for the examination of civilian nautical schools and for the inspection of vessels used in connection therewith, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 9492. An act making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels and providing punishment therefor; to the Committee on Commerce.

H. R. 7696. An act to amend the United States Grain Standards Act, to provide for the grading of soybeans, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8628. An act to amend the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended, to include as a perishable agricultural commodity cherries in brine, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 8642. An act to establish and promote the use of standard methods of grading cottonseed, to provide for the collection and dissemination of information on prices and grades of cottonseed and cottonseed products, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

H. R. 7811. An act to establish the Hot Springs division of the western judicial district of Arkansas;

H. R. 8373. An act to amend section 79 of the Judicial Code, as amended; and

H. R. 9013. An act to transfer Hardeman County, Tex., from the Fort Worth division to the Wichita Falls division of the northern judicial district of Texas; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 7901. An act to transfer certain Indian lands to the Grand River Dam Authority, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

H. R. 8316. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell certain land to the Conconully Cemetery Association; and

H. R. 9394. An act to provide for the establishment of the Cumberland Gap National Historical Park in Tennessee, Kentucky, and Virginia; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

H. R. 8930. An act to amend section 202 (3), World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, to provide more adequate and uniform administrative provisions in veterans' laws, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

H. R. 9271. An act to extend the existence of the Alaskan International Highway Commission for an additional 4 years, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

H. R. 9383. An act to amend the Canal Zone Code with respect to the trial of joint defendants, the removal of fugitives from justice, and the regulation of criminal procedure in the Canal Zone; to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

H. R. 8357. An act to amend the Mount Rushmore Memorial Act of 1938;

H. R. 8826. An act to authorize an appropriation to assist in defraying the expenses of the American Negro Exposition to be held in Chicago, Ill., during 1940; and

H. J. Res. 445. Joint resolution to establish a Commission for the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson; to the Committee on the Library.

H. R. 3048. An act to confer jurisdiction on the State of Kansas over offenses committed by or against Indians on Indian reservations;

H. R. 9236. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to provide books for the adult blind," approved March 3, 1931;

H. R. 9441. An act to accept the grant to the United States of certain land by the State of South Carolina and to authorize its use by the United States Coast Guard;

H. R. 9594. An act to amend section 12 (b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing the transfer of funds to cover advances for crop insurance; and

H. J. Res. 519. Joint resolution to suspend section 510 (g) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, during the present European war, and for other purposes; to the calendar.

AUTHORIZATIONS FOR FLOOD CONTROL ON RIVERS AND HARBORS—AMENDMENT

Mr. SHEPPARD submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 9640) authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

VIOLA FINLEY

Mr. SMATHERS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 267), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to Viola Finley, widow of Harri I. Finley, late clerk in the office of Senator SMATHERS, a sum equal to 6 months' compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

ADDRESS BY SENATOR SCHWELLENBACH AT OLD POINT COMFORT, VA.

[Mr. GUFFEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Senator SCHWELLENBACH before the Jeffersonian Democratic Club at Old Point Comfort, Va., May 4, 1940, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY SENATOR TOWNSEND BEFORE AMERICAN FORUM OF THE AIR

[Mr. MCNARY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address delivered by Senator TOWNSEND before the American Forum of the Air on May 4, 1940, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY SENATOR LODGE AT COLUMBUS, OHIO

[Mr. MCNARY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Senator LODGE at Columbus, Ohio, on May 4, 1940, and a summary of the address, which appear in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY SECRETARY MORGENTHAU BEFORE NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF GOVERNMENT

[Mr. WAGNER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD the address delivered by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau before the National Institute of Government, Washington, D. C., on Friday, May 3, 1940, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY AT BARDSTOWN, KY.

[Mr. CHANDLER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered at Bardstown, Ky., on May 3, 1940, by Hon. James A. Farley, Postmaster General of the United States, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY FRANK GANNETT AT LAWRENCE, KANS.

[Mr. THOMAS of Idaho asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Frank Gannett at Lawrence, Kans., on May 2, 1940, on the subject Recovery, or What's the Matter With America?, which appears in the Appendix.]

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES BY WENDELL WILLKIE

[Mr. BURKE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a declaration of principles by Wendell Willkie, which appears in the Appendix.]

LETTER FROM A. H. PACKARD ON REPORT OF REPUBLICAN PROGRAM COMMITTEE

[Mr. THOMAS of Idaho asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a letter from A. H. Packard, president of the Vermont State Farm Bureau, Inc., to Glenn Frank, chairman of the National Republican Program Committee, which appears in the Appendix.]

EDITORIAL FROM MILWAUKEE SENTINEL ON CITIZENSHIP DAY, AND LETTER FROM AMERICANIZATION LEAGUE OF AMERICA

[Mr. WILEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the Milwaukee Sentinel of May 4, 1940, entitled "Citizenship Day," and a letter from the Americanization League of America, together with a resolution enclosed therein, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE NATIONAL DEFENSE

[Mr. WILEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Defense Weakness," written by Ludwell Denny and published in the Washington Daily News, which appears in the Appendix.]

PROHIBITION OF FOREIGN-SILVER PURCHASES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 785) to repeal the Silver Purchase Act of 1934, to provide for the sale of silver, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to what is known as the Pittman amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I desire to discuss the amendment before it is voted on.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska is recognized.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I desire to ask a question of the Chair. Is not the King amendment the pending amendment to the bill?

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; the Chair is advised by the Parliamentarian that that is a separate amendment.

Mr. TOWNSEND. It is not an amendment to the Pittman amendment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Not at all. It is a separate amendment.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I thank the Chair.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, some time ago I became somewhat worried about what I believed to be the activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

On February 22, 1940, I addressed to the Attorney General of the United States a letter on the subject. I think I can best and most intelligently pursue the subject which I desire briefly to discuss by sending to the desk a copy of the letter and asking that the clerk read it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the letter will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

FEBRUARY 22, 1940.

Hon. ROBERT H. JACKSON,
Attorney General, Department of Justice, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. JACKSON: It is with considerable hesitancy that I write you upon the subject of the activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. I have heard so many complaints of the activities of this Bureau that it has seemed to me I ought to write you regarding them.

I have made no attempt to investigate the various charges I have heard, but from what I have heard, from sources I believe to be reliable, I cannot help but reach the conclusion that there is some well-grounded fear that the activities of this Bureau are overstepping and overreaching the legitimate objects for which it was created.

I have also heard considerable complaint as to the treatment which has been given by this Bureau to persons arrested, tending to humiliate prisoners unnecessarily, often to prevent them from pursuing the ordinary means and methods which, it seems to me, under the Constitution, ought to be open to everyone who is charged with a crime. These complaints have been so widespread and some of them have been given such publicity that you are perhaps as well aware of them as I am, and know better than I would know whether the legitimate rights and liberties of any of our people have been frustrated and denied.

For example, it has been alleged and given considerable publicity that in Detroit quite a number of persons were arrested and handcuffed together and their pictures taken in this condition. As I understand it, the charge against these people was that they had assisted men to enlist in the Loyalist army in Spain. They were not criminals; there was no reason to believe that any of them would try to escape. They were not charged with an offense that had any odium attached to it, and yet they were treated as if they were well known to be criminals of the lowest type. This treatment of any citizen has a tendency to coerce him, to break him down, to disgrace him unnecessarily, and is, it seems to me, indefensible. About this same time other similar arrests were made in other cities of the United States.

If these reports are anywhere near the truth, such conduct on the part of officials of the Federal Government, it seems to me, is entirely inexcusable.

I understand you have dismissed many of these complaints in the Detroit case.

According to my understanding, this Bureau was created and exists only to investigate violations of law, and its activities ought to be confined, in my judgment, to the respectful treatment of citizens. It does not contemplate the inhuman treatment of them, or excuse it, especially when the people affected are well known not to be outlaws or criminals. Certainly the Government of the United States cannot afford to be given to third-degree methods, inflicted upon men and women known not to be criminals, and particularly when they are charged with an offense which has no odium attached to it.

I fear the activities of this Bureau, covering as they do the entire country, are going to bring into disrepute the methods of our entire system of jurisprudence.

At the same time, Mr. Jackson, I do not wish to interfere with any legitimate activity in which this Bureau may be engaged. I think it has done some good work. As the head of the Department of Justice, however, it seems to me you cannot afford to permit the activities of any of your subordinates, or of any of the bureaus under your control, to pursue methods which are inhuman and brutal. As I see it, the activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation should be confined to the apprehension and arrest of persons charged with crime, and the methods pursued ought to be such as not to bring the Department of Justice into disrepute.

It seems to me the former Attorney General, Hon. Harlan F. Stone, now Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, stated the case concisely and fully when he said on May 15, 1924:

"There is always the possibility that a secret police system may become a menace to free government and free institutions because it carries with it the possibility of abuses of power which are not always quickly apprehended or understood. The enormous expansion of Federal legislation, both civil and criminal, in recent years, however, has made a bureau of investigation a necessary instrument of law enforcement. But it is important that its activities be strictly limited to the performance of those functions for which it was created and that its agents themselves be not above the law or beyond its reach.

"The bureau of investigation is not concerned with political or other opinions of individuals. It is concerned only with their conduct and then only with such conduct as is forbidden by the laws of the United States. When a police system passes beyond these limits, it is dangerous to the proper administration of justice and to human liberty, which it should be our first concern to cherish. Within them, it should rightly be a terror to the wrongdoer."

I hope you will not misunderstand my motive in writing you this letter. I have no other interest except to see that the laws of our country are properly enforced and the activities of its officials and officers kept within the bounds of civilized government. I am writing you only because it appears to me you could well investigate the activities of this Bureau, and, if you deem proper, curtail such activities as do not come within the limitatons set forth in the above-quoted language of the then Attorney General, now Associate Justice, Mr. Stone.

Sincerely yours,

G. W. NORRIS.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, on the 1st day of March I received an answer from the Attorney General. I send it to the clerk's desk and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., March 1, 1940.

MY DEAR SENATOR NORRIS: Your letter concerning the activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation raises fundamental questions not only as to the policy of the Bureau but more importantly, I believe, as to the policy of the Department of Justice itself.

Your letter questions whether the activities of the Bureau have expanded beyond the original intendment. That the expansion of its functions has been considerable is obvious. It does not follow that the Bureau is to be criticized for it. The quotation which you make from Attorney General Stone, in 1924, refers to "the enormous expansion of Federal legislation, both civil and criminal, in recent years." I do not need to remind you that this trend of 1924 is still with us and that the responsibilities of the Bureau have been increased thereby. In addition to this expansion, in response to congressional action, there are two directions in which the activities of the Bureau have expanded.

The outbreak of war abroad kindled the hatreds, the plottings, the suspicions, and the fears that always accompany such emotional upheavals. One of the best defenses that we have against the growth of a war hysteria, in my opinion, is that an efficient, professional, and nonpolitical investigatory service, actively satisfy all legitimate demands for the protection of the public against plottings or sabotage or illegal activities. This leaves no excuse for volunteer snooping or private vigilantism, or irresponsible and amateurish private activities which perpetrate great injustices. In this field I recognize that there is the gravest danger that the legitimate protection of the Government might be perverted toward such activities as the suppression of free speech and press, toward anti-labor and antireform activities, and toward the disregard of civil liberties. This danger we have and will continue to guard against.

Another extension of activity is due to the application of Federal statutes in such a manner as to bring within the scope of Federal enforcement many matters formerly left to local enforcement officers. There is great pressure for Federal intervention in local affairs. Those who consider local law enforcement lax demand that the Federal Government intervene and supersede local authority. Those who consider local law enforcement too stringent demand that the Federal Government intervene to protect civil liberties. Every unsolved mystery and every unpunished crime and every local vice condition creates a demand for Federal interference. Whether this trend is wise or wholesome is too large a subject for this letter.

What I would now point out is that this expansion has been due primarily to departmental policy rather than to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Obviously, if the Department is going to prosecute in these fields, it is the duty of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to investigate in these fields.

I have reviewed the handling of the Spanish Loyalist arrests in Detroit with the United States attorney and his assistant, and with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

These warrants were given to the Bureau for execution under circumstances which warranted the impression that their service was of the utmost importance and immediacy. Being given a warrant for the arrest of these parties, the obvious duty of the Bureau was to effect their arrests promptly, simultaneously, and without escapes. It was also their duty to do so without unnecessary force or humiliation. Much must be left to the discretion and sound sense of those who are charged with the execution of warrants. Many of the complaints relate to conditions after arraignment at which time the responsibility of the Federal Bureau of Investigation ceased. I have reviewed the facts so far as they are in my possession, and I find nothing to justify any charge of misconduct against the Federal Bureau of Investigation. I will be glad to furnish you a detailed statement of each step and the circumstance which led to it, if you desire to go into the matter in detail.

One of the first steps which I took upon assuming office was to review the activities and attitude of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, with which my previous duties had not made me familiar, with its Director, Mr. J. Edgar Hoover. Mr. Hoover is in agreement with me that the principles which Attorney General Stone laid down in 1924 when the Federal Bureau of Investigation was reorganized and Mr. Hoover appointed as Director are sound, and that the usefulness of the Bureau depends upon a faithful adherence to those limitations.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation will confine its activities to the investigation of violation of Federal statutes, the collecting of evidence in cases in which the United States is or may be a party in interest, and the service of process issued by the courts.

In carrying out the program I have asked and been promised the continued and efficient service of Mr. Hoover.

As one long interested in civil liberties, I can readily understand your concern in this matter, and if my confidence that the work of the Department can be handled without infringements upon civil liberties proves unfounded, I hope that I shall be the first to admit it, so that remedies can be applied by the Congress.

Very sincerely yours,

ROBERT H. JACKSON,
Attorney General.

